P R E F A C E.

THE last volume of the Calendar of East India Papers comprised all the documents in the Public Record and India Offices, from our first intercourse with India to the year 1616. The present volume begins with 1617, and includes all papers from the same offices to the end of 1621. With the year 1616 we left the East India Company in the full tide of prosperity, their shipping numerous and powerful, their traffic increasing in every part of India, their intercourse with the native Princes satisfactory, and their great enemies, the Portuguese, crippled by continued losses in more than one pitched battle at sea with the English. In short, the untiring energy of the East India Company, and of the able officers in their service, carried everything before them, the Great Mogul himself being so impressed with their valour and industry as to “much applaud our people’s resolution,” and prophetically to declare that “his country was before us, to “do therein whatsoever ourselves desired.”¹ This volume opens with accounts of a very different character; and the papers now calendared prove in an unmistakeable manner that the English had more reason to complain of their supposed friends, the Dutch, than of their sworn enemies, the Spaniards and Portuguese. The latter, always carefully guarded against, were but a partial hindrance to English enterprise in India; while the former, though always protesting friendship, were nearly the cause of the ruin of our trade in those parts, and of the dissolution of the East India Company.

The letters calendared in this volume are full of complaints from almost every factory against the Dutch; of their inimical and overbearing conduct, and their persistent attempts to displace the English from their most profitable places in India. "The Flemings thunder it most terribly "in these parts," writes the President of the English factors in January 1618 (245). "Their untruths are daily "more discovered, and they are rather feared than respected by their brutal carriage," says another factor; while a third declares openly that "the Hollanders are "mortal enemies to the English in their trade." These grievances became so frequent and so serious that the East India Company, in September 1618, drew up two formal declarations of complaints, one of which was presented to the King, the other to the Privy Council (425). In these documents the Company complained of the "efforts of the Hollanders to dispossess them by force" of many places in the East Indies; of "their most outrageous "behaviour, as any mortal enemies could do;" of the "unjust seizure" of the Company's ships, and keeping their men "prisoners in irons," and "declaring they will "take from the English all the trade in the East Indies," as "they care not for our King, for St. George was now "turned child." The "statement of the injuries done by "the Hollanders to the English in the East Indies" was divided into two parts, viz., "to the King in his dominions, "and in his honour by word and by fact; and to his subjects in their fame, in their persons, and in their estate" (425. i. ii.) These declarations were, by the King's commands, sent to the English Ambassador at the Hague, who was required to present them to the States General, and to demand their answers how far they will allow these insolencies of their subjects, or how they will punish them and make reparation ; and to insist particularly that they send “ commissioners, articulately instructed, to give satisfaction “ at the treaty to be instantly held between us and them.”

Instructions were likewise sent to Sir Dudley Carleton for his speech at the next Assembly of the States General, and their ambassador, Sir Noel de Caron, undertook that commissioners should come over instructed “not only to “ accommodate the former business first propounded by “ themselves, but with full power to treat and conclude,
“ and give satisfaction of all differences” (443). The Commissioners were to have arrived in England on the 1st September 1618 (425), but the “resolution of the “ States General to send over to England their commis“ sioners with the deputies of the East India Company” was not passed until the $\frac{9}{19}$ of the following month (460). Then a new difficulty arose. A report was generally credited at the Hague that the King had ordered the arrest in England of some of their East India ships (495). The Dutch Commissioners took alarm at this, and “would not “ venture their persons where (as they said) there was no
“ safety for their goods” (485). So that Sir Dudley Carleton was obliged formally to declare in a written “ memorial to the States General” that this report was not only false, but that, on the contrary, the King was expecting the arrival of the Dutch Commissioners to treat amicably upon all differences (495). Thus assured, the commissioners, ten in number, viz., four members of the States General, including Sir Noel de Caron, and six deputies from the Dutch East India Company, received their credentials from Maurice of Nassau, Prince of Orange, as also from the States General of the United Provinces,
“ to treat for the preservation and increase of navigation
“ and traffic in the East Indies” (487-8, 491-2). Within a week they arrived in London, and Chamberlain, on 28th November 1618, informed Sir Dudley Carleton that “ the States Commissioners had arrived, and people begin “ to flout them, saying brawn is likely to be cheap, as so “ many boors are come to town.”¹ They had audience of the King at Newmarket on the 10th December (506), following, when it was discovered that they had “no “ such commission under seal as was expected.” The King was very angry at this, and told them it was “an im- “ perious fashion of proceeding, as if they were come to treat “ of what themselves pleased, and to give law to His “ Majesty in his own kingdom ;” and Sec. Naunton, in a despatch to Carleton, written “at four in the morning” (509), says “His Majesty bad me tell you he must either “ think you an idle ambassador, or else little respected and “ illused by them.” The Dutch commissioners were not prepared for this reception by King James ; “they heard “ him with a troubled and dejected countenance ;” and in another despatch to Carleton (513), Sec. Naunton writes, “ We persuade ourselves the commissioners will give the “ King better satisfaction hereafter,” adding, “His Majesty “ is resolved not to lose or neglect his right, his honour, “ or his time.” A clear and succinct account of the progress of these negotiations, which lasted more than seven months, will be found in the papers calendared in this volume.² In the despatches from the English Ambassador at the Hague, and the instructions he received, we see the exact workings of the King’s mind throughout these negotiations ; and the Court Minutes of the East India Company admit us, as it were, into the confidence of the responsible and governing body of the English Company. We can trace, by the help of these minutes, the various influences that were exercised on those in immediate proximity to King James, as well as their effects; and in the other calendared papers in this volume on the same subject we have what is wanting to make a complete history of this transaction, supplying, as they do, every detail connected with these negotiations, which at length culminated in a "treaty between the English and the Dutch concerning trade in the East Indies," concluded on 2nd of June, and duly ratified on the 16th of July 1619 (679. 706).

It will not be out of place to draw attention to some of the papers that have reference to these negotiations. They were several times broken off. On one occasion the Lords, taken by surprise at the Dutch Deputies being on their departure, "professedly entreated" Sir Noel de Caron to stay them; but the King directed for answer that if they will be wilful and go, it is their own fault, and His Majesty will not stay them; but if they have any complaints, they may assure themselves of His Majesty's justice (565). The Dutch complained that the English Commissioners stood too strictly upon restitution of our merchants' ships and goods (555, 559, 632). The losses, however, sustained by the English Company through the Dutch, before this treaty of peace was proclaimed in India, were very considerable. The Hollanders have taken in all eleven sail (wrote the English factors), whereof most were laden, besides burning the English house at Jacatra; whereas the English have only taken the Black Lion, worth 71,000 ryals (883). In two of the English ships alone, the Bear and Star, were 100,000 ryals (p. 385). The commissioners met at Merchant Tailors' Hall. Our men find the Dutch very subtle and cunning; "how they will agree in the end," writes Chamberlain, "I know not; but we hear that hitherto they speak loud on both sides" (558); and it was acknowledged that, unless the King and the States “interposed themselves, and overruled the merchants on both sides, ’twill prove a fruitless labour” (572). Upon this King James, through his Lord Chamberlain, sent them “a kind message” (632), and the States Commissioners declared they would refer themselves wholly to His Majesty, who said he would end the business between them (639). But the King’s health temporarily prevented him from receiving the commissioners, and again they were “on both sides at a standstill, and like to break off” (647), and did, after all, again “break off about the fortifications; the Dutch would not allow ours to have anything to do in the managing of them, though they offered to bear half the charge of maintaining them” (658). The King was very dissatisfied at this, and said “their association being a matter that so nearly and highly concerned the weal of both countries, he would not spare any labour to effect it, nor be partial to either side, but look upon both as his own subjects” (665).

At a meeting held on 21st May (1619), the Committee of the East India Company were of opinion “that this treaty was but a colour to give time to work all the insupportable wrongs against them, and therefore fit to press it home unto His Majesty.” At another meeting on 25th May they came to the conclusion that the unkind carriage of the Dutch, and their malice against the English (as exhibited in the letters from India), should rather persuade the English to an agreement, although upon some unequal terms, seeing it is so generally desired, and that without it there is danger of the overthrow of the whole trade. They therefore came to the resolution to submit to His Majesty’s wisdom, and let the article of forts rest unperfected until they hear out of India, as it hoped hereafter the Dutch may be drawn to yield to forts (669, 672).

Between February and September 1618, sales were effected of the old or first joint stock at prices ranging from 203*l.* 10*s.* to 218*l.* per cent. profit, whereas the new or second joint stock only realized, during this period, 18*l.* 5*s.* per cent. the highest price, the lowest price being 10*l.* per cent. profit, sold in September 1618, just before the arrival of the Dutch Commissioners in England (284, 445).

On the 14th May 1619, the articles of the treaty were communicated to the Committees of the East India Company, the point for forts in the Moluccas and Bandas being the only one in difference. They were all discussed at this meeting, and "the King having made known the willingness of the States Commissioners to refer themselves to him to overrule the business, the Company were of the same mind, after making known their desires to His Majesty" (666). In the end the King "dissolved the difficulties of the East India business, and by his own wisdom and authority brought them to accord;" they, on their part, were "to acknowledge his gracious and peaceful disposition, and to answer it in like measure when it came to their turn" (677). The States Commissioners said how honourable and just the King was in their cause, and "all honour and thanks was by them wholly ascribed to His Majesty" (668, 673).

It was ordered in a Court of the East India Company that no copy of the articles be given to anybody, "lest they be made known to the Portugals," neither was anybody to be allowed to take notes "to publish them abroad." At the same Court a request of Prince Charles to adventure 6,000*l.* was "very willingly yielded to" (p. 286). He had previously been admitted a free brother of the Company at his own desire (375).

Before leaving England the States Commissioners dined with the King (668), and a great feast was given to all the commissioners at Merchant Tailors' Hall for a farewell. The Artillery also gave them a great supper, with a warlike dance or mask of twelve men in complete armour (657). The King knighted the three Dutch Commissioners who signed the treaty (707). The patent conferring knight-hood on John de Goch sets forth "his skill, prudence, and "courtesy towards the King in the management of the "recent treaty" (710).

What the public opinion of this treaty was may be gathered from Chamberlain's letter to Carleton, who writes on 5th June (1619), "But say what they can, things are "passed as the other would have it, which makes the "world suspect that they have found great friends and "make much use of their wicked mammon. Our men "will never have the like means and advantages to bring "them to reason as they had; now the opportunity is "lost and the heat cooled. The Company have petitioned the King, protesting against the twenty-fourth "article of the treaty, touching the question of forts, "framed by the States Commissioners, and which has "received H.M. approbation, as utterly cutting off the "Company from all hope and expectation of their obtaining any parts of the forts at any time hereafter, "which in the end would utterly exclude the Company "from the whole trade of the Indies, and they beseech "the King to take the subject into his gracious consideration" (683).

The English Ambassador at the Hague himself admitted "that the treaty might have been more advantageous for "our men in the point of fortifications," but then he says "the Dutch are stiff not to quitter prise, and it is better "to meet upon these terms than to remain as before, "which could not but turn to the ruin of both" (693). The Secretary of State, Sir George Calvert, in a despatch to Sir Dudley Carleton, says that "the treaty is in effect

" but a prorogation of the treaty to a longer and more " fitter time," and "in the meantime both parties are to " trade peaceably, abstaining from all acts of hostility and " violence, without prejudice to the right of either" (701).
The Prince of Orange and the States General ascribed, with much thankfulness, the conclusion of the treaty to King James (695), but neither the English Commissioners nor the English Company were satisfied with it, and Lord Digby was in consequence commanded to deliver a message from His Majesty at a meeting of the General Court on 2nd July 1619, when Lord Digby told them "that upon " complaint of my Lords, His Majesty's Commissioners " and the rest of the English Commissioners, that they " found too great advantage against them in this treaty " with the Dutch, they being some of them the States " themselves, who are interested in the action, have the " best furtherance and assistance of the States General, " who make it a matter of state, and therefore stand so " earnestly in defence thereof, authorizing and main" taining whatsoever hath been done by them; and the " English that oppose them are but private merchants, " and too unequal a match (in that respect) to contend " against them. Whereunto His Majesty's gracious an" swer was, that he esteems the East India Company a " great ornament and strength unto his kingdoms, whom " he hath and will maintain, wishing them to proceed " comfortably in their trade, which only increaseth when " all other trades decay; and doubted not to procure " them in some convenient time their own desires in " the Indies, which if the Dutch should deny, that quar" rel should be no longer the Company's but of the " State, and that if the Dutch hold not good correspon-" dency with his subjects beyond the Line he will not “ hold any with them here, willing the Lords of His Majesty’s Council to take knowledge of his resolution, and to cause an Act of Council to be entered to make it appear to be his act.” [Court Minute Book IV., p. 379.]

The States General not thinking they had sufficiently expressed their contentment in the success of their late embassy by their letters to His Majesty, sent by Carleton a message “full of gratitude and acknowledgment of eternal obligation to His Majesty to whose wisdom, and singular insight into affairs of greatest doubt and difficulty they said they wholly ascribed the good event of this treaty” (728).

The treaty was hardly signed—it had not been ratified—before a private committee was appointed “to have due consideration thought upon to present divers noblemen and others with, who were employed as commissioners in the treaty, especially those who have taken the most pains, as Mr. Treasurer of the Household (Sir Thos. Edmondes), the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Sir Foulke Greville), Sir Clement Edmondes, and some others” (697). Chamberlain told Carleton what this “consideration” was; he wrote that the English Commissioners had been well paid for their pains, having had presents from both sides. Lord Digby and Sir Foulke Greville had each a basin and ewer of gold of the value of 300*l.* from the States, and a chain of gold of the like value from the English East India Company, and he knew not how many more had their part au gateau in proportion (713). Carleton himself complained that while the Company had been so liberal to the commissioners, he, “the prime instrument,” as he called himself, was forgotten; but he said he was not insensible to such neglect, “and sooner or later may have an opportunity to make it appear” (725). In a letter to the Secretary of State in reference to his “pains in this business," the English Ambassador says, Il n'y eut jamais de si bonnes noces qu'il n'en eut de mal dinés (729, see also 777. 796.). And thus it was, with the privy councillor as with the ambassador and the merchant, each and all of them expected a "consideration," and, what is more, they got it, by no means an uncommon transaction in this reign, of which there are several instances in this volume (p. 311, 1168). Thus a treaty was concluded which was never adhered to. It was to remain in force twenty years, but in less than twenty months both the English and Dutch Governments were compelled to re-open fresh negotiations, which will be found fully described in this volume, and so futile was their result that differences between the two nations were constantly arising, and complaints were continually being made to both Governments of wrongs committed and cruelties practised, which eventually culminated in the frightful atrocities committed by the Dutch at Amboyna in 1624, and will receive ample illustration in our next volume.

The Bull, Capt. Robt. Adames, which took out the treaty of peace, did not arrive in India until March 1620 (934). Capt. Jourdain had only shortly before "been slain basely, being in parley with the Dutch," and the English admiral had determined with his 11 sail to try their fortune against the Dutch, who had 17 sail. The Bull arrived just in time, "for surely," wrote the master of the Expedition, "if we had met before this news of peace had come, it would have been a bloody proceeding." Much joy was shown on both sides for so happy a union "before any more Christian blood was spilt, and heathens to stand laughing at us and make benefit of our dissensions" (845). Capt. Adames wrote home that he rejoiced that it was "his good fortune to stop that bloody business" (842).

One of the main objects the Dutch had in view during the progress of this treaty was to effect a conjunction of the two companies. This was not a new idea;¹ it had long been thought of, if not openly talked about. As early as December 1617, Carleton told Sec. Sir Thos. Lake, when the King of Denmark was setting out four ships to the East Indies and the French were going upon the same adventure, that King James was likely to be moved to join the two companies, for, he adds, "if the English neither join with the French who seek us, nor with the Hollanders by whom we have long been sought, the French and Hollanders may join to our prejudice. Again, the Spaniards and Portuguese may recover their ancient possessions, against which they are only kept by the strength of the Hollanders, who it is impossible can continue the charge without assistance" (215). The Dutch of their own accord first propounded by Sir Noel de Caron that there might be a meeting of commissioners on both parts to treat of the settling a joint stock between the two companies (238, 443), and the King himself told the English Company he wished them to join with the Hollanders (505). According to the testimony of Robert Bell, one of the commissioners appointed by the King to treat with the Dutch, these last in 1618 maintained 22 forts in the Indies, wherein they kept 4,000 men in pay continually, and had near 30 sail of ships, and he was decidedly of opinion that "the trade of merchandise was not able to support any such charge." This was undoubtedly the case, as our own ambassador then resident at the court of the Great Mogul confirmed. Sir Thos. Roe strongly advised the Company "never to “ join stock with the Dutch to profit and loss, for their “ garrisons, charges, and losses by negligence would,” he said, “ engage the English Company to bear part of their “ follies for no profit ”¹; but he urged that “ your accord “ must be by a stint at those parts common to you both,

 “ and agreement to what ports you may resort without “ offence one to the other.” If, he argued, “ they keep you “ out of the Moluccas by force, I would beat them from “ Surat to requite it. In both these I have been large to “ Mr. Secretary and some of the Lords, that they may have “ feeling of the injuries and be assistant to you ” (p. 121).

This Calendar illustrates in a particular manner the lives of three very remarkable men of this reign, all of them in the service of the East India Company at this period—Sir Thomas Dale, Admiral of the Company’s fleet in India; Sir Thomas Roe, the first English Ambassador accredited to the Great Mogul; and Nathaniel Courthope, the heroic defender of the Company’s territory at Poolo-roon and elsewhere.

Sir Thomas Dale had already earned a considerable reputation in Europe as well as in America, which our State Papers fully bear witness to, and he very soon made his name famous in Asia. In all these quarters of the globe he served in a different capacity. He was a successful military commander in the service of the States General of the United Provinces. He was selected by the Virginia Company in London as the Governor of their infant colony in America, and the East India Company chose him as their admiral of the largest and best appointed fleet that had up to that time ever left these shores for India. He returned from Virginia in 1616, “ from the colony "in great prosperity and peace, contrary to men's expectations." It was Sir Thomas Dale who brought to England the celebrated Pocahantas, the daughter of Powhatan, with some ten or twelve other natives of Virginia. Soon after his return he wrote to our ambassador at the Hague that his absence from those parts had left him destitute of friends; that the Earl of Salisbury and Prince Henry got him leave of absence from the States for five years, but they would detain his entertainment to the time of his return, and he entreated Carleton to make the States acquainted with his case. At his departure he had married; now his wife was sick, and he was afraid to lose her.¹ Lady Dale was the sister of Sir Wm. Throgmorton (265). This letter was followed by one from King James himself, who requested Carleton to deal effectually with Count Maurice and the States General to procure satisfaction for the arrears of Sir Thos. Dale's pay during his absence in Virginia at the request of the late Prince Henry.¹ Three months later, in Feb. 1618, Carleton wrote to Secretary Sir Thos. Lake that "by reason of Sir Thomas Dale's good "service in Virginia, wherein there is a common interest, and of the King's recommendation, the "States have consented to the payment of his entertainment for the full time of his seven years' absence"¹ for which he received 1,000*l.* (288).

At a meeting of the East India Company, on 30th Sept. 1617, Sir Thomas Dale and Sir Richard Hawkins were both nominated for the command of the newly appointed fleet to India. On 28th November following, the Company came to a resolution to appoint Sir Thos. Dale chief commander, and the same day he entered into articles of agreement with the Company, whereby he was to receive a salary of 480*l.* per annum (p. 148).

His first letters to the Company which he sent home by a Flemish ship most probably never reached their destination. He doubted "whether they (the Dutch) had the honesty to deliver them;" certain it is, that if they were delivered, they have not been preserved. The first letter in this volume is dated from Jacatra 1st March 1619, and in the form of a journal gives an accurate picture of the state of the Company's affairs in India at this period, and of "a cruel bloody fight" between his own and the Dutch fleet.

[East Indies, O.C., Vol. VI., No. 767, Cal. No. 609.]

"Honorable Sirs,—My love and servyse remembred unto you, &c. My last letters wer wrytten unto you from the bay of Saldanya and sent hom by a Flemysh ship; wether they had the honestye to delyver them or no, I know not, but hop the best. Som two days after the departure of the Flemysh ship for England, I went to an island caled Penguyn Island to get refreshing for the fleet, and with me went three boates and som 40 men and the Presydent (John Jourdain). At my retorn, one of the three boates wher cast away and sum 12 men drowned, myself and the Presydent hardly esscaped (by the great goodnesse of God, for which His Blessed Name be prayed). The 25 of Jully we set sayle for Bantam, having recovered at Saldanya the most part of our syck men. The 31 of Jully we took a gallyon of the Portingalls, but she having nothing in her profytable for the Companye, I let her go without hurt or damayge. The 13 of August I cam in syght of the L. Admyrall Carryck of the Portugalls, wherin was Comander Don Chrystofylus de L'orayne, she being of 1,600 tonns, maned with 800 men, and exceding ryche in money and merchandyse as is reported; we somend her to yeld; they mad answere that the Generall was of an noble house, and that he and the chief offycers had taken the sacrement never to yeld the Kinges ship upon any condytyons what som ever, but to fyght yt out to the last man or els to burne and synck in the sea; wherupon we preparad ourselves to fyght one both sydes, our blodye colleris being out, and my ship and his redye to begine the fight, when he hung out a flage of truce and desyred a parley, the effect of which was that to save the bloud which that day would be spent, he would make some restytutyon in part, for former losses and damages we had receaved by ther natyone, wherupon I demanded 200,000 dollers in part of satysfacyon for losses our company had receaved by them. To be bry, after 20 days of treatye, having had no fighting whether, but stormye weather for 20 days, and he lykly to get from us every nyght, we excepted of 70,000 dollers for the Companye, and 10,000 for the men in the fleet, and so we parted without bloudshed. The 24 of September, Capteyn Parker dyed. The 15 of November we fell [in] with an island caled Enganio, about 3 of the cloke in the morninge. About 6 a'clocke in the morning the Sonn was cast away, wherin I lost all that I had in that ship to my shirt, myself being in a smaler ship with the Presydent, we being both of us syck at that tyme, and then were newly recovered. This was a great losse both to the Companye and myself, God's wyll be down. The 19 of November we cam to Bantam road (wher we fownd Capt. Prin's fleet,) wher we aboad ther to refresh our men untyll the 20 of December. The 5 of December a consell was held concerning the insolencyes of the Duch, and the great losses our company had receaved by them, as the taking of 5 of our ships of the ould joynt stock, the kylling of many of our men and keeping the rest as slaves in the Moullucas. A resolutyon was taken to mak warr agaynst them for satysfacyon of oure former losses. This evenynge we decryed a Duch ship called the Black Lyon in the straighes, wherupon I went oute with 4 ships to take her, the which we tooke the next morning by 8 of the cloke without the losse of any man's bloud, although the Duch resolved to blowe her up when our men were entred. This ship would have bin worth to the Companye verry much, she being very rychly loaden. The 20 of December we sett sayle for Jackcatra, sum 15 leages from Bantam, where the Duch fleet were, they having a strong castell there and most of ther provytyons for ther fleet. That nyght we ankered neare an island of thers where they intended to fortyfye. Ther fleet which rode in the rode under ther castell cam forth this nyght and ankered within one Englysh myle of our fleet; the 22 in the morning by break of day they set sayle towards us, where we were forced to cut our cables and ply to get the wynd of them, the which we had much adoe to get that day. The next day we began the fyght, they being seven ships and we eleven, whereof their Black Lyon was one being apoynted to look one, and the Pepercorne which was loaded with our money and goods, and the Thomas which was prepared and fytted with fyerworkes and ordayned to have bin burnt, for the fying of ther Admyrall, she being good for nothing els, so that we wer eight fyghting ships to seven of theirs, but five of theirs much better then ours, yet there was but five of our ships that fought, the mor sham for som of them. We began the fyght with them between tenn and eleaven of the cloke the 23 day of December, and fought untyll 3 of the cloke after mydday a cruell blodye fight, 3,000 great shott betwen both the fleets, many men maymed and slayen one both sydes, but they had (as we are gyven to understand) 4 tymes as manye men slayen and maymed as we hade. Three of ther ships is reported to be suncke by the Javas, how true yt is I know not, but I am suer they wer soundly banged. The next nyght we cam to an ancker within shot, one fleet of the other. The nyght overtaking us, they cam fyrst to an anker, and we after the nyght was begun, so ther we ryd untyll morninge. In the morning they had the wynd, but yet began not with us, although som of our ships in turning to get the wynd of them wer allmost aboard of them. Now our yll fortun was to dyscover three of our ships out at sea which cam from Bantam, and we plyed of to joyne with them for ther better saufty, and mayd sum smal stay untyll they cam up to us. In the mean tyme ther fleet (which by this tyme was nine sayle) cut downe ther mayn sayles and away to the eastward for Banda, we imagyning they would not have passed, ther rode under ther castell at Jaccatra, and have rune away from ther people as they dyd, and so by this meanes we lost them which troubled me very much, for if our thre ships had not com in syght that morning, they had never gotten away from us, which was a great hynderance to our proceedinges to the Molloccos. In this fyght I lost Roger Dale, my man, who had his legg shot of, and three days after dyed. Now having chased ther fleet thorow the bay of Jaccatra in the syght of all the Javas, to whom formerly they had mayd ther great bragges, the nyght overtaking us, we ankered near Jaccatra. This nyght a jonck was fyred and cam crosse our fleet, and many of the ships wer much trubled to get cleare of her and were forced to way, and thens we cam to an ankor nearer to Jackcatra the next day in the morninge, at what tyme the Black Lyon had order to anker neare unto the Admyrale to unlowd the best of her goodes into dyvers ships. That morning about 2 of the cloke, three or four drunken roges brok open her hould and went to steal rack apée, and as they wer drawing therof, set yt one fyer, sum being spylyt one the flower, took fyer and fyred, that which was spylt and that in the caske, and so fyred the ship. Thes roges being amassed [amazed] at this exceedent [accident], stole out of the hould and covered the scuttyll, as who should say they had not bin ther, and sum of them fell to breaking open of chestes. In the mean tyme the ship was one fyer about ther eares and impossible to be quenced, and so they consumed all that welth in her, an unfortunat exceedent. But who can withstand the myghtye hand of God. The 27 I sent all the boates to the ryver of Oruque to water, the same day I dyspatched away the Frances for to releve our fort in the island of Polerone and to incourayge them to hould yt out agaynst the Duch."

The remainder of this letter of fourteen pages refers chiefly to the business affairs of the Company at their several factories (see No. 609).

Sir Thos Dale afterwards returned to Engano to see what he could recover from the Sun, but got nothing but a little of his own plate; he found not one Englishman alive, but some 16 or 18 of their skulls lay in a heap together, so he killed two of their people, burnt and cut down part of their houses and trees, and left the place, "but the " diseases our people took there and aboard the China " junks left them not until many ended this life " (775). Between Engano and Masulipatam Road eighty died in Sir Thos. Dale's fleet; among them the Vice-Admiral, Peter Bowers, and several factors of note. Sir Thomas himself was very sick, and shortly after his arrival on 19th July 1619, "he departed this life in peace" (p. 325). Wm. Methwold, a factor at Masulipatam, in a letter to the East India Company, says that when Sir Thomas was advised of his extremity of sickness he desired to have some place fitted for him on shore. He was brought to the Company's house, where after twenty days' of languishing sickness and many testimonies of good christianity, contempt of death, and singular zeal and affection towards the Company's service, he died, and his body was "enclosed and “ housed in form of a tomb, which is almost finished ” (782). Capt. Robert Adames wrote home that Sir Thomas Dale “ died of the flux ” (842).

On 23rd July 1619, instructions were agreed to by the East India Company for Sir Thomas Dale to take the command of the first fleet that shall be jointly set forth by the English and Dutch, of sixteen or twenty good ships of war, to prosecute trade on the coast of Malabar, and endeavour to open and enlarge trade with the Chinese, by the advice of a council of defence, himself to be one, if not employed at sea (p. 286). But he had been dead four days when this resolution was passed, and Capt. Martin Pring had succeeded to the chief command (814).

Sir Thomas Roe was proposed to the East India Company by the Governor, Sir Thomas Smythe, “ as a gentle“ man of pregnant understanding, well spoken, learned, “ industrious, of a comely personage, and one of whom
“ there are great hopes that he may work much good for
“ the Company ” [Court Minute Book, III., 219]; and his instructions as ambassador to the Great Magoar [or Emperor of the Oriental Indies] are dated 29th December 1614. [East Indies, Vol. I., No. 44.] Two or three among his numerous letters calendared in this volume will give some insight into the history of his proceedings for the East India Company, how they were acknowledged by King James as well as the Company, and his general character. A letter (Oct. 1617) to the factors at Surat is characteristic. He says—

“ The Company have imposed on me no such authority as that it should hinder their business, nor so shortened yours as that in your merchandising affairs you may not proceed roundly. I am not a man that stands upon idle points; whatsoever you do for the best, we all, I hope, consent to, and I do give all my power to you. He that resisted your speedy proceeding under colour of my name, I have by my last made him see his error. For all other particulars, as yet come into my mind, I have sent you here remembrances. For Persia those of the 8th, to which I am constant. To the factories I have advised to receive their directions from you, and to follow them ; to further which and dispatch all, I will not fail with all occasion." [East Indies, O.C., Vol. V., No. 552.]

The remainder of this letter contains instructions on all kinds of subjects connected with the Company's business, and concludes,—

" Thus very weary, never in more hope of good success, I commit you and all our endeavours to God's blessing, desiring him to direct us, for such ravenous people I never wish to see if I escape these" (172).

His efforts to open a trade with Persia are thus acknowledged by the King :—

[East Indies, Vol. I., No. 57. Cal. No. 30.]

King James " to our right trustie and well-beloved servant, Sir Thomas Roe, Knight, our Ambassador resident with the Grand Mogull."

" James R.

" Right trustie and wel-beloved,—Wee greete you well ; Wee have seene your lettres written unto us in February last, and we have bene also more particularly informed by our principall secretary of the adverticements which came from you at that time in your other private lettres, which have given us very good contentment, being resolved to retaine in a gracious memory the dilligences and dexterity which you have used in your negociations there. In particular we do approve of the entrance of a treaty which you have begon to make with the Sophy of Persia, for the opening of his Gulfe and inlarginge the trade of our subjects into his dominions, especially for the traffique and commerce of silke ; being resolved to prosecute the same to effect, accordinge as we shall judge it requisite upon the further adverticementes that we shall heerafter receive from you. In the meanetyme we do authorize you to proceed in your good beginnings, and to dispatch into Persia some fit persons, with such instructions as you shall receive from the Governor and Committees of the East Indie Company, to ripen and prepare that busines. And moreover, if you shall find all things there so well prepared that you may come to the conclusion of a treaty to the purpose above named, without further circumstance, we do in such case heerby give you power to perfect and conclude, or cause to be perfected and concluded, a treaty of commerce betwixt the said great Sophy and us, for the mutuall good of the subjects and dominions of us both, without attending from hence any other directions then a confirmacon only of that treaty, which shalbe by us foorthwith ratified, according as you shall in our name undertake the same. Given under our signet at our Pallace of Westminster the 4th of February 1616[–17.]”

[East Indies, Vol. I., No. 58. Cal. No. 271.]

“ May it please your Majestie,—

“ The most gracious reception of my travells and the commands which your Majestie hath vouchsafed to mee, your unable and unwoorthy vassall, have given new life and quickened mee almost in the grave. Ther is no bond more stronge then that by which I am tied to your Majestie as your subject, but that it hath pleased you, out of your Royall grace, to give occasion to my weakenes that also addeth strength and couradge to a minde already wholly devoted and offered up to your Majesties service.

“ The negotiation of Persia by your Majestie, to mee committed, was begunn a yeare past by the factors of India, and overture made in the name of your Majestie, of which proceedinge I was utterly ignorant ; but had written some letters and sent divers propositions in myne owne name as your Majesties minister unto the Sha-bas (Shah Abbas), to give him understandinge of your desires in generall, and to discover to him somewhat of the Portugals’ dealings with those who too easily granted them admittance or ‘retraicts of strength.’ The ‘succeede’ of both is, the Sha hath sent your Majestie a very noble lettre, procured by Edward Connok, with divers lardge and ample priviledges granted unto your Majesties subjects for their acceptance and quiett commerce, directed for deliverie unto Sir Thomas Smythe. There yet are many difficulties unconsidered in the beginning, which forbide mee to give judgment eyther of the conveniency or possibilitie of this trade untill, upon knowledge of the merchants’ meanes to compass it, without prejudice to your Majesties kingdomes and to their owne profit and securitie, their farther resolution bee declared. The particulars are both too many and of too low an elevation to trouble your Majestie ; your generall commande beeinge obeyed, I have opened my poor understanding in the rest unto your Majesties Principal Secretarie, from whom you wilbe pleased to receive lardger enformation. If I finde by one yeares experience more that this trade may bee made by vent of the commodities of your Majesties kingdom, or by the industrie of your subjects from divers ports, without greater exports of money or bullion then Europe is able to beare, considering how many ways it bleedeth to enrich Asia, I wilbee bould to confirm in your Majesties name the treaty already begunn, and to add to it some other conditions, which shall as well make it profitable for your Majesties estates as easy for your subjects, to which end I have sent, under the limitations received from Mr. Secretarie Wynwood and instructions from the East Indya Companie, a commission to proceede in and perfect this affare, or tymely to foresee the hazards and inconveniences, that wee may retyre without dishonor.

“To the monarch with whom I reside your Majesties minister, I delivered your royal letters and presents, which were received with as much honor as their barbarous pride and custoomes affoord to any the like, from any absolute Prince, though far inferior to that respect due unto them. I have stroven somtimes to displeasure with their tricks of unmeasured greatnes, rather then to endure any scorne. I dare not dissemble with your Majestie their pride and dull ignorance takes all things done of duty; and this yeare I was enforced to stande out for the honor of your free guifts, which were sceazed uncivilly. I have sought to mayntayne upright your Majesties greatenes and dignitie, and withall to effect the ends of the merchant; but these two sometymes cross one another, seeing ther is no way to treate with so monstrous overweening that acknowledgeth no equal. He hath written your Majestie a letter full of good woords, but barren of all true effect; his generall [letter?] and thanks (?) are yet to publish. What hee will doo I know not. To article on even terms he avoyds, and houlds mee to his owne customes of government by new firmans upon new occasions, in which hee is just and gracious. It may please your Majestie to accept the translation, being faythfull; the original in Persian, as yet of use to us, to urge him to performe it, I am bould to keepe, untile I shalbee made happy by falling at your feet.

“Greater matters then truth I dare not boast of, neyther will steale payne prayses by false reports. What my endeavor is, and how faythfull, what my travell in the Camp of Confusion, I hope your Majestie will graciously conceive. This I will presume to avow, that I will not live and suffer your Majesties royall name to bee diminished for any consideration. And, for the success of my employment, that I will establish your Majesties subjects in as good tearms for theire traffique and residences as any strangers or the naturalls themselves enjoy, or at last by our force teach them to know your Majestie is lord of all the seas, and can compell that by your power which you have sought with curtesie, which this King cannot yett see for swelling.

“The Portugall is not yet wise enough to know his owne weakenes, who rather enviously hinder us then, like noble enemies, hurte us. Lett your Majestie bee pleased to give mee leave to enforme want of a peace with them, which by your royall authoritie were easily commanded, makes all these trades of Indya and hopes of Persia heavy and dangerous to the undertakers.

“I dare not troble your Majestie with more unnecessarie discourse, but humbly crave pardon for so much intrusion. And that you wilbee pleased not to bee offended after five yeares’ pilgrimage that I take leave to envy the happines of those which attend your presence, desiring the Almighty God to make your reigne so long, so blessed, and so glorious, that your name may bee the object of all envy and the example of all prosperitie.

“Your Majesties most humble vassall

“The Camp of Ghehangeer—Sha Greate Mogoll, THO. ROE.”

“Feb. 15, 1617[–18].”

The same month Sir Thomas Roe wrote to the East India Company:—

“I was fully resolved to returne by this fleete, as you may perceive by many passadges, but your earnest desier prevayles above myne owne occasions. Sir Thos. Smyth had power to send mee out, and hath lost noe part of his interest in mee. I doubt not his Majesties lettre to mee was procured by you, wherin I find his gracious acceptation above my merit, which bindeth mee to endeavour above my abilitie. I must acknowledge the favour you did mee in relations to his Majestie. That is the reward I labor for and expect, and you shall finde I will not fayle you in my uttermost endeavours. When my experience was raw, I wrote you many things by report, and I am not ashamed to recant; but the end shall judge of mee and of my ends. The next yeare I shall take your offer to returne in one of your shippes, and to command her” (267).

We have seen some of his doings in Persia. The following letter from the Great Mogul to King James, translated by Roe, testifies to the Great Mogul's appreciation of him in India, and to the friendship of the writer towards the English nation :—

“When your Majestie shall open your letter, lett your royal hart be as fresh as a sweete gardeine. Lett all people make reverence at your gate ; lett your throne be advaunced highe, and amongst the greatest of the Kinges of the Proffytt Jesus ; lett your Majestie be the greatest, and all monarchyes deryve their councelle and wysdome from thy brest as from a fowntayne, that the love of the majestie of Jesus may revyve and florish under thy protection.

“The letter of love and frendshipp which you sent me, and the presents, token of your good affection towards me, I have receaved by the hands of your ambassador, Sir Thos. Roe (whoe well deserves to be your trusty servant), delivered to me in an acceptable and happy hower, uppon which my eyes were soe fyxed that I could not easely remove them to any other object, and have accepted them with great joye and delight, uppon which assurance of your royall love I have geven my generall commaund to all the kingdomes and portes of my dominions to receave all the marchantes of the Englishe nation as the subjects of my frend, that in what place soever they chuse to lyve in they may have reception and resydence to their owne contents and safty; and what goods soever they desyre to sell or buy, they may have full libertye, without restraynt ; and at what port soever they shall aryve, that neither Spanyard, Portingall, nor any other shall dare to molest their quyet ; and in what cyttye soever they shall have resydence, I have commanded my Governors and Captaynes to geve them freedoms aunswerable to their owne desyres to sell, buy, or to transport into their cuntrye at their pleasures.

“For confrmation of our love and frindshipp, I desyre your Majestie to commaund your marchantes to bring in their shippes of all sortes of rarytties and rych goods fitt for my pallaces ; and that you be pleased to send your royall letters by everye opportunity that I may rejoyce in your health and prosperous affayres, and that our fryendshipp may be enterchangable and eternall.

"Your Majestie ys learned and quyeck-syghted as a proffytte, and can conceave much by fewe words that I need not to wryte more. The Great God of Heaven geve us increase of honour."¹

The last letter Sir Thos. Roe wrote from India was as follows :—

[Holland Correspondence, 29 May 1620. Cal. No. 885. II.]

Copy of the writing I gave to Frederic Hoffman to be delivered to the President of the English in East India.

" Sir,

" Meeting here with Frederic Hoffman, admiral of a fleet of eleven ships of Holland, bound for Bantam, but now two only in company, of good force and well manned, the rest dispersed on the coast of England. We have had some conference about the bad humours begun betwixt us in India. He professeth affections of peace, and that he hath no instructions to the contrary, and avoweth the arrival and reception of the States Commissioners in England to treat an accord. We have agreed mutually to send our advices; I to you by him, he to his General by the Bear, of what we hear, and that it is probable an union will be made hereby, on both sides, to prevent, if possible, any further occasions which will not be so easily quenched. If you find in effect as much as he professeth, a man of his place and authority may much advance our desires, so it may be done with due respects of honour and the Company's service. So I commit you to God.

" Mr. Barwick, Admiral

" of two good ships, the " Bear and Star, ready to depart

" the 11 May 1619."

This letter was commended by the Committee of the East India Company "for a very wise and worthy
" course, hoping it would be a means to withhold them
" there from further hurt and mischief" (743).

On his return to England Sir Thos. Roe was received with every mark of distinction. The Court of the East India Company had notice on 15th September 1619, of the arrival of the Anne in the Downs, and the landing of the Lord Ambassador, and immediately gave direction for his expenses together with his lady's to be defrayed to Gravesend, where a Committee would assemble the next day to conduct them to London, and a dozen coaches were ordered to be ready at Tower Wharf to carry him to his house (743). Ten days later he informed the court that he had had an audience of his Majesty, and given an account of his embassy (745). At this audience he presented the King with two antelopes, a strange and beautiful kind of red deer, a rich tent, rare carpets, umbrellas, and such like trinkets from the Great Mogul (749). On 6th October, in a full Court of Committees, Sir Thos. Roe gave a particular account of his proceedings, which is thus entered in the Court Minute Book, Vol. IV. p. 421, (750). Sir Thomas Roe desiring to give the Company satisfaction of his proceedings since his going into the East Indies, first gave to understand in what a desperate case he found the factories at Surat, Ahmedabad, and elsewhere in the Mogores country, proclamations out against them, to prohibit them of all trade, and to depart the land, which at his coming to Court he caused to be revoked, and procured phirmaunds to command their acceptance and friendly entertainment, proving against the Prince himself, that those things had been done without authority from the King, and by wicked subornation to have overthrown the trade of the English, assuring the Company that now by a fair and gentle course held and good correspondence and observation of the governor in some reasonable sort they may have as fair a passage of the business as can be expected 'or desired, making it appear what a profit may be hoped for and had by the trade into the Red Sea, where articles are confirmed with privileges for trade and freedom thereof, and capitulations set down with the Governor of Sana and Mocha, that for any commodities which may be carried thither (whereof he hath intelligence of the particulars vendible) centum pro cento, which commodities to serve those parts may be furnished to the value of 10,000*l.* for Surat, (without prejudice to the Prince his ship,) and 30,000*l.* worth from Dabul and the ports thereabouts. At which place of Mocha Capt. Shilling acknowledged that he was most kindly used there, affirming that there is as much security there for their goods, as can be expected, which they dare not go about to infringe, or attempt any thing to give distaste. And seeing those of Surat cannot trade safely thither without the company of the English into the Red Sea, where it is said that trade is for two millions yearly, they will be glad of the company of the English for many reasons delivered, which ship of theirs returning is of very great value, having 1000 of their people in her, will be as a pawn and assurance for the good usage of our people at Surat. And this trade in time may be enlarged by the English as other commodities may be gotten from sundry other places of the Indies, and will be the life of Surat and Persia to supply both those places with money which trade being brought to good perfection he hopeth they will be careful to preserve, and continue it notwithstanding any discouragement that may be objected by the factors at Surat, who are unwilling to have that trade prosper (as is collected by many circumstances). Lastly he made known that he recovered all the extortions which had been exacted by sundry unjust govenors that year and the year before, and had left all matters in a good, settled, and peaceful course, drawing out twenty-one articles,¹ most of which he procured the King to confirm, and got sundry phirmaunds granted for frigates to be delivered furnished to the English for their defence against the Portugals, (who as was delivered were preparing an armada against the English,) together with many other privileges, which he thought as much in general as he could expect or desire. And recovered all debts, leaving none in the country but only one of a Banyan who was the King's prisoner. And yet for him he hath the King's promise to force him to pay the said debt, or else to deliver the party dead or alive unto their hands. And lastly of all he caused a list to be read which he had drawn of the remainders in the country at his coming away, both money in specie at the several factories, what good debts and commodities that would draw in so much money within the compass of such a time, and what of those things were appointed to make provisions ready for the Lyon against the next year, together with a note of the remainders of all the general goods in the country, and what is ordered to be provided for the Southwards, Persia and Mocha. And having made this general relation, (which gave very good content and satisfaction,) the Company intended to meet at some special times with him to view all his notes and writings, sort them, endorse them, and put them to be kept in their several places, where they may be found hereafter upon any occasion to use them.²

A committee was then appointed to cast up Sir Thos. Roe's accounts. His charges, both ordinary and extraordinary, for housekeeping, travelling with the King, etc., amounted one year with another during his residence in the country to about 600*l.* a year, and the Company adjudged he had been very frugal (762). A few days later the Committee announced that his accounts had been “perused and ended.” The Company found “great good husbandry in his expense of housekeeping which cometh to about 250*l.* or 260*l.* a year,” and “having duly weighed his carriage and behaviour from the beginning till this present, they esteemed him a very worthy gentleman, that hath husbanded things exceedingly well, and very moderate in his expenses, and one that by his modesty, honesty and integrity, hath given good satisfaction.” And “the question being put to three sums of 1,000*l.*, 1,500*l.*, and 2,000*l.*, there was given him by erection of hands the sum of 1,500*l.* as a gratification for his service performed, wherein they had no regard to the future time, but hearing of his readiness to give his assistance at any meetings hereafter, they supposed his future service might deserve according to the time; and he presenting himself Mr. Governor made known the Company’s mind, who acknowledging his honesty and frugality, and commending his care, desired him to accept of the foresaid sum of 1,500*l.*, which they held too little compared with his desert, but their small returns pleaded partly the excuse. Sir Thomas Roe made known that he took in good part whatsoever is given. In the mean time purposed to think thereof, and at next Court purposeth to come and give his thanks.” (Court Minute Book, Vol. IV., p. 451, Cal. No. 765). At the next Court a letter was read from Sir Thos. Roe, of thanks for the gratification bestowed upon him, and of offer of service for the good of the Company. His fair carriage was commended and compared with others who have made use of their time by private trade, and “supposing his experience and means here have “ enabled him to do the Company good service, either

“ at Court upon occasion, or by his advice in drawing “ their letters and commissions, and that there is a kind “ of necessity to use his help about the new trades, it was “ thought fit to have him accepted as a Committee “ amongst the rest, and so to reward him accordingly by “ giving him a present yearly allowance to bind his “ presence and advice amongst them, which will be an “ honour and reputation unto him and right to the “ Company.” Remembering also that some about the King having lately pressed to ruin that business of my lord of Warwick’s,¹ and that Roe took it wholly upon himself, and told the Lords that it was his own act, and he was ready to justify it, “ which gave a taste what further use there may be of his courage and service,” it was resolved to give Roe for this year ensuing, until the election in July, 200*l*. The presents made by Sir Thos.
Roe in the Indies allowed, and the 100*l*. which was laid out in plate for him at his going bestowed upon him, “ that his money disbursed for those gifts may not return “ barely to him again.” (768.)

At the next meeting of the Court, Sir Thos. Roe was offered the appointment of Principal of the fleet to Bantam; but he, acknowledging the Company’s favour and liberality, desired a breathing time, though ready to perform any service for them both by word and deed. (772.)

Sir Thos. Roe did not, however, remain long in the East India Company’s service. On 3rd Aug. 1621 he informed the Company that he had entered into communication with the Turkey Company for employment as ambassador to Constantinople. He complained that some of the

him on his return, which he presumed he had deserved, also that there was given him (as he understood) 200*l.* per annum pension, “but it seems the Company meant it not so,” which was the reason of his not being able to pay in his adventure. He had paid in 800*l.*, and was 300*l.* behind, which he said would be paid by Sir Henry Roe at Christmas. “The only thing that made him look another way” was the Company ceasing the 200*l.* pension. Through his intended employment, and the increase in his family, he was driven to larger lodgings, and he wished to buy of the Company some velvet hangings and Persian carpets. These the Company bestowed upon him as a token of their good wishes, regretting they were so unhappy “as to lose the employment of so well a deserving gentleman, yet their loves should follow him.” (1068.)

Lord Carew suggested to Sir Thos. Roe how he might himself raise a monument to his own fame. “Be careful,” he said, “to make a map of the Mogul’s territory as “you intended; it will leave to the world a lasting “memory when you are dust.” (244.)

A cotemporary writer thus sums up the character of Sir Thos. Roe:—“He understood the dispositions of men “so exactly, could suit their humours so fitly, observe “opportunities and seasons of actions so punctually, keep “correspondence so warily, wade thro’ difficulties so “handsomely, wave the pinch of a business so dexterously, “contrive interests so suitably, that he was advised with “concerning the most important affairs of the kingdoms “he resided in abroad, and admitted of the Privy Council “while he lived at home, where his speech against the “debasement of the coin at the Council table will last as “long as there is reason of state in the world, his settle“ment of trade as long as this is an island, and his “Eastern MS. as long as there are books to furnish “libraries, or libraries to preserve books.”¹

A “memorable accident” is related by Sir Thos. Roe of a rajah or great prince, “a desperate atheist,” who died through one of his women plucking a hair from his breast, which, being fast rooted, caused a drop of blood to issue, and the wound gangrened incurably and almost miraculously. The rajah lamented that he had been a despiser of the Godhead, and though a soldier that he should die by a wound less honourable than from a lance or sword; “but now,” said he, “I confess that great God whom I scorned needed no greater weapon than a hair to “revenge himself.” (289.) The Archbishop of Canterbury told Sir Thomas Roe that he thought his account of how a heathen lord came to his end by the pulling off of a hair a marvellous example of the power of God upon rebellious atheists, and that, “Sir Walter Raleigh “amongst us did question God’s being and omnipotency, “which that just Judge made good upon himself in over “humbling his estate, but last of all in bringing him “to an execution by law, where he died a religious and “Christian death, God testifying his power in this, that “he raised up of a stone a child unto Abraham” (594.)

Nathaniel Courthope petitioned for employment in 1609, and entered into an agreement to serve the Company for seven years.² He soon afterwards left England in the Darling, one of Sir Henry Middleton’s fleet, and shared in all the adventures that befel Sir Henry, and in his captivity with the Turks at Aden and Mocha; went to Surat, and from thence with Capt. Downton to Tecoe, who has left a full "Relation" of the misfortunes which happened to the fleet during two years' voyage, "began with glory and set out with great charges, but since deluded and abused in most places."¹ So disgraceful was the conduct of the Turks, that a "letter of advice" was left at Mocha and Socotra "for all English ships to shun the Red Sea," setting forth their tyrannous treatment, their treacherous surprise and massacre of the English on 28 Nov. 1610, after promise had been given that they should be well used, eight being killed, fourteen wounded, and the rest, 51 persons, put in irons and imprisoned by express command of the Grand Turk. The reason assigned for this shameful treatment was that the English had gone "so near the Turks' holy house of Mecca." Their goods were confiscated, and in an attempt of 100 armed Turks to surprise the Darling, on board of which was Courthope, three Englishmen, together with twenty-six Turks, were slain. The Bashaw afterwards praised "his own mild nature" in not putting all of the English to the sword.² Courthope was next appointed to the factory of Succadana in Borneo, and helped to frame the instructions for Sophony Cozucke, who was sent to confer with the governors of Landak "upon what security the English might settle a factory there." The last article of these instructions is characteristic of Courthope, "above all," he says, "do not be flattered with fruitless hopes, but if possible bring firmans for what is said or promised."³ In his attempt to settle this factory "up the river of Landak" he was seriously repulsed by the Dyaks, and escaped a "marvellous danger."³ The master's mate of the Darling, Thos. Herode, in a letter to the East India Company in July 1614, gives some details of Courthope's doings. He says, the people of Landak were very desirous that the English should settle a factory there, where all the diamonds and most part of the gold and bezoar stones come from, but that through the "saffeigenes" [savageness] of the Dyaks they lie in the rivers on purpose to take off the heads of all they can overcome. On the first attempt to settle a factory, the English were assailed by 1,000 men, "but the Dyaks, "not being used to powder and shot, were fain to run ashore." On the second attempt nine Englishmen again went up the river. The King of Sambas promised them he would meet them with 1,000 men, "which they "of Landak having intelligence of, the people sought by "treachery what they could not do by force," for the force of the whole country was not able to withstand the nine men, "so they endeavoured to split the English prow against the rocks." No wonder the English were so desirous of settling a factory, for it was reported that 3,000 or 4,000 carats of diamonds may be had there yearly, besides gold, bezoars, and wax.¹

In October 1616 Nathaniel Courthope received his commission and instructions as commander and chief merchant of the ships Swan and Defence, for a voyage to Banda. He was to sail for Sambopa in Macassar, to take in rice, and then proceed to Pooloroon, where the people "expected his coming, and would be ready to receive him." He was especially cautioned as to his behaviour towards the people, who were described as "peevish, perverse, diffident, and "perfidious, apt to take disgust upon small occasions, and "being moved are more cumbersome than wasps;" and finally he was directed, in case the Hollanders "offered "violence, to the utmost of his power, even to the loss of "lives and goods, to make good the same."¹ We shall see how thoroughly he carried out these instructions.

His first letter from Pooloroon is dated 24 April 1618, and addressed to President Ball at Bantam. In it he speaks of "the hard fortune fallen to our ships bound hither this year." They met (he writes) with four Holland ships of war, but the Solomon, being so deep laden, could not use her lower tier of ordnance,, "so they fought with them half a day, and being so over-matched they yielded; but, being in the night, the Attendance, before they yielded, gave the Bandanese their small boat, so they escaped to Pooloroon; but the Solomon was so belaid that the Bandanese could not go out of her. Mr. Cassarian yielded in that manner that if I had been in his place before I would have done it I would have sunken down right in the sea first. It was in this manner; after they had fought from two o'clock in the afternoon until nine at night, being almost board and board, the Dutch calling unto him to take in his colours, strike his sails, and come himself aboard of them, which all he did, which before I would have struck my colours in that manner I would have sunk down right in the sea, so he being aboard of him they detained him and his boat, so our men in the ships played a good wise part likewise, for they, perceiving their commander kept aboard the Dutch ships, went and got the Bandanese swords, and hid them from them, but only two of them which kept their swords privately from our men, so they being nineteen of them in all those that had no weapons stowed themselves in the ships, and some 8 or 10 of them, with their creeses and two swords, at the Hollanders entering of our ships, killed of the Hollanders at least forty of them, and hurt divers more of them, most of this slaughter being done by two of the Bandanese only, for at their entering our men kept themselves upon the forecastle apart, whilst the “ Bandanese fought; but at last, being taken by the Hol“ landers, killed 12 of them, and saved seven of the “ youngest of them alive. The loss of these two ships “ was only their late coming, having not westerly winds “ enough to bring them into the road.”

Courthope complained bitterly of the President. He wrote, “ you knowing the Flemings forces, and the tyranny they “ use us withal if they get the upper hand of us, I much “ marvel you sent this year with so weak forces, you seeing “ they use all the means possible they can to bar us of all “ trade in these parts. I am sure you must yourself needs “ know so much, and so far as I can perceive they neither “ respect right or justice, but stand altogether upon force “ of arms, which I see right and possession is too weak to “ deal with force; therefore, if you mean the Company to “ have any trade of these islands or the Moluccas, it must “ not be deferred any longer, but to send such forces the “ next westerly monsoon to maintain that we have, or “ else all is gone, and not to be expected hereafter any “ more trade this way. This year I have withheld it from “ them with much difficulty, without any relief or aid;
“ not all this year, not so much as one letter from you to “ advise me what course you intend to take in this busi“ ness, I having but 38 men to withstand their force and “ tyranny, which is a very weak strength to withstand
“ their unruly odds of forces. Our wants are extreme; “ neither have we any victuals or drink, but only rice and “ water, which had not God sent in four or five junks to “ have relieved us with rice I must have been fain to have “ given up our King’s and Company’s right for want of “ relief, which relief is weak. Therefore I pray you con“ sider well of these affairs, and suffer us not to be forced “ to yield ourselves into such tyrants hands, which I know
“ will have no Christianity in them if we be forced to “ yield ourselves to them ; therefore these are to let you “ understand that though with great want and misery we “ are like to endure, I am determined to hold it out until “ the next westerly monsoon, in despite of them, or else

 “ we are determined all to die in defence of it. At pre“ sent they have 8 ships here and two gallies, and to my “ knowledge all fitted and ready to come against us ; so I “ look daily and hourly, and if they win it, by God’s help
 “ I make no doubt but they shall pay full dearly for it “ with effusion of much blood ; thus hoping you will use “ such means both for our relief and for the Companies “ good and our country’s credit as we may be able to “ withstand the pride of these our enemies that seek “ nothing more than our overthrow and disgrace, as you “ may plainly see and perceive ; besides you know we “ have undertaken the defence and aid of these countries.
 “ If we should be forced to give it over now, what would “ all other countries think of it.”—[East Indies, O.C.,
Vol. VI., No. 644, Cal. No. 332.]

The Hollanders made an attempt upon 2d June 1618, landing 700 men, but were repulsed by the country people, and had killed and maimed about thirty people ; which attempt, says George Muschamp in a letter to the East India Company, hath hardened the Bandanese hearts for ever having any truce or commerce with them ; and they deeply vow that unless they be relieved by the English they will abandon their islands and destroy their fruits, which caused Mr. Courthope and the rest of us that were with him, for the future hopes of that trade and other places of the Moluccas near adjoining, viz., Cambello, Lugho, and other places upon Amboyna (who do still oppose the Hollanders, in expectation of our forces to relieve them), we determined to stay unto the next westerly monsoon with those comfortless provisions which we bought of Javas that casually came thither, being a small quantity of rice to relieve us and the country people (for the place affordeth nothing of itself), so with a bare and hard allowance we procured as much as would last us until the five of December, having only rice and rain water for our sustenance both in health and sickness, and the former six months we lived upon a coarse kind of bread called sago, brought from the island of Ceram, the trial whereof made many of our common sailors very unwilling to subject themselves to apparent misery; but Mr. Courthope, his mild carriage and earnest persuasions, prevailed with them, who hath worthily respected his credit and the dutiful service he oweth to your worships in the prosecuting of this business imposed [on] him, (623.)

On 2 August 1618 Muschamp left Pooloroon for Bantam by Courthope's orders, to inform the English President of all that had passed, with some of the chief men of those islands, who were desirous to know if the English were willing and able to assist them, which, writes Muschamp, " I do think the President and Sir Thos. Dale absolutely " determined to put in execution, and sent to Pooloroon a " small pinnace for their present relief with provisions, " intending suddenly to have followed with the fleet, but " other occasions hath detained them, and the monsoon is " so far spent that shipping cannot come thither this year.
" The causes I refer to my superior here resident, only pre" sume to inform unto your worships of the miserable
" state of those poor men upon Pooloroon which live in " great want, and in danger of their enemies, if it do not " please God to send some extraordinary means to relieve " them, and the hazard of losing that hopeful trade which " the Hollanders seeketh to prevent, so it remaineth very " doubtful whether the country people will be able to " keep their islands this year, and if the Hollanders give “ an assault, there was not at my coming away above “ seven barrels of powder left for 22 pieces, which is a “ small proportion to withstand an enemy, howsoever their “ resolution was to maintain their possession or die in the “ defence thereof, unless want of relief force them from

“ it.” (623.)

The next letter from Courthope is dated 19 Aug. 1618, and is addressed to Churchman and other English prisoners with the Dutch at Pooloway. “ As touching the keeping or delivering up of this island,” writes Courthope, “ I have “ written to Mr. Cassarian David, hoping he will show you
“ what I have wrote, which I trust will give you satisfaction “ therein. And be assured, by fair means or foul, I hope to “ procure your releasements shortly, exhorting you] in the “ meantime to bear your captivity with patience, until it “ shall please God to send the time of your release, which I “ desire may be according to my designs, either from “ Bantam or otherwise. Time being so short I cannot send “ such things as I would, but in the meantime receive a “ little basket of fish, desiring you all in general to agree “ like friends together in this your time of bondage, thus “ giving you to understand that I have sustained as great “ a loss as any of you all, for it is well known I had nothing “ left me but an old suit of apparel upon my back, and “ likewise last year Lawrence Ryall, General, offered me “ great satisfaction if I would have accepted of it, but “ knowing the infamy that would have redounded unto “ me, therefore I little respected it.” (409.)

Courthope wrote again to these poor English prisoners in January 1619. He says, “ I received some ten days “ since an advice from Jacatra from our new come fleet, “ General for the sea Sir Thomas Dale, Knight, with his Majesty’s commission, and Capt. John Jourdain, President “ for the Indies on land, being sent of purpose by his Ma“ jesty of England to right our abuses formerly done and “ prosecuted by the Dutch, which shall well make apparent

 “ we have a King indeed otherwise than they have reported;
 “ and that they shall well know here in these parts, as they “ already have had a taste of, as, namely, before Jacatra, “ where as they fled in the plain field before us, and left their “ castles there in distress, the one being surprised by the “ English, the other, I make no question, by God’s grace,
 “ but before this (being their strong fortification at Jacatra “ with fifty pieces of ordnance) is either taken or surrendered “ to the English, also the Black Lion, richly laden from “ Patani, already taken by the English; and have comfort in “ God, for make no question but this year to be set all free, “ to your hearts’ content, and regain our former losses, and “ what I conceal in heart our actions shall make manifest;
 “ and I pray use all patience in so short a time of extremity, “ for if God say Amen your date is determined, and your “ bonds will be shortly cancelled. What extremity the “ Dutch useth unto you they shall have their measure full “ and abounding, either in gentleness or rigour; and “ whereas heretofore they have protested fire and sword, “ fire and sword they shall have repaid into their bosoms.
 “ Fear nothing, for we have the King’s Majesty’s com“ mission for what we do, whereof the General hath sent “ me a copy, and for my own part I have my heart’s con“ tent and shortly expect.” (554)

George Muschamp, in a long letter to the East India “ Company from Bantam, on 12th March 1619, says, “ Mr.
 “ Courthopp, myself, and 32 men more hath maintained the “ possession of Pooloroon, enduring much want and misery, “ for your worships’ benefit and our country’s credit.” This letter was received in November 1619, and very soon afterwards a motion was made at a meeting of the Court of the East India Company, by Christopher Clitherowe, one of the Committee, that Nathaniel Courthope, one of the Company's servants in the Indies, having kept possession of Pooloroon for the Company very valiantly, against the Flemings, and endured much misery, might receive some preferment from the Company both for place and salary; and it was ordered that he have 100*l.* per annum, and be recommended to the president and council at Bantam for preferment (797).

What a cruel stroke was it to this brave and intelligent officer, who, after defending his little fort, upon which depended the whole Bandanese trade, for above two years; after procuring the surrender of all those important islands to the crown of England; after promises of speedy re-inforcements, and after so many gallant but fruitless efforts to drive the enemy from the coasts, at last to receive advice that the English Admiral, Sir Thomas Dale, was dead, the other officers upon bad terms with each other, and the fleet dispersed upon different voyages. But determined, though deserted, never to abandon the trust reposed in him, he went with a vessel to procure stores for his fort. In his voyage he was met by a large Dutch ship, which he fought for some hours till he was shot in the breast mortally. Finding that his vessel must strike, he plunged into the sea, to avoid falling into the hands of an enemy whose cruelty he was no stranger to, and thus ended the life of one of the bravest officers and most faithful servants the Company ever employed.¹

Courthope was "slain by the Hollanders" in November 1620 (1032). In a journal kept by John Cartwright, appointed "second to Mr. Nathaniel Courthope," he says, "Courthope was slain by the Dutch coming by night from "Lantar over to Pooloroon, being betrayed by a Dutchman "that first ran to the English, and at Mr. Courthope's

“ going to Lantar run away again to Pooloway and informed “ the Dutch of his coming back, who laid wait for him, and “ he, being a man of that resolution not to submit himself “ to their mercy, was shot through. This was done two “ months before my arrival (Jan. 19), at which time it is “ thought the Dutch there living knew of the contract of “ peace which was agreed upon in the year 1619.”

Capt. FitzHerbert, the Admiral of the East India Company's fleet, did not receive the news of Courthope's death until five months after he “ was slain by the Hollanders.” He wrote home in March 1621, from aboard “ The Royal Exchange, before Amboyna,” that there had been fighting between the English and Dutch about Pooloroon, and that the whole island had brought in their arms, and submitted themselves to the Hollanders; but he added, “ I hold “ it fit neither to give it over nor to yield it to the Dutch at “ present. It would be a disgrace to our nation, both here
“ and at home, to forego a thing so slightly that was so “ long kept by Mr. Courthope as obstinately.” (990). A few days later Capt. FitzHerbert again wrote home (27 March) (997), that he had set sail from Amboyna on the 10th, and arrived at Pooloroon on 14 March. That the Dutch had taken Lantar, put all the English into prison, and seized all the Company's goods. Only three days before the English Admiral's arrival, the Dutch General had sent about 25 prows with 500 men or more to Pooloroon who sought to surprise the island, “ whereupon the blacks came to “ Mr. Haies, and asked him whether he would defend “ them, and told him if he would that then they would “ fight it out to the last man. But Mr. Haies answered “ that he was not able, nor could not. The blacks seeing “ the ‘ eminent ’ danger, and how they were forsaken by “ the English, for whose sake they had stood out with “ the Dutch so long, began most pitifully to lament that “ they must become subject to the Dutch.” So the Dutch “ landed unopposed, demanded of the natives “how “ they durst deliver their island to the English,” and “ made them give up all their arms. The Dutch then “ compelled “this miserable people” to destroy all the walls which “ranged the whole island” and make them even with the ground, “not so much as sparing the “ monuments of the dead. In fine they were compelled “ to give the island to the Dutch by presenting them “ with a nutmeg tree in a basin, as the custom of these “ parts is in like cases. Thus was Pooloroon lost, which “ in Mr. Courthope’s time, by his good resolution, with a “ few men, maintained itself, to their disgrace, and now by “ the fearfulness of Mr. Haies and his irresolution is “ shamefully lost in the time of peace.” What other exploit the Dutch General has in hand at present is not known, wrote Fitzherbert. Some think he will go for Tidore, others to Macassar, but “I verily believe,” said the English Admiral, “he will go where he may do the English “ most disgrace, one of the principal ends of all their “ designs.”

While Courthope and his men had been suffering the greatest hardships at Pooloroon, the English on the neighbouring island of Pooloway fared, as we have seen, but little better. In a “bill of grievances endured by the English “ under the tyranny of the Dutch, and witnessed by “ Cassarian David, Bartholomew Churchman, and George “ Pettus,—being ‘indongened’ at Pooloway, besides all “ their Pagan like usage, as by that cruel man Lawrence “ Riall we were kept in such misery with stinking water “ and rice, half full of stones and dirty, not able to keep “ life and soul together; and had not Derickson Vanlaine “ granted the English at Pooloroon free access to Pooloway, “ to bring us relief, we had been all ere this in our graves,
 “ but we passed away our times in expectation of better “ fortunes, as you have all from time to time promised; but “ now again our misery is thrice doubled, but being come “ to this place you have not only used us basely in other “ things, but have even taken away that poor sustenance “ which we bought with our money. * * * To be so “ handled is ten times worse affliction than ever was afflicted “ upon us, for to chain us up like so many dogs, and to let “ us lye in the rains and storms all night without any shelter.

 “ * * * And this is of a truth, that even your hogs “ after their kind, lye a night far better and drier than we
 “ in our kinds, being Christians, and the chiefest of our “ voyage, our grief being so much the more in that your “ men which were taken in the Black Lyon were used like “ men, and we like the most abject of the world ; yea, more “ like dogs than subjects to the King’s Majesty of England, “ and being in good respect with our worthy employers.
 “ But God that is above all, sees all and in His good time
 “ will remedy all these wrongs. Thus much ” they say,
 “ we have thought good to certify unto you (the Hollanders,) “ not by the way of entreaty, for that we see is in vain, “ but only that you may know that now even our lives are “ in apparent danger by these your cruel dealings, and that “ we never look to come home alive out of your hands, for “ by all manifest appearance you seek even to take our lives
 “ from us. This being a true pattern of our grieved hearts, “ whereby all men may take knowledge how unchristian-“ like we have been and are used by you. In all which we “ have not expressed the tenth part of your cruelty ” (634).

The Dutch had also taken Lantar and put the merchant and the rest of the English into prison, and seized all the Company’s goods. The chief factor at Lantar gives an account of the usage he received from the Dutch.

“ They went,” he says, “ to the English house, seized
 “ the English and Chinese there, who they bound hand
 “ and foot, being made fast two by two, and threw over

“ the wall.” They sent a Japanese, who with two blows struck off the heads of the Chinese, and Randall, the chief factor himself, would have shared a similar fate, but the Dutch Governor, Houtman, “ stayed his hand, whether by “ chance or of purpose he knows not,” just at the right moment, for Randall was bound to a stake, and with a halter made fast to his neck, his head was “ triced up,” so that the Japanese might dispatch him the easier. The Dutch took at least 200 brass pieces, together with a great quantity of spice and other “ luggage.” But writes Captain Fitzherbert, in March 1621, one thousand men yet stand out against the Hollanders at Lantar, and if it were lawful to aid them with but 100 shot and some rice, they would yet beat the Hollanders off the island (997).

The President of the English factories in India wrote that the surrender of these Banda islands will not be worth less to the English than Amboyna is to the Flemings, which yields them at least 400 tons of cloves yearly, and in years of plenty three times as much. Amboyna was described as one of the places of least charge and greatest benefit in putting off English goods. Banda was said to sell 40,000 ryals yearly of clothing, victuals, and other necessities, and all the islands to yield 1,000 tons of nuts and mace annually (pp. 106, 386).

The prosperity of the English in Japan began rapidly to decline after the death of Ogusho Same in April 1616. The new Emperor, Shongo Same, so curtailed their privileges, that the English were restrained to have their shipping and sales at Firando only (I. I.), and in spite of the utmost endeavours of our factors, these privileges were never again so enlarged as to be of any permanent benefit to the East India Company. The chief factor, Richard Cocks, was more than four month's at the Emperors Court, about renewing the Company's privileges, but he was told the matter could not be remedied at present, because an Emperor's edict, by Act of Parliament, having been so lately passed, it could not so soon be replaced without scandal to the State, but the Emperor's secretaries told Cocks that "if he renewed his demand next year, being so reasonable, they verily thought it might be amended." And Cocks, in a letter to the East India Company, says, I hope it may be, otherwise the Japan trade will not be worth the looking after. Cocks again went to the Emperor's Court the next year, in company with Richard Wickham and William Addames, hoping to get their privileges enlarged. But altho' the Emperor received their presents as from his Majesty with many complimentary words, in the end they were answered that they had as large privileges as any other strangers, wherewith they might rest contented, or if they found not trade to their content they might depart when they pleased, and seek better in another place. An answer was then requested to King James' letter, but the English factors were told that the letter was sent to Ogusho Same, the deceased Emperor, and it was held ominous among the Japans to answer dead men's letters (p. 126).

The President of the English factors in India, writing from Bantam in 1618, says, from Japan, silver, copper, iron, and good store of victualling may be had; but, although no great benefit accrues from returns from thence, he was of opinion that were Japan supplied. as it should be, not with gally pots, pictures, looking glasses, table books, thread, and spectacles, "and such like trumpery from England," but with commodities from these parts of the world, (that is India,) it would prove none of the worst factories (p. 107). Cocks had written the year before that silver might be procured in Japan in great abundance, and liberty to carry it out at pleasure, but not with English commodities ; rather with raw silk and silk stuffs, all of which must be procured with money to have them in any quantities, so that to begin this factory (at Firando) a great sum of ready money or plate must be provided, and afterwards the profits arising will provide Bantam and other factories without sending any more out of England (12).

But the new Emperor of Japan, who is described as “no martial man, but a great politician” (p. 358), was not satisfied with simply curtailing the privileges his predecessor had given to the English and other Europeans who traded with his subjects. He established a system of persecution, which he expected would ultimately drive every Englishman out of his territory. William Addames wrote home in January 1617 that the present Emperor, who had then reigned about nine months, was more against the Romish religion than his father was ; he had forbidden, on pain of death, any of his subjects to become Romish Christians, and also any stranger merchant from abiding in any of the great cities, for fear on that pretence that Jesuits and Friars might secretly teach the Romish religion (8). Three years later, Cocks in a letter dated March 1620, says, this Emperor is a great enemy to the name of Christians, especially Japans ; all that are found are put to death. He saw fifty-five martyred at Miako at one time, because they would not forsake their Christian faith, and among them little children of five or six years old burned in their mother’s arms, crying out, “Jesus receive their souls.” In Nangasaki 16 more were martyred, five burned and the rest beheaded, cut in pieces, and cast into the sea 30 fathoms deep ; yet the Christians got them up again, and kept them secretly for relies. Many more were thrown into prison who look hourly when they shall die, for very few turn Pagans (p. 357). Such were the accounts received from Japan at this period. But Shongo Same was not satisfied with having committed these great barbarities. He ordered every church in Japan to be pulled down, with the monastery of Misericordia, as well as all churchyards and burial places. All graves and sepulchres were opened, and dead men's bones taken out, and carried into the fields by their parents and kindred, to be buried elsewhere. Streets were made in the place of churches and churchyards, except where pagodas were commanded to be erected, and heathen priests sent to live in them, the Emperor thinking utterly to root out the memory of Christianity in Japan. In Nangasaki, in Ogusho Same's time, divers fathers and other Christians were martyred; and in certain places, a little without the city, their parents and friends had planted green trees, where hundreds went every day to pray, but now, by the Emperor's command, all said trees and altars are quite cut down, and the ground made even. "Such is his desire to root out the remembrance of all such matters" (p. 358).

The English were also "much molested in these parts of the world by the unruly Hollanders," who, by sound of trumpet, in the harbour of Firando, "proclaimed open war against our English nation, both by sea and land, with fire and sword, to take our ships and goods, and destroy our persons, to the uttermost of their power, as to their mortal enemies;" Cocks' own life was "set at sale" for 50 ryals of eight, and 30 ryals were offered for each Englishman they could kill. The Dutch were in great dudgeon at the escape of some English from their ships, and demanded of the King of Firando that "their English slaves" might be returned," but the King said he took no Englishmen to be slaves to the Dutch, and referred them to the Emperor. Upon this they attempted to enter the English house, and cut all their throats, which (said Cocks) had been successful, the Dutch being 100 to 1, but that the Japanese took part with the English. Between five and six hundred Dutchmen attacked the English factory, where there were only half a dozen Englishmen, and wounded John Coker and another, and but for the interference of the Tono had been murdered. Cocks repaired to the Court to demand justice of the Emperor, and order was given to the Tono or King of Firando to hear both parties, and see justice done; "yet " from that time till now there is nothing done, although," wrote Cocks, "I have divers times very instantly desired " it of the King " (818-820). Permission was subsequently given for a limited time for English shipping to go to Nangasaki and Firando. The harbour at Nangasaki was described as the best in all Japan. 1,000 sail may ride land locked, and the greatest ships in the world go in and out at pleasure, and ride before the town, within a cable's length of the shore, in seven or eight fathoms water at the least. It is a great city where many very rich merchants dwell, whereas Firando is a fisher town, and a very small and bad harbour, wherein not above eight or ten ships can ride at a time, with other inconveniences (820).

The accounts received in England from the English factors at Japan were of the most marvellous character. Particulars of wars wherein 300,000 were slain at a time; a King's Court of 100,000 men continually resident; his palace capable of lodging 200,000 men, far bigger than the city of York, wherein 100 Kings, with their Queens and families, continually resident; immense cities, temples with 3 or 4,000 golden idols in each, and "colosses" greater than Rhodes; the Emperor going hunting with above 100,000 in suite, "and a great number of other wonders, " which," says Sir Thomas Wilson, "caused the King to “ say they were the loudest lies that he had ever heard ” (315, 792).

The career of William Addames is brought to a close in this volume. In Sept. 1619 the English factor writes from Firando that Capt. Addames cannot leave, “ he is sickly, “ and minded to take physic ” (739), and the following year Cocks informs the East India Company that “ our “ good friend Capt. Addames died on the 16th of May “ last ” (1620). “ I cannot but be sorrowful,” says Cocks, “ for the loss of such a man as William Addames, who “ was in such favour with two Emperors of Japan as “ never was any Christian in these parts of the world, and “ might freely have entered and had speech with either, “ when many Japan Kings stood without, and could not “ be permitted ” (930). As a proof of the Emperor’s good will to Addames, he confirmed the lordship to his son which Ogusho Same had given to the father. Addames left the half of his estate to his wife and child in England, and the other half to a son and daughter he had in Japan. “ It was not his mind his wife should have all, in regard “ she might marry another husband, and carry all from “ his child, but rather that it should be equally parted “ betwixt them ” (930). Mary Addames “ had not only “ received a yearly allowance of 5*l*. from the East India “ Company on her husband’s account, but her husband “ was in the habit of sending her 50*l*. or 60*l*. a year, “ and he gave the Company many thanks for the care “ they had had of his poor wife in his absence ” (p. 128, Nos. 278, 535).

As to our intercourse with China, Cocks, in the first letter calendared in this volume, says he is still of the same mind as to procuring trade there, and that had it not been for the great wars between the Tartars and Chinese last year, the English had had entrance before now. Letters and presents, his own and other pictures, and some scarlet cloth, had been sent for that object, which he was told (125) would undoubtedly take effect; and he suggested a white or red coral tree being sent, which he said the Emperor would esteem a most precious jewel" (p. 2). The chief factor at Bantam was not, however, so sanguine; he wrote home that he fears Cocks's understanding is blinded with the expectation of incredible wonders. They could get none to translate his Majesty's letters to the Emperor of China, he said, much less to convey them; he therefore sent them to Cocks in Firando, if happily his friend Capt. Dettis, who is a Chinaman, and the only one, can get them done and sent. It was upon the promise of Dettis that Cocks depended, and as it were made himself sure of trade in China. It was death for any Chinese to translate or carry those letters, or to give passage to any Christian carrying them. It seems it was revealed by oracle to the Emperor that his country should be subdued by a grey-eyed people. This prophecy may have operated in his forbidding all Christians his country. If letters be so hard to be delivered, argued Ball, trade will be harder to be procured, and cannot be expected by any fair course (p. 108). Lord Carew, in a letter to Sir Thos. Roe, early in 1617, says that the Commentaries of Matteo Riccio, a jesuit, who resided at Paquin in China many years, which were printed in 1616, reported, among other things, that a caravan was two years going from Lahore to Paquin, a distance of above 4,000 miles, and "if so, it follows that all our cosmographers are much mistaken, and China in the maps must be stretched further to the eastward." The friar's journey was undertaken by command of his superior, to discover Cataya and see Cambalu, both of which were mistaken, Lord Carew says, by our cosmographers, as there are no other countries called Cataya but China, and Paquin is the city called Cambalu (16). Cocks afterwards wrote that their China friends, Andrea Dittis and Capt. Whaw, will not only translate the letters, but send them by such as will see them delivered; but he was assured nothing would be done with the King of China by force (p. 127),

IN Dec. 1620 Cocks informed the East India Company that "no order had yet come out of China to let them " have trade, for that the Hollanders have shut up their " trade, that few dare look out," (p. 398,) but in the following January Cocks again wrote that he was informed by a messenger they sent to China, that the old Emperor had resigned the government to one of his sons, and the new Emperor had granted the English nation trade into China for two ships a year, the place appointed being near to Fou-chow (?) (963). Before, however, the English could take advantage of the privileges granted them, Cocks wrote (in Sept. 1621) that this year three kings of China have died, the father and two sons, the wives of the two brethren procuring the poisoning of them both, so that now a young man of 14 or 15, son of one of the deceased brothers, is King, which is a stay to the proceedings of the English to get trade into China, as new petition must now be made (p. 461).

Trade with Persia was a subject of much discussion with the East India Company, and Sir Thomas Roe, as we have already seen, was at great pains to obtain the requisite concessions from Shah Abbas for the establishment of a profitable intercourse with that country. His instructions to the English factors "employed in the East India Company's service at the port of Jask, or on any other on " the coast of Shah Abbas," are calendared in this volume (156, 263). They had, however, authority to alter these instructions, as circumstances might arise which would make it necessary for them to do so, for said Roe, “ I am not so much in love with my own opinion that I “ think it ought to be law . . . ; nor do I think that “ sober and discreet men should be tied so strictly to “ instructions as they may not have the use and liberty of “ their own reason and experiences, for I well know no “ man can sit in India and direct punctually in Persia ” (156). The Archbishop of Canterbury commended Sir Thos. Roe, that he was “ so wary in settling a trade for “ Persia, because the achieving of that business cannot be “ wrought without great difficulty there, and must “ needs procure some alteration in Christendome ” (594). A fresh impetus was given to this trade by the news received by the East India Company that the King of Persia had overthrown the army of the Turk, and slain most of his men, the rest escaping with great difficulty to Turkey ; that the Persians had prohibited the sending of any more silks into Turkey, and refused to deal with the Spaniard for the same, “ but continued constant in his “ promise to the English ” (584).

A few months later the Company received from their factors in Persia an account of their audience with the Sophy, at “ a princely and sumptuous banquet, whereto he “ invited all foreign ambassadors resident in his Court, “ viz., the Spanish, Indian, Turkish, Russian, Tartarian, “ and Uzebeck ambassadors ” (753). At this audience his Majesty’s letters were presented with much ceremony, and graciously accepted by the Sophy, when they were delivered into the custody of one of his attendant nobles for translation at a convenient time. A profitable trade, the English factors said, might be made in Persia without even dealing in silks. In the privileges granted by the Sophy to the English “(God grant performance)” it was agreed that they should have the whole trade of his gulf for silks, and he “voluntarily and solemnly vowed in “this public assembly that he would inviolably preserve “every article contracted and concluded,” but with this reservation, that they must “be limited to the term of his “own life, not knowing, as he said, what his successors “might do therein” (753). Articles were proposed to the King of Persia in the name of King James by Sir Thos. Roe, which have been quoted in history as the treaty concluded with Shah Abbas, but he refused to sign these particular articles, though he confirmed a previous treaty he had made with the English (369). Upon this the English factors contracted with the Sophy for 8,000 bales of silk of 180 lbs. per bale, which they calculated would not be less in stowage than 1,000 tons. They declared that the silk made in Persia would yearly amount to 1,000,000*l.*; and it was hoped that the Sophy would take English commodities to the same value (p. 158). Seventy-one bales of raw Persian silk were sold in London, Sept. 1619, for 26*s.* 10*d.* per lb. (745). Sir Thos. Roe, in the instructions already referred to, told the English factors in Persia they might venture to give 7*s.* 6*d.* per lb. for the silk there (156). Besides silks, the commodities to be had in Persia, vendible in England, were rhubarb, musk, carpets, velvets, satins, damasks, taffetas, gold and silver cloths, bezoar stones, opium, and fruits. While those from England vendible in Persia were cloth, tin, brass, morse teeth, muscovy hides, vermilion, quicksilver, lead, coney skins, cochineal, coral, beads, iron, copper, and sword blades (p. 159). Roe “confidently affirmed” that 50 per cent. might be gained yearly with safety by trade with Persia (762).

Some time before this, Sir John Merricke had been sent to Russia to negotiate for a free passage for English merchants to trade by the river Volga in connexion with their trade to Persia. The "Duke of Russia" wrote to King James 1st on this subject, and the letter was brought to England by a Russian ambassador, who came over with Sir John Merricke (307-312). His reception at the English Court, and the presents he brought over, are thus described: "This week," wrote Chamberlain, on 8 Nov. 1617, "Sir John Merricke is arrived from Moscovia, where " he hath ben these three yeares and a halfe, and hath " effected his busines with goode approbation. He was " yesterday with the King, who used him very well and " graciously, and had long conference with him. There " is come an ambassador with him thence, accompanied " with 75 persons, to the great charge of that companie, " upon whose account they are like to tarry here seven or " eight moneths. He wold faine have had audience " before the K.'s going, but his furniture and some of his " companie beeing not yet come to town, the King wold " not stay his leasure, though he have brought some presents to his liking, as white hawkes, live sables, and I " know not what els."—Dom. Jas. I., Vol. XCIV., No. 12.]

The following is Sir Gerard Herbert's account of the Russian ambassador's audience, and the presents he brought over with him. He says:—

"On Sunday afternoone (9 November 1617), the Russian imbassadour hadd audience at Whitehall in the banquettinge house where the Kinge, Queene, Prince (and many ladies appointed for that tyme) weare present. My Lord Shandois hadd the bringinge him to Courte, accompanied with Sir John Finnett and others in coaches, and coaches weare appointed for all the trayne of the Embassadour, which they refused, alledginge servantes ought to be knowne from there lordes, and was fitt they shold goe a foote. But in respect each of them carried some parte of the present, all which they desired publikelie to be seene, therefore the rather went afoote. The imbassadour, with the other four chiefe with him, at comynge to the Kinge, first inclininge them very lowe to the grownde and kissinge the grownde, after kissed the Kinges hande : which endinge all with the Kinge, after did in like manner to the Queene, and kist her hande, and then the like to the Prince. In goynge to kisse there handes they lookt upp no higher then the hande they weare te kisse, which so soone as kist, presently rann backe with all the speede they cold. In goynge forwards they putt there left hande on their breech behinde, and used gesture and fashion very strange and unusuall in these partes. The chiefe imbassadour himselfe especially (and the other 4) weare very rich in a great cappe of sable, under which a flatt cappe imbrodered with pearle and other stones, and longe wyde coate very richly imbrodered with pearle and gold, &c. Both he and the Chancelor delivered longe speeches in there owne language, who spake very lowde and readyly, and was interpreted by an English man still, as each speech was utterd : but the interpreterr, whether abashed or imperfaict in the language, or not so well comprehendinge, was not so readie nor facound in his interpretacion, but made shift to goe through to the ende. I cannot yett understande that the imbassadge is for other then the continuance of the trafficke, and peace and amitie betwixt our Kinge and the Russian ; the imbassadour's publicke speech tendinge especially to that effect. The parcells of the presents they brought with them, valued very rich, and taken very acceptably, I have heereinlosed sent your lordship, and each parcell caried apart by one. There is a gowne of blacke foxe, valued at not so litle as a thowsande poundes, but the haukes the Kinge seemed most too wellcome and be gladd of."—[Dom. Jas. I., Vol. XCIV., No. 28.]

Chamberlain adds something to this account. He says:—

"The King stayed Sonday to entertaine the Muscovia ambassador, who had solemne audience, though with great confusion, by reason of the thronge ; and Sir Edw. Cooke, by what mischaunce I know not, stumbled and fell there before all the companie. Besides the principall ambassador, there is a chauncellor in commission with him, and three other especiall courtiers, that stooode covered. Theyre presents were caried publicly by theyre owne people, and were the greatest that ever came thence, the very furies beeing estimated by those that are skilfull at better than 6,000*l.*, though some talke of much more ; there were divers haukes with coates or coverings of crimsen satten and other coloures, embroidered with pearle, a rich Persian dagger and knife, bowes and arrowes, Persian cloth of gold, with divers other thinges I remember not. I was promised a list of all, but seeing yt comes not I must tary till my next. The King was very much pleased, and the more when he understoode Q. Elizabeth never had such a present thence.”—

[Dom. Jas. I., Vol. XCIV., No. 30.]

At a General Meeting of the East India Company, on 27 March 1618, a proposal to join with the Muscovy Company, which, at a meeting of the Court on the previous day, had been unanimously agreed to, was submitted for confirmation, and the consideration thereof referred to a Committee. On 1st April Chamberlain wrote to Carleton, that a “Great business was agreed upon yesterday between “ the East Indian and Muscovy Companies, for furnishing “ the Emperor of Russia with a loan of 100,000 marks, “ whereby they hope to engross the trade in cordage and “ other real commodities, and to trade with Persia that “ way. The Muscovy Company, unable to undergo the “ burthen of the loan without assistance, both Companies “ were to have an equal stock of adventure for eight years,
“ and for their better encouragement the King had re-
“ India) Patent” (319).

Ambassadors from Russia were doing their best to negotiate this loan in England for their Sovereign. Their reception by King James in March 1618 is thus described :—

[Sir Gerard Herbert to Carleton, 26 March 1618, Dom. Jas. I., Vol. XCVI., No. 83.]

“The Russian imbassadours (which are two joyned in commission), with there trowpe, came to Courte on Monday afternoone, where, after the Kinge (with the Lordes of the Councell) mett them in the gallery, the Kinge, risinge out of his chaire, wellcomed them, tooke them by the hands, and told them he hoped they wanted nothinge, but weare very well used, and excusinge the reason why he kept them heere so longe was onelie because the tyme of the yeare did no sooner serve, nor the seas open for there returne, with many other princely well pleasing complements. Afterwardes they weare brought by my Lord Chamberlayne to the roome called the Stone Room, next the Councell Chamber, where they weare seated till the Kinge consulted some tyme with the Lords of his Councell. My Lord Chamberlayne at first mett them in the Privy Chamber at there comynge to the Courte gate; (as the maner of there contry is very ceremonyous) they expected Lordes and greater trowpes, with gardes of men to convey them upp; but Sir John Finnett and myselfe, who both weare appointed by my Lord Chamberlayne to fech and attende them in the Courte and backe agayne, told them it was not the maner of usinge greate ceremonies to any imbassadours at audiences, save the first and last day, which they shold receave as much as any, and whereat they weare well satisfied. When the Lordes of the Councell weare sate downe in the Councell Chamber, they sent for the Russians to come in, which refused to goe, till the Councell themselfes came for them, beyng a ceremony of state which there country used to all imbassadcures. My Lord of Canterbury, my Lord Chancellor, and all the rest of the Lordes in there order came very curteously to fech them, who putt the two chief Muskoviam imbassadours to enter before; after went themselfes. Those two strangers beyng seated at the upper ende together, the Lordes of the Councell sate downe. Sir John Merricke and Sir Thos. Smith, with a merchant or two, weare also present in the Councell Chamber all the tyme, and Sir John Finnett. The three chiefe pointes of there imbassadge is, first, to thancke the Kinge for many curtesies shewed, and by his meanes so well labouringe and bringinge to passe a peace (by his imbassadour, Sir John Merricke, &c.) with there enemyes; secondly, to make a league (very desirouslye) betweene there Emperour and our Kinge, and each to helpe other in needes and as reason shall require; thirdly, to borrowe 60,000 poundes of the Kinge. On Monday next they are to come agayne to Courte before the Councell. It is thought they shall parte very contented, and attayne all there desires; that the merchantes in the Kinges behalfe will helpe to furnish them with the mony. The next day beyng the Kinges coronation (the Kinge having heard they very much desired to see the runninge), Sir John Finnett and myselfe weare appointed to bringe them to Courte, there to attende them, and backe agayne. The Kinge sent a rich coach of his owne with four horses; another with four horses of my Lord Chamberlayne, and other five or six appointed for their trayne. In the next wyndowe to the Kinge, in the gallery, they weare seated with arras and cushins, and chaires, very well; some ladyes neere them: there was my Lady Carlton's sister, my Lady Sydley. After all was ended the Kinge saluted them very frendly and princely, and after askeinge them whether they liket the ceremony, after some other complements, the Kinge, partinge into his gallerye, they tooke coache in the Parcke, and so Sir John Finnett and I attended them home. The people which that faier day in most greate numbers flockt to the runinge and kept the streets, did all the way very much flocke and gaze aboute the coaches to see the Muskovians, even from there first settinge out, neere Crosebye House, in Bishoppegate Streete, where they lodge, till backe agayne. The Muskovian servantes, and all of them save the two chiefs and two of there interpreters, weare appointed a scaffold without to see the runinge. All of them receaved very greate content that day, and exceedingly liked the ceremony of runinge, with there usadge by the Kinge, and curtesies receaved by my Lord Chamberlayne; with the infinites of people, and so many beauties beheld all the way as they passt. This Lent they observe very austerelie, neither eatinge any flesh nor drinckinge any wyne, yett weare very liberall, and makinge Sir John and myselfe drinke of there contry wine, beyng old meade, stronge with spice. Sir John Merricke and one Russell, a merchant, went also with them, and helpt to interprett, and brought them backe. Capt. (Harry) Manneringe, so famous for the sea, whilst in his pranckes, was knighted a Fryday laste at Hampton Courte. The names of the tilters I have sent your Lordship. My Lord Mongomerie, who ranne excellent well (gainst my Lord of Dorsett, who rann also very well), had for his devise a high mountaine, with a pure fluent springe in the toppe thereof; beneath the mountayne was a cuppe into which the cleere springe from on high still ranne, and filld it full. His mott was Agnoscit originem. Sr. Sismond Allexander's mott was Aurem non aurum. Very good verses, which was delivered the Kinge, to signyfie my Lord Mongomerie's conceite, I am promised, which I will send your Lordship, your Lordship beyng so much a lover of my Lord his brother and himselfe."

Before the Russian Ambassador returned home in the following month, a Committee of the East India Company was appointed to confer with Sir John Merricke as to the purchase of a present for him, and cloth coats for his followers, at the Company's charge. The former Ambassadors were wont to be feasted at the Company's expense before their departure; but it was thought fit to give this Ambassador good content to make a feast to the Company at his lodgings, when those who have received New Year's gifts from him may requite him with presents (323). Sir Dudley Diggs went to Russia with them, but he failed in one of the chief ends of his embassy,—the free passage for the silks of Persia up the Volga. "There is news," writes one of Sir Dudley Carleton's correspondents, "which hath recompensed Sir Dudley Diggs for his defeat in Russia, and his return home. Having lent the Russian Emperor 60,000 marks, in the King's name, towards the maintenance of his wars against the Poles, he should have obtained privileges for the silks of Persia to be conveyed across the Caspian Sea, up the River Volga, and so through all Russia. The same trade is settled to the use of the East India Company by way of the Persian Gulf, Jask being their port, and Shiraz a city some ten days' journey off, their staple town or place of their factory" (465, 467, 1080). At a meeting of the Court of the East India Company in November 1618, they expressed themselves "satisfied with the state of their affairs" from letters they had received from Persia, and it was "resolved to send a good supply of commodities there" (480); so they "contracted with the King of Persia to bring their silks by the Persian Gulf, paying one third in money and two thirds in commodities. This will undo the Turk, who bring that for 150,000*l.* by the year which costs Christendom 800,000*l.*, and unspeakably enrich our kingdom,—themselves at least" (475). In October 1621, news was received that four of the Company's ships had safely arrived in Persia, that silk had been laded at Jask to the value of 9,000*l.*, and that two ships might be expected late in the year from Surat and Persia to the value of 120,000*l.* (1128).

Abbas Mirza, the Shah of Persia, is described by one of the English factors resident at his Court as a tyrant who will not suffer any of his subjects to be rich. "He caused one of the richest merchants in Ispahan to be beaten to death with cudgels, took away his estate, and then had him hanged." His cruelty made the merchants afraid to have any quantity of goods. He had three sons; "the eldest most butcher-like, having some five years past attempted to murder the King and seize his crown; the youngest son, the favourite, upon whom it is thought the King will confer the crown" (p. 199). The "butcher-like" character of the eldest son was certainly a characteristic of the father, for Abbas Mirza had both his elder brothers murdered, and three of his sons blinded, and then beheaded; one was "thrown over a rock headlong."¹ "The King is not beloved by his nobles," writes the English factor, "but feared for his tyranny." Ten days after his arrival, Edward Connok had an audience of the King. "In presence of the whole Court," wrote Connok, "the King took His Majesty's letter, put it to his mouth, then on his head, examined the manner of the sealing of it, and then opened it, satisfied that it was a true letter, and demanded what His Majesty chiefly required." Connok replied, "Amity, trade, and commerce between the two Kings and their subjects." The King then called for wine, and in a large bowl drank His Majesty's health, upon his knee, saying "that Connok was welcome, that the King of England should be his elder brother, that his friendship he did dearly esteem and tender, that he would grant us Jask or any other part we would require, and such freedom in every “ respect as in his honour he might grant.” No customs or other charge worth speaking of was to be paid by the English, so that the silk could be put aboard the ships at Jask, free of all charge, at 6s. or 6s. 6d. the English pound of sixteen ounces. When the carriages and other things were presented by the English agent to the King, he again drank His Majesty’s health, discoursed on His Majesty’s disposition, his greatness and strength both by sea and land; that the English were a people free from lying or deceit, but that the Portugals had any time these twenty years told him not one true word (p. 46). The presents most acceptable to the King were, an armour of proof complete, both for the King and his horse; a carriage, with furniture, and a coachman that knows how to manage and drive horses; clocks, watches, and horizontal dials which may answer to the latitude of Ispahan; looking-glasses, dogs of all kinds, gamecocks and hens; peacocks, maps, and pictures bearing the resemblance of either man, woman, or other creatures, drawn to the life, “were much “ desired by the King” (p. 159), as were likewise guns, sword-blades, turkeys, a skilful falconer, and terrestrial and celestial globes (p. 152). Neither peacocks nor turkeys had the King of Persia ever seen; these, with “little “ womens’ curs, he chiefly desires of anything you can “ send him” (124). At a consultation held at Ispahan by all the English factors there in July 1619, it was decided what the presents to be given to the King were to consist of; they were to be worth 700*l.* sterling. It was the custom of the country, not only for Ambassadors, but for every private merchant, to give presents to the King, “whereby they enjoyed better freedom, better sale “ for their commodities, and less molestation from inferior “ officers” (p. 309). The East India Company were specially enjoined “at no time to send anything effeminate as to the King of India, but serviceable and for

“ use, this King being reported valiant, and the discreetest Prince in these eastern parts ” (91).

Sir Robert Sherley was twice employed by the Shah of Persia “ to the Christian Princes, but especially into Spain, “ to contract for all Persian silks ” (56), and Sir Thomas Roe went expressly to Persia to prevent any contract of the kind with Spain, and with “ full commission from “ England to deal effectually ” for the East India Company, and “ to open the King’s eyes, that he be not blinded “ with the smoky air of Spanish greatness ” (15, 135). The following letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury to Roe (22), with others calendared in this volume (305, 784), supply some facts in reference to “ the Sherley Brothers.” The Archbishop writes as follows :—

“ As for Sir Robert Sherley, it hath bene the happe of his father’s children to bee all of them shifters, to venter on greate matters, and to carry high shewes, and in the end to come to beggery. Sir Thomas, the elder brother, lyeth heere in the Fleete, for the multitude of his debts. Sir Anthony in Spaine hath his pension seized, and the greatest part goeth toward his debts, some small portion being assigned unto him, to keepe him onely from starving. Sir Robert Sherley, if hee have any religion, is a papist, as appeered when hee was at Rome, and being not able to gett one penny out of the Pope’s purse, he desired certaine faculties, indulgences, medals, and Agnus Dei to bee bestowed upon him. These hee obtained, and among them one was, that hee had a power to legitimate bastards, of all which hee made use in the Popish partes of Christendome, where he passed openly, and of some of them secretly in England. Being with mee, I did chalenge him for the same, as also in pointe of religion, which hee avowed to mee to bee conformable to the Church of England, and layd the faulte for dispersing of the other upon his wife, whom hee acknowledged to mee to bee by profession a Romanist, and told mee, that from that time forward hee would so restraine her that shee should give no scandall. In a worde, you know that he is an hungry fellow and liveth meerely by his witt, and therefore you are not to marvell at whatsoever hee doth against his prince, countrey, or the religion there professed. I trouble you now no farther, but wish you to rest assured, that in all your occasions amongst us, you shall finde mee loving and respectfull unto you (22). [Dom. Jas. I., Vol. XC., No. 34.]

Lord Bacon was a member of the East India Company. Five days after he was created Lord Chancellor, he made a request for a gentleman of his bedchamber to be admitted to the freedom of the Company, and to be allowed to adventure 1,000*l*. It was resolved to grant his request, "if he will not accept 100 Jacobus instead, which the governor was desired to offer, as also to beg the Lord Chancellor not to make any further request of the like kind" (238). Bacon wrote a letter of thanks to the Company for admitting his servant Wooder a free brother, and allowing him to adventure 1,000*l*., "which his Lordship would be ready to deserve and confirm by some real testimony unto all the Company in general, or to any of them in particular, as occasion shall be offered" (284). When Sir Thomas Smythe made known to the Committee that he had had some speech with the Lord Chancellor, he told them, that Lord Bacon, "having heard of the justice of this Company and their upright carriage in managing their affairs," said, "it hath drawn his desire to be accepted into their society, which, because he supposeth that it will not be offensive to have him admitted, he entreated that it might be with the like favour and privilege for adventure that they have granted unto some others his peers, whom although he will not strive to exceed, yet he hopeth of the like grace, being as ready and willing to deserve it in public from the Company or in any particular man's private. And also to make his first year's payment, as others have done, presently, and the future at their several days, according to the Company's order." A question being raised that his Lordship would write for more than he wanted, and give it away to others, "he assured the governor to the contrary, and promised to return so much unto the Company as he shall not furnish in his own name, and never to dispose of any part except to some godly use, as giving it to an hospital, college, or the like, if God should take his Lordship out of the world, which his Lordship referring to his letter unto the Company they then proposed to resolve accordingly, not knowing how to deny his Lordship upon his motion, but willingly to give way thereunto" (287). Lord Bacon also wrote to Sir Thos. Smythe, "desiring him to proceed to let his Lordship be admitted into this society" (301). His request was granted and on 18 March 1618 (p. 229) he was sworn a free brother, and adventured 4,000*l.*, the Company "having found his Lordship very honourable, and expecting the continuance thereof as occasion hereafter shall present" (304).

The geographical discoveries made by Le Maire of the strait that bears his name, and King James' opinion of their importance, will be found illustrated in this Calendar. Sir Dudley Carleton informed Secretary Winwood, in a letter from the Hague, in July 1617, that one Spilbergh, of Zealand, had lately returned, and brought with him one Le Maire, son of a wealthy merchant of North Holland. "Le Maire pretends," Carleton writes, "to have discovered a new passage into the South Sea between 60 and 70 leagues beyond the Straits of Magellan in the height of 55 degrees and a few minutes, the passage being seven Dutch miles in breadth, which may be sailed through in one day, whereas it takes from three weeks to a month to sail through the Straits of Magellan. Le Maire makes Tierra del Fuego an island, and not a continent. He has given the names of the States and Barne-

“ veldt to two other islands (108). Sec. Winwood requested Carleton to send him a perfect relation of this “ passage,” but Carleton replied that he could not give him any further account of Le Maire’s new discovery, because his papers, as well as his maps and journals, remain under arrest by the East India Company, who sue him for infringing their privileges; and he is an earnest suitor to the States for an octroi in recompense of his discovery (163). His journal of the voyage was also seized by the Dutch Company (170). But tho’ Carleton recovered the journal, and was promised the map of “ the new discovery ” (178), and sent them to Secretary Winwood, these have not been found with the correspondence. The importance of this discovery was not however lost sight of in England. The King himself, at an expense of 300*l.*, sent Sir Thomas Dishington “ to satisfy “ himself of the particulars from Isaac Le Maire, “ who gave such encouragement that the King determined it should not be neglected ” (323). So at a meeting of the Committees of the East India Company in March 1618 (304), the governor made known that his Majesty had acquainted him by letter with a suit made for a patent for the discovery, “ a business that His Majesty hath a very great affection unto to have it brought “ to perfection, yet unwilling to stand further than may “ stand with the good of this Company.” He esteemed the prosecution thereof a great honour to himself, and a great benefit to his subjects (323), and desired to be informed of the state of this business, and to be prepared with answerable reasons against the petitioners shall come to propound their further suit. A Committee was accordingly appointed to confer with Sir Thos. Dishington, young Le Maire, and others interested in the business, to learn the particulars, so that the Governor of the East India Company might give His Majesty satisfaction. In due course they presented their report to the King, who read it twice over, and having argued some points and received satisfaction, he replied, that "he esteemed his " merchants more heroical than to be terrified by dangers " in their discoveries, or animated with expenses without " present profit." But as to that point of power which the Company claimed by their patent, the King said, " "he was a little amazed, and demanded whether he " were like Pope Alexander, who divided and distributed " the whole world," adding, that he "conceived it but " reasonable that the right of discoveries should be to

" such as made them." His Majesty's desire was to have the business prosecuted as soon as possible, he cared not by whom, so long as it was effected, and he approved of the Company offering to take in the new patentees amongst them. It was resolved, however, by the Company to "respite the matter for a " few days " (329). But the patentees would not join with the Company, so a month's respite was given to the patentees "to see what they can and will do" (333). And here the matter stopped, so far as the East India Company was concerned, who took no further action in the matter. Some of the Company's objections appear in the Court Minutes of the East India Company of 10 April 1618 (323).

Of Thomas Coryate, the traveller and writer, who published an account of his adventures which he called "Crudities," and which are recommended in the verses of Ben Jonson, Donne, Drayton, and others, we have some account. "A " vessel lately arrived from Surat," wrote one of Sir Dudley Carleton's correspondents, in January 1619, "brings news " of the death of Coryate in Persia, who has left enough " written to fill the world with new relations, and to have " made any printer an alderman " (536). The Archbishop of Canterbury, writing to Sir Thos. Roc, says, “ Wee could “ all have wished to have seene Thomas Coryate returned “ into his country, because wee do conceive hee would have “ made reports of the furthest Easterne Countries in a “ better fashion then any Englishman hitherto hath bene “ able. You shall do well to gett together all the papers

 “ w^{ch} hee had written if they bee delivered in any intel“ ligible fashion. But I heard the Kinge our master much “ blame his judgment for some thinge, w^{ch} as it seemeth “ was written hither out of his Memoires. And that was,
 “ that in one place, I cannot tell where, hee should say “ that hee saw men have their eies pulled out and their “ tongues cutt off and other thinges of like nature, and “ yet before an idole they should speedily bee restored “ againe. His Majesty saith that this cannot bee done by “ the power of Sathan, and hee is sure it is not by the “ finger of God. It was then in Thomas deceptio-visus ” (594). It is not known we believe what became of Coryate’s papers.

Two subjects are frequently referred to in this Calendar in which the East India Company were particularly interested, and in both of which we see their influence as opposed to that of two of his favourites on the King’s conduct. The one has reference to Sir James Cunningham and his Patent for a Scottish East India Company; the other to Lord Rich and his setting forth two ships to the East Indies.

“ The King had granted a patent to Sir James Cunn“ ham to raise a Scottish East India Company, he and “ his heirs to be governors, with other large privileges “ directly infringing upon former grants ” (256). This patent was a source of great trouble to the English Company, and they resolved, if possible, to get it revoked.

So they applied to the King, and in the end Sir Jas. Cunningham was commanded to desist from proceeding any further upon the new patent on his allegiance. “The King was very favorably disposed to this Company, and though the new company offered 5 pr. ct. custom for all goods brought in by them, yet his Majesty would not be swayed by fair promises against the East India Company, and assured them that if any beneficial grant should be made for Scotland, prejudicial to this land, it would be cancelled (294).” He therefore recalled, and delivered into the hands of the East India Company, the Scottish patent (319). A Committee was thereupon appointed, consisting of Sir Marmaduke Darrell, Sir Allan Apsley, and the rest of the green cloth, to arrange about “satisfying” the Scottish company (341) but some delay arising, the Privy Council, “by special command of His Majesty,” wrote to Sir Thos. Smythe, that having called in Sir James Cunningham’s patent it was His Majesty’s wish it should be done with the least prejudice and hindrance to Sir James. Their Lordships were of opinion that his demands for compensation were very just, and fit to be reimbursed, and accordingly they requested that payment be made to Sir James without further trouble or delay, and they inclosed an estimate of the losses which they conceived he would sustain (378, 383). Upon this the Committee sought an interview with the Duke of Buckingham (387), who, however, a few days afterwards, sent a letter by one Fenton, requesting that payment be immediately made, “according to the warrant from the Council” (391). The Muscovy and East India Merchants replied jointly to the letter from the Privy Council, objecting to these demands, but “referring the consideration of the premises unto their wisdom, and craving their Lordships mediation to satisfy His Majesty” (397). This was in August 1618. But by the December following nothing had been done, and the King then blamed the Company for not having yet satisfied Sir James Cunningham; "related from point to point all particular passages therein, and concluded that he would admit of no further excuse, but expected to have the money paid, if for no other respect yet for his sake." The Company desiring that Sir James might make a release of his whole right in the Scottish patent, because of his speeches that he can take forth a duplicate, the King again promised that neither this nor any other patent hereafter should hurt the Company, and that Sir James should perform whatsoever they would have done. Upon this a debate arose at the next meeting of the Court, and it was concluded that a release be drawn of Sir James' patent to the Company, that the money be paid, and an end put to "that troublesome business" (505). At another meeting, on 19 January following, an acquittance was read from Sir James Cunningham for losses sustained by himself and Company, but no mention was made of any release, according to the Lords' promise; so Mr. Solicitor was requested to get an effectual assignment and release for Sir James to seal (552). A draft copy of this assignment, "for divers good, special, and valuable considerations," will be found in this Calendar (379).

As to Lord Rich and the ships he set forth to the East Indies, Sir Thomas Roe wrote to the East India Company, "It seems that these ships missed their entrance to the Red Sea, and gave chase to a Guzerat junk belonging to the Queen Mother, and had not the English fleet arrived they would have taken and rifled her. Had this been done," said the English admiral, "all the Company's goods in India could not have made satisfaction according to their desire," (pp. 77 and 121.) In this Guzerat junk were by report thirty-five tons of silver, besides gold and goods to the value of 100,000*l*. She was 1,400 tons burden, and had 1,000 persons aboard. This good service was "exceedingly well taken both by the Mogul himself and his nobility" (p. 94, Nos. 302, 467), tho' Lord Rich "took it ill of the East India Company that they took his prize from him" (567).

In Oct. 1618 a report reached England that both of Lord Rich's ships had been captured in the Indies; and Lord Admiral Buckingham wrote to the East India Company, desiring to be informed if the report were true. The Company resolved "that they must and would justify " the action, having done nothing but what they had " power from His Majesty by his letters patent, and that " they intended no restitution" (557). The ship Bull, belonging to the East India Company, returned to England about this time, so Lord Rich at once caused it to be arrested "upon an action of 1,600,000*l*. Some of the " merchants complained to the King, and he was sent " for to compound the business. He was very earnest " that he might have the benefit of a subject to wage " law against the Company, but the King would not " yield to it (591), and in a letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury we read that " Lord Rich had been before " the King and Council about his men-of-war which he " set out to the Indies, but was so handled among us that " you shall hear no more of him there" (594).

On 15 May 1619 the King wrote to the East India Company, desiring to have half of the goods taken from the ships of Lord Rich, (who was now Earl of Warwick, and played so important a part in the subsequent reign,) which belonged to His Majesty, delivered to the Marquis of Buckingham for the King's use. Upon which the Company resolved to make it appear to His Majesty that they regard not the goods or the part, being the moiety, although it were a matter of greater value, nor are they desirous to gain by such courses, but intended only the preservation of their trade, to secure His Majesty's subjects, and preserve His Majesty's honour there, and are therefore willing to leave the whole to His Majesty's disposal, which being found but a small sum, between 900*l.* and 1,000*l.*, they were contented to have it made up an even 1,000*l.*, and so presented to the King (666).

But this did not satisfy the Earl of Warwick or the King. His Majesty wrote to the East India Company, requiring satisfaction from the Company to my Lord of Warwick for the loss of his two ships in the Indies, and the overthrow of his voyage (532). Yet the King acknowledged the Company had done no more than what in justice was lawful, "notwithstanding he set this action
" apart by itself, expecting the Company should be as " respective as His Majesty had been, who was pleased to " remit and forgive all his part, but in any the like actions " hereafter the Company should find his gracious favour " to prosecute them with all extremity." The Company determined to stand upon their innocency as they had formerly done, when His Majesty and the Lords had seemed well pleased ; but Sir Thomas Roe and Sir Dudley Diggs, from speeches they had heard at Court agreed it was not fit for the Company to recall what they had done, but to justify themselves upon His Majesty's Letters Patent, as Sir Thos. Roe hath satisfied many of the Lords. A Committee was therefore appointed to answer the messenger, that it should be known from my Lord of Warwick what he esteemed the value of the King's moiety which hath been bestowed upon him, and to make a final conclusion with him (772). Upon this Sir Dudley Diggs and Sir Thos. Roe saw my Lord of Warwick, who promised to set his claim down in writing (774). And a letter was read from my Lord of Buckingham, informing the Company that His Majesty having formerly granted to Buckingham that part of the goods which belonged to him out of the forfeiture incurred by the Earl of Warwick, and His Majesty having since written in Lord Warwick's behalf, therefore His Majesty willingly remitted to Warwick "all his interest and pretence which he had by His Majesty's said grant" (778). When Lord Warwick's demand was read, at a meeting of the Court, it was considered altogether impertinent, and differing from that which he hath been required to set down according to the true purport of His Majesty's letter. He demanded for his two ships, the Francis and Lion, with their furniture, provisions, and the like, and captains, merchants, and mariners wages, the sum of 19,466*l.*, besides what he pretendeth the Company have been benefited by the said goods taken from him. All were charged upon their oath to conceal this demand, lest the rumour of so great a matter might be by some apprehended to be more dangerous than there is cause to fear (781). The report of those appointed to enquire into this business on the part of the Company showed that by a certificate under the hand of his chief men the goods and money amounted in all to 1,278*l.* 2*s.* 5*d.* A copy of this was to be shown to his Lordship, and one half tendered, upon his receipt for His Majesty's part. And a Committee was appointed to see Lord Warwick with this answer, and to be ready to hear any reasonable demand from him. Some made question how far His Majesty's part may extend by law upon a prize taken in the Indies, and wished to have some civil lawyer's opinion, but it was held unfit to make any such question until it was found how his Lordship will press the business (783). But they were unable to come to terms, so that at length in January 1620, the King signified his pleasure that the whole controversy should be submitted to two arbitrators, and if they could not end it His Majesty would appoint an umpire; and that His Majesty's mind was that the earl should be no loser by the voyage, (801). The King again wrote on the 17th February to the Company to the same effect; but after consultation with those who had attended the King, as to what took place at their audience, it was concluded that this letter from the King "seemed to be obtained upon undue suggestions." So a committee was appointed to attend the Earl of Warwick at his house in Holborn and insist on their former resolution, in which case, "the Company would be no gainer by my Lord, and " that they had always understood the King's pleasure to " be that they should be no losers " (810). Upon this, Lord Warwick requested a meeting with the Company, and said he was willing to make a peaceable end, and not urge them to go to the King any more (823.) But the Company stood firm to their first offer, and though Sir Thos. Roe had a conference with the Earl of Warwick, the end of it was that the whole business was referred to arbitration (825, 829.)

The unity of the Muscovy with the East India Company, and the part they took in the expedition against pirates who infested the seas at this period (581, 589), are subjects both of which received considerable attention, and are frequently referred to in this Calendar.

"An old Frenchman" was perhaps the original inventor of chain shot. His invention, however, "to cut " asunder the cordage of shipping with cannon shot," was looked upon by the East India Company "to be but a trick." He required for his pains and discovery 1,000*l.* in hand and 100*l.* a year during life; but the Committee resolved "to have his project underwritten, that they do " not believe any such instrument can be made, and are

Lord Carew tells Sir Thos. Roe a curious story. “The “ Hollanders this summer (1617),” he writes, “again “ attempted the discovery of the N.W. passage by Fretum “ Davis, and it is reported that all difficulties are past.
“ They found a nation of pigmies, and took two of them in “ a small canoe; but seeing the cook dressing a piece of “ pork, and conceiving it to be man’s flesh, and fearing to “ be devoured, they both leapt into the sea, and were “ drowned. I have this story but by relation, but think “ it true ” (244).

Other papers on all kinds of subjects of curiosity and interest receive illustration in this volume, and may readily be found by means of the Index.

It will not be out of place to say, in conclusion, that fifty copies of the last volume of the Calendar of East India Papers were voted by the late Secretary of State for India in Council for distribution among the four Presidencies in India; and that the present Governor-General, the Earl of Mayo, before sailing for India, inspected both the original documents and this Calendar of them, so far as it had then advanced, and requested that he might have a copy of the Calendar already published and proof sheets of this, “to “ take out with him to read on his voyage.”

Jan. 1.
Firando in Japan.

1. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. Arrival of the Thomas 22nd June by way of the Moluccas. Death of John Baylie, merchant. Arrival of the Advice from Bantam 13th July. Death of Yeward, [Robt. Youart] merchant, the year before. The Company's letters of 3rd and 19th Nov. 1614, and 20th Jan. 1615, received. Reasons for wishing his salary to be paid to him in the Indies. Refers himself entirely to the Company's good consideration; confesses he cannot brag of deserving much, as he is in a place where no benefit redounds to them of all his labours, but has no doubt things will amend in time. Touching their order to join all the voyages into the joint stock. Was more than four months at the Emperor's Court, about renewing the Company's privileges; thought at one time to have lost all, and that they should have been banished from Japan. Finds it far contrary to Capt. Saris' expectation as well touching the trade to Patani and Siam as to Corea or Tushma; his reasons. Richard Wickham's salary of 20*l.* per annum too little. Can get no trade into Corea, that of Tushma not worth the looking after. The factories of Patani and Siam cannot be furnished from Bantam. Voyage to Cochin China undertaken by Wm. Addames who is now out of the Company's service. Coromandel steel not esteemed in Japan; no sale for Russian hides and other skins. Knives, looking-glasses, and glass bottles the Japanese do not care for. The value of other commodities. How to realize the Company's expectation to have the silver of Japan furnish all other factories in the Indies. Details of his visit to the Emperor's Court; the Council's desire to know whether the English nation were Christian or no, "but," said they, "are not the jesuits and friars Christians too, which I answered they were, but not such as we were, for that all friars and jesuits were banished out of England before I was born;" warning given to them that they were not to communicate, confess, or baptize. Discovered that in their new privileges the English were restrained to have their shipping and sales at Firando only; his unsuccessful endeavours to have the privileges amended or to have three years respite. Leave to sell the goods they had at Yeddo, Miako, Osaka, and Sakaii, refused; this restraint has put him to great shifts. The Emperor's secretaries very sorry they could not remedy the matter at present, because an Emperor's edict by act of parliament having been so lately passed; it could not so soon be repealed without scandal to the State, but that if Cocks renewed his demand next year, being so reasonable, they verily thought it might be amended; hopes when General Keeling comes, it may be, otherwise the Japan trade will not be worth the looking after. All factors withdrawn to Firando. A present, brought by a friar from the King of Spain, returned by the Emperor of Japan after he had kept it about half-a-year. A Spaniard refused access to the Emperor; the Spaniard's vexation and false reports of the English. Desire of the Japanese Admiral to engage Addames' services as a pilot to make conquest of certain islands rich in gold. The Japanese verily think that the English pretence to discover to the northward is to find out some such rich islands and not to seek for any passage that way for England, but Cocks persuaded the Admiral to the contrary and suggested to him the conquest of the Manillas. Is still of the same mind as to procuring trade into China; had it not been for the great wars between the Tartars and Chinese last year, the English had had entrance before now: Letters and presents sent for that object; is told that they will undoubtedly take effect. His care to have all Chinese well treated; Capt. Jourdain offended with the Hollanders at Bantam. News of the false report of Mr. Peacock's murder, he having lost his life by drowning through the accidental running down of the vessel by the Hollanders; his body found with a bag of money in his pocket by Walter Carwarden, without a scar upon it, by whom it was buried. Carwarden's stay in Cochin China. Cocks' efforts to procure the Emperor of Japan's letter to the King of Cochin China for payment of the goods bought of Peacock, the King acknowledging the debt. If a trade can be got in Cochin China, raw silk in great quantity is sure to be had every year; twice as much silk cometh yearly there as to Bantam, Patani, and Siam. No benefit to be expected from Patani but pepper; from Siam, deer skins. Sends piece of root from Corea worth its weight in silver; all that can be got is taken by the Emperor; it is held in Japan the most precious thing in physic in the world, and sufficient to put life into any man if he can but draw breath; it is like a parsley root and very sweet to the taste. Arrival of the Sea Adventure from Siam, fully laden with skins, also of a junk in Shashma or Xaxma, which had been lost but for Edmund Sayer, not six men being able to stand upon their legs; the King of Xaxma's extraordinary favours; ordered them fresh men. The junk since sold to Addames and his partners. Sales of commodities. Presents fit for the Emperor of China; a white or red coral tree he would esteem a most precious jewel. Arguments with the Emperor of Japan's Council, concerning the privileges for trade granted by the Emperor of China to the Spaniards and Portuguese. Conversation between a Portuguese and the Emperor's secretary as to the former exercising "their pagan religion;" said the Secretary "Hath not the Emperor of Japan as much reason to put your jesuits and friars out of Japan and to withstand the secret entrance of them, knowing them to be stirrers up of sedition, and turbulent people?" Good and serviceable ordnance cast by the Hollanders, of copper mixed with tin. The Japanese Secretary very anxious to have five or six brass falcons or falconets from England, saying he would rather have one cast in England than ten of those cast in Japan. The Portuguese galleons from the Philippines that thought to have destroyed both English and Hollanders at Bantam, destroyed before the fleet of Don Juan de Silva arrived, who is said to have died of sorrow. Regrets he is in a place which hitherto hath been rather chargeable than beneficial. If the Emperor of Japan will not enlarge their privileges, whether trade cannot be carried on between China, or at least Cochin China and Firando and Nangasaki, where they are permitted to keep factories. Inconvenience of being in so small a town as Firando; the Hollanders use every effort to drive the English out of trade, not caring whether they profit by the commodity they sell or no. [Fourteen and a half pages. Indorsed "Received by the Charles the 31 August 1618." Original Correspondence from the India Office, Vol. IV., No. 424.] Incloses,

Copy of the privileges granted to the English nation by Shongo Same, Emperor of Japan. English shipping arriving in any part of Japan to retire to Firando, and there only to make sale of their goods; all other places in Japan forbidden to receive any English goods. If by contrary winds their shipping be constrained to put into any other port, then to be friendly used. Any thing needed by the Emperor from the ships to be reserved for him, he paying the worth of it. Neither Japanese nor English to be forced to buy or sell. Disposal of goods in case of death, and accommodation of differences.

Haies] remains with Fetiplace, with their goods. When the time and place of the King's settling is certainly known, they will go to his Court. Wm. Biddulph is there with his Lordship [Sir Thos. Roe.] Jos. Salbancke remains at Agra. Knows not how those of Surat will dispose of him, but he desires the Company to dispense with the residue of his time so that he may return home. [One page. Indorsed, "Received by the Globe." O.C., Vol. IV., No. 426.]
- Jan. 3. 5. Minutes of a Council held by Nathaniel Courthope, Sophony to Cozucke, Thos. Spurway, John Davye, and John Hinchley "upon April $\frac{11}{21}$. the coming in of the Hollanders." That the English having possession of the land and road of Pooloroon given up to them (by the inhabitants) for the use of the King's Majesty, and doubting the Hollanders' treachery to dispossess the English of it as formerly they have done at Pooloway and other places, a letter was written to the Dutch Commander and sent aboard their Admiral, and that he might not have the excuse of not being able to understand English, [Geo.] Muschamp was sent to make them understand, who reported that the Dutch "desired respect till the next morning." This answer being considered a delay for their advantage, and having been informed that the Dutch have shipping at Pooloway, ready manned and armed, and as the Council think in all probability, to come to Pooloroon this night to drive the English from the island, Muschamp was again dispatched with the answer annexed which the Dutch desired to have under the hands of the Council, and this was presently sent aboard their Admiral. Annexed,

Answer of the English Council at Pooloroon. That in respect of the abuses of the Dutch, the English cannot repose any trust in them, "we have been the means to stay the hands of the people of the island; only two hours is the time limited, from this time present. If you weigh not before, you shall have shot from the land and we will aid them." Pooloroon, 3 January 1617. [Signed as above.]

"Insinuations made by the factors of the Dutch [East India] Company to the servants of the English Company in Banda." The Dutch complain that the English not only endeavour to wrest from them their trade in spices at Amboyna, Banda, and the Moluccas, but that they also assist the Spaniards, Portuguese, and Bandanese with whom the Dutch were at war. Among other instances of their having done so, the following are cited: In May 1615 at the conquest of the fort of Pooloway, the Dutch found a quantity of English arquebuses, powder, and artillery which the English confessed they had sold to the Bandanese; in the following January [1616], the English against the wish of the Governor of Ternate, settled themselves at Lughu, Cambello, and other places, planted their cannon on the little fort of Cambello and killed "an Amboynese of ours" and wounded another; that in the past year [1616], the English assisted the enemies of the Dutch at Tidore who were in great straits, and daily, by undue and sinister practices incited the inhabitants of Banda, Amboyna, and the Moluccas against the Dutch, making them odious; also that on the $\frac{3}{13}$ January last past, [1617], on the arrival of two of the Dutch ships with a bark at Pooloroon, the English took away a red flag, planted an English flag on the island, constructed two or three batteries, and compelled the Dutch ships to withdraw within two hours, on pain of being treated hostilely; that they required restitution of Pooloway, and threatened in case of refusal to take the island by force; that they planted an English flag at Rosingyn, and committed other acts tending to prevent their peaceable enjoyment of the traffic of spices in the places where they have so dearly bought it. "We have thought fit in the most courteous manner to declare and demonstrate to you that our nation has taken under its care, and with the assistance of God, has effected the defence of several Indian kings and people against the violence and oppression of the Spaniards, Portuguese, and their adherents, and we are resolved henceforth to persevere in so laudable a design, according to the contracts and agreements which the said kings and people, and above all those of the Moluccas, Amboyna, and Banda in general, have reciprocally allowed to our nation, not to give up the fruits of the spices or any other [commodity] to any but our own [people], without which it would be impossible to support the excessive expense and charges of the said onerous defence, requiring nevertheless as our good friends, allies, and confederates, that you will so conduct yourselves as not to attempt anything against the said contracts and agreements, or endeavour to wrest from us by any means whatever the effect of them, and especially that you will not attempt to deprive us of the fruits, a right to which for a lawful consideration has been conceded to us, [de nous priver des fruicts qui avecq une legitime cause nous sont oubligés], or assist with artillery, munitions of war, victuals, or other necessities, the inhabitants of the Banda isles in general, with whom we are at contention, and who, the past year by the treaty of peace, so solemnly, to the exclusion of all others, promised the said fruits." The English are therefore required to depart with their ships from thence, and put themselves under the protection of the Dutch fort, in which they shall be used as the Hollanders' best friends, but should they refuse, the Dutch will be constrained by all means possible, even if need be by force of arms, to maintain the said contracts and compel the English to withdraw. All the inconveniences which may arise from the attempts or opposition of the English, the Dutch acquit themselves of, before God and the world, as wishing nothing but friendship with the English.

Minutes of a Council held aboard the Swan, by Nat. Courthope, Sophony Cozucke, Thos. Spurway, Geo. Muschamp, Robt. Hayes, John Davye, John Hinchley, Walter Stacie, Barnard Downes, and Richard Swanley. The Flemings having received an absolute answer not to anchor in "this our road of Pooloroon" given up by the inhabitants of the island into the hands of the King of England, it is resolved "for our further fortification" if the Dutch attempt to come to the road, to defend themselves, and to land seven pieces of ordnance for their greater security, provided they may, with little trouble be brought aboard again. It is further resolved that if the Dutch attempt the assault of Pooloroon to the annoyance of the English trade, agreed on by the islanders, "to use our best force against them for the defence of our right and ourselves, and not to permit them to anchor but our forces ashore to begin with them."

5th January 1617.

John Davye to N. Courthope and the rest of his friends. The [Dutch] Admiral and the rest have sealed their resolution to have Pooloroon according to their commission, if they may, without spilling more blood in this quarrel, which has so far passed already that it cannot be ended here or at Bantam, but in England and Holland. Knows without they talk together there will be much slaughter about it, for the Dutch are all double manned from the castle, and must fight it out as Davye has proved already, "for they did shoot at me twice before I began, although I was in the sea, eight leagues off, when they chased me. We fought almost board and board an hour and a half till they had killed five men, maimed three, and hurt eight, and when we began we had not 35 able men to do anything, or any wind to work the ship withal, wherefore, if you mean to save your men, parley before you fight, for that will give you content, otherwise you are to stand to the hazard of wars; they know we have Rosingyn and Wayer surrendered, but there must neither English nor French, nor none to carry any goods away from none of these islands of Banda, but to bring their ship under their castle and let the law end it at home, for they do think that this that is already done will join both the companies in one when it shall come home." Davye and his company are favourably used; the men have their victuals from the ship, but are kept ashore for their own security, for the Dutch have many prisoners; all is spiked down close, "but if you fight the soldiers will have their pillage." 4 March 1617.

Courthope, Spurway, and Hinchley to the Dutch (? Admiral). Have received their letters, together with a letter, as they pretend from Mr. Davis [sic. Davye?], from which they understand that the Dutch have by force taken the English ship the Swan, killed and wounded divers of her men; that the Dutch first began the quarrel, upon what ground the English know not, they therefore require one of the ship's company to certify them of the very truth which they greatly mistrust, as they have been informed by an escaped black that not only the merchants, master, and others were killed in fight, but also that all the rest of the company were murdered in cold blood. "With what security can we commit ourselves into your hands who have so barbarously taken our ship, and, as we credibly hear, murdered our men?" The English also have commission to maintain the King's Majesty's right to Pooloroon, surrendered to his subjects, and to fortify it against all nations. "Therefore to bring ourselves under your subjections we will not, until we speak with an Englishman of the said ship to satisfy us whether it be so with our men, as we hear reported, or not, that upon his manifestation to us we may the better resolve what to do herein." 7 March 1617.

[The Dutch Admiral?] to Courthope and his companions. Is much astonished at their very unworthy proceedings, notwithstanding the "insinuations" and warnings [advertisements] the Dutch have already given them. The strict alliance and good understanding between the crown of England and the United Provinces, which above all things have been recommended to them on the part of the United Provinces, induce the writer in the first place to beseech him, in order to avoid the further effusion of blood, to take to heart and maturely consider the position in which they have placed themselves, since the Dutch cannot suffer any nation under any circumstances to come and enjoy with them [the Dutch] the traffic of spices which the Dutch have with so much cost, and to the exclusion of all others, acquired in Banda, Amboyna, and the Moluccas, but they are ready, according to the instruction of their superiors [if fair means will not avail] forcibly to drive them out of Pooloroon and Banda, and the writer hereby protests before God and the world, that the evil or inconvenience that will ensue on that account they [the Dutch] are innocent of, as having desired to maintain a strict friendship with the English; if they please to send some one to speak to him on this point, he shall have liberty to come and good treatment. Is very much astonished that M. de Laire, assistant merchant, who was sent to them some days since, has not returned, does not know whether he is detained against his will. Recommends them not to detain him against the common right of people, and also to return to the bearer the goods he had with him.

^{30 March}
^{9 April} 1617. [French.]

Answer of the English to the Dutch letter of ^{30 March} ^{9 April}, signed by Nat. Courthope. Have received their letters, whereby the English understand the desire the Dutch have of coming to a reasonable composition to avoid the effusion of much blood. It is not their desire to spill blood unless forced thereunto, and therefore they may confer of such composition if the Dutch will, according to their letters, and send pledges. Courthope makes choice of Seignrs. Henry de Waterfort and Henry de Yonge, and he will himself come over to see if he can make a good composition with them [the Dutch] as they pretend, hoping he shall find them gentlemen of such courtesy as to have free regress, as likewise the English will have through the Dutch hostages. If therefore the men above-named are sent, Courthope will go back in the same prow they come in. This letter was purposed to have come to their hands by their messenger, but Lantor men would not permit him to come. Pooloroon, 2 April 1617.

"Presentation" given to Nathaniel Courthope. That he, Courthope, having been four months chief merchant upon the English ships, the Swan and Defence, come from Banda, and at this time fortified in Pooloroon, knows and confesses that the Sieur Laurens Real, Governor General on behalf of the States General of the United Provinces, and of the [Dutch] East India Company, has made Courthope an offer of restitution of the ships Swan and Defence, with everything that at the time of the taking thereto belonged, together with all his people, and restitution to them of whatever damage they have sustained by the pillage of the Dutch soldiers and sailors, provided that he go out with all his people and abandon the isles of Bauda, in which the said General promises all assistance, so that Courthope may not only remove his people but also the artillery with all their belongings, without danger. French. Neira, 17 April, 1617.

Answer to the preceding Presentation, signed by N. Courthope and Thos. Spurway. They have duly considered every point in the [Dutch] demands, and find them altogether so impossible that they cannot yield thereunto; first, because they would give away the right of their Sovereign and of the Company, their employers, which by their oath they are bound to maintain, and would bring themselves within the compass of treason; next, that they would betray the people of these islands into their [the Dutch] hands, who have surrendered these islands and themselves unto his Majesty of England which, should the inhabitants perceive the English to prove so false and act so unchristianlike, they could expect no other than fury from them, they [the inhabitants] being the stronger; but the writers make this proffer again, that if the Dutch return the ship Defence, and men and anchors, and bring token to carry the English cargo to Bantam, and "give under their hands" that neither they nor any of their forces will attempt or offer violence against either of those two islands of Pooloroon [sic] or any of the English or Bandanese here, being all the King's Majesty's subjects by lawful surrender, "provided until it be decided in England or Bantam." 10 April 1617.

Answer to the preceding letter signed by Laurens Real. Their letter of the 10th, old style, was received this morning, the contents of which were well understood. Recapitulates the terms set forth in the Presentation of the 7th present, and as touching the alliance between the English and those of Pooloroon, "upon which you so grandly repose," the Dutch put it to the English to which they ought to attach the greater weight, to the ancient alliance between the crown of England and the United Provinces, or to this new alliance, which without orders [charge] from their King the English have contracted, against all right, with the infidel Moors their enemies, who are under their subjection and under contract to them [à nous tenuz et obligez par contract]. Three days are hereby given to the English to consider which they will judge the best for their convenience. If, notwithstanding, the English proceed besides to the defence of the said Moors, the enemies of the Dutch against whom they are ready to continue hostilities, the Dutch protest before God and the world that they are not guilty of the effusion of blood that may thereby ensue. They also require that Christopher de Laire, with the Mardykers who were sent to the English by the Lieut.-Governor of Banda, be sent back. *French. From the Fort of Nassau, Isle of Neira, 11 April 1617. Together seven papers; 13 pp. Copies, with Dutch certificates that they have been collated with the originals and found correct. 8. Wm. Addames to Sir Thos. Smythe, Governor of the East India Company. Has been Cape merchant three years. His intended voyage to China prevented by a grievous storm; arrived in safety at the Leques Islands, where they found marvellous great friendship, but were forced to return to Japan, because the monsoon was past. Prosperous voyage to Siam. Was most joyful to see the Thomas and the Advice arrive. Went to Court with Rich. Cocks; their privileges renewed, but afterwards altered, confining them to trade at Firando and Nangasaki. Fails in his endeavours to get the privileges reformed. The present Emperor more against the Romish religion than his father was; he has forbidden, on pain of death, any of his subjects to become Romish Christians, and also any stranger merchant from abiding in any of the great cities for fear on that pretence that jesuits and friars might secretly teach the Romish religion. Intends taking a voyage in hand this year to Cochin China, to see if by his means privileges may be obtained to get free trade into their factory again, and also to find out how Mr. Peacock lost his life. 9. Jacques Specx [the Dutch Chief in Japan] to John Jourdain, President of the English at Bantam. Is sorry to find from his letter to Capt. 12. Rich. Cocks to the East India Company. Brief of part of his letter of the 1st January. Silver may be procured in great abundance, and liberty to carry it out at pleasure, but not with English commodities, rather with raw silk and silk stuffs, all of which must be procured with money to have them in any quantities; so that to begin this factory, a great sum of ready money or plate must be provided, and afterwards, the profits arising will provide Bantam and other factories without sending any more out of England. Commodities which will and will not be vented. Great charge of sending junks from Japan; they should go twice a year from Siam to Patani; little or no silk at those places. It should be provided at Bantam and not all sent to England, but part reserved for Japan. Advantages of procuring trade in China. Doubtful whether the Japanese will now assist in any discovery for the north-west passage to England. Sickness of John Totten, master of the Advice. 15. Sir Thos. Roe to [William] Robbins [agent to Sir Robert Sherley in Persia]. His honest and good affection to his country will not be unrecompensed by the East India Company. Finding Sir Robt. Sherley had undertaken to interest the Spaniard in the trade of Persia, Roe deferred prosecuting his intents until he was encouraged by Robbins' letters and by a conference with Mahomet Baze-Leage, Shah Abbas' ambassador. The Company cannot profit by landing their goods at Jask and transporting them up to Court at their own charges, except under certain conditions. They therefore desire that a port be secured by the King, free for them alone or for all indifferently, where they may land their goods; the requisite privileges and a settled agreement as to prices; and the King's commands for his silks to be brought down yearly at the season to the port, which is easier than by Aleppo. A trade thus settled will be durable and steadily increase. To this purpose a ship is now sent to Jask to unlade cloth and other goods. Encourages him to assist in procuring the necessary phirmaunds, "for we aim, not at gnats and small flies, but at a commerce honorable and equal to two so mighty nations." Tells him "to open the King's eyes that he be not blinded with the smoky air of Spanish greatness * * * You are an Englishman; show it rightly." If he find the above conditions will not be agreed to, "assure the King that we will not come like pedlars and to advise us that we spend no more time and travail in vain." Expects to turn his face homewards in December, unless he is ordered to visit the Shah Abbas. [One page and a half. Indorsed, "Copy of a letter received 5th March from the Right Hon. Sir Thos. Roe, dated 17th Jany. 1616-7, received by the way of Aleppo and Marseilles, 26 Nov. 1617." O. C., Vol. IV., No. 434.]

16. Geo. Lord Carew to Sir Thos. Roe. Thanks for his letter from Ajmere, "the King of Mogoll's Court"; entreats him to continue the curious description of that huge monarchy in which all cosmographers are very much mistaken. All novelties of the country will be welcome, especially books and coins, but not to trouble himself about loadstones. Supposes he finds mighty opposition from the jesuits. Sends news since his last. The commentaries of Matteo Riccio, a jesuit, who resided at Paquin in China many years, printed in 1616; amongst other things, he reports the travels in 1603 of Benedictus Joesius, a Portuguese friar. A caravan was two years going from Lahore to Paquin; calculates the distance to be above 4,000 miles, and if so, "it follows that all our cosmographers are much mistaken, and China in the maps must be stretched farther to the eastward." The friar's journey was by command of his superior, to discover Cataya and see Cambalu, both mistaken by our cosmographers; no other countries called Cataya but China, and Paquin is the city called Cambalu. A pamphlet lately extant of Corint's travels to the Mogul's country, "you have him with you," or would have sent his book. He would do well to inform himself of the countries to the north and north-east of Mogul, and of the prince we call the Great Cham, "for it certain there are large kingdoms whereof we are nearly ignorant." Describes the course taken by the caravan by Mercator's Geography, and explains the cause of the long travel which might have been performed in less than 492 days. Reasons for correcting his former opinion, that Asia ought to have a longer extent to the eastward than is given in the maps.

The north-west passage attempted last summer, but nothing effected, and now less hope to find it than before.

Suggestions for bringing commodities from the Mogul's country, Persia, and the kingdoms adjacent, "if the rivers of Indus or Ganges be navigable as the Ob is," by a less tedious and dangerous route.

The ground of the complaints of the Levant Company arises from the spoils and robberies committed, as the Turks allege, by our merchants upon the Grand Signor's subjects in the East Indies.

Leaves him to the report of the English factors going to Surat, to state the cause of the difference between the English and the Hollanders about English cloths; it is a question of profit, as taking from them Hollanders the maintenance of 600,000 persons who gain their living by dyeing and dressing cloth.

A copy of his letter, dated at Ajmere in February last, was presented by Sir Thos. Smythe and others of the East India Company to the Lords of the Council on 16th January; his project for opening a trade with Persia so well liked by the Lords and the merchants that it is concluded a trial will be made; there is such a madness in England to be clothed in silk that we cannot endure our home-made cloth; conceives, however, objections to his project; the Grand Signor may be irritated to the confiscation of all English merchants' goods throughout his dominions; the silks are only sold for ready money, and 600,000*l.* will scarcely be able to drive that trade which "will exhaust the treasure of the realm."

The East India fleet being ready to fall down the river, is enforced to end this gazette. [Extracts from Domestic Jac. I., Vol. 90, No. 24, Cal., pp. 424-428. Printed in Carew's Letters for the Camden Society, edited by John Maclean. pp. 27-79.]

Jan. 18. 17. Nicholas Banggam to the East India Company. By Capt. Brampore [Burrampoor]. Keeling's orders he settled a factory at Burrampoor last year. English goods sell at a greater profit than at Surat; list of those sold, and the prices; last year they amounted to 3,000*l.* sterling, which he has passed on to Ahmedabad. Hopes to double the amount this year. Refers them to Lawrence Waldo who lived here the year past and now goes home sick. The Lord Ambassador (Roe) is at Court at great charge by reason of the King's progress; he is sometimes in favour and sometimes out, he is standing upon the credit of his place and our nation, and takes his place so near the King that the great men of the Court envy him and would not have it so. [*A marginal note (made in England) says: Why was not the 3,000*l.* rather remitted to Agra to be invested there in hard indigo? Two pages. O. C., Vol. IV., No. 435.*]

Jan. 19. 18. Edward Connok and Thomas Barker to the East India Company. Capital brought from Surat to Persia [in the James]. Can write with no certainty as yet of the sales of English commodities. Spices will sell at almost the same rate as in England. Ormuz, famous for her trade, has greatly declined the last three or four years. The Portugals grow weak. Earnestly request directions to be given to the factories at Surat and Bantam for a yearly supply to the writers of at least 500 tons of spices. Hopes of a good trade in Persia. Reasons for persuading the whole fleet to be sent directly for Persia; chiefly for the health of the mariners which by toddy, rack, and women in Surat is much weakened. Commends the victuals at Jask. The bay at Jask a fit place for fortification, "which I doubt not but from the Sophy to obtain;" in a month's time it may be made defensible against a multitude. Carriage of goods up the country cheap, some dispatched under the conduct of Edw. Pettus and Wm. Bell; Geo. Pley, and Wm. Tracy left with other goods. Have not treated with the Governor of Jask for privileges but refer to the Sophy himself. Sufficient testimonies received of fair usage and good intentions. [Three pages. Indorsed, "Read. Received 5 September 1617 by the Globe." O. C., Vol. IV., No. 436.]

Jan. 19. 19. Edward Connok and Thomas Barker to Thomas Kerridge, chief factor at Surat. Arrived at Jask 24 Dec. 1616, in twenty-six days from Surat. Gave chase to divers boats and took one of 30 tons, with a Portuguese pass, and laden with timber. Friendly reception by the Governor of Mogustan, which is eight days journey from Jask, and where licence was obtained for landing their goods. George Pley and William Tracy left there.

Found all places they passed through extremely poor and without any commerce except for necessities, having lately been overrun by the King of Persia though formerly distinguished from the Persian government and known by the ancient name of Ormuz. Nothing discouraged, being assured the inland mart towns were exceeding rich; Combran [Gombroon] the present port of the Portuguese, Shirauz, or Siras, and Ispahan, the seat of the King, being exceeding great, populous, and wealthy. Reasons for returning some of the goods. Desire all the cloth that comes in the next fleet for Surat to be sent to them, as well as the whole fleet with all the cargo, having first supplied their own wants, as at present they do not know what English commodities will sell in Persia. For the purchase of a good quantity of silk and other Persian commodities, they have written to the President at Bantam to send them annually a ship of 400 tons laden with spices, which they believe will sell at as good rates as in England. Large quantities of Guzerat cloth imported by the Portuguese. List of goods required by the next ships. A good supply of presents necessary for so potent a Prince. Inclose accounts of their arrival and proceedings in Persia. In former times the Portuguese supplied the large territories of Persia with spices, by which means chiefly they made the barren island of Ormuz to yield more profit than any of their Eastern trades beside; they are now so weak through losses, chiefly by the English and Hollanders, and so molested by sea robbers that no quantities of spices are now imported by them and the price is very much improved. 24. R. Cocks to the East India Company. Sickness of Capt. Totten; Rich. Wickham going chief commander of the Advice to Bantam. Drunkenness and bad conduct of many of those in the ships from England; thinks their friends glad to be rid of them, send them out, hoping these long voyages may make an end of them. His advice to Jourdain in case Capt. Keeling be gone to the Moluccas before the Advice arrive at Bantam; also in case they get trade in Cochin China which they cannot tell until Capt. Addames' return. Thinks the Advice fit to undertake the discovery to the northwards. The King of Firando owes 3,000 taes for goods bought last year; he is moneyless and they cannot get a penny from him; he owes the Hollanders about 10,000 taes. The pictures of the planets, which cost 3*l.* sterling a piece, wrapped together face to face before being dry are all utterly defaced and not worth one penny; had they come in their full beauty they would never have sold for a quarter of their cost. Useless sending such things, they esteem a painted sheet of paper with a horse or ship or a bird more than such rich pictures; no one will give 6*d.* for that fair picture of the conversion of St. Paul. 32. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. Our East India Company are in great bravery, having closed their books for underwriters the last of January and find adventurers for 1,400,000*l.* for the four following years, which in truth is a very large sum and a great deal more than was expected, but divers have underwritten for 10, 12, and 14,000*l.* a piece. 33. John Browne to the East India Company. The climate and its effect upon the health of the Company's servants. The people faithless, inconstant, and covetous, the greater sort cruel and dishonourable in all their actions. Extortions in Cambaya, Ahmedabad, and Baroach. The country full of thieves; for number they equal those in three or four Christian kingdoms. Violence offered to the English. A house hired for 600 rupees. Exaction of customs at Cambaya; steps taken to recover some part. Mocrob Chan in the writer's opinion not so bad as the Company have been informed; true, he is variable, but easy to be pleased if he be rightly observed; hopes to keep his affection to the English nation with more profit and less cost than heretofore in Surat; "yet he is a Moor and therefore doubtful." Abdallah Chan's late tyranny hath rather increased the number of thieves than prevented their practices. Forced to guard their house by night. The Mogul's death would put the Company's estate to greater hazard than any other accident. No sales worthy a factory in Ahmedabad, but the present Governor's long desired government gives him better hope. Relation of traffic by former factors; Wm. Edwardes slow in all but his own ends. Fittest time for buying indigo. Complaint of want of sufficient supplies. How to carry on a profitable trade at Ahmedabad. Discommendation of Christopher Farewell. Reasons for reformation of the long stay of the ships, and many other points in connexion with trade. Danger in the transport of goods. Reasons for approving the factory of Ahmedabad. [By a marginal note it appears that the Ambassador, Sir Thos. Roe, was against the continuance of this factory. "The private trade of the mariners causes them to neglect their duty." Six pages. O. C., Vol. IV., No. 444.]

Feb. 17. 35. Consultation held in Surat by Thos. Kerridge and the agents before-named. Resolved to send a ship as requested to the factory at Masulipatam. The factory at Calicut to be removed or continued, as the factors "shall find hope of benefit." Concerning the goods of John Midnall deceased. Allowance to [Wm.] Martin. The expenses of John Crouther in his journey from Ispahan to Ajmere to be audited. Salaries of the factors to be paid at the rate of 4s. 6d. per ryal. Robt. Younge referred to the Company in London for satisfaction of his goods, sequestered with those of Thos. Mitford. Leave to Rich. Lancaster to return home. [One page and three quarters. O. C., Vol. IV., No. 446.]

Succadana. 36. George Cokayne to the President or George Ball at Bantam. Desires to be relieved from his charge as Mr. Gritt [Hugh Greeke] and himself cannot live together. How he has been "so cruelly vexed." The factory but slenderly furnished with commodities. Difficulty of effecting sales, the Dutch at Landak giving out that the English gold "was nought and of our own making, which did make them refuse it once or twice." In no case to send more Priaman gold. Cash at such dear rates that they cannot find sufficient to buy themselves victuals. [One page. Indorsed, "Received from Mr. Cokayne, 22 April 1617." O. C., Vol. IV., No. 447.]

(Surat.) 37. Thos. Doughty to the East India Company. Advice of such things as he has taken notice of since his departure in the James from Swally Road to Jask, as also during his residence there and return to Swally. Death of the Governor of Jask and great lamentations of the people. Jask a very poor fisher town, a mile from the sea side; there is a castle without ordnance, the walls of clay, the gates and doors so weak that a man might break them down with his foot. Enormous price of cattle and sheep. Provisions should be taken aboard at Swally and Surat. Mogustan as poor a town as Jask. Doubts the success of the trade in Persia. Believes Connok would rather hazard ship, goods, and men than be disappointed of his employment. Goods must be landed at Ormuz; danger of their being intercepted by enemies to the English. Came to anchor at Swally 6th February, all well. [Three pages. Indorsed, "Received by the Globe, 5th September 1617. Read in Court, September 9th 1617." O. C., Vol. IV., No. 449.]

Surat. 38. Thos. Kerridge and Thos. Rastell to the East India Company. Their letters of the 2nd November last will have informed the Company of the then state of their affairs. Grounds for their attempting a trade in Persia, chiefly on the Sophy's phirmaund and Steele and Crouther's intelligence of the fitness of the country for profitable trade with England. Inconveniences of the want of money to provide goods in season. The plague at Lahore and Agra has somewhat hindered sales. The whole cargo of cloth in the James sent to Persia. Market for European goods, cloth, ivory, quicksilver, vermilion, lead, sword blades: Hot waters, knives, fowling pieces, drinking glasses, and glass ware by reason of the glut, not at all esteemed. Damage to the goods through bad packing. No sale for coral and coral beads. Price of amber beads. Goods sent home in the Globe. Amount of stock received by the present fleet. Success of their Persian attempt, according to their desire and expectation. Have endeavoured to extinguish the accustomed extraordinary charge in bribes and presents. Differences between the Great Mogul's officers and the English; the Governor's return has adjusted them. The factory at Calicut. The Solomon arrived in Masulipatam. Paul Canninge's goods. No quantity of sugar to be procured except at 500 miles from Surat. Midnall's goods. Concerning Capt. Hawkins' wife's father and the broker Jadeo. A double stock necessary to carry on the trade to profit. As to the maintenance of an ambassador and so many factories. How the factory at Ahmedabad may be dissolved. Rich lading of the Portuguese caracks. Trade between Bantam, Sumatra, and Surat. Conclusion of peace between the Mogul and the Portuguese. Have not this year been molested by the Portuguese. Hints for packing quicksilver. Private trade general among the seamen. Thos. Mitford and several other of the Company's servants return home. Have provided goods for Tecoe and Priaman. The Company's instructions for private letters to be sent open not liked; private conveyance will rather be hazarded than that their letters should be exposed to general censure. Have no shipping fit for discovery of Port Pequenia, nor do they consider it a fit place for their trade, part of the Ganges being commanded by the Portuguese; postpone the discovery for the next fleet. Complaints of the disorderly gentlemen and landsmen who come out. As to the sale of the Unicorn's horn sent from England. Deny the general charge of wicked and notorious living at the factory; affirm that the factors and factories are as well governed as though they were in France or nearer. Improvements effected by Kerridge. Embezzlement of goods. Improvident use of the ships' provisions. Intention of the Lord Ambassador to repair to Burrampoor for recovery of goods extorted for bribes, &c., and for enlargement of their privileges. Accounts transmitted prepared by Rastell. Factors deceased in the Mogul's dominions this year; Robert Gipps and Sam. Sals-tonstall. [17 pages. Indorsed, "Received 5 Sept. 1617 by the Globe. O. C. V., Vol. IV., No. 450.]

44. John Crouther to the East India Company. Left Rich. Steele at Ispahan in October 1615; no sufficient excuse for his remaining there so long afterwards. Much troubled with heat outwards and with cold storms, ice, and snow homewards. Was from 17th Oct. to 13th March past travelling from Ispahan to Ajmere. His journal with the King of Persia's phirmaund he delivered to Sir Thos. Roe, copies of which he sent to the Factory at Surat. Report of his death. Was sent with Joseph Salbanke to Agra with cloth, but "such is the misery of that place" that he could sell none. Fras. Fetiplace and Robt. Younge also sent to Agra. Cloth bartered for indigo. Left Agra 17th Nov. and arrived at Surat 20th January. Report of contention in the Factory in Persia. Fit to have a Factory in Agra with a good stock of money to buy indigo where there is infinite store. Is appointed to go to Burrampoor with elephants' teeth and other commodities to assist Bangam. swept away and the price of the new much improved by the purchases of the Queen, Mocrob Khan, the Portuguese, Persians and others, some for Goa, but most for the Red Sea to Mocha and those places. Little of anything vendible at Ahmedabad. Strong waters only serve for presents, without which nothing can be done, the people being generally all so base and thieves from the beggar to the King; they live as fishes in the sea, the great eating up the little ones; the farmer robs the peasant, the gentleman robs the farmer, and the King robs all. The King has three grown up sons; the eldest, whom he loves most but fears because of the affection of the people for him, is in prison, though the King swears he shall succeed him; danger of the second son, Governor of all Guzerat, coming to the throne; report that he means to possess himself of the kingdom on the death of his father; he is now preparing with the King's whole army to go against the King of Deccan. Until these things come to pass sword blades will be worth little or nothing. Commodities which are likely to meet with a sale. His services and wages. [Three pages. O. C., Vol. IV., No. 454.]

47. Capt. Henry Pepwell to the East India Company. The three condemned men were put ashore at the Cape, contrary to his wish, for not finding any of those formerly left there by Capt. Keeling, it was to expose these men to apparent destruction, either to perish by famine, to be devoured by wild beasts, or slain by savages, which he believed to be far different from the Company's meaning. Complaints against Connok. Account of a fight with a Portuguese carack in which the English Admiral was slain, and Capt. Pepwell dangerously wounded; the carack making for the shore, refused to surrender and was afterwards discovered to be on fire, but whether done purposely or no, he does not know; the new Vice Roy supposed to be on board. Valour of the Portuguese and unwonted skill of the gunners; believes they were English and Dutch. Number of men slain and hurt. Anchored at one of the islands of Gomera, in their plots called Castro but by the Portuguese Gazidia, where they took in cattle and other provisions in exchange for paper, nothing else being had in the like request; some paper sold for a ryal of eight a quire; gold and silver little esteemed in the island. Had sight of Diu on 18th Sept., and arrived at Surat 23rd Sept. Kerridge urges him to send a ship away to Jask, but he disapproves of it, owing to letters he had received from the Lord Ambassador and for other reasons which are stated. Found by his instructions that he could not avoid their determinations, so Alexander Childe, an honest and resolute man, was sent Master of the James thither on 8th November; names of the factors. Complaints of the abridgement of authority heretofore committed to the Chief

Commander of the Fleet in all matters of merchandise. Argument with Kerridge about moneys to lade the ships at Bantam. Quarrel between the natives of Surat and the English; Kerridge beaten and imprisoned. Proceedings of the Portuguese. Arrival of a Dutch ship at Surat from the Red Sea, laden with spices; the Dutch have established a factory at Surat; they grow very powerful in the Indies, searching out every place of trade with their multitude of shipping; and have lately besieged Malacca, assisted by the King of Acheen, and destroyed three Portuguese galleons. Only one carack arrived this year at Goa. The Portuguese publish fabulous reports of their prowess to maintain their declining reputation among the natives. Complain of the arming and the scarcity of victualling the ships; better and cheaper to victual them in England; also against the surgeons and their medicines, and the practice of giving passage to lewd and dissolute fellows. No more Dutchmen should be entertained in the Company's ships; their evil practices. The relading of the ships from Surat. The Guzerats generally faithless, without truth or honesty, exceeding subtle and covetous, begging most impudently and admitting trade with the English for fear and not for love. Inconvenience of the port holes for ordnance. Account of the Persian voyage; the James returned the 7th February; mutiny aboard the ship; it was feared the mutineers would run away with her. News of an English boy sold in Arabia; also of the wreck of the Samaritan on the island of St. Lawrence, the passengers and goods saved. Danger of the great delay in lading the ships for England, one which began to lade 22nd November was not laden before 28th February. Commendation of Henry Rickman, though he loveth wine more than water. Promises to intercept Sir John Fearn's ships if he meets with them, and to mar and spoil his voyage. Intends touching at Masulipatam at the request of Lucas Antheunis. [Eleven pages. Indorsed, "Received 5th Sept., 1617, by the Globe; Read." O.C., Vol., IV. No. 456.]

49. George Cokayne to George Ball or the chief at Bantam or Jacatra. Large sale of cloth by the Dutch at less than its cost; thinks they "do it of purpose to pick occasions," for there has since been such a trade in their factories of all sorts of people, both rich and poor. They bribe the Governor to persuade the Landak men to sell all their [precious] stones to the Dutch. Refusal of the Dutch to let Cokayne pass in their ship to Bantam; their threats to him and tricks "to weary us out of this place." His accounts. [*One page. Indorsed, "Received 22nd April." him. Promises all possible service in the many difficult and treacherous oppositions they are likely to meet with. [One page. O.C., Vol. IV., No. 459.]

March 20. 51. Henry Patteson to Wm. Nicolls at Acheen. Arrival of a Dutch ship; earnest suitors for trade at Tecoe or Priaman, but did not obtain their desire in the least and departed somewhat discontented. Many wrongs require to be redressed; the old Pollema is called upon to answer his misdemeanours to the English and the country people. Has written three letters to Benjamin Joseph, the Commander of the Fleet. In want of goods, having little or none left which are vendible. If the ship bring not a letter, they can have no trade, notwithstanding the King's grant to General Keeling. Cannot load the pepper unless money is received. The King's trade has very much hindered them, the country people not suffered to buy of them, but must also buy of the King's decayed and over priced goods. It would be well to procure more ground for the purposes of their trade. In favour of the bearer, a poor distressed Christian who has lost his junk and most of his estate. [Three pages. O.C., Vol. IV., No. 460.]

March 21. 52. Lucas Antheuniss to Sir Thos. Roe, Ambassador at the Court of the Great Mogul in Ajmere. Glad to understand that his wrongs have been redressed and that he is more contented and greatly favoured. Suggestions for obtaining privileges for the coast of Bengal. Robert Jones apprehended and kept in safe custody. Death of Peter Mutton through riotous living and drunkenness. Has been longer at Masulipatam than he expected. Ships arrived and departed; disorders caused by the death of John Gourney. [Geo.] Barkeley, Principal at Bantam, and Capt. Castleton coming from the Moluccas, deceased. General decline of trade through the strivings of the English and Dutch against each other; it cannot long continue but will be forced to come to an union. Rumour of a large Spanish fleet coming from the Manillas, their General Don Juan de Silva before Malacca; the Dutch assemble all their forces to encounter them, and are making preparations with the King of Acheen, to besiege Malacca again. [One and a half pages. O.C., Vol. IV., No. 461.]

March 22. 53. Hugh Lee to [Sec. Winwood?]. Ships preparing for the East Indies. The Conde Rodondo going as Viceroy; report that the April 1. Hollanders have had a great hand against the Portugals and have taken Malacca or brought it into great distress, with which news the Portugals are much affrighted. [Extract from Correspondence, Portugal.]

March ? 54. William Lesk, "Minister of God's Word," [late Chaplain of the Surat Factory], to the East India Company. Safe arrival of the Globe, after a dangerous fight with a Portugal carack; death of the General. Request of Lucas (Antheuniss) for a small ship to be sent to Masulipatam to take himself and some goods to the southward; Capt. Pepwell resolved to go with the Charles and the James, understanding how beneficial in regard of private gain a voyage from thence to Bantam might prove. In the Mogul country the Lord Ambassador lives as he can; his entertainment is nothing answerable to his worth. Detention of the presents by the factors of Surat, from the end of September to the beginning of February. Aldworthe's messenger from the King of Persia returning with an answer rather of suit for than licence to trade there; encouraged Connok to despatch a ship for the discovery of Jask. Merchants sent to reside in the country who were unable any longer to endure the insolence, outrages, and indiscreet government of the Factory of Surat, and had resolved rather than live another year so hellish a life to have gone home. The Armenians drive a rich trade between India and Persia. Sottish negligence of the Surat factors in not vigorously prosecuting that trade. The Unicorn might have been laden from Surat for England. The untimely death of Aldworthe and sudden departure of Edwardes greatly to be lamented, the factory being left without grave and discreet government; evils of leaving the whole business in the hands of a company of young, wanton, riotous lads, who have brought both themselves and the nation to stink in the sight of the people of the land; the heathen again and again earnestly suing the Lord Ambassador for some person of gravity and discretion to reside as chief factor. Complaint against Thos. Mitford. Private trade of Thos. Keridge and hindrance to the lading of the Unicorn. Conduct of Browne and Polhill. Capt. Pepwell's insufficiency. Lesk's admonitions to check disorders disregarded; "the foul mouths of luxurious and hairbrained youths by hook and crook seeking the patronage and defence of their evil courses deserve rather disdain, neglect, and contempt than any seat or lodging in a wise breast." Great resort of merchants to Surat from all parts last year. Motion of the Ambassador for dissolving the needless multiplication of factories and reducing all into one. The best minded factors sent away from Surat. A native of Mesopotamia gone for England in the Globe, who will inform the Company of all the secrets of the Persian trade, having for 12 years traded between India and Persia. [Five pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 462.]

March 28. 55. Nich. Ufflete to Geo. Barkeley, Agent at Bantam. For Jacatra. money to pay for "boards" if he approves of the purchase. [Half a page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 463.]

April 2. 56. Edward Connok to the East India Company. Departure of Ispahan. Sir Robt. Sherley in Oct. 1615, who is a second time employed to the Christian princes but especially into Spain, to contract for all the Persian silks; danger of the Spaniards monopolizing this silken trade, "the only richest yet known in the world," and of their thus curbing, if not ruining the Company's trade in India. Proposes to prevent this by representations to the King of Persia of the dangers he will lay himself open to, if once the Spaniard have footing on his shore. The English the ablest nation for shipping, but the least able, through want of the yearly required sums of money, considering the annual import of Persian silk will amount to full 1,000,000*l.* sterling at 6*s.* the pound of 16 ounces, the usual price. Suggestions for getting over the difficulty; should be commissioned to treat with the King of Persia. Believes this trade will yield far better satisfaction than many, if not all their India trades put together. Recommends it to their mature deliberation. Could "with reasons unanswerable possess this Prince what society, honor, benefit he may attain in freeing his gulfs of its present slavery, by taking Ormuz into his possession, an act worthy himself, easily performed, and whereby he may be Lord of his own." The Company's ships from the southward might then furnish the country with spices from Surat and all Indian commodities. Advantages of effecting the work which he should glory in. Will endeavour to get this King to suspend if not restrain Sir Robt. Sherley's conditions and order for treaty with the Spaniard; Sherley's great desire to live in his own country if he had but the small means of a poor gentleman. 57. George Pley to Edw. Connok, Agent in Ispahan. Long and tedious journey, "wherein we endured not only the fervent heat of the day but the pinching cold of the night." Kindness of the 'Darraga.' Goods sold and the prices. Arrived at an unseasonable time of the year, but is in good hopes that some great quantity of cloth and tin will sell. Remarks on the report that Connok assumes the name and title of an Ambassador; whether the Company will approve of it; also "that in your expenses you cast money abroad as stones." As to a difference in which Connok caused the country people to lay violent hands on one of his servants, "it cannot but be distasteful and displeasing to the Company," and breed confusion among them. Beseeches him so to proceed that they may be at peace among themselves. [Two pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 465.]

59. Edw. Connok to G. Pley. Takes his letter in the kindest manner. It is most false that he ever assumed the name of Ambassador; "think me not so ignorant and beastly." The occasion of prodigality comes from that foolish youth William Bell, caused through his endangering Connok's life. Believes his expenses do not equal Pley's. Is as sparing a servant of the Company as ever they employed. If his counsel be followed the Company's business and trade in Persia will prove more glorious and beneficial to them than all their trade in the Indies, and this he will attempt and hope to perform without their adventure of one penny. Urges him to come speedily, for till then Connok cannot depart to the King, neither will he peremptorily engage his life by delivering an old letter and treat a counterfeit business, except Pley enacts it there and confirms secrecy by his oath. This King is a tyrant and cuts off heads every hour, "let us not engage our lives and master's estates to Barker's envious proceedings." Connok's advices to England and India must be deferred until Pley's coming and the writer's speech with the King. Wishes him to bring Ned Pettus, to whom he promises a true reconciliation. "That fool William Bell is a very idle youth, proud and dangerous." Cautions him to beware of Barker. Is proffered by the King's lieutenant 100,000*l.* sterling of silk, to be paid for in goods in one year or two. Commendations of William Nelson, whom he wishes to accompany Pley. Danger of the Ambassador of Spain arriving at Ormuz before Pley; if the Spaniard have audience of the King of Persia before Connok their business will be ruined. Refers him to their commission from Surat. Beseeches him to come quickly with all the ready money he can. Has spent 100*l.* of his own, and was never so sparing of his own as he has been of the Company's purse. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 466.]

60. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Keridge, at Surat. Has received another packet of letters from Persia. If he rest satisfied in the hopes of good trade, Roe is well content not to disturb him in that quietness of mind, and to keep his own thoughts to himself. Edw. Connok and his differences concern not Roe. The detention of a letter for Roe and other matters touching Connok, also as to his assuming the title of Ambassador. Comments upon the conduct of Barker, Geo. Pley and Connaught [Connok]; "charity makes the best constructions." The King's letter if sent by the Company and dated 1613 will betray it; supposes if they had intended it to Persia they would have procured a fresher and directed it to Roe, but his Majesty's liberal trust to them is fallen thereby into the hands of indiscreet men that cannot govern it. Finds he is resolved not to recall his authority but to hazard it; Roe will bear no part in it. Remarks on Keridge's preference of Connok over Barker, and the advantages of a trade to Persia. Roe did not counsel sending Connok, and "he needs not yours in that I determine to do in defence of the honor of our Sovereign." Could not avoid what has befallen the presents. Doubts not that it is either in the service of the Prince or favourite to disgrace him. The velvets are returned, refused at the price; the amber has sold well. Thinks Dabul no fit residence for a factory, but that English ships may trade yearly at the port while they linger at Surat. Wishes he would inquire into the heart of this new business; confesses his jealousy that fear began this friendship, and that they are too great and ancient allies of the Portuguese to entertain the English cordially. Utterly dislikes the selling of ordnance to any Indian; it is but preparing a whip for themselves. "How this King takes it I care not, I would have him know we are not so fond of our good usage as to be in wardship to him." Browne urges in no way any reason for the continuance of his factory (? at Ahmedabad; see ante, No. 33.) [Three and a half pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 467.]

61. Thos. Kerridge, Thos. Rastell, and Ro. Younge, to the East India Company. Embarrassments caused by the capture, by the James and Charles, of two junks belonging to natives of Surat. The value of their promises has been called in question, and they have been neglected as well as disgraced by the imprisonment of their broker, who has ever since been detained in irons. Richard Hounsell, master of the Charles, a chief instrument in persuading the commander to these courses. Sir Thos. Roe's presents, through the Prince's covetous desire, detained on the way from Court to Burrampoor until the King commanded their release. The dogs only well liked, the crystal cabinets said to be glass, the rich sword lead and the handle copper, all disgraced and made ridiculous on purpose, yet nothing of value returned. Goods sell but slowly. The quick-silver has been distributed among the several factories. Will use their best endeavours to dispeed away the next ship for England more timely than hitherto. Capt. Pepwell advises them of the sale of lead and seven pieces of ordnance at Dabul; from thence he purposeth to touch at Calicut and Masulipatam; "the first we doubt will be dissolved;" the Osiander, with goods from Bantam, has arrived at Masulipatam. [Three pages. Indorsed, "By the way of Masulipatam, received from Bantam by the Hope the first of September." O. C., Vol. V., No. 468.]

62. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Lake. A general embargo has lately been laid upon all East Indian commodities, as pepper, cloves, &c., in the power of these [the Dutch] merchants within this King's dominions, which falls heavily on them. [Extract from Corresp., Spain.]

"In the way

Ispahan."

63. George Pley to the Factors in Shiraz. Has received the two stray packs of cloth. Prays for a better end than this beginning. Impossible to have peace with those who having such an overweening conceit of themselves cannot but despise others. Begs them to content the Darraga's two men for watching this night. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 469.]

April 28.
"Upon the way."

64. Geo. Pley to [Edw.] Pettus. Sends back a horse by bearer which has fallen lame. Cannot hire camel, horse, mule, or ass; some are obliged to proceed on foot. Much abused in the matter of camels; those they have will hardly carry the goods half-way up. Grieves to see that some care not how things go, they let their goods go forward and stay behind at their pleasure. [Three-quarters of a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 470.]

Asapasbozurb.

65. George Pley to [W.] Bell at Shiraz. Assurances of friendship. How he has been vilified for looking after the interests of the Company, and branded with the name of knave, puritan knave, prying knave, and threadbare knave. It has been given out that he being drunk lost a camel; "is it possible that they who daily swim in Bacchus bowls, can so speak of others?" It is an old proverb "Pride doth overcome wit." [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 471.]

May 7.?
At sea.

66. Capt. Nath. Martyn to Capt. C. Harris. Complains of the slow sailing of his vessel, and wishes to know whether he desires the writer to keep him company all the way to England. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 472.]

67. Request and reasons of Capt. Christopher Harris, commander of the Peppercorn, for Nathaniel Martyn, commander of the Globe, to keep him company to the uttermost of his endeavours until they reach the port of London. Signed by Chr. Harris, John Curtis, and Henry Rickman. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 473.]

May 8.
Ispahan.

68. Edward Connok to Thos. Barker, [second in Persia,] Geo. Pley, Edw. Pettus, and Wm. Bell, at Shiraz. Cannot write more earnestly than he has done for the despatch of the goods, people, and presents from Shiraz to Ispahan. Has detained their messenger, knowing him to be slow, and sent a speedy one, in expectation of their sudden answer. Marvels he has not heard from them for thirty-three days, as a letter from Shiraz would reach him in five or six days, "so that this must needs be your careless or willing faults." Nothing can be effected in any certain manner till he has been with the King, nor can he go to the King until the goods, people, and presents arrive. Recommends their hasty coming; complains of their delay; do they think Shiraz will vent all their goods and Ispahan nothing? He neither may nor will suffer the business to ruin through their stubborn wilfulness and idleness, "and to speak particularly to you, Mr. Barker, (now the chief director and manager thence of these neglects,) remember yourself, you know by our commission you ought to be by me directed, and since it so ought to be, it so shall be, be you assured." The coming of the Spanish ambassador is confirmed by letters from Goa, whose arrival in Ormuz or any other part of Persia he prays Barker to advise him of, that Connok may procure his stay until he has despatched his own business with that King. [One page and three-quarters. Indorsed, "This copy sent into India to the agent, Mr. Keridge, Mr. Browne, and Mr. Rastell, and to no other. Surat." O.C., Vol. V., No. 474.]

May 8.
Ispahan.

69. Edward Connok to Geo. Pley and Edward Pettus, at Shiraz. Has this very hour received their letters, by which he perceives the "disorderous" and dangerous proceedings of Thos. Barker. Assures them that he will compass any danger whatsoever that shall for the future be practised by Barker. Time is spent which cannot be recovered. Will let Barker soon see he can reach him at Shiraz or in any the dominions of Persia. "I will let him know if God give me life, how to obey, and that so modestly, [yet justly,] that he shall be his own judge." Barker has quite broken his intentions of presents for the King, who will not be presented with such things as they give to the Khan and others. Has given orders for camels to be sent towards them. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 475.]

May 8.
Shiraz.

70. Thos. Barker and Wm. Bell to Edw. Connok, agent at Ispahan. Sends messenger on purpose to certify to him that the Portuguese Ambassador is arrived at Ormuz. Cannot learn whether he intends to make any long abode there, only suppose that the intolerable heat of that climate will force him speedily to leave that place, and seek a more temperate air inland. Desire him to procure from the King the grant of the house at Shiraz, wherein he lodged. Account of cloth given to the Company's servants, in part payment of wages, for their apparel. Inconvenience of keeping their accounts in divers species; wish to know in what species Connok intends to keep his accounts. Necessity of writing to the factory at Surat before the arrival of the ensuing year's fleet, to prevent the danger of sending only one ship to these parts. Are credibly informed their enemies at Goa are uniting all their Indian strength to cross their Persian desires. [One page and three quarters. Indorsed, "Received the 15th ditto, in Spahan." O.C., Vol. V., No. 476.]

May 9.
Surat.

71. Robt. Younge to Sir Thos. Roe. Requires a remittance of money. Intends going to Baroach with Martin in six weeks. Hears that the Prince has ordered them to be put out of their house; hopes it will not prove true, believes their landlord to be in disgrace with the Prince. Concerning a debt due to Leske. Letters received from Calicut show the proceedings there to be little to the Company's profit. The King borrowing money of the factors which is still unpaid, and taking goods without paying for them. George Wolmer, the factor, dead. That place affords no commodity fit for England; the people are poor, oppressed, and robbed by the Portuguese. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 477.]

May 10.
Camboja.

72. George Savidge to [Cocks at] Firando. Their arrival at Camboja from Siam. Their proceedings have been very troublesome by reason of the Portuguese. At first they received a kind welcome from the King and his mandarins, but afterwards, through the instigation of the Portuguese, were ordered on board their junk and to depart with all speed, it being feared they were sent to take the country, but since inquiring of their dealings and carriage in other parts the King has learned to understand them better. Arrival of two Hollanders in a Malay junk from Patani with a cargo of very good cloth, which is in great request. Three months after, the Portuguese in a small prow took this junk and carried it away to Malacca in spite of the King, who sent 500 men to bring them back. The King so displeased with the Portuguese for this and other treasons that he will not suffer one of them to stay. He has taken from them all their munitions and weapons, and desires some English and Dutch ships to arrive to take the Portuguese as they took the Hollanders. The Duke has given them a house hard by his Court. Their cargo in such bad condition that they have sold but little yet; has made sale of all at reasonable good rates. Doubts not that this place will prove very profitable to the Company by the sale of many commodities specified. [One page. Indorsed, "Received 30th July in Firando." O.C., Vol. V., No. 478.]

May 12.
Macassar.

73. Kellum Throgmorton to Capt Barkeley, President in Bantam. [Nat.] Courthope arrived with the Swan and Defence on 19th November. This factory not so well furnished with money as Barkeley expected. Has turned the money he had taken for cloth into mace according to Mr. Ball's orders when he placed the writer chief in Macassar. The Attendance, John A. Baringe, could not fetch Banda, but arrived at Macassar 8th April. The factory very poor and scarce able to maintain the house until a new supply. Sends the Attendance back to Bantam with [Thos.] Spurway, who will give an account of the proceedings at Pooleroon. Orders sent to Banjermassin and Succadana to keep the factories there until further orders from Bantam, and to expect a good supply by the next monsoon. Will provide by that time what rice the country can afford; mace and tar ready. George Jackson, John West, and Wm. Withers to remain in Macassar Factory with Throgmorton until further orders. Would like to be advised beforehand of the ships' coming, so as to provide for them better. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 479.]

May 15.
Ispahan.

74. Edw. Connok, Geo. Pley, Edw. Pettus, and Wm. Tracy to Thos. Keridge, agent, and Thos. Rastell and the rest of the factors at Surat. Refer to previous letters which relate their detention at Shiraz, and though they had good usage from the Khan at last, yet for many good reasons they came to Ispahan, where also they are best able to withstand the further plots of their professed enemy. Recapitulate the contents of Connok's letters to Barker and the rest. Barker's unlawful and sensual entertainments, and wasting of time at Shiraz, although the Spanish Ambassador had come from Goa and was at hand with large presents to supplant them. Wm. Bell and John Amy remain in Shiraz with Barker. Complain of Barker's conduct, and of his wasting and retaining goods which should have been sent to Ispahan, so that Connok is wholly despoiled of his presents for the King. Hope soon to advise him of the sale of all the cloth at good rates, for silk. Can send yearly five hundred bales of silk or more, on condition that they have sugars, spices, and other required commodities sent to them. Great advantages of trade with Ormuz. They mean to injure, if not wholly to ruin, the Portugal trade there; desire it may be recommended especially to [John] Browne at Ahmedabad, "a man stirring and discreet." Enclose their letter to the Commander of the next fleet from England, as to what is here given out by the Spanish agent, to supplant this trade by the bullet. Ormuz is weak, but still they could desire the coming of the whole fleet. Will be at Jask by 15th Oct., in expectation of the commodities they specify. Have been desired by the King's treasurer and minion Lalabegg, to write to India for the under-written toys and necessaries for the King's use, which Keridge must not fail to send as he regards their credit and welfare. Steele and Crouther have given a good account of the weights, coins, and measures of Persia. Prices of silk. An Englishman, Wm. Robbins, a man of good estate and as good respect of this prince and people, has given them great help and furtherance in their business. Request him also to thank Steele for his good respects to them and their affairs, which will give him further encouragement. Directions for packing the goods sent to them; most of their camels are weak and cannot stand under a burthen of above four or five hundred [weight] English. [Six pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 480.] Inclose,

Connok and the rest to the Commander of the next English Fleet, touching Surat. Think it their duty to address him this paper, a part being wholly upon marine matters. Threat of the Spanish Agent to supplant the English trade by the bullet; "the weak ability" of Ormuz. It would not be amiss that he should come with all his fleet, which would be a security and a daunting to the enemy. Suggestions in case he should resolve to send but one ship. Ispahan, 1617, May 15th. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 482.]

May 15.
Ispahan.

75. Connok and others to "the land and sea consultation at the arrival of the next English Fleet at Surat." How behoof-ful it may be to send the whole fleet this way. The forces and preparations at Diu and Goa; cannot apprehend their adversaries would seek their whole fleet at Jask, though the writers rest assured they hope to entrap one single ship. [Three quarters of a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 483.]

May 15.
Ispahan.

76. Connok and others to Wm. Keeling, Captain and Commander-General over all the English in the East Indies, and to the Factory at Bantam. Inclose copy of their letter of 19th January (see ante, No. 20). Hope to receive the supplies they wrote for by the James. Being come to Ispahan, the chief city and seat of this Empire, they desire to confirm their former advice so as to take away all doubt, as they were then in the remotest part of the country. Spices of all sorts will yield within 25 per cent. equal to their own country. The King desirous to pass all his silks into Christendom by sea, to the weakening of his enemy the Turk; his treasurer, his chief favourite, has proffered them two or three thousand bales of silk to be shipped free, on condition of receiving satisfaction in one or two years in spices, sugar, cloth, and other English and Southern Indian commodities. Have written to England for instructions in so weighty a matter, but beg him in the meantime to supply them according to their requests. Their aim is to falsify the reports of the Portugals, who say that the English are not merchants but thieves and sea robbers, who under pretence of merchandise entrap and despoil the ships and subjects of the princes of India and southern parts. Their desire, under colour of proffered benefit by trade, to obtain the King's leave to fortify Jask, the entrance of the Persian Gulf. Will attend this October at Jask the arrival of some ships, as also from Surat, not doubting in the interim to obtain their capitulation signed by the King. Have settled two factories, one at Ispahan and the other at Shiraz; intend a third at the sea side and near to Jask next year, which will be all the trade that can anyway be required. Have been entreated by the King's treasurer and favourite to procure the underwritten necessities and toys for the King's use. All sorts of china, a good commodity being much in request. [Three pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 484.]

May 15.
Ispahan.

77. George Pley to Thos. Keridge at Surat. In his last from Mogustan he certified their arrival at Jask, and how the governor behaved to them. Departure of Connok for Shiraz to procure the Khan's phirmaund for their release. Their detention at Lar, caused by Thos. Barker, and their arrival at Shiraz. Barker the cause of their long stay at Shiraz to the Company's detriment, and of other inconveniences; his behaviour to Pley. Refers to their general letter touching their negotiations in those parts; assures him that in a short time they are like to have a trade of great benefit; the Portuguese strive by might and main to supplant them, but he hopes to no purpose. The Spanish Ambassador, who has been two years at Goa, by reason of the taking of Gombroon from the Portuguese, is daily expected from Ormuz, and brings a present of great value to the King. He knows how meanly they are provided with presents; hopes he will duly consider it by the next fleet, and send the commodities they are in need of, that their enemies may not have cause to laugh at them. Begs him to send six bedsteads, as they all lie on the ground. [Three pages and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 485.]

May 16.
Ispahan.

78. Connok and others to Keridge, agent at Surat. Copy of their letter of the previous day [see ante, No. 74.] Information touching three commodities which this place yields, saffron, galls, and a root for dyeing, called ruenas. Are informed that there lately came from Goa after the James, seven galleons, 56 frigates, and two gallies, but not finding her went to Muscat, their garrison on the coast of Arabia, from whence they returned to Goa. This argues the enemy's intentions, therefore they recommend the sending of the whole fleet; if they are repulsed at first they will be for ever daunted. [Seven pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 481.]

80. Connok and others to Barker and W. Bell, at Shiraz. Bitter complaints of Barker's slow and tedious proceedings; the great prejudice to the Company's affairs and advantages gained by the Spanish Ambassador, who has despatched letters to the King and will bribe fairly; had Barker dispeeded their caravan all these inconveniences had not been. Accuse him of needlessly giving presents of too great cost to the officials at Shiraz, and such things as they had intended presenting to the King, contrary to Connok's orders, "you know little of these Turkish countries and government; when you have spent what you can, they still will be eating and grating anew on you." Touching Barker's accounts, and his appropriation of money to his own use, admonishes him for his abuse of George Pley, "let us live at peace among ourselves; if anything be amiss have relation to me, you shall have no wrong, but all right." Can give him no orders what to present to the Khan's vizier until he assures Connok he will be conformable to the direction of their Commission. House for the Shiraz factory; the King's house there too expensive and fitter for a prince than a private merchant; will not omit to obtain a convenient house of the King, but none of his regal palaces will Connok demand. Wishes rather he had been sick in his bed than that he should have been the cause of the Spanish Ambassador having the start of them; for this Barker can never make amends. The Moor in Barker's service is a Portugal spy, he should not employ him any more. Will write no more than what he has already written as to Connok's "counterfeit embassy." The keeping of his accounts and sale of goods. Hope Barker will discreetly take example by the past and modestly perform for the future. Beg he will speedily advise them of the Spanish Ambassador's movements. [*Seven pages and a half. O. 81. John Ferrers to Capt. Cocks at Japan. His last was of the 13th March by Wm. Eaton, since which time Ferrers and Peter Hall have been sent with a cargo of goods to discover Chiampa, and to meet with Capt. Shoby, hoping to send some goods by him to Japan. The King has given them free trade to all parts of his kingdom being well content with their coming. Money delivered to Capt. Shoby. *Half a page. News that the Swan and Defence are at anchor at Pooloroon, and that the Dutch ships at Pooloway anchored between the English ships, upon which Mr. Davye threatened to sink them if they did not leave; the Dutch perceiving the ordnance planted on the island with English colours, and that the English ships were fully manned with the Bandanese, weighed for Neira, but were forced by a storm out to sea and are now at Jacatra. 86. John Johnson and Richard Pitts to [Capt. Cocks?] at Firando. His letters to [Benj.] Farie by Wm. Eaton giving account of the great troubles he had in going up to the Emperor to obtain the former privileges, have been received. Know for certain that Shoby Dono having met with foul weather and his junk leaky, was forced to Chiampa; hope he has now gone for Nangasaki. Glad to hear of the safe arrival of the Chinese junk which Sayer went in, though with the loss of many men and among them the captain, as they hear. Are glad they can send a junk well laden with "sapon," because of its scarcity. Reasons for sending a small vessel with a cargo of goods and money to Chiampa, under the direction of Peter Hall and John

Ferrers. Understand, from an Ambassador of the King of Chiampa sent to the King of Siam, the commodities the country afforded. She sailed on 20th March. Have made arrangements for her return before the departure of the Sea Adventure "but man may purpose but God disposeth at His will and pleasure." Lading of the Sea Adventure. Much trouble and vexation, besides the giving of many bribes to procure a small quantity of "sapon." Would like the money sent to them of the same coin as Eaton will show him, which will tend very much to their employers' profit, provided it be kept secret. Since the departure of the Sea Adventure in 1616, they have had very good sales in clothing. In answer to the complaints of some of the goods of the Company, think Capt. Addames can hardly prove his Christopher an honest man. If this factory is to be maintained and a profitable trade driven with Japan, the men as well as the commodities must be good. The seaworthiness and manning of the Sea Adventure. Benjamin Farie died 11 Sept. 1616. [*Two pages. 89. John Johnson and Richard Pitt to John Browne, principal of the English at Patani. The price of copper uncertain. This year three Chinese junks have arrived with silks. Have little goods left to sell or truck for, having had good sales and to good profit. Entreat supplies for this factory to enable them to supply Japan with goods, and from Japan, money for Bantam. The Sea Adventure arrived 24th January from Japan, with Wm. Eaton, merchant, and left 27th inst.; her lading. Lament they had not the money to make use of which he had lying dead. Evil reports of the English spread by the Dutch, who endeavour by all possible means to wrong and hurt them by their "vigorous scorpion tongues." Farie died within one hour of eating a hearty breakfast, having hardly time to make a bequest in favour of his woman and child; he was not a man of such indiscretion as to desire the Dutch, our mortal enemies, to be overseers of the Company's goods. The truth is the Dutch grieve at our good sales. Hope all the factories may make as good sales as they have. Reasons for their buying a small pinnace of 15 or 16 tons burthen. [*Two pages. 90. George Pley to the East India Company. Has already certified them what occurred on his passage from England to India, and also touching that accident of untimely meeting with a carack and its destruction. The general letter will, he hopes, give the Company good satisfaction in every point of the hopefulness of "this new plantation." The bad time of their arrival in the summer, and the King's absence with his nobles and soldiers, the causes why they cannot at present make sale of their cloth to their content, yet they nothing doubt but that towards the winter they will find good sales and to good profit, so that by this year's fleet they may make some return in silks. Connok ready to depart hence towards the King; he has obtained capitulations from him. The King's absence the cause of extraordinary expense. Grateful thanks for the Company's favour and bounty to him. Begs an allowance of 10*l.* per annum for his poor wife and children. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 494.]

91. Connok, Pley, Pettus, and Tracy to the East India Company. Have written at large "in alphabet, thereby to secure the knowledge from our adversary the Portugal," who lay wait at Bagdad to intercept all their letters; request that answer be sent to them in easy character, cypher, or alphabet. Have written to their Aleppo consul to send a trusty messenger, or two of the Arabian nation who are accustomed to, and they only do know the passage through the the desert. Have previously written at large of their difficulties, write now of their trade only. Pley and Pettus arrived at Ispahan twenty days since, having left Barker and Bell in factory at Shiraz. Their cloths too high priced or too dearly bought for this country. Their despatches to Surat and Bantam earnestly requesting commodities fitting for Ispahan. Reasons for desiring the whole Surat fleet to go to the port of Jask. Arrival of the Spanish Ambassador with great and rich presents, purposely to supplant the English. Must have 500 tons at least of spices yearly, for therein consists the welfare of their Persian trade, especially now in its infancy. English commodities which will sell in Persia and which they hope to receive by the next year's fleet. Hope credit will be given to their advices for they write upon certainties. Why a small ship or two, drawing but ten or twelve feet water, should be sent with the fleet. Further recommend a coach to be sent to this King, such an one as the Company gave to the King of India, a plain armour but good and of proof, two good serviceable short horsemen's swords, sharp at the point such as they use in the Low Countries, with the hilts not rich but fairly damasked only, a piece of choice English scarlet to apparel his women, but at no time to send anything effeminate as to the King of India, but serviceable and for use, "this King being reported valiant and the discreetest prince in these Eastern parts." [Three pages and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 495.] Inclose,

91. I. Connok to Chapman, Consul at Aleppo. Congratulates him on preferment to the place which once Connok thought might have been his own. There are fourteen English in all, and Connok is appointed the chief and agent in settling a trade and amity with the Prince and people of Persia, in his Majesty's name. Through the many hindrances of their "professed adversary the Portugal," their negotiation has been more than once at a stand. Is going to Tauris, where he hopes to "compose his business" with the King notwithstanding the Spanish Ambassador, Don Garza de Silva, has lately arrived in Persia with large presents purposely to cross their designs. Is forced often to trouble him with packets; desires he will send them by way of Constantinople. Fears his letters may be intercepted at Aleppo by the Portuguese agents: necessity of procuring two Arab footmen who know their way from Bagdad to Aleppo through the desert, without a guide. [Ispahan, 2nd June 1617. One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 496.]

92. Edward Pettus to Robert Middleton, merchant, London. His last was of 26th January, from Jask. His arrival at Moghistan, the Sultan's residence. Middleton's goods committed to the charge of Thomas Barker, George Pley, and the writer. Connok, Bell, and Tracy gone to Shiraz, the seat of the Khan, to procure a phirmaund for the speedier transport of their goods, being in want of money. Importuned the Sultan for camels according to his promise, who, after a long delay, agreed to their dispatch on their giving him "two clothes." Arrived at Ispahan with two thirds of their goods on 10th of May, without any toll or custom being demanded, though other merchants had to pay. The great value of Ormuz to the Portugals, by report worth more than any toll they have in India, though much impaired to what it was; hopes to see their pride have a fall and that town come to nothing, which is the desire of this people, as they are hated here, being so "perfidious and base lying." Better expectation of the English, who are more courteous to the common people and more respectful to the great ones. Welcomed by the people with presents of fruits and victuals. Are told that everything they ask of the King, in reason, will be granted. Reasons why they have not yet made any sales. Have written to the factories at Bantam and Surat what goods will yield most profit; sends list. His opinion of William Robbins, a jeweller, in great favour with the King and principal noblemen of Ispahan. Intelligence from Barker that the Spanish Ambassador, Don Garza de Silva, had come into the Persian dominions with great presents for the King, on purpose to supplant the English. Hopes Connok will frustrate the Ambassador's designs. Wishes to send by the first ships 50 or 60 bales of silk for England. It is needless to discourse on the plots of the Portuguese to supplant them at Jask. [Three and a quarter pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 497.] away." Wishes Middleton to know that his coming to Ispahan was not owing to misdemeanour. Barker is a turbulent and proud fellow, and hath so overweening a conceit of himself, that at Surat they were right glad to be rid of him. Has heard that my Lord (Sir Thos. Roe) is much offended that this employment goeth forward, but that he is in great hope this year to have commission from the King and the Company to this great Sophy Ambassador, and to procure Barker his cape merchant. Thinks Connok will effect his business to the Company's credit and content, and during his time here, save the charges of an ambassador; considers him a worthy and sufficient gentleman, but much wronged by Barker, who leaves nothing unattempted to frustrate his designs. At Lar, Barker loitered ten days to visit the Sultan of that place. Dispute between Pley and Barker. Writes these lines apart, wishing no one to see them but Middleton. [*Two pages. 94. Lucas Antheuniss and Thomas Brockedon to William Nicolls, resident in Acheen. Understand by his letter the establishing of the factory at Acheen. Have sent copy of letter to Surat, to make provision from thence of cloths and steel. Inconvenience of the scarcity of the capital brought out by the fleet under General Joseph. The Globe has been sent this year from Surat, richly laden. Lost passage, in December, for Bantam. Have written to Surat that a ship of the new fleet, appointed for Acheen, might touch at Masulipatam, to take in goods provided for Bantam, the Moluccas, and other southern places. Arrival of the Solomon and the Osiander from Bantam; the disorders caused by the master's insolence and piracy after Gourney's decease reformed. The Osiander they sent for Ceylon, to meet the fleet coming from Surat with letters for General Pepwell, successor to General Joseph, slain in fight. Owing to the winds, obliged to put in at Pettapoli, where is a factory. Laded the Charles for Bantam, about eighteen leagues from Masulipatam, so that the General, with the James and Charles, arrived at Masulipatam in safety 27th April, and as the Unicorn was appointed for Priaman and Tecoe, ordered the Osiander to go to Acheen, but without any capital of importance as means were wanted. The James hath no capital at all in her, and Bantam little provision. Have laden the ships with steel as it gives good profit. Advise him to lade the ships with as much pepper as he can procure, and to send them to Bantam in good time. Masulipatam and Pettapoli are settled with merchants. The Charles and James departed from hence the 13th of June. Three Dutch ships have been to Masulipatam this year. Fear the ship will not recover Sumatra, and so arrive late with her goods and money for Bantam. The Dutch have received a great capital with a new fleet, and will endeavour to engross all for themselves. They remain at Masulipatam, unprovided with goods and money. If the Company do not better provide their ships with ready money, their business will decline. A new factory is settled in Persia, where a great quantity of cloth and lead is sent. [Two pages and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 499.]

96. Robt. Johnson to Lucas Antheuniss at Siam, or John Browne at Patani. The bad treatment that Christopher Saker met with from the King of Endregery [Indraghiri,] when applied to for payment of his pepper, the dispatching to his assistance George Rix, and the loss of Saker's life and the Company's goods, the King being continually aggravated thereto by the Portugals. Death of Rix soon afterwards from sickness. On receipt of the news of their death, Johnson sent another Englishman and five blacks. The King would have had him killed. He was saved after being bound four hours to the same tree where Saker died, though the King seized the blacks and all the merchandise and provisions of the prow, not leaving the Englishman even a pair of linen breeches to cover his nakedness. Desires all English to use the like kindness to those at Indraghiri. Pepper is dear and cloth cheap; has not heard from Bantam for 8 months, "only what the lying Flemings have brought." Daily expects a ship, for he is out of all sorts of cloth. [One page. O.C. Vol. V. No. 501.]

97. Edw. Connok, George Pley, Edw. Pettus, Will. Tracy, to Thos. Kerridge, agent at Surat. Send copies of their letters of the 15th ult. by their trusty servant Mahomet, laying open their proceedings hitherto touching their hopeful and beneficial plantation. Beg him to send 20 chests of English and Indian commodities, including vermilion and quicksilver, which will yield good profit. Again urge the necessity of sending the whole fleet hither; as it is certain that those ships that came to conduct the Spanish Ambassador to Ormuz, and formerly to seek the James, all remain to prevent the English ships coming to these parts. Their adversaries are as eager against the Company's plantation here, as last year they were against their trade at Surat. One ship coming will endanger all, but the whole fleet will daunt their enemies. Wished to barter their cloth and quicksilver with the King's treasurer for silk, but he came short in the price demanded. Will by the next fleet return the proceeds of their whole "cavidall" in silks. Have dispatched the presents for the King and his officers. Connok ready to take his journey. Weights, measures, and coins used in the Persian Kingdom. Request the bearer may be returned by the ships, for his services are most valuable. "Indorsed: Sent by an express messenger with copies of a latter despatch sent by way of Candahar under the 15th of May." [One page. O.C. Vol. V., No. 502.]

98. George Pley to his cousin Thos. Kerridge, agent at Surat. His last of the 15 ult. touched upon the cause of his detention at Moghistan, and their good hopes of a beneficial trade. Reiterates his complaints of Barker's conduct towards him. Connok ready to take his journey towards the King. They hope by this year's fleet to return the proceeds of their sales in silk. Steele's assurances of kindness to William Robbins, who accompanies Connok for his better help in his journey to the King, the King having previously taken notice of Robbins. [*One page. O.C. 99. George Jackson to Capt. George Barkeley, President at Bantam. His last letter was of the 9th ult., by the Attendance by [Thos.] Spurway, who departed hence the 19th ult., with goods. Arrival of a Spanish frigate from the Moluccas with news that 12 Holland ships lay before the Manillas, and that Sig. Giocomino, the Spanish governor, had left Ternate for the Manillas with 10 galleons, 8 galleys, and 6 frigates to encounter the Hollanders, and that the people of the Moluccas, who expected the English ships this year, were almost famished for want of food. The Portuguese and Spanish merchants protest that if the English bring them rice to Ternate, they shall have cloves to their hearts' content, and they desire their friendship, saying that the Vice-King of Goa hath orders from King Philip to make peace with the English. Arrival of a Java junk from Amboyna, with report that the Hollanders had brought to Amboyna 40 or 50 Englishmen from Neira Castle and kept them in irons, and allowed them but one cake of bread a day per man, and that they were reduced to skin and bones. The Hollanders say they would with one ship alone fight 10 English ships, "giving the English the worst language they could." The factor now making up his accounts with John West's help. Will procure rice by the coming of the next ships, and that because here is neither goods nor money, for the Macassars will trust no man. Ball and Coppindall are with Spurway. [*One page. 100. Kellum Throgmorton to Capt. Barkeley. Arrival of a Java junk from Banda with report of the unkind usage of the Flemings to the English, some of whom are dead for want of food, and so clogged with irons, both hands, feet, and neck, that they cannot stir. These Flemings brag to the "Javas," that if they have but one ship they can take 10 English ships, and other base speeches impossible to write. The King hath promised 100 "quoynes" of rice, more he cannot rely upon. With ready money he could no doubt procure rice. If the ships do not bring rice from Java, will have to pay a high price here for it; there is a place within two days sail which yields good store. [One and a half pages. O.C. Vol. V., No. 505.]

101. George Cokayne to President Ball. Since he parted from Ball in Maccassar, the writer has heard nothing concerning this factory. Has already written what is most fitting for supplies from Bantam, and sent an abstract of the account, with all the diamonds that are bought. Trade is now "hugger mugger among the Chinese caterpillars," for they handle all, make price with the Landaks as they please, and bring the stones to us at the price they please. The Landak people prevented from trading with the Company's people, for it is to the advantage of the Chinese that the English be kept from trading with the Landaks themselves. If the English will pay annually a certain custom to the Queen, then they may trade without the interference of the Chinese and Malays. Advises this plan to be adopted, if the Company wish to have any profitable trade in this country. Approves of Courthope taking this charge. Earnestly intreated Cassarian David to take Cokayne's place, who refused. Has begged Hugh Greete to accompany David, for he hath such humours, neither dog nor cat can live by him, much less the poor country people; in plain terms it had been better for the Company if they had doubled his wages to stay at home. Delivered the diamonds to David, to be opened in the presence of all the merchants at Bantam, and then to know if they agreed in weight and number as Greete sealed them. The cloth is so bad that it will not sell at the rates demanded. For the factory to make profits it must be well stocked with money and cloth and the stones that are bought taken away every six months. If Courthope does not come before August he expects David with a good stock, and begs then to be released from this place. Necessity of coming to some good conclusion with the Queen and Governor regarding the trade being free. If he gives the Chinaman money or goods they are never wholly returned as they should be. [Four pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 506.]

102. Capt. Ralph Coppindall to George Ball, President in Jacatra. The builders dare not continue their work without the Pengran's express command. His interview with the Pengran on the subject. The French have offered for sale three minions of about 13 cwt., which the Pengran wishes to buy, but objects to the price, 600 ryals. The Pengran as much displeased with Ball's going to Jacatra as with the erection of "this building." The China junk not yet gone nor anything seen whereby Keevees' departure may be suspected. The French Cape merchant arrived from Japara the 15th inst., with news that the Dutch are almost off their hinges at Japara, and that a ship coming from Banda refused any information as it was against their oaths to publish their masters' affairs to strangers; two other ships from the Moluccas he also encountered. Should be sorry if the King of Jacatra's hard conditions should force Ball to break off with him, for then "this unsatiable dogge of hell" would never cease feeding on Ball and his successors. Incloses, account of strong waters laden for the account of the Honourable Company in the James, Alex. Childe master. [Two pages and a half. O. C. Vol. V. No. 509.]

105. Richard Wickham to Sir Thomas Smythe. In his last he touched upon the death of the Emperor Ogusho Same the 17th of April 1616, leaving his son Shongo Same his successor in the Empire ; the banishment and persecution of the Jesuits and other Japan Christians ; the taking away from the English, and the Hollanders' their first privileges granted by the Emperor, and confining their trade to Firando, and Nangasaki ; their expectation of the arrival of General Keeling at Japan, to recover their old privileges ; their hopes of trade with Cochin China the next year and with China hereafter ; and his petition for increase of salary. Owing to the sickness of John Totten, captain of the Advice, Wickham undertook the command of the ship to Bantam, where he arrived the 11th March to negotiate on the state of trade in Japan, Siam, and Cochin China. George Barkeley, chief agent, is dead, and is succeeded by George Ball, a man of the best merit. Begs leave to return home as he is induced to think he has many undeserved enemies, for after ten years service he still remains sentenced to the thralldom of General Saris. Complaints against him. The Hollanders have this year covered all the seas from the Red Sea to the coast of China, spoiling and robbing all nations in the name and under the colour of the English. If they be suffered to go on as they have begun the English trade will be overthrown in these parts ; already they have taken the Swan, a very warlike ship, in which Sir Sophony Cozucke was slain " with a great shot." They have sent a fleet for the straits of Malacca, and to make spoil at Cape Comorin, also 12 tall ships under Adml. John Peterson to rob all the Chinese ships that go to Manilla this year, though they give out they are sent to take Manilla, which Wickham takes will be too hot for them, as that city is much fortified since Admiral Wittres (?) attack was overthrown by Don John de Silva. Two great ships and a pinnace are gone for the coast of China and Japan, chiefly to intercept the Portuguese mail ship, and to rob the Chinese ships. Sends presents to his mother. 106. Geo. Ball, President at Bantam, to Rich. Cocks at Firando. Complains that he is most extreme hot in passion and most miserable cold in reason, "but as your choler moves me not, so your careless regard of my love wrongs me not." In reference to his behaviour to Tempest Peacocke, and Capt. Saris, "your own perverseness lies in the way, blinding your understanding that you neither know how to make choice of a friend nor to use men as men are * * * It does therefore behove you to be more advised in your choice; the syren's song is most sweet yet withal most pernicious, the scorpion hath a pleasant countenance but withal a sting in his tail." Warns him against sending home imperfect accounts, it were better in the writer's opinion to send none. His letters by the Thomas and the Advice were not so well liked as they would have been had Capt. Jourdain continued still agent, they were said to be copious but not compendious, large, but stuffed with idle and needless matter, ill beseming one of Cocks' place, years, and experience. His hope of "Captain China," the applause of Mr. Sayer, the commendations of his countryman Eaton "and such like stuff" will deceive nobody. The endeavours of the first are had in suspicion; the writer could never find an honest and faithful Chinese. As to Mr. Sayer, he is reported to be a man of neither art, judgment, nor knowledge; and Eaton's commendations had better have been delivered by others. The writer is successor to a troublesome business, not so much in performance of that which is to come as in the mending of what is past. Understanding he is given to history sends him, by Wickham, two books containing the Chronicles of England from Brutt till the Powder Treason, wherein he may see the shire, hundred, and parish where he was born, and in conceipt some of his friends making frolic with Apell. The Hollander's actions "set all men in admiration," they publicly rob all nations; their proceedings at Banda; they say they have the King's letters of marque to take "us" if "we" presume to go eastward of the Celebes, but is assured they lie. 108. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Winwood. One Spilbergh, of Zealand, lately returned with two ships laden to the value of two millions and a half of florins from the East Indies, this being his third voyage. He came through the Straits of Magellan and has brought with him one Le Maire, not of the East India Company, son of a wealthy merchant of North Holland, who arrived in the East Indies with two ships three months before Spilbergh. Le Maire pretends to have discovered a new passage into the South Sea, between 60 and 70 degrees beyond the Straits of Magellan in the height of 55 degrees and a few minutes, the passage being seven Dutch miles in breadth and no more in length, and which may be sailed through in one day, whereas it takes from three weeks to a month to sail through the Straits of Magellan. Importance of the discovery if true ; it is questioned by this East India Company, who have arrested Le Maire's ship in the East Indies for breach of their privilege. Le Maire makes Terra del Fuego an island and not a continent ; he has given names to two other islands, the States and Barneveldt. Proposal of some merchants to form a West India Company with a stock of three millions of florins. The Spanish Armada at the Manillas utterly defeated by the Dutch East Indies fleet. Spilbergh left in November last ten men-of-war, well provided at Bantam and ready to set sail for this purpose. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

109. Carleton to Sir Thos. Lake. Defeat of the Spanish fleet in the Manillas by the Hollanders. Spilbergh's return from the East Indies with two rich ships. Relation of a discovery of a passage into Mare Pacificum by one Le Maire, of North Holland, and his finding that to be sea beyond Terra del Fuego which the globes and maps decipher for terra firma. Of this, by reason of the rarity, we must expect more assurance, though it be received here as truth. In confidence of these good successes, they are in treaty about a company for the West Indies, and there are merchants which undertake at first for a stock of three millions of florins. 112. Matthew Slade to Carleton. Concerning Le Maire's discovery ; he has, with much ado, learnt that it is a far better passage than the former, that it may be sailed through in less than one day, and that it lieth in the heighth of 55 degrees and a few minutes. They say that having passed through it, they were driven by contrary winds in Mari Pacifico southwards to 57 $\frac{1}{2}$ degrees, but that the Strait begins and ends in 55 degrees and a little more. Whether it be altogether true is greatly doubted. The Dutch East India Company, who have arrested the ship in India for invading their privileges of the Magellan straits, plead that it is a thing feigned to delude them. Arguments of those very skilful in navigation. They will not communicate their journal because of their controversy with the Company ; and seek to obtain the sole privilege of using the passage for certain years. - July 14. 114. Consultation in the Factory of Tecoe. The first and second merchants at Tecoe, [John] Millward and Robert Everard, having died, and Patteson been appointed to Bantam, it was thought fit however, that he should remain principal at Tecoe, as he had been instituted by Capt. Keeling. And Geo. Pybourne, through sickness, desiring to return home, Lewis Smyth is to succeed him. Signed by Wm. Methwold, Henry Patteson, Lewis Smyth, Peter Nedham, Edward Gilman. On the 20th of August, in presence of the above written, Richard Harryes, purser's mate of the Unicorn, was appointed to assist Patteson. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 513.]
- July 21. The Hague. 115. Carleton to Sec. Winwood. Would gladly be made acquainted with the complaints of the English merchants in the East Indies, if he be furnished with some particulars, to the end he may answer these men here, who charge the English merchants with furnishing the Spaniards and Portugals with powder and munition, besides other courses tending to the prejudice of both for the present and ruin for the future. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]
- July 24. Jacatra. 116. Nicholas Ufflete to President Ball. Affray with the Flemings and some of the English; the armourer struck down by fourteen Flemings and his left arm nearly cut off. Arrival of the King of Jacatra, also of the Thomas; hearing the dispute, the King sent for the president of the Flemings and for the writer, who not being able to go sent Edward Longe; the King expressed his sorrow for what had been done before his arrival and said the Flemings should know that he was King of Jacatra, that he would have no wars, and with loving speeches promised that he would protect the English. The Flemings report that their general in the Moluccas is dead, that seven ships were sent to assault Pooloroon but could not effect it, and that in ten days three ships will arrive from the Moluccas in which will be 30 of the Swan's company. Wishes to know whether he should receive the men if they are offered to him. The Sabunder told him that the King says he will take 800 ryals per annum, and give the ground gratis. [*One page. 119. Henry Patteson to [President George Ball at Bantam.] His last was by a China junk, wherein went the ambassador from the King of Acheen to the King of Japara. Has received a letter from Barkeley, desiring Patteson to repair to Bantam and to deliver up his place after Barkeley's return from Acheen. On the 29th of May the Unicorn, Vice Admiral of General Joseph's fleet, arrived in the road of Tecoe. William Methwold, Cape merchant, refers him to their letters for news of their successful voyage to Surat; the untimely death of General Joseph; establishing a factory in Persia, and removing the factory from Calicut. The Rose left for Acheen on 16th May. The Unicorn to depart on the 20th of September. There is abundance of pepper to sell so long as cloth is to be had, and they might have all of it if they had the means. Delivered to Millward and Robert Everard all the remainders of goods in the writer's hands, previous to his leaving for Bantam. Subsequent death of Everard at Tecoe on the 28th of June; he is succeeded by Polhill. Arrival of the Speedwell on the 5th of July. Thanks for the two hogsheads of rack; begs a continuance of his friendship, and that he will not give ear to idle reports of the writer's disloyalty or indiscretion. Trade could not by any means be procured for the space of six weeks after the arrival of the ships, though the King of Acheen's letter to General Keeling was showed, propounding for greater bribes than formerly, but which Milward, and the writer, could not "condescend" to. Afterwards a letter came from the King of Acheen, confirming his former letter to General Keeling, for the English to have trade in Tecoe for one year, and commanding all his officers to let them have it without interruption. All the great men afterwards came and received their presents and then published that the English had free trade. Illness and death of John Millward the 13th July. Consultation with Patteson. The writer appointed chief factor. Hopes General Pepwell will very shortly supply part of his wants in his factory. This ship has divers goods, bought at Ahmedabad and Cambaya, intended for Bantam, which will sell at Tecoe. Pepper laden in the Unicorn. Goods which Patteson thinks are vendible at Tecoe and on the coast. Has amply certified Nicolls by sundry letters to Acheen, of all the wrong done to the English by these great men, and given advice how to proceed with the King for redress. Dearnness of lamp oil, has sent as much as he can provide. More junks daily expected from Bantam. Hopes the Charles is with him at Bantam. Cannot perfect Millward's inventory yet; he died intestate and his books were out of order; remarks on the state of his affairs. Death of Mr. Bell, surgeon of the Unicorn. The Orankayas persist in their old manner of demanding bribes; must give them content, otherwise nothing can be effected. Complains of William Polhill, second merchant in the Unicorn, for trying to make enmity between man and man. Lead and iron will sell after the ship's departure. Gold thread of China and Chinese taffeta and satins of all colors, in much request. Has appointed Lewis Smyth, third merchant in the Unicorn, to succeed George Pybourne, and Edward Gilman, Smyth's successor. [Six pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 517.]

122. Edw. Connok, Wm. Tracy, and Wm. Robins to the East India Company. Refer to their letter of 2nd June last. Have the King's favour and protection in this despatch, and now send open and free copies of what they durst before only send "in character." Complain of a certain Augustine friar, agent for the King of Spain at this Court, who having departed secretly from Ispahan arrived two days before Connok and by his "large lies" attempted their dismission, protesting to the King that Connok was not sent by the King of England, that the letter Connok had to deliver was forged by himself; that the presents they had to give were not sent by the English King, and other accusations which, the friar confessed, proceeded from Thos. Barker resident in Shiraz whose immodest and vile carriage and neglect they complain of. Ten days after his arrival, Connok had an audience of the King, which the friar attended, according to Connok's desire. In presence of the whole court the King took his Majesty's letter, put it to his mouth, then on his head, examined the manner of the sealing of it, and then opened it "satisfied that it was a true letter" and demanded what his Majesty chiefly required. Connok answered, "amity, trade, and commerce between the two kings and their subjects, which the King of Persia's Ambassador Sir (Anthony) Sherley had formerly solicited." The friar "proposed" the damage and ruin that would ensue to the Spanish trade at Ormuz "the storehouse of this empire" "if the King accepted us," when the English at Jask might intercept the Spanish ships passing to and from Ormuz. The King asked if the Kings of England and Spain were not at peace, which the friar acknowledged but openly taxed the English with destroying a ship of great wealth and other "immodest proceedings." Connock assured the King that the Portugals commenced by attacking the English ships whilst unloading in the ports of the Mogul; this the friar could not deny. Spoke of the privileges which had been granted to the English by the Mogul and of the advantages of a treaty of amity between the King and his Majesty. The King said the English had right on their part, and after further discourse made use of these words in Italian to the friar, "padre, "padre," and then in his own language, "let him split in ten thousand pieces that tells me lies." The King then called for wine, and in a large bowl drank his Majesty's health upon his knee, saying that Connok was welcome, that the King of England should be his elder brother, that "his friendship he did dearly esteem and tender, that he would grant us Jask or any other port we would require and such freedom in every respect as in his honour he might grant, and all this in the Spanish agent's presence to whom he hath neither afforded good word nor countenance from that to this hour, but hath graced me with four several presents of fowl and venison which he hath at no time accustomed "to any." The presents and carriages arrived three days since by camel under the charge of W. Tracy. Connok presented them yesterday to the King, in the presence of the friar, the King himself wishing the Spanish agent to witness the honour done to Connok. The King again drank his Majesty's health, discoursed on his Majesty's disposition, his greatness and strength both by sea and land; "he openly told his lords the English were a people free from lying or deceit, but that the Portugals had any time these 20 years told him not one true word." The King's extraordinary expression of friendship and affection, "that in faith I admired it." The King has promised Connok as large capitulations as in honour he may grant, and 1,000, 2,000, or 3,000 bales of silk at as reasonable prices as they are daily sold for in Ispahan. No customs nor other charge worth speaking of paid by the English, so that the silk can be put aboard the ships at Jask, free of all charge, at 6s. or 6s. 6d. the English pound of 16 ounces. Will ship by the expected fleet 500 bales of raw silk; the King willing to take satisfaction in tin, cloth, sugar, spices, and such like commodities. How Connok proposes to manage this business. It is material for the Company to send two small ships that do not draw above 12 feet of water, to prevent the landing of their goods being intercepted; also, six or more pieces of ordnance with carriages and munition fitting to fortify at Jask,—the fortification to remain in the Persians' command; and always a powerful fleet. "The wealth which you are to carry hence is great, and will counterwail the charge." The Portugal is much "stirred at this your plantation," and what preparations they can make against it they will. Entreat the Company chiefly to remember that their fleets require to be commanded by men of much valour and discretion, for whom they cannot pay too dearly. Hope this letter will be received in December next, [N.B.—It was not received until the May following,] when their fleet may be nearly dispatched. Desire certain instructions to be then sent, and a yearly quantity of at least 500 tons of spices to the writer in Persia. All the King has promised he has sworn on the word of a prince, and by the sepulchres of his noble progenitors to perform. Connok has dealt plainly with "this wise Prince," and told him why it would be three or four years before the English can import any great amount of silk, the whole quantity made in these kingdoms, amounting to full one million sterling at 6s. the 16 ounces English, Connok believes may be taken by the English and dispersed throughout Christendom. Contrasts the benefit of such a trade to the trade the Company seek, with great hazard and little benefit, in the remote island of Japan. Within six days Connok, having the capitulation signed, will depart towards Ispahan, where he will have the 500 bales of silk dispatched away in time for the October fleet. Desires a double commission,—one from his Majesty, authorizing Connok his agent, the other from the Company, appointing him chief factor or supervisor in their affairs of trade, as he has already requested. The Company must consider that the Flemings are as able to undertake these things as the English, and they must therefore be resolute in their determinations. From Turkey the Company have need of no commodities, except gauls and cotton wools; the Venetian, French, and Hollanders will gladly be their merchants, buy of them, and furnish the Turk with English commodities to the Company's content. On Connok's return to Aleppo, will dispatch Wm. Wilson with an answer from this King to his Majesty's letter. Request supply of money by the next fleet; if but fifty or sixty thousand ryals of eight it will be a great satisfaction to this Prince. List of "necessaries" which the King desires by the next fleet, among them, four looking-glasses of the fairest; a "caroach," not a coach, with furniture and a coachman; a suit of armour; two young and fierce mastiffs; and above all, as many little dogs, both plain (smooth) and rough-haired, as can be sent: "his women, it seems, do aim at this commodity." Aug. 4. 123. Edw. Connok to L. Chapman, Consul at Aleppo. Copy of his previous letter of 2 June, from Ispahan, [see Inclosure No. 91. i.)

 From the Persian Army and Court. Begs him to address the packet delivered to him by the bearer to the Honourable Company, and to send it with all speed to England by an English servant of his own, by way of Marseilles or Holland, and from thence by an express messenger, but not in any case by way of Constantinople, as the packet is of the highest importance. Requests the Arabs written for may be sent to him. [*One page and a quarter. Indorsed, "Received in Aleppo the 12 October. Returned him answer forthwith, the 13 by the self same party. O. Aug. 5. 124. Connok to the East India Company. To send by every fleet a fitting quantity of sheet lead, canvas, and solder, to preserve the silk from rotting; the cloth packed lead is well preserved; otherwise it would quite decay. Sends list of additional toys required by the Persian King; some choice fighting cocks and hens of like choice breed; turkey cocks and hens; for peacocks the King has caused Connok to write to India, where there are plenty; "neither the dog nor turkeys he never saw,—this ccountry affordeth none;" a dog and a bitch "that draw dry foot,—these with the little womens' curs he chiefly desires of anything you can send him." Will, upon receipt of the Company's commands, meet their ships at Jask with two or three thousand bael of silk, and will yearly continue to do so if they remember to order, by their next fleet to Bantam, that at least 500, yea, if it were a 1,000 tons of spices of each sort, sorted, be yearly sent to him. This empire will consume great quantities of pepper, and within 25 per cent. equal to England; 100 tons of tin will also sell yearly, and cloth to good content. [*One page and a half. Jacatra.

125. [N. Uffete] to President Ball, at Bantam. Has received his of 29 July with 300 ryals. Prices of cloves at Jacatra. Has been, according to Ball's order, with the King, and finds him constant in nothing but inconstancy, proud above all former expectations, scornful, as not caring for their friendship. The King demands for the ground "because he will be no more troubled" 1,500 ryals and 800 ryals per annum, or if the ground is not bought 1,500 ryals per annum, or else they may take their course and depart. The Sabundar ashamed of the King's proceedings. Arrival of a great Flemish ship, from Banda, with news that 12 of their great ships went to seek the Spanish Manilla fleet; fight between the two fleets; great loss of the Flemings, between five and six hundred men, three ships burnt and sunk, three taken, three much torn and battered, and three run away; one escaped to Japara with a China junk laden with silk. Proceedings of the Dutch general in his voyage to Moluccas; at Pooloroon they purpose to starve out or take the English there. [One page and a half. O. C., Vol. V., No. 522.]

126. Fras. Cottington to Sir Dudley Carleton. One of the caracks that went from Lisbon to the East Indies last March twelvemonth, was met with in August last by some ships of the English East India Company, and fired or sunk, or both, of which they here complain much. Another carack richly laden has arrived at Terceiras and thither certain ships of war are sent, to secure her from pirates. [Extract from Correspondence Spain.]

From aboard the Peppercorn,

127. Thos. Mitford to the East India Company. The Globe and Peppercorn within 350 leagues of England, the one from Surat, the other from Bantam, with the loss of seven men, since their departure from India. Concerning the progress of the Company's affairs in India and the death of Capt. Joseph in a fight with a Portugal carack. Since Capt. Keeling's fleet left Surat in February 1616, Sir Thos. Roe has continued at the Indian Court in good esteem and credit with the Emperor, the English having the privilege of free trade throughout the Empire. Thos. Keridge remains chief at Surat with about 15,000*l.* in ready money, debts, and goods which no doubt will procure lading of indigo for a ship of 500 tons. The strength of the Portugals sorely shaken the last two years, both by the English, the Flemings, and the King of Acheen's force. Divers Portugal vessels taken by Capt. Keeling, with part of the goods of which, a factory has been settled at Calicut, and Geo. Wolmer and Peter Nedham left factors, but small hope of any beneficial trade there, the country vending little or no English commodities, and the goods it affords, to be had at more easy rates in other parts of India. Advice from the factory at Masulipatam. The Solomon detained there all last year, sheathing. Geo. Chauncey, Ralph Preston, and Hump. Elkington dead. The Thomasin cast away coming from the Moluccas, laden with nutmegs and mace, but the most part of her goods and men saved. Report by a Holland ship at Surat of the loss of the Samaritan. No great sales of English commodities effected in the absence of the fleet, and small store of money left by Capt. Keeling to make investments with; all the factories lay idle except Ahmedabad, nevertheless merchants were sent from Surat to discover the Indian country and commodities adjoining the Portugal frontier, to gain experience against the coming of the fleet. Arrival of Capt. Joseph's fleet at Surat, Sept. 1616; account of a fight with a Portugal carack, in which Capt. Joseph and nine men were slain and the carack ran ashore and burnt. Capt. Pepwell acknowledged commander of the fleet. Upon consultation a voyage to Persia was generally approved, though dissuaded by the Lord Ambassador; the James, appointed to make the voyage, left Swally, 8 Feb. 1616, for Jask where various commodities, both English and Indian, were landed for trial, and five factors left there; viz., Edw. Connok, chief, Thos. Barker, Geo. Pley, Edw. Pettus, Wm. Bell, and Wm. Tracy. The James returned to Swally in November 1616, with letters of advice signifying the kind usage they had received from the Persian government in those parts, a relation of their proceedings at Moghistan, and the good hopes of a beneficial trade. Left Surat March 1617, having appointed the Charles and James for Masulipatam, the Unicorn for Sumatra, and the Globe for England, laden with indigo and other Indian commodities. Account of the voyage home; met the Peppercorn, commanded by Capt. Harris, who reported the casting away of the Hector, the homeward voyage of the Dragon, Clove, and Expedition under Capt. Keeling. On 16 May arrived at Saldanha; found Capt. Newport with the Lion ready to sail for Bantam, he having missed his consort, the Hound, at sea. Refusal of Nath. Martin, master of the Globe, to keep the Peppercorn in company, the latter vessel being very leaky and divers of the company sick; his accusations against Capt. Harris and offensive conduct to Gourdon of the Hound, and the writer. The sufficiency of John Curtis called in question, and Henry Rickman appointed to pilot the Peppercorn for England, but was put into the Globe by Capt. Pepwell for that purpose. Variances among the commanders about their places; from extraordinary foul language they were ready to fall to sharp blows had not Capt. Harris given way. Thinks the place of every prime servant should be expressly named in the Company's commission "as they shall after take place" otherwise there will be continual heartburnings and discontents fall out among them. Missed the island of St. Helena by at least 140 leagues through parting with their chief mariner, Rickman. Factions aboard the Globe; seizure of a Portugal vessel to the north of the Western Islands, and disputes in consequence. Martin's violent conduct to the writer. Has sought by all means to persuade Capt. Harris to give the Portugal satisfaction for Martin's "barbarous dealings." [Six pages. Macassar.

128. K. Throgmorton to George Ball, at Bantam. Arrival of Stacie from Pooloroon on the 6th inst., whose ship was cast away on the coast of Booton with a cargo of spices, but the men all saved; the King of Booton gave them a prow to come to Macassar. Thirty Bandanese left behind at Pooloroon, who are to receive the money for spices delivered to Courthope, but thinks they will be forced to go to Bantam, for there is not money enough at Macassar to provide such necessaries as Spurway gave order for. Ball will receive by the bearer a journal of the state of the Macassar factory; it being the first book that the writer ever kept; desires his help if there be anything false. The cloth short [in measure]; cannot account for it except it be stolen, as nobody but himself and Thos. Fowle have had the sale of it. Complains of men of the Swan and Defence putting up some loose goods in the warehouse to go for Banda. Hopes the next time he is left chief to have a better help under him. Has not acquainted the President with any of this. [Barkeley, the President at Bantam, was dead, but the news had not reached Macassar.] Sends presents to him by Stacie, including "a paradise bird," which he wishes were better; the head is a little broken, but it may be mended. Requests a suit of clothes, with a hat and some necessary things. Incloses,

Two lists specifying the quantities and qualities of the "cloth found short." Names of the men who went in the prow for Bantam, to whom cloth was delivered from the Macassar factory. 1617, Aug. 10. [Indorsed "Rec. 21 Aug. from Macassar. 1617." Three pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 524.]

129. Wm. Withers to President Barkeley at Bantam. Nothing of credit heard from Pooloroon since the departure of the "Tentance" [Attendance] for Bantam until Stacie's arrival. Cannot hear the truth by what means or negligence the cargo of mace was lost. Since Spurway's departure from Macassar every endeavour has been used for the provision of rice against the coming of shipping, but the quantity will not be great by reason of the want of money. Went with Throgmorton to a place called Lambasor, where the Dutch used formerly to buy rice, to see what quantity might be got. The King of Macassar has promised to give them a house when the shipping arrives, and to procure rice at a short warning; price at which it sells. [*One page. 130. John West to President Barkeley at Bantam. Arrival of Stacie in a prow of Booton, and eight Englishmen in one from Banda. The fault of the loss of the mace imputed to Stacie. Cannot learn if any of the Company's goods in the prow that was cast away were saved. The prow from Booton was given by the King of that place, and will at the first opportunity go for Bantam. The King of Tallo [? Tolo] has sent in some rice and promised more, of which there is good store, on the arrival of the ships; prices at which it can be bought, but will not part from it without the money; quantity procured by George Jackson. Price of Macassar and Gehore gold. The Macassar factory very poor, without money or cloth. Little or nothing left at their arrival at Macassar in the Attendance. [*One and half pages. 132. Nic. Ufflete to George Ball at Bantam. Goods which he requests to be furnished with, and the prices at which they will sell. Sends a mast, 24 or 25 yards long, by Thos. Mills. Desires "a prospective glass." The Flemings going forward a pace with a brick wall 18 ft. high and 4 feet thick, and increasing the number of their frigates; they are in hand with three galleys more, and their vainglorious report is to stop our passage for Pooloroon. Is glad to hear the good news of the [arrival of] English shipping out of England. [One page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 527.]

Acheen.

134. [W. Nicolls?] to [President Ball], Bantam. Arrival of the Rose with letters from Millward from Tecoe, importing the many foul abuses offered to the English there. The writer's interview with the King of Acheen concerning the denial of free trade to the English; the grant to General Keeling was only to land the goods from two ships, and the King now requires presents on the ship's arrival for the privilege of trade, or not liking to trade there upon such terms, to depart the place. Arrival of the Osiander from Masulipatam on 5th Aug. Would have joyfully resigned his place if he, the captain of Bantam, had written for him to do so, although the writer sees the English will be wronged much if vivâ voce they cannot expostulate with the King in person. As to the disposal of the lading of the Rose. A Dutch ship arrived with goods taken from 1617.

Guzerat and Dabul, which the King of Acheen has allowed to be sold, although the writer told the King how the Dutch came by them; he answered "that each malefactor must answer for their particular offences." Commodities that will sell at Acheen factory, some to yield cent. per cent. profit. Considerations on the benefit of trade at Acheen, as it may be doubted whether the Surat trade can be maintained with the small force of shipping at present employed by the Company. The commodities at Bantam best suited for Acheen; and those for the factory at Masulipatam. The King has been sick ten months, and is often distracted. The Frenchmen promised to bring the King gold in payment for his pepper, the King not esteeming ryals, although he was told they were current all the world over. Evils of the English factories being badly supplied; "they are still bare in all places." Wishes he had never seen Acheen; the King and people are void of all honesty. Although the writer has given a large present to the King, he will not suffer the Rose to land the little salt that is in her, fearing they should under that colour, trade to the ruin of his own voyage in hand. No one can stay at Acheen that doth not temporize, so the writer, twice a week, sits all day with the King. Has given order for the Rose to touch at Marrowse, an island of Barrowse [Baros], where they may sell their salt to great profit, and buy cocoa-nut oil very cheap; also at Andrapora [Indrapura] they may buy pepper at good rates. Has received out of the Osiander steel and sword blades. [Five pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 529.]

Mandow.

135. Sir Thos. Roe to Wm. Robins. Has received both his letters "by long passages," and thanks him for his honest and effectual care of the trust committed to him. Edward Connok has been sent from Surat as a factor to offer amity to the King of Persia, but unprovided either of instructions, goods, or means fit for such an enterprise, the King must, therefore, not judge of the English by this attempt. A port must be secured, a mart established, and prices agreed upon, as well as the quantities of commodities to be delivered on both sides, so that neither the King nor the English be deceived, "but a stragglng, peddling, uncertain trade will neither profit nor become so great nations." Finds in all his letters that he has a belief that Sir Robert Sherley is a well-wisher to his country and an enemy to the Portugal; would persuade him out of this error; he has not only procured a peace for them, but is engaged to procure the whole traffic for them. It is not good to be blind, nor by blinding others to hope to attain our ends. Would not wish any Englishman to undertake that the English will deal for all the King's goods except in exchange for cloth and English commodities, "nor that we will take Ormuz and beat the Portugal out of those seas; these are vanities." The Company intend a trade, not a war, but in their own defence, and that bravely and honestly. As the Company does not yet know of the enterprise, Roe will spare his opinion until he can do it upon good grounds. Advises him to assist this beginning with all force and yet with all moderation, to cast off all hope of Sir Robt. Sherley advancing them, and trust to themselves and to their own honest ways. Fears it will be the writer's hard fortune to visit him this year by order from his Majesty, and to help to build upon this foundation, for by this fleet Roe expects full commission from England to treat effectually. Shall be in Persia almost as soon as this letter, if not will return to England, and these affairs will no more concern him. [One page and a half. Indorsed, "Sent to Wm. Robins, and he sent it to the Company overland by the way of Aleppo." O. C., Vol. V., No. 530.]

136. Wm. Nicolls to John Millward at Tecoe. Has received his letters by the Rose, and complained against the Polema to the King, who has caused his members to be cut off. As to Millward's hopes of the writer's lading the Rose, reminds him of the broken cargo left by General Keeling, which is not unknown to Patteson. Goods sold and the prices. The King will not grant his letters for the landing of the Rose's salt, pretending that his grant of two years' trade was only to General Keeling. The King is almost a madman, wilful and wild. Perceives that both Millward and Patteson have a strange opinion of him [Nicolls]. Explains his transactions with the King. If they aim at his place, let them bring a warrant from Bantam and he will joyfully surrender it. Would like to return to England with even 10*l.* in his purse. Oil both dear and scarce. Marrowse Island, to the right of Barrowse [Baros], is the place to sell the salt, and oil in abundance may be had there very cheap, as well as at Andrapora, [Indrapura], where there is also good pepper. Is ill of a flux. [Two and a half pages. Indorsed, "A letter sent for Tecoe in the Rose." O. C., Vol. V., No. 531.]

Peppercorn.

137. Capt. Chr. Harris to the East India Company. Account of the voyage since leaving the Straits of Sunda on 28 February. Met with the Globe on 9th May, and earnestly desired Martin to keep near him until they arrived at Saldanha, many of Capt. Harris' company being sick and his ship leaky. Complains of Martin who helped them so grudgingly that they might as well have been without him. The Hound came up with them on 24th May, which supplied the Peppercorn with men and victuals. Detailed account of Martin's proceedings in reference to a small Portugal vessel, which, while courteously giving assistance to Capt. Harris and his company, was fired upon by the Globe by Martin's orders, contrary to Capt. Harris' earnest desires. The Portugal vessel searched, one of the crew tortured to make him confess where the rest of their treasure was, and the women ravished. All this done in spite of Capt. Harris' faithful promises to protect the Portugal vessel. Medford brought on board the Peppercorn from the Globe very sick, he having been put in irons for publicly protesting against the proceedings of the master of the Globe against the Portugals. Subsequent endeavours of Martin, "finding the Portugal ship not answerable to his expectation" to give satisfaction, but the Portugals protested they would have the best remedy the laws of England would afford. Has landed Thos. Mitford for the speedy delivery of this letter. The

139. Fras. Cottington to Carleton. Two caracks have arrived at the Terceiras from the East Indies; in one is Sir Robert Sherley and his wife on an embassy from the Persian to the King of Spain. Thirteen ships of war have left Lisbon for wafting and securing the caracks; doubts whether they will succeed considering the multitude and strength of the Turkish men-of-war now on these coasts. 140. Richard Pitt to John Browne at Patani. Is sorry to hear of the death of Saker with the loss of the Company's goods. Death of Johnson on 12th August. His own sickness. Fall in the price of hides. The factory has neither money nor goods, which is a shame for a place like Siam, and they have no encouragement or hope of supply this year. [One page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 534.]

If the Holland ships had not come in, the silk would have sold well; now it is best to keep it until next year. Requests him to buy two saddles and furniture which are to be sent to Siam, two silver salt cellars, and six forks and spoons. [Three quarters of a page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 536.]

Sept. 19-30.

143. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letters brought from the French ships by Capt. Harris, entrusted to Mr. Leate, to be delivered. Report of Capt. Harris that the Dutch forcibly detained 20 Dutchmen from the two French ships, but there was not one Englishman aboard. Discussion on the receipt of a letter from the Lord Admiral to the Governor, concerning the private trade of Capt. Harris; committee appointed to examine the cause between Capt. Harris and [Nat.] Martyn, and report to the court for the Lord Admiral's information. Desire of the Caldæan to have 2,436 ryals "made over for France." Request of Richard Baskervyle, Thomas Jennings, and Richard Leigh, contractors for the cinnamon. Letter read from Richard Cocks, from Japan, of 1 Jan. 1617, [see ante, No. 1,] that cloths, lead, and tin are in great request there, and that good store of silver may be had from thence for goods from Bantam. China silk, Siam wood, and other commodities named. Petition of Mr. Goslinge, desiring to "put off a fair instrument in nature of a cabinet, very rich in show, set with rich stones and full of strange inventions and devices," refused; "being found insupportable by the bulkiness thereof." Request of Capt. Best to increase the allowance of 6s. per ryal for goods sold to the Company by Thomas Hounsell, deceased. Wages of Morgan Davies. Petition by the "rulers of the porters in London," that only four men be employed within the city; opposed by Robert Pore, one of the Company's porters. Daniel Turnor entertained a factor. Pattern of "the brass shivers" made in Japan, being supposed to be dross and the scum of the silver, to be tried.

Sept. 23.—Appointment of Ellam to regulate the prices of carpets from Surat, "of a coarser rate than the Persian carpets." The sailors of the Globe and Peppercorn to be examined touching the embezzlement of goods aboard. Discussion on the draught of an order touching moneys required of Sir Harris Middleton and Capt. David Middleton, late husband of Mrs. Cannon, as it is uncertain whether Capt. Middleton be dead or living. Sailors allowed to bring home in their own chests all commodities except calicoes, spices, and indigo, for their own advantage. A tenement to be built upon the Company's waste land at Deptford. Elias Wood, late purser of the Clove, and Joshua Bainbridge, late purser of the Expedition, to be re-employed as pursers. Resolution to sell the Jambi pepper at 26*d.*, the Bantam pepper at 25*d.*, and as many other commodities as may be. Request of Mr. Leske, the preacher, to have his goods delivered to him free of freight; some condemned him as worthy of no kindness, seeing he was, as it is said, sent home as a malefactor; others supposed he was wronged because of his severe reprehension of sin in others who sought to injure him "by putting a trick upon him by a wench at the English house;" resolved in respect of his coat to deal kindly with him and leave it to the Governor to remit the freight as a favour. Wages of Joseph Salbanke; his desire to write 200*l.* in the last joint stock, referred. Petition of John Curtis, master of the Peppercorn, "craving favour" for his goods brought home, referred, as it was conceived a great wrong to bring such a quantity of spices home, contrary to his bond. Committee appointed to frame proceedings for commissions, letters, number of ships, men, provisions, and the like for the next year's fleet. Committee to speak with Slanye, respecting the purchase of six or seven tons of elephants' teeth.

Sept. 23.—Minutes of a General Court. Those of the generality absent to be fined 12*d.* each. Resolutions concerning the sale of the spices and other goods brought home by the Globe and Peppercorn. 250*l.* of Luke Walthall in the first joint stock “put to sale,” adjudged to Robert Delean, he bidding 212*l.* per cent. for the same; also 40*l.* belonging to Rich. Basse, sold to Wm. Prestley for 85*l.*; 300*l.* of John Wightman to Rowland Backhouse, for 218*l.* per cent.; 400*l.* of Anna Walthall, half to [Hugh] Hamersley for 210*l.* per cent., and half to Robt. Delean for 210*l.* 10*s.* per cent.; 400*l.* of Edw. Dods-worth, half to Rowland Backhouse for 210*l.* 10*s.*, and half to [John] Bancks for 210*l.* per cent.; and 400*l.* of John Walthall, half to Rich. Venne, and half to Wm. Cockes for 210*l.* per cent. each; and 200*l.* to Arthur Robinson. Sale of commodities with names of purchasers and the prices.

Sept. 25.—In the case of the “rulers” of the porters, Robert Pore is enjoined to submit. Demand of Barrett referred. Difference between Martyn and the “Caldæan,” referred. Consideration of the number of ships to be employed in the next fleet. To be at Bantam to command the factories in the Indies, and to examine, establish, and dissolve factories as there may be occasion in the next fleet, their tonnage, the places they should go to, and the stock they should carry; some of opinion to send eight ships,—two to Surat and six to Bantam, one from Surat to go to Acheen and Bantam; those from Bantam to go to the Moluccas and parts thereabouts, that the Dutch may perceive the English intend not to leave [off] their traffic to those places; and by such strength the inhabitants there and at Banda will be encouraged to deal with the English when they shall find them of power to resist the wrongs put on them by the Hollanders. After discussion, it was held fit to send the more shipping, not to oppose the Hollanders in hostile manner, but to countenance the Company’s business, that they be not put down or forced from their trade, “which, it seems, they (the Hollanders) do intend in all parts,” but to send a good strength, both to the Moluccas and Banda, to purpose once for all and see what the Hollanders will do, “if a man of courage may be had that will not endure their wrongs; as yet, they have only given hard words, but performed no deeds, and the Company’s intents have been and still will be, not to drive a war with them, but to defend and resist the wrongs that may be put upon the English.” Opinion that it were fit for the English to attempt Banda, and endeavour to expulse the Flemings, where the country people will assist, hating the insolency of the Flemings. Resolved to have, first Mr. Jourdain’s, then Capt. Keeling’s opinions, and then both together; to hear also Augustine Spaldinge, Capt. Saris, Mr. Paiton, and others. Opinion of Jourdain on prosecuting the trade in the Indies, and dissolving unprofitable factories; that Jourdain would be a fit person [for that service]. Description of the alterations and additions to be made in the several departments of the Company’s premises at Blackwall; these include the repacking and slaughter rooms.

Sept. 26.—Complaints of Deane concerning his “half capital,” of divers grocers regarding the purchase of pepper, and of other members of the Company who could not have their half capitals. Thomas Leeson entertained steward's mate.

Sept. 27.—Barrett's accounts. Richard Muncke, Wm. Cutts, John Lamberd, and Wm. Needs pardoned for mutiny, and to have their wages paid.

Sept. 30.—Maurice Horney's wages to be paid to Harwood. Petition of Isabell Joseph for satisfaction for 381 ryals, put to the Company's account by her late husband, allowed, in regard he was a man of extraordinary respect and note. Gratuity to Mary Flynte, widow of Jasper Flynte of the Charles, who was slain in the fight with the carack. Polsted to have his half capital in pepper. Offer of Mrs. Stock to sell a "cabinet or jewel" refused. Sir Jas. Lancaster and Committee to confer with the master gunners of the land, and report on the lengths and weight of the ordnance for shipping. Refusal of the Company, by advice of Mr. Solicitor, to pay Mrs. Cannon, till they ascertain for certain, whether Capt. Middleton be alive or dead. Petition of Barrett for satisfaction for building works at Blackwall, referred. Complaint against the Officers at Blackwall for suffering bullocks to be killed in this hot season. Difference between Anthonio Doro Caldæan and Nathaniel Martyn adjusted. Complaints against Martyn for preferring his kinsmen to places of trust at Surat and removing other men. Petition of Thomas Mitford concerning 800 pieces of calico brought home by him. Recommendation of Edwards' servant for employment, referred. Ellam to make note of the presents advised in Sir Thos. Roe's letters, to be sent to the "Grand Mogore." Wages of Thomas Barnes, detained for his mutiny, to be paid. Conference with Capt. Jourdain concerning the trade abroad and the shipping to be sent this year. The Committee of opinion to have two ships sent to Surat,—one to lade carpets and calicoes there, and proceed for the rest of her lading to Cranganore, about ten days sail from Surat, and so direct her course for England; the other to carry money to Jask to make trial of commodities, supposing the news at Surat concerning Persia to be favourable; from thence to proceed to Acheen, and, if necessary, to Bantam, to make up her lading there. Unanimous opinion to continue the trade to Surat, although the charge of so much shipping thence hath hitherto made the indigo dear; price of the indigo; also to have a sufficient force to safeguard their business at Bantam, and to attempt trade at Banda and the Moluccas in a peaceable manner, and to Amboyna, whereby the natives may be encouraged and the Dutch not suffered to govern them, nor themselves to be slaves to their insolencies, being given to understand that three islands are willing to trade with the English, if satisfied of their force. At Tidore the Spaniards may be dealt with for trade. Speech by a great man's son, "that the English should be glad to go where the Flemings would give leave." Jourdain of opinion that the Flemings either dare not or will not set upon the English; others, suspecting their power and will, wished that the English and they might understand themselves aright, for a peaceable trade, as they conceived there might be, from speeches made by Sir Noel Caron, while those who have been ear and eye witnesses of the proceedings of the Dutch and the offers of the English, know that the Dutch mean fair but in words. No good means have been neglected by the English for reconciliation, "so there may be no joining in war nor purses." Relation by Jourdain of one bad part of theirs at Jambi, where they procured the King of Jhor's letter not to permit the English to have trade, because they understood by the Dutch that the English "were drunkards, thieves, ravishers of women, and very wicked people." Consideration of especial places for traffic in the Indies:—Catotanga, in Sumatra, held a good place for gold; Coromandel, distasted as unprofitable; the cloth of Masulipatam good for Jambi and Bantam. Thought most profitable to have the business contracted at Bantam and the ports upon the coast of Sumatra. Jourdain held a very fit person to continue or dissolve factories according to his discretion; Mr. Deputy appointed to confer with him. Sir Richard Hawkins, Capt. Parker, Sir Thos. Dale, and Capt. Thompson nominated for the command of the fleet. The Peppercorn to be made ready for service. Robert Bonner nominated for employment as master. [Eighteen pages. Court Bk., IV., 1-18.]

144. Geo. Pley and Edw. Pettus to Edw. Connok. Hope their previous letters have come to hand, especially one of great consequence, by an express messenger. Expected him the end of August. The inconvenience of not receiving answers to their letters, as they were prepared to set onwards for Jask. Intend to be there about 15th October next, in expectation of the fleet coming. Precautions against the Portugal fleet, should it arrive before the English fleet. Presume Thos. Barker is already gone for Jask, with whom they fear they shall meet with but little friendship. Entreat him to have neither friendship nor familiarity with the Spanish agent, "for when such of his coat cry peace, peace, then have they in their hearts war, yea, mortal war * * * for it is impossible for a man to carry coals in his bosom and not burn himself." 145. Edward Longe to Nicholas Ufflete at Bantam. Perceives yet no conclusion about this King's business; "it is no great matter." None of his debts will be recovered until his coming, "being so gorbolyed." Ufflete must stay their leisure. Money wanting. News of the arrival of the Flemish General with three ships and a pinnace, but no English, who are all or the greatest part in "caines" (? chains) at Amboyna; the report they will take all the English that go to the eastward of Java. [One page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 537.]

147. Consultation by Capt. Martin Pring, Commander of the Fleet, Thos. Kerridge, agent at Surat, Thos. Rastell, Richard Steele, Edward Monox, Matthew Duke, and Michael Holman, factors. The Company's letter produced authorizing Sir Thos. Roe, Lord Ambassador residing at the Court of the Great Mogul, to instruct, direct, and order all the factors in the Mogul's country. Opinion of the several factors "whether punctually to follow the express words of that cause" in attending directions from Roe, or to proceed in what they know necessary to be done, and as the business urgently requires. All of opinion, Steele excepted, that moneys should be dispatched to the several factories for provision of goods to relade one of the ships for England; the amount resolved accordingly. 149. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Difference between Wilson, surgeon, and Bainbridge, purser, about the weight of pepper. Thomas Porie appointed purser's mate. Grant of 20*l.* to Richard Giles towards the charge of his patent for burning logwood. Approval of Thomas Pitt's brass piece of ordnance, with his Majesty's arms fairly graven thereon, for the King of Acheen. Richard Griffin, son-in-law to Mr. Meggs, to be a factor. 5*l.* to be paid every year to Walter Cocks out of the allowance of 50*l.* made to him by his brother, Richard Cocks, factor at Japan. 50*l.* from Mrs. Aldworthe's account to be set over to Richard Venne. Petition of Woodall for a room to dress his patients in at Blackwall. Peter Chamberlain to assist Offley in viewing the surgeons' chests. Accounts of John Cransbye, Philip Burlamachi, and Rich. Andrewes. Concerning a piece of plate brought home by Capt. Best; and two cups by Capt. Christien. Debts of Rich. Basse, Rich. Burrell, and Lutterford to the Company. Petition of Henry Boyle for allowance for ryals belonging to his brother, Samuel Boyle, a factor who died in the Indies, referred. Thomas Hanson, servant to the French Company, to have his freedom for 25*l.* Joseph Browne and Robt. Price recommended by the Lord Treasurer and Lord Pembroke to be pursers' mates, "Mr. Governor supposed they could not well be refused." Grant of 100 Jacobus to poor preachers. Gratuity to Thomas Border, a sailor, who lost his leg in the fight in the Globe with the carack, and to be employed to splice ropes, make sails, or such other work as he may be found able to do. Petitions of Jacob

151. Edward Longe to Geo. Ball. Lading of the Speedwell. Ufflete's arrival welcome, as he may now seek to clear the Company's debts, a thing very difficult. Complains of Ufflete who wishes Longe to keep his accounts, and when he is shown his errors, calls Longe knave. Requests directions concerning Capt. Barkeley's account. [*One page and three quarters. 152. Edmond Sayer to Rich. Wickham. After his departure the King's brother set a watch upon their house both by land and water. They were not permitted to sell any goods until the arrival of the Hollanders, but as yet they have not been able to dispose of any, no merchant having inquired after any. Thinks the Black Lion will sail tomorrow, and that the General will depart some ten days hence. Understands by Capt. Cocks' letter how he has been deceived in the messenger he sent to purchase and dispose of certain things. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 542.]

154. Sir Thos. Roe to [the factory at Agra]. His many businesses force him to be brief. Arrival of five ships of great force and burthen under command of Capt. Pring, a Portugal prize, and two ships, English rovers, "that had undone us if proceeded." Has received the Company's orders in which though they seem to desire him to undertake more of their business than he is fit for, yet all is not referred to him absolutely, or if it be, he will not assume it, therefore whoever writes they must expect their directions from below. Desires them to expedite the investment of the monies they receive from Keridge and to take timely care for provision of carriages. "The Company are weary of this trade at this attendance, the fleet eating up all their profit."

The joint stock is this year finished, the next begins upon a new, and the Company have ordered to clear as near as may be. Advises them to make all the sales they can, to advance the return this year. Persia is wholly referred to Roe, the Company no way thinking any man had meddled in that without him, nor does Roe suppose by the Company's restrictions to him that they will ever approve what is done. Shall not send a ship or any goods, having no news of the last. Entreats their care to dispeed the ship, for stay may be the fleet's ruin. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 543.]

155. Commission from Sir Thos. Roe confirmed by Martin Pring, Admiral of the Fleet, and Thos. Keridge, to Edward Connok, Thos. Barker, Geo. Pley, and William Bell, to negotiate and conclude a trade with the Shah of Persia. [Copy. One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 544.]

Oct. 6.

156. Sir Thos. Roe's instructions to Connok, Barker, Pley and Bell, employed in the East India Company's service at the port of Jask or any other on the coast of the Shah Abbas. To have especial regard to the Company's limitations. To weigh well the objections out of England to the trade. To consider whether Jask or any other port be fit, and secure for "our ship" under a fort, and to contract to have such forts repaired and maintained at the charge of the Shah, for which they may consent to pay an import duty of 3 per cent. To consider well the strength of Ormuz, whether one ship may safely trade, as the charge of a fleet to defend her will not be borne, "lest you fall into our incommodity of Surat, and this one thing I fear above all other." To contract for a settled residence, within one month's journey at farthest from the port, whither the silks may be brought; for this Shiraz supposed to be most convenient for the sale of the English cloth and other commodities. To contract with the Shah or his merchants for the price of silk, all that commodity belonging to the King, and may venture to give 7*s.* 6*d.* sterling pr. lb. for it. The goods of any Englishman dying in any part of the Shah's dominions to be free from molestation. To contract for guards for the transit of their goods in places of known danger. No English to be imprisoned for debt, except it be proved. Ships to be supplied with provisions at reasonable rates. To inform themselves of the prices of all sorts of jewels, drugs, and other merchandise, and to study what commodity may be found to raise a stock "which is the main matter to increase the beginning." Also articles "for their private directions." With remarks by Roe that he is not so in love with his own opinion that he thinks it ought to be law, and that they are at liberty to alter these instructions with the consent of Captains Pring and Keridge, as Roe does not think that sober and discreet men should be tied so strictly to instructions as that they may not have the use and liberty of their own reason and experiences, "for I well know no man can sit in India and direct punctually business in Persia." 157. Court Minutes of the East India Company. "Peremptory answer" on the difference between Wilson, surgeon, and Bainbridge, purser. Concerning Lutterford's debt to the Company. Auditor's report upon examination of the dividend for the tenth voyage; recommend a dividend of 48 per. cent. Ryals, wheat, and "noyalls" from France provided by Bell; his accounts. Robert Freeman appointed a factor. One factor to be sent in each ship of the next fleet. Petition of John Smith who returned in the Dragon, for relief for losses sustained by the Flemings, when left at Ceram to settle a factory, with details of their shameful proceedings in the King of Ternate's name; also for further employment, referred. Joint stock to lend to the fourth voyage. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 27-29.]

159. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Robert Davies entertained "for a good fellow at 16s. a month." Richard Burrell's debt. Lading of the three ships to be sent to Surat, supposing that three ships must continually be going between Surat and Bantam, to Acheen, Tecoe, Jambi, and another port. Robt. Bonner to be master and commander; the ships for Bantam to be victualled for 20 months, those for Surat for 18 months; not less than 70,000*l.* to be sent in ryals to carry on the business as should be at Surat and Bantam. Discussion on the relative merits of Jourdain, Sir Rich. Hawkins, Sir Thos. Dale, Parker, and Best, for chief commander, the Governor requested to confer with Best as the fittest of all. Bowers and Salmon recommended for masters. Leske the preacher to pay freight for his goods brought from Surat. Nath. Martyn, Christ. Farewell, Thos. Mitford, Capt. Harris, and others, for their private trade to pay freight, &c. [One page and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 29-31.]

Audience of the King; "he pleads hard to have as the Flemings give;" he is indifferent to the stay of the English, saying, "if we be pleased to stay we may, if not we may be gone." Arrival of a Dutch ship from Banda; the bearer, a Spaniard and an escaped prisoner, can certify the state of their business in the Manillas and the Moluccas, and all other particulars. The Moon, one of their runaway ships, likewise arrived from the Manillas with divers reports concerning the chasing of a Spanish ship in the South Seas, and the taking of rich prizes by the Portuguese galleons. them by Thos. Bonner out of his wages ; also petition of Gregory and his wife on the same subject. John Hargrave to be a sailor. Petition of Hercules Hunter dismissed, the Committee "having no affection to West country men in general." James Poultney, entertained a factor, to be sent for, to put him off. Men and victuals for the voyage. The Dragon, Lion, and Expedition to take lead and iron to Surat and Bantam. Purchase of seven tons of elephants' teeth. Appointment of chief commander at Bantam ; resolved to leave it wholly to the governor and deputy-governor to confer with Best thereon. Committee to consider the presents to be bought, as advised by Sir Thos. Roe. About sale of calicoes. John Boothe to be purser or mate, and Wm. Simonson a steward. Weekly accounts to be kept by the pursers. Richard Clark to be swabbers' mate. [Three pages. Court Bk., IV., 31-34.]

162. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Keridge and Company at Surat. Is almost confident to manage all their business with ease and contentment, and that nothing reasonable will be denied him by the King who now so graciously useth him. Has refused as yet to visit the Prince, but is going on Sunday with Aseph Khan to be reconciled to him and receive a phirmaund and other reasonable conditions by the King's desire and Aseph Khan's mediation. Knows he shall never recover the Prince's heart but hopes to obtain from the King more than they expect. Proceedings taken to recover their debts, most of which he hopes to obtain within ten days ; the two principal, unless they pay in three days "will lie very hard in cold irons." Makes no question to furnish them with a round sum, and may perhaps employ the pearl in money, if Steele hasten up, which Roe fears. Refers to some things mentioned in the Company's letter to them ; concerning their accounts, and the scandal arising to them by the dead reckoning of their dead factors ; advice thereon. Recommends the finishing and clearing as near as may be of the old joint stock. Confesses the Company are somewhat hard in refusing the wages, but has no doubt they will deal liberally with good servants. The Company should be satisfied in the species of goods required, principally in steel and gumlac. Approves the relading of the Gift ; suggestions for making as large a return as possible. Advantages of landing their goods at the quay. Refers to his last letters for his opinion of the Persian trade. Reasons for believing that there is not any great probability of a great force being sent from Lisbon to Persia, gathered from a letter from Sec. Winwood. Thinks therefore they may venture to send a ship to Jask. Careening of the James. The presents may rest until the phirmaund arrive. Desires Keridge to trust his own wit, steal ashore the Pearl, and dispeed her by Steele, or if he will not go, by another. Let Steele be very wary, for Roe fears he hath mistaken himself already and given out what he is not, nor must not expect, for the Prince demanded if there were not a new agent come for the English and what he was, "I am loth to be rough but will have every man know himself." Will not consent that his wife be a charge to the Company. Captain

Towerson and his wife will be welcome; if the King continues his purpose, thinks it will be easier for them to meet Roe and Keridge at Ahmedabad. As to Keridge's desire to return, confesses his time is expired and his conditions hard, but entreats him to consider the Company's service; promises to use his own credit to procure Keridge recompence. Desires a brief of the Company's servants, their wages, and the amounts they have received, that Roe may fulfil his instructions; reforms which he intends making. Directions for proceedings at Jask. Captain Pring's request to have the gold taken, divided amongst his men for their encouragement; begs it may be well considered; confesses that in all reprizals the soldiers must have an honest share. Wishes the gold in specie to be kept aboard, Aseph Khan having offered to buy it; their agreement. Hopes to send the phirmaund more speedily than by a horseman. Is in want of a linguist. Jack Goodwin or Banggam's brother might serve him, but will have neither of them to hinder them from their learning. The King's painter inquiring after the cochineal mentioned in Keridge's invoice; its value. [Three pages. Indorsed, "Some mention of Mr. Steele. Read." O. C., Vol. V., No. 548.]

164. Nich. Uffete to Geo. Ball at Bantam. Perceives by his last that Ball is offended; the writer excuses himself and craves pardon. Goods sent by Thos. Mills and received from him. Longe will make what speed he can in the accounts. Understands that the Dutch ships riding at the bar of Jambi river have not taken any prize as it was reported they had, and likewise that the four ships riding before Malacca had done no good. The armourer in hand with the Company's pieces. Report that the Hollanders with the King of Mataram have agreed to take Bantam and other places of importance in Java and share them between them. 166. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Petition of Lawrence Walldo, that a time may be appointed to hear his answer to the scandalous aspersions against him. Guy Tildesley to be a factor. John Ware entertained a mariner. Purchase of morse teeth and red hides from the Muscovy Company. Letter read from the Bishop of Bristol in behalf of John Brownrigge; to be entertained if any place can be found for him. Cannon to take Bateman as security in the matter of Capt. David Middleton. Provisions for the six ships going to Bantam. Capt. Harris to pay freight for his goods but on his further suit to have some recompence. Nicholas Wolley to be allowed to go the voyage to the East Indies. Request of Richard Burrell concerning his debt. Request of Christopher Yearoth, having been at Greenland and willing to learn to become a navigator, to be entertained as "a good fellow." The Governor and Deputy desired to appoint masters for the ships afloat. Capt. Best against sending the piece of brass ordnance for the King of Acheen, who being a gallant warrior will hold it as a scorn when he finds it unserviceable and only for show, but Capt. Keeling alleged that the King desired it only for show, so it was resolved to send it. [2½ pp. Court Bk., IV., 39-41.]

171. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Petition of Cannon, to be delivered to the Lord Keeper. The Dragon to be provisioned as the other ships proceeding with Best. Nicholas Wolley to remain in his employment at home and not to proceed to the East Indies. Peter White appointed purser in the Dragon. Abraham Bond, purser in the Moon, to be examined by the auditors. Request of Richd. Burrell, to be respited for his debt till Christmas, refused. Twenty shillings granted to the wife of John Nash, shipwright, who was wounded at Blackwall in a quarrel between the butchers and carpenters. Covenants between the Company and Wm. Barrett, his Majesty's grocer, to be engrossed. "Harborough beer" at 5s. to be provided for the ships. Grant of 100*l.* to Capt. Jourdain; to be asked how the ryalls were conveyed, he being one of the Ascension's company that was cast away in the Indies. Becke, Bowers, Tokeley, and Hunt and Dale and Hackwell, old returned servants, recommended for masters. Martyn, "much condemned for his former carriage, his pride, and insolvency" and private trade; to make a note of the goods he brought home, with their prices, before the Company will proceed any further. Abuses at Blackwall. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk., IV., 41-44.]

172. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Keridge and Company at Surat. Refers to his previous letters. The Company have imposed on Roe no such authority as that it should hinder their business, nor so shortened theirs as they may not proceed roundly in their merchandizing affairs. Is not a man that stands upon idle points; whatsoever they do for the best, Roe hopes all consent to. Has advised the factories at Persia to receive their directions from Keridge. The removal of the King to Ahmedabad very uncertain. Reasons why he cannot repair to Surat as they desire; he must meet the King to finish "my great expectations by Aseph Khan's friendship earnestly continued." Hopes when the presents arrive to make a final conclusion at Court to good content. As to their debts, desires the Prince's ship may be stayed until the Governor's letter to the Prince be obtained to pay their debts or until the Prince himself demand her freedom. Aseph Khan's denials are all turned into solicitations in Roe's behalf, so that he hopes "to effect that of Bengala." Advantages of employing a ship in the Red Sea this year. Desires them to endeavour by all their persuasions to procure assistance in this, for he fears their own means will not be able to undertake it. For Dabul the hopes are very barren; other places mentioned by Banggam to the southward for pepper, Roe understands not. As to their debts, their principal debtors have been some days in prison ; Aseph Khan has done all in his power to help Roe. Other small debts, they are at the King's mercy for. Danger of sending their monies by their land convoy. The money is remitted to Agra ; to prevent any trouble at Daitatt in the country of Partappshawe, has obtained a phirmaund for the passage of their goods. As to private trade, thinks the Company will deal with favour, if men deal with modesty ; "for they intend not that their servants should get nothing, but that it should be with their consent and not to their injury." Complains that he is much injured by Steele's rashness ; will not consent to the presents he has promised, to let his folly be known. Has received copies of Steele's letters, wherein he makes himself chief and sent by his Majesty, without mention of Roe, whereas he was sent only as a factor and scarce that, to be disposed by Roe, and so Steele shall know. Has consented to Browne's employment. Hopes Aseph Khan's man has arrived ; he goes principally for gold ; "the content you give him is of more consequence than all others ;" has acquainted him with Moerob Khan's offer of Gogo, but is assured he shall not need it ; besides the phirmaund sent herewith, he has caused Nourmahal to speak to the Prince for a new one ; briefly, Aseph Khan heaps upon Roe all manner of courtesies. Authorizes him to give some present to the Governor, but, as the Company orders, of no great value. Advises him to let the King, Nourmahal, or the Prince buy any goods and to let the Governor know of the presents sent by the Company ; two swords, two hats and feathers, two pairs of silk stockings, and a scarf. If he come to Ahmedabad, Roe will give him the choice "and till I hear I will not wear them." Begs Keridge to confirm the Governor's love of Roe, "as his opinion that I love him better than any man in a long coat." After the receipt of the phirmaund they will be no further questioned ; the three principal points of it. Daily expects Steele with the pearl, secretly. Though the phirmaund comes, yet if he can by those he sends up hide anything, lest they be yet abused, trust his own wits, but Roe thinks they will have fair play. Desires two days' notice of the factors' arrival that Roe may meet them, which if he had done last year he had not been robbed. Nourmahal's servant just arrived, with a request that the Queen might buy somewhat in the ship, which Aseph Khan has allowed, on her undertaking to protect their goods and that she had procured another phirmaund to command their fair usage and had entreated the Prince that she might pleasure the English in this and that all might come in her name to be delivered to Roe. Aseph Khan has done all this, fearing the Prince would seize, which he has now undertaken not to do, and all will come to Roe untouched and without custom. They see what the noise of fine things doth ; if the Company sent for a greater stock well chosen, it would be bought up at water side. Aseph Khan has promised to deliver Roe's petition for privileges and to procure the phirmaund for Bengal or any other place ; he assures Roe the King will not deny, and the Prince has referred all to himself. Fetiplace instructed as to the purchase of Muckshad's house and Salbanke as to the Persian's

1617. debt. Salbancke to clear his accounts with Robert and John Young. Great quantities of coral having arrived, requests some to be sent up for trial; suggestions for the speedy sale of it. "Thus very weary, never in more hope of good success, I commit you and all our endeavours to God's blessing, desiring Him to direct us, for such ravenous people I never wish to see if I escape these." [Three pages. Indorsed, "Read, some mention of Mr. Steele herein." O.C., Vol. V., No. 552.]
- Oct. 21. 173. Sir Thos. Roe to Keridge and Company at Surat. Nourmahal, impatient to buy somewhat at Surat, has sent a phirmaund for their good usage by this bearer. Both she and Aseph Khan must be served, but they must keep the arras, the great plume, with some others with fans, two waistcoats, two scarfs, the best knives, the stand dish, the richest glasses, and of the cushionets, cabinets, sweet bags, a fit proportion for Roe not only to give but to sell the King and Prince, for they expect. They may let Nourmahal's servant have whatever they think requisite and give credit for a small matter; knows not whether she sends money or no; they may sell some of the bone lace, "but let her pay for her desires." This haste is strange, but may turn to their good if discreetly used. Begs them to content both her and Aseph Khan, that they may continue Roe's friends which now effectually they are. Let Capt. Pring and all his countrymen use them kindly, their return will be much to Roe's grace or disgrace. [Half a page. Indorsed, "Read. No mention of Mr. Steele herein." O.C., Vol. V., No. 553.]
- Oct. 21. 174. Edmond Sayer to Rich. Wickham. Concerning the sale of certain goods and, if they are sold, how to lay out the proceeds. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 554.]
- Oct. 22. 175. John Osterwick to Richard Wickham. The expectation of his sudden coming will make him brief. Concerning the bills which were left behind for cloth and silk. Sends note of the cloth sold and the money paid, also of the "bills of debt" remaining in his hands. As to Tosamon and Wickham's suspicions of him for staying at Firando. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 555.]
- Oct. 23-24. 176. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Request of Capt. Wood for a Scotchman to proceed as captain in one of the Company's ships, refused. Capt. Becke entertained for a master on the recommendation of Capt. Best. The "Noyalls," brought from France by Bell, too dear. Robert Tokeley and Thos. Hunt entertained at 7*l.* per month as masters. Robert Bonner to be master and chief commander in the Dragon; John Wilmott, Peter Arnold, and John Weddell masters' mates. Settlement of a due proportion for the length of the ordnance. Burrell's business referred.
- Oct. 24. Letter read from James Sargeant in favour of his son, Nathaniel Sargeant, for employment. Abraham Bond to be entertained. Committee to attend the Judge of the Admiralty in reference to the punishment of Richard Weekes, quarter-master in the James, for mutiny. Report on Richard Crowte, recommended for employment, again referred. Capt. Best to report on the refusal of the sailors in the Sampson to sail with Capt. Becke. Barrett's business. Petition of John Curtis to receive his goods without freight. A room to be prepared to entertain mariners. The Company willing to resign their interest in their lease of Leaden Hall, if the Lords of the Council think fit. Suit of Mr. Bailye, a preacher, brother to John Bailye, a factor, deceased, and recommended by Sec. Winwood, to receive his brother's wages. The assistance of the Committee entreated to procure "a sufficient person" for a preacher. Accounts of John Sandcrofte, factor, deceased. Rebecca, widow of George Pley, factor to have some commodities "sent as tokens and remembrances" to her by her deceased husband. Bartholmew Ale, quarter-master in the Globe, to pay freight. Gratuity of 200*l.* to Burrell for his three years' extraordinary pains at Blackwall, in making the docks, overseeing the store houses and other works there; 20*l.* also given to [Nath.] Salmon for his extraordinary services at Blackwall. 179. Carleton to [Chamberlain]. Has seen one of the boats brought out of the north-west by the ship of discovery which he wrote of in his last [see ante, No. 169]. It is not much unlike a jisolera of Venice, but covered, and made of leather of fish skins, wherein a boy, no bigger than a man of those parts, may sit and row himself. They float on the top of the water, with the boat girded about their middle and venture to sea in a tempest. The ship returned ballasted with a very fair marble, called jaspis. She will be sent out again for further discovery. The industry of these people is much to be commended, this being done at private men's cost. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

180. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Giles James to be entertained. Saltpetre growing so scarce that it will be very difficult to procure sufficient for the Company's use; advised to provide some from the Low Countries. Lawrence Walldo to have his business heard. Petition of Saml. Browne, who went out in the Defence and returned in the Dragon, referred. Letter read from Mary Gardyner on behalf of Edmund Kaye to be a free man. A sufficient person to be provided for Acheen; Giles James thought fit to remain at Surat and Richard Fursland at Bantam; Catatanga very hopeful to vent good store of commodities and from whence a good quantity of gold may be procured; especial care to be had to provide a very sufficient man for that place. Martyn to have his goods partly free from charge. Petition of Henry Rickman, master's mate in the Charles, for reward for his extraordinary pains. John Bonfoye appointed to pay wages at Blackwall and Richd. Hanley at Deptford. Request of Richard Lancaster, who was employed at Surat, to proceed thither again. Isaac Sherington recommended by Lady Hubbert [Hobart] for employment, referred. [Three pages and a quarter. Court Bk., IV., 48-51.]

182. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Keridge and Company at Surat. "The alterations of humours here change me as the wind doth the best seaman." The King has declared for Ahmedabad, and will no doubt winter in Guzerat; the presents and other fine goods had, therefore, better not be sent thence until the King's arrival; will meet them two days journey to prevent misusage. Steele has safely delivered the pearl; fears not so fit for this market; the great foul, of black water, well known in India, the others small and dear, but hopes to pass them being come so privately. and so return the money to Agra speedily. Steele gives Roe satisfaction; hopes they may live like friends; the principal difference will be about his wife; is sorry for both their misfortunes; thinks he has prevailed on her to return home. Capt. Towerson must be discouraged from his purpose to stay. Further remarks in reference to the departure of Steele's wife, also concerning Towerson's father, his mother-in-law at Agra, and his wife's aunt, who is promised in marriage to Frans Swares, "the prodigal Portugal." Hopes they will use Steele with courtesy, forgetting on all sides past passions; desires he may return to Roe with the presents. Mr. Jackson has arrived, recommended by Sir Thos. Smythe and many honorable Lords of his Majesty's Council, whom Roe must obey and respect, "the misfortune is at home that such are sent out upon the hopes in the air;" desires all courtesy may be shown to him, and assistance to go to the southward if he desire it, to seek a better fortune, and to advise him which way he may reap some honest recompence of two years' travel without injury to the Company. Mr. Harbert, weary of the progress, is bound for England. To beware in dealing with Towerson for his jewel, that the emerald be of the new rock, for those of the old are of less price. 184. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from the Lord Admiral in behalf of James Erwyng to be a captain; Committee to make excuses to his Lordship. Cannon's business. No further use for Capt. Harris' services. Joshua Bainbridge to be purser in the Moon. Business of Lawrence Waldo to be heard. Hogshead of pepper to be delivered to Guy Wood's widow. 100 barrels of oil to be delivered to [Rich.] Mountney, at 56s. a barrel. Business of Peter Floris heard. Gratuity of 50*l.* to Wm. Ebert for his services at Patani. 50*l.* adventure of Nathaniel Basse in the old joint stock to be sold.

Minutes of a Meeting of the Committees at Blackwall on the 25th September 1617.

Nov. 6.—Employment of Lawrence Potten. Objections against Lawrence Waldo for his behaviour to Rich. Sadler at Surat, "which struck such a grief unto him as that he never recovered it, unto his dying day;" certificates produced of his honest carriage abroad; Ambassador Roe's unfavourable opinion of him; the Company contented to let him have his wages and certain mace free of freight. Propositions of Richd. Fursland for employment; intention to send him to Acheen; Nicolls to be brought away from thence, but the manner to be left to Capt. Jourdain, to have it effected quietly, lest he might incense the King to do some mischief. Payment of Joseph Salbancke's wages. Nathaniel Martyn to have his goods upon paying freight. Grant of 200*l.*, upon the account of the sixth voyage, to Capt. Jourdain for his services. Agreement with Giles James to serve the Company seven years, dated 25th Oct. 1617; also with John Jourdain to serve the Company five years, dated 5th Nov. 1617. [*Five and a half pages. 186. Sir Thos. Roe to the Factors at Surat. His former letters sufficiently approve their proceedings; "I am not a man of forms and ceremony." Takes very gratefully Keridge's readiness to join with Roe to assist in the Company's affairs; as to his wages, also of Biddulph, Browne, and Fettiplace. Doubts not Capt. Pring will execute the orders Roe has given concerning the men-of-war and their goods. The "advisal" to Persia required more expedition, for that Roe must return some reasonable answer to the King; such a man as Monox need not have been employed. Fears some error; does not intend to continue a factory by any supply. The cloth and other goods must be convoyed to Ahmedabad, where they say the King will go, by Steele, who Roe wishes may be used fairly.

"I understand him well, suffer me, we must not rashly disgrace any man, it is more honesty to reclaim one than to persecute 100." Knows his error in his wife's coming, which Roe would rather bury than blame; reminds them that it was not long since they despised not Steele's judgment so much, but that they made it against Roe the ground of their Persian project; writes this to put them in mind that passion sees not always clearly; as to Steele's wife, is resolved she shall return, to which Steele has consented. Desires the contentment of their Governor [the Governor of Surat] as much as they do; wishes he might be induced to buy goods of Towerson or Steele; knows not what the phirmaund may do. The box sent to Mocrob Khan is more than he deserves; a piece of Towerson's arras would stop his mouth and be best sold so; promises to help him to some, but not before the King; if the dogs will please any, reserving the water spaniel, use them, the Governor cannot give the Prince anything more acceptable; he begged one of Roe, and if both will content the Prince give both, they will cost more coming up than the thanks are worth. Hopes to augment the investments from Agra. Has written to all the factories at large, "we must purge the country and ease unnecessary charge, the factories will not be so many, nor such want of servants." Thanks Keridge for his resolution to satisfy Aseph Khan's servant with the gold; Nourmahal's man and his are one. The Governor will not put Keridge out of his house; cannot trouble the Prince on such matters; advises him to keep possession, and if force is used then Roe will step in. Cochineal is no commodity for ordinary markets; the King's painter is now at Ahmedabad about a work, if it be sent thence it shall be tried, it is too dear ever to be a commodity for this country. Wishes some sack and red wine to be sent to him; the Court will vend all that they cannot sell. If the preacher be a silent man he is fit for nothing, "encourage him, so will I, and hope the best." No long apology is needed for Steele's letter; is not moved on every report, nor do his [Roe's] resolutions hang on others' lips. Sends back their consultation; approves of what they have done, but of none of their reasons for so doing, except the Admiral's, who fell right; it is all vanity to talk of authority; "let us all despise all authority to control us from any ill, and you shall all find me a tame lion." Thinks all the fault of Steele's waste in his expenses is with them, if he will be vain, let him do it at his own cost, for Roe will not allow any extraordinary charge for Steele's wife; if she return and Steele stay, Roe will do all kindness according to his desert, and recommend her to the Company's care. They who have the Company's purse must order it, money is dear ware in India; would have them use Steele's wife and Capt. Towerson with courtesy, but not to live upon them lest they stay too long. Gogo, Sindu [Scinde], Bengala may be tried, but no port so fit as Surat to send their goods up to by their own pinnace. Will order Banggam down speedily. Is most glad Capt. Towerson affects not the Court, his wife's help Roe needs not; Nourmahal is Roe's solicitor, and her brother his brother. Has written to Capt. Pring about the disaster of the James, thinks she may be saved if sent home a new ship, but may be lost if continued

187. Sir Thos. Roe to Capt. Martin Pring. Fully approves the course he took with the men-of-war, wishing he had made profit of one of them to the Dutch in want, for that as they are they will be a burthen to us. What to do with the goods and the men; the honest entertain in his service, the rest ship home. Is of his opinion that force from Goa will not molest him this year, and that he may the bolder attempt the Red Sea with the less force; thinks one ship will serve the project; to move the Prince is in vain, he scorns to confess the English can help him. Thinks a ship should be sent for trade to Mocha; not more than one man and but few goods should be trusted ashore at once, or else a Guzerat should father the goods and they should be secured by him to make a trial of, if the Bashaw will grant the English free trade they may secure those seas from piracy, but in no case should a factory be left this year. It is impossible for Roe to leave the Court and return, his body will not endure hard travel, and there is no need of him where Martin Pring is. Will make excellent use of the pearl and all that has been sent to him; wants nothing but his health; the wine will refresh him, and a small quantity keep him alive. Keridge and the writer will well agree, "though last year I was set behind the door." Opinion on the disaster to the James, thinks she is only fit to relade for England, though half empty. Pring will do little at Goa this year, as he cannot be dispatched hence until February. Wishes that in his way to Dabul he would view the bar and entrance at Goa which no English seaman knows, and see what revenge they can take of "that beggarly false Samorine." [*Two pages. 188. Commission from Capt. Martin Pring to John Hatch, master of the Bee, bound for Jask on the borders of Persia. Sanderson, who went there last year in the James, to accompany Hatch. To "seriously consider" the inhabitants of Ormuz who, having certain intelligence of his coming, will seek by all means his utter subversion. To use all possible care to escape "all treacherous attempts of our guileful enemy the Portugal," and on no account to remain more than 13 days at the port. To assist Edw. Monox in whatever Sir Thos. Roe has given him commission to do. To use his best endeavour to take any Portugal vessel he may chance to meet; and to take an inventory of all her goods which properly belong to the Company towards the regaining of their losses yearly sustained. 1617.

those remaining of the choicest; a similar quantity to that sent by Capt. Pepwell [36 tons] will undoubtedly find an annual sale. The lead unsold; all the coral, both branch and beads, has found a ready sale, the polished in less esteem than the unpolished, yet on both there is a loss of at least 20 or 25 per cent.; better prices obtained in Surat than abroad, the charge of transport considered. Quicksilver sold but basely; the vermilion but slowly. Of the broadcloth the worst colours are left; Banggam has sold all his at Burrampoor. Swords, knives, looking glasses, &c., are scarcely looked on, except for gifts; the swords and knives are every sailor's commodity, and unprofitable to the Company to send, except some few choice ones for presents. Have been constrained to give satisfaction to three times the value for the boat of Surat seized by Capt. Pepwell [see ante No. 61.]; their broker is still detained prisoner, and they are likely to lose the now continued favour of an honest and just Governor; the commander and master are both much blamed for plunging them still deeper in dishonour with this people. The inhabitants of Masulipatam have also had their share of sufferance by the unlimited disorders of the ships' companies, as Lucas & Anthéunis vehemently declares. The Charles and James departed 11th June, and soon after the Solomon and Osiander with Lucas, who left Adam Denton, chief at Masulipatam, with three other factors; the goods left for sale there. They stand on the same terms at Court as before, notwithstanding Roe's painful and utmost endeavours. The Dutch have taken privileges in Surat; two Holland ships lost upon the coast, but men, goods, and ordnance saved; they have left factors, a preacher, and divers youths for linguists, the captain with some 140 persons have gone overland to Masulipatam. The Hollanders settling a trade in Surat will, doubtless, prove ruinous to the hopes of the English in this trade, as the Company must know by good experience of their proceedings in all other places; it is by their great supplies of money principally that the Hollanders will be able to overstay the English, as they have done wherever both have had traffic together. Arrival of Capt. Pring with the James, Anne, Gift, Bull, and the Bee, his whole fleet. "The multitude of their businesses" prevents their answering the Company's letters, received by Capt. Pring, until the ships return to England, but copies have been sent to all the factories. Prizes taken by the fleet after leaving the Cape with 1,200*l.* specie, and a great junk of Gogo rescued and given up to the right owners, to the no small content of the King and merchants at the instant performance, although, as in their most base ungrateful natures, soon again forgotten. Capt. Pring arrived at the bar 26th Sept., five days after the rest of the fleet. The whole power of ordering all businesses conferred upon the Lord Ambassador, the cause of much delay in the dispatch of their business. The money landed and amount sent to Agra and to Ahmedabad under convoy of 40 English. Intended lading for the Gift, which is the proportion for this year's return. Many Bannian merchants bankrupt through the failing of trade in the Red Sea; the danger of trusting in so dangerous a time or breaking. Quantity of indigo expected from Agra and Ahmedabad doubt if they can provide sufficient, the Portugals and others being also large buyers. Robt. Younge sent to Agra to assist Fras. Fetiplace. Diligence of Thos. Keridge at Baroach, for causing the people to make their calicoes both for Bantam and England according to advice; the quantity the Company may expect in the next ships. The reprisal goods, 38 tons of elephants' teeth, they have no doubt of selling at Surat; also 350*l.* in gold taken from the prize, for the most part gathered by Capt. Pring's honest care from his men, who had converted it to their own use. One month's pay given to all the sailors of the fleet for their fees in taking the prize and their better encouragement hereafter. The coral well liked, great quantities will sell; 300 chests come from Mocha every year; recommend as much to be sent by every fleet as is now received; the prices and profits. Great doubts of the recovery of their debts at Court. The pearls have been landed without custom, and by Sir Thos. Roe's express order consigned to Rich. Steele for their speedy conveyance to Court, and they have appointed Jackson, a land captain, to accompany them; they have left for Mandow, and the writers have no doubt Roe will dispose of Steele and the supposed maid, now manifested his wife, brought with him. No advice received from Persia since the return of the James; the Bee sent thither empty, the "full intention" being only to receive due information of the state of their people there; instructions from Sir Thos. Roe and the Company sent to Edw. Monox and the factors there and to those now employed hence to assist. The Bee limited to 20 days stay at Jask. Steele has just returned from Court; the pearls have safely reached the Lord Ambassador, great hopes of their sale, the greater ones preferred to the lesser. "Kept 'till the dispeed of the Bee this present 13 Nov. from aboard the James Royal." Indorsed, "Sent first unto Persia by the Bee, and received overland by the way of Aleppo, the 21 Oct. 1618 by William Nelson. Thos. Tite, an English fugitive from the Charles, reports that he was entertained at Bantam by "the long-bearded President," but it seemed "that the Flemish flesh pot, Propositions for employment of Richard Fursland and John Jourdain, the younger, entertained in January 1616, but left behind through sickness, entertained. Nathaniel Eyle's accounts to be examined. Threat of Sir Alex. Temple to defeat Ellis Crispe's purchase of 400*l.* adventure in the first joint stock from Wm. Temple, because of a pretended mortgage on it, to be disregarded, the Court conceiving that it concerns the whole Company very near if such fraudulent conveyances may take place, and having power by their charter, order that no such conveyances shall be good that are not publicly acknowledged by the Company; resolved to pay the money to Crispe. Wilson, of Brazenose Col., Oxford, recommended for a preacher; the especial exceptions were against his youth, and that he is too much in the fashion, whereas a man of a grave countenance is rather to be required, because it will be unsavoury to have a young man reprove ancient men, especially of such vices as may reign in themselves. Knowing that many men are not fond of this voyage, his suit referred to inquire whether he will stay awhile in the country, as will be expected, if he be entertained. Purchase of gold lace by advice of Sir T. Roe. Discussion on the proportion of powder and shot for the fleet; also on firing salutes. Suit of a Greek for employment with 100*l.* a year, refused as too high a salary. Francis Sadler to draw out a list of factors already entertained. [Three pages and a half. Court Bk., IV., 58-61.]

193. Martin Pring to the East India Company. Writes by the Bee, sent to Jask by Sir Thos. Roe's orders in quest of the English factory sent thither last year. Left Saldanah Bay 13th July last; account of the voyage. At Damaun, the people have good store of ryals of eight, which are melted together in lumps, being taken out of the carack that was fired by Capt. Joseph. Portuguese prize, taken by the Gift, in which were Bannians and negroes and 38 tons of elephants' teeth. Two ships belonging to Sir Robt. Rich and Philip Barnard prevented from surprising a Guzerat junk belonging to the Queen; had the junk been taken, all the Company's goods in India could not have made satisfaction according to their desire, and that is commonly their law in these cases. The goods taken out of the two English ships at Swally have been delivered to Keridge; the ships Pring intends to employ in the Company's service; the sailors knew not whither they were bound, and they are importunate for a continuance of their pay. The Lord Ambassador writes that never was anything more kindly taken at Court than the rescuing of this junk; "what effect it will work upon this unconstant King is yet unknown, for he is able to forget a good turn very suddenly." Hopes soon to dispatch a ship for England, "if we be not infested by the Portugals;" rumour of the arrival of seven of their ships; intends, if true, going to meet them. "Our establishment in this country will no longer continue firm than we shall be able to uphold our reputation against the Portugals;" the charges exceeding great unless they trade in the Red Sea, whereto he finds the Lord Ambassador very willing, but the country people very backward, being loth to have the secret of their trade discovered. Has solicited Roe to move the Prince for a freight into the Red Sea. Projects for surprising the Portugal fleet recommended by Roe to Pring. Dissatisfaction of the sailors because they were not allowed to pillage the Portugal prize; one month's wages given to them as a gratuity; the chief commanders and merchants rely upon the Company's reward on their return. Had hoped that the Bee might have commanded the river Surat, and so their gross goods have been passed by water and that saved which is ordinarily spent in cart hire, but the river is full of shoals and flats, and frigates can pass in and out at their pleasure, without his ordnance being able to reach them. [Indorsed, Recd. 21 Oct. 1618, and read." Three pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 564.]

Nov. 14. 194. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Part of Raphe Coppindall's wages to be paid to Boothbye. Paul Johnson, a Dutchman, who has served the Company 11 years, to have his goods free of freight. Leate to hasten the arrival of certain great skeans with fair hilts. It is thought somewhat strange that Best should have recommended Wilson as a preacher, for though a good scholar and practised as a schoolmaster, he is not known as a preacher; none knew that he preached. Augustine Spalding to be employed. James Poultney again referred. Richard Welden who has lived seven years in India and knows the languages of Banda, Amboyna, and the Moluccas, to be a factor. Discussion on the employment of Capt. Christien, to be referred for another year. Wm. Smith, formerly purser's mate in the Clove, to be seen about his petition for employment. Purchase of morse teeth and hides of the Muscovy Company. Suit of Nicholas Wolley to go abroad; his wages to be increased, but to remain in the counting house another year; also petition of Richard Weekes acknowledging his folly and craving favour. Petition of Joseph Colfe, who served 22 months at Bantam under Capt. Jourdain, to be again employed. Request of Thos. Wood, master's mate, and employed by Capt. Keeling to go in a junk to Jambi, to have some pepper he has brought home free of freight. Similar request of Bartholomew Ayle. Two new ships to be built [*Three and a half pages. 195. Wm. Addames to Rich. Wickham, at Firando. Has been forced to go to Miako, and went to see if Wickham's things were done; his candlesticks were not made. Has sent his man away with such money as he received which is not much. His efforts to sell certain goods; has sent the Captain the reckoning. [*One page. 197. N. Ufflete to Geo. Ball, at Bantam. Rash proceedings of the Dutch; report that within ten days "this General" will depart for the Moluccas. News of the Dutch fleet at Malacca. Present sent by the Dutch to Japara for the King of Mataram, with request that they might build a castle at Japara, to which the King consented, but the nobility telling the King they were now free men and wherefore should they suffer themselves to be in subjection, the King reversed his decision. Five ships arrived in the road this day, four from the island, and one from Bantam; will try and learn their designs and advise him thereof. [One page and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 566.]

Nov. 18-20.

198. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Muster of silks brought home from Surat by Lawrence Walldo; some to be dyed for their better experience and satisfaction. Security for 2,000*l.* or 3,000*l.* to be taken from Capt. Harvey who is suspected to be about to sail to the East Indies with a ship well victualled and furnished with 20 pieces of ordnance. A copy of the new patent procured by Sir James Cunningham, with sundry new privileges for the East Indies, wherein the south-east passage is included, to be obtained. Request of the executors of Humphrey Basse to sell his adventure agreed to. Dividend to be declared on the 9th voyage and a final dividend of 20 or 22 per cent. next Christmas on the 11th voyage. The remainder of the capital of the 9th voyage to the value of about 20,000*l.* to be turned over to the joint stock, as if all prove good the 9th voyage will produce three for one. Five dozen leather buckets to be provided for Blackwall, and five dozen for Deptford, to be hung up in case of fire. Capt. Best to confer with the musicians selected to go with him. James Rynd who is willing to stay five years in India to be a preacher. As to the proposition for paying in adventures. Discussion on the demands of Capt. Best; the Governor, Deputy, and Sir James Lancaster to inform him how distasteful his courses are to the Company, and to settle as to his going the voyage one way or the other.

Minutes of a General Court : Dividends to make up two capitals on the 9th voyage, and of 20 per cent. on the 11th voyage confirmed. Whether the stock for four years should be enlarged to eight years. Sale of 200*l.* of Humfrey Basse in the first joint stock ; bought by Hamersley at 203*l.* per cent. profit. Sales of goods, with names of purchasers and the prices. 50*l.* in the first joint stock of Nat. Basse sold to West for 104*l.* 5*s.* ; 200*l.* of Hum. Basse to Wm. Leake for 206*l.* per cent. profit, and 100*l.* in the new joint stock to the Governor for 15*l.* 5*s.* per cent. profit.

Nov. 20. Appointment of Richd. Griffin, with salary of 80*l.*, and annual increase of 20*l.* for seven years. [Five pages. Court Bk., IV., 66-71.]

Nov. 20. 199. Matthew Slade, to Carleton. Has put Sir Adrian Paw in mind of the map [see ante, No. 178], but he says it is still out of his hand. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 21. 200. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the goods of the late Peter Floris, and the payment of Richard Burrell's adventure in the first joint stock. Wm. Marshall to be disfranchized. 40*l.* interest granted on Cannon's account. 50*l.* to be distributed to poor ministers. Demands of Capt. Best considered. Gratuity to Edward Seager. Committee to try the ordnance, and settle the number for each ship. Roger Gill and Robt. Barker to be sailors. [Two pages. Court Bk., IV., 71-73.]

Nov. 21. 201. Rich. Cocks to Johnson and Pitts at Siam. Has returned from the Emperor's Court, where he spent much time to little purpose ; nothing done to enlarge their privileges ; they remain as they were last year. Understands Eaton has told them of Eaton's arrival in Japan. The junk belonging to the English will be the last to depart hence this year, so that in the meantime they may look out for skins and wood for her lading. Wickham has returned from Bantam and brought a cargo of silk, broad cloth, lead, and other English commodities ; the most part are sold but to small profit. Arrival of three Dutch ships from the Moluccas, and two from Bantam ; the chief commander is called Derick Johnson Lamb, "a very fair conditioned man and one that hath used himself very circumspectly towards our English nation, as I also do find the like in Capt. Jacob Specx, principal in this place and all others, which I wish that the like decorum were observed betwixt our nation and the Hollanders in all other places." [One page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 567.]

Nov. 22. 202. Sec. Lake to Carleton. In France they are upon a course to be established for a safe traffic to the East Indies, and would fain join with us. "But that is not for our good." Finds our merchants as unwilling to join the Dutch as the French or any other, hoping they have the start, and assuring themselves to keep it. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 22. 203. Joseph Salbancke to the East India Company. Description of the country "by all the people of Europe called India;" of Tamerlane the Great, and his lineal descendant the Great Mogul, also of his family, and "his abundance of women that he keepeth for his own body which are said to be at least a thousand," and his habits and government. Every person going to the King for any suit must take presents with him according to the custom of the country; what they should consist of. The King, though willing to give content to strangers, is wholly given up to luxury and voluptuousness, and refers suits either to his third son, Sultan Kharrum, who with a stepmother hates the Christian religion and all who profess it, or to Aseph Khan, who coldly considers their suits and never or very seldom grants them. Inconveniences of the delay in sealing the articles for establishing and ratifying the English trade. Whether the King is worthy of the presents yearly lavished on him. Why the Ambassador should solicit the King for leave to convert the money brought over by the English into the currency of the country by passing it through the mint. Suggestions on the selection of preachers and on "merchandising affairs." Personal affairs "I will descend at length to some discourse of myself." Concerning cloth, the main staple commodity of their land; is sorry he cannot give the Company the comfort that he could wish; tin, lead, vermillion, quicksilver are little regarded, of elephants' teeth some quantity may be sold; remarks on other commodities and the advantage or otherwise of trading in them. [Indorsed, "Received 1 January 1618. Four pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 568."]
- Nov. 25. 204. Lewis Smyth to Capt. Ball, at Bantam. Small quantity of pepper received since the Rose's departure. Some of their debtors are dead, some deny their debts, and those who confess them are very slack in their payments. Complaints of Rich. Harris who takes upon himself to be chief, and would give presents without Smith's authority. Refusal of the country people to buy the salt because of a report "that the English used to do their needs among the salt." [Indorsed, "Rec. le 14 Decemb. 1617 in Bantam from Tecoe." One page and three quarters. O. C., Vol. V., No. 569."]
- Nov. 25-28. 205. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Gratuity to Capt. Harris for his services. Purchase of nine tons of elephants' teeth from Abraham Chamberlain. Grant of 50*l.* towards the building of a chapel of ease for the inhabitants of Wapping. Request of Rigdon, gentleman of the King's Chamber, who had formerly had his freedom given to him, to become an adventurer without purchase, refused. Request of Sir Henry Hubbert [Hobart] and Sir Henry Montague, Lords Chief Justices, to be admitted free brethren, and to become adventurers. Hobart's opinion on the legality of the Company's sales by the candle in open court, and the sale and delivery of adventures. Capt. Best's proceedings very much disliked; resolution to send for him to know his intentions; names of others recommended to take his place, should Best not go the voyage. Answer to the overseers of Peter Floris.

Discussion with Capt. Best on his demands and behaviour to the Company; he refuses to sign a bond for 5,000*l.* to perform the articles agreed on, and is dismissed their service.

Nov. 28.—Gratuity of 40*l.* to Sir Arthur Ingram for former kindnesses. Complaint of Capt. Best; begs them to think of some other man; Sir Thomas Dale, Sir Rich. Hawkins, and Capt. Parker suitors for the place of chief commander; resolution to appoint Dale chief commander, and Capt. Parker second; Capt. Jourdain to go agent and chief merchant to the Moluccas. Complaint of Capt. Pepwell; the portholes of the Charles and Unicorn too small. James Rynd to be entertained as a preacher. Claim of the executors of the late Richard Battye for wages. Preparation in France of an East India Company; committee to attend Secretary Lake thereon. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 73–78.]

206. Richard Cocks to Richard Wickham at Nangasaki. The bearer, Andrea Dittis, the Chinese captain, has promised to send Cocks 3,000 or 4,000 taels of refined Japan plate. Means to send off the junk for Siam at once. Has written to Capt. Whaw to thank him for assisting Eaton in changing some money. Will have need of 10 or 12,000 taels more. The Holland general has sent word that he is sick, and will not come to-morrow to dinner, but thinks the rest will. [Three quarters of a page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 571.]

209. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Kerridge at Surat. The King continues his journey to Ahmedabad without rest, and by such miserable ways as Roe believes no army or multitude ever went; he purposes to enter Ahmedabad about the 13th. Steele is to meet Roe there with the goods and presents; hopes he will find no difficulty in their passage. Aseph Khan stands obliged on both sides between the Prince and Roe; the King drinks and is indifferent. Has not heard from Kerridge since those sent after Steele, and expects the model of the pearl and a note of what Kerridge had delivered to Aseph Khan or Nourmahal; if upon credit Roe might demand the money, for he will want it at Agra to keep his credit with the factors. Fears the pearl was overrated or over-bought in England. If a ship be employed to the Red Sea there will be sufficient means of remains for her relading. The old journal and ledger sent by

Fetiplace to be corrected of errors and sent to Sir Thos. Smythe or the Committee. Advice received from Ahmedabad of the sale of goods sent by Roe for ready money and very good profit. Browne is hurt and very sick, and wants a helper to keep his accounts. When Roe arrives he will every way assist him, but thinks it reasonable to ease him of so many labours. Banggam has left Burrampoor, as Kerridge wished. The hopes there are very cold. When Roe knows the result of his consultation, will then be bold to resolve with him either for fit supplies or contraction, but it is time to know, for there are many to be weeded out and sent home. The indigo ought to be bought in February or March. Much desires to know what is being done in the Red Sea and in Persia. Cannot write to the King or into England until he knows what is done. "We travel daily; I have scarce leisure to eat, or no meat, but ill water; a little glass of yours would help a weak stomach." Complaints against Abram Khan; Aseph Khan glad that Roe thought the English could not make so many complaints and the Governor honest; made him understand the contrary. Wishes to know if any of his letters have miscarried, for he hears of none received since 15 October. [One page and a half. O. C., Vol. V., No. 573.]

210. Francis Cottington to Sir Dudley Carleton. Sir Robt. Sherley is on his way from Lisbon hither with an embassy from the Persian, and brings his wife with him. His chief negotiation is to settle a trade with the Portugals for the raw silks of Persia to be laden at Ormuz. He pretends it will prove very beneficial to this King and his subjects. 211. Wm. Stonywell to Edward Longe at Jacatra. No business passed between the English and the Dutch since the taking of the Speedwell. The manner of her taking was most base. John Jenkins, the helmsman, was killed, and the rest were put into irons, where they have remained ever since. Has spoken to Thos. Mills about Longe's nuts. [One page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 574.]

212. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Discussion on the request of the Staplers to have that part of Leadenhall which formerly belonged to them. Wm. Kirke to be entertained a quartermaster. Sir Henry Hubbert [Hobart], Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, sworn a free brother, and permitted to adventure 3,000*l.* in the new stock. His opinion on some points of law. Ordinances to be drawn in accordance with his lordship's advice. Thos. Friday, a preacher, entertained. Wright, purser's mate in the Sun, to be dismissed if he marry before his departure. A sloop to be made at the request of Bonner. Complaint against the carpenters of the Lion and Sampson. Burrell about the ordnance. Payment of Sir David Fowlies' adventure. [*Two pages and a half. 213. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Kerridge at Surat. Aseph Khan's payment better than any man's, though his prices hard made. Mocrob Khan the most likely to buy things not requested here; hopes to make a riddance and put off to that fantastical man what the wiser will not like ; some love things of use, others will buy every bauble. The phirmaund received ; sufficient till a full trial. Kerridge's courtesy well taken by Aseph Khan and thankfully by Roe. His bills for Agra received, and the money almost all invested. 200 camels on the way these 13 days ; cloth bartered ; credit for about 25,000 rupees three months ; the proceeds double former years and in best commodity. Makes no question by this and the next year's practice to enter so into good opinion as to buy on time for a "leecke" (? lac) of goods, by which the ships will be furnished in time. Zulph and Shaw Hussen's debts at a stand. Biddulph with the latter. A phirmaund from Bengal cannot be had while the Prince hath Surat unless we will quit it. Desires trial may be made for procuring freight or wharfage into the Red Sea. Agrees that all monies and means be employed at Ahmedabad, and has written to that effect. Perdap Shaw's phirmaund was sent to Banggam, the mover of it. On private trade. Steele has satisfied him easily that loves not contentions ; hopes well of all men. Regrets Kerridge is worse used for the presence of Aseph Khan's servant. The phirmaund to pass all their fine goods will turn the stream again. The Governor of Surat is recalled, perhaps for their sake, but Roe will prove a more active friend to him than he was to them. Abulhassan pretends to be sorry for the Prince's usage of them ; says he dare not stir, but that if he were removed he would make a new Surat for the English at Swally. The King was not pleased at the Prince's folly, but, after his manner, gave them no satisfaction, but only bade his son use strangers better. Advantages of the phirmaund freeing them from the payment of custom on victuals, and the licence to the people to supply them. Biddulph's supply and the Court removing to Agra provided for. Hopes Fetiplace will abide by his charge. Steele may endeavour his projects, and if he fail utterly, being not so fit for accounts as for other employment, shall be merchant in the Red Sea, in which his language will do service. Commends again his motion to supply factories with new plants, so many resolving to go home next year. At Agra, Roe has left few enough. Ahmedabad he will purge. Burrampoor and Surat will require their advice. Banggam is with him. Coral well sold. Browne should be occupied in making investments. Masulipatam a new question on which Roe wishes due consideration. If the factory be continued, some supply must be had there. Utterly dislikes sending a ship of 300 or 400 tons to trifle on that coast. Kerridge mistakes if he thinks Roe would rely on the Suratters for a whole supply, but would buy all they had if at reasonable rates ; "private merchants make their own provision, but we are a company, and may sweep a town." Concerning his despatch for Persia ; relations, treaties, privileges, projects, and all of that quality are no man's to judge of, but Roe's, and he will either receive them whole or not meddle in them. Steele's complaints, and that he is not admitted to his consultations ; hopes Steele will be conformable, and his own friend, coming with the presents, will fully try him. Recommends that in the meantime Steele be admitted to their councils and letters ; his wife will be ruled and "return," and therefore consider her sex, use her lovingly, assist her, and lend her all fit comforts. Kerridge has not done as much as is necessary to Capt. Towerson, who will be deceived in Court and in his wife's friends; "if he will not see it, let him run his fortune; so the other women return, I have most of my aim; though I should be glad of his too." Objects to buying his commodities at three for one. Deterioration in the price of glass. The Venetians have sold here for sixty rupees what cost 20*l.* sterling in Venice. Mrs. Hudson's desires. Thanksall who use Harbert or Jackson kindly. Desires him to tell "the customer" that Roe doubts not before he goes out of India "to teach such a base fellow to seize a little oil sent to him to eat, but he will make it vinegar in his dogged maw." As to the consideration of fit persons to reside in all places; Fetiplace and Martin to be considered. Can give no opinion on Masulipatam but that he would not scatter the stock but upon good ground. Hopes to dispute their own cause anew. Aseph Khan remains the same, and hath feasted Roe, and they meet often. The Prince, against his will, shall be left at Ahmedabad, have that government given him and Cambaya. Aseph Khan will procure the phirmaund for Bengal, for he suspects not the English to seek it to betray Surat, but to increase their trade, and he vows he will make the English content and happy. 214. Nich. Uffete to Geo. Ball, at Bantam. Report that John Derickson Lambar, commander, has taken "the Admiral ship of the Manillas," and that the Portugals have taken two of the Dutch ships at Malacca, "the which is too good to be true." Yesterday the frigate arrived that went for Jambi. Begs he will send Wm. Wilson by the next. Goods in the storehouse. The Chinese will by no means deliver any rack at Bantam. Request of Lucas. 215. Carleton to Sec. Sir Thos. Lake. The King of Denmark doth set out four ships for the East Indies; so, as the French going upon the same adventure, the well will soon be drawn dry with so many buckets. The King [James I.] is likely to be moved to join the two companies of English and Dutch East India merchants. There are two things considerable. If the English neither join with the French, who seek us, nor with the Hollanders, by whom we have long been sought, the French and Hollanders may join to our prejudice. Again, the Spaniards and Portuguese may recover their ancient possession, against which they are only kept by the strength of the Hollanders, who it is impossible can continue the charge without assistance. 216. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Purchase of timber from Wm. Davies, the Queen's surveyor of woods. Fault found by Capt. Parker with the Sun and Moon. Explanation of Wright, the purser's mate, accepted. Arras to be bought. All matters to be settled with Rich. Burrell touching the sale of his adventures to the Governor and Mr. Crispe. Coral beads bought of Abraham Chamberlain at 10*s.* per oz. Transfer of adventures in the new joint stock by Dame Martha Hayes, Nicholas Crispe, and

Humphrey Smith, executors of Sir Thos. Hayes, knight, deceased. to pay 15*l.* per cent. for the profit and the three payments already disbursed at four months' time. [See list of transfers, pp. 99–100.] 100*l.* of Nathaniel Basse in the old stock to be sold. Choice of masters for the Sun and Moon. Nathaniel Martyn to be master in the Admiral; Mounden in the Moon; and John Weddall in the Lion. Robert, brother of Thomas Hackwell, to be discharged from his place in the Sampson. The ships for Surat to sail before the rest. Richard Weekes pardoned. Leave to Sir Thomas Coventry, Solicitor-General, to enlarge his adventure.

Dec. 12. Richard Weekes to put in a true answer to the charges against him of mutiny, and then sue for employment. Martyn to have his former appointment in the Admiral, and those who object to it to be removed. Suit of John Holloway, that the bill of Sir John Wield's for his pepper be accepted, refused. Respecting a debt of the late Thomas Aldworthe's, alleged to be due to the King during the time he was Sheriff of Bristol. Richard Burrell's account. 2,500*l.* worth of quicksilver offered by Hamersley for sale at 4*s.* per pound. Ordnance offered by Lord Lincoln for sale. Petition of Vincent Aiscough for his freedom to be referred. Wages of the late Samuel Juxon. George Wright, a poor minister, relieved. Petition of Henry Drimble about pepper. Henry Reed, boatswain in the Dragon, to be presented with a gold whistle and chain, of the value of 7*l.* Joyce, widow of Wm. Harrison, relieved. Petition of Wm. Cutts not to pay freight for his pepper. Agreement with Augustine Spaldinge, of Wrenton, co. Somerset, dated 3rd December 1617, to serve the Company five years.

Dec. 16. Concerning the estate of the late Samuel Juxon. Purchase of quicksilver. Petition of Robert Tokeley for pardon. Richard Weekes pardoned for Sir Jas. Lancaster's sake, and referred for further employment. The Staplers to have the part of Leadenhall they claim, on payment of 75*l.* Purchase of four small pictures offered for 4*l.* Mountney's offer to send swordblades on his own adventure. Offer of sale of certain jewels of the value of 5,000*l.* or 6,000*l.*, from "a noble personage," declined. Payment to Thomas Cutler for blades. Claim of Percevall, a Scottish doctor of physie, against Nicholas Withington, "for cure of his phrensy" refused. John Weddall to be master of the Lion, instead of John Munden. Petition of the wine porters concerning a pipe of canary. Edmund Morrys, for 13 years a servant of the Company, to have his churl of indigo without freight. John Morgan, a poor minister, relieved. Robert Tokeley's submission accepted.

Dec. 18. Suit of Washbourne to deposit 300*l.* with the Company at ten per cent. granted. Agreement with the Staplers about Leadenhall. Walthall's debts. Gratuity to Edmund Morrys for his art in the model of the Globe. Discussion on the number of ryals to be sent to Surat. Brass ordnance in the Indies to be brought home. Petition of Capt. Becke and John Tokeley, prisoners in the

217. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Kerridge at Surat. Cannot speedily redress the complaints, the King being turned to Cambaya, and not expected for thirteen days; will then procure amends if there be any honor, or sense, or common understanding, or will have his licence to depart. If free traffic be debarred them, they will not stay; "we will trade into the Red Sea in spite of them and upon them. Unless we profess this, they will be still cavilling." Never can nor will consent to Capt. Towerson going to the southward. He pretends to have gone to Surat to visit his wife's friends, and not to trade; has been cautioned to have an eye on his courses. Does not see how the Company can give such a liberty to Towerson, and restrain Roe and all their servants, whose deserts will equal any captain or woman. Perhaps the Company thought her greatness could do them some pleasure; if so, they mistake their friends; it is well if she can return as she came. Towerson arrived with many servants, a trumpet, and more show than Roe uses. Capt. Newse arrived, concludes without the Commander's knowledge. The English suspected of being confederates of the pirates, and robbing the Begum's junk. Roe told to his face, by the enemies of the English, that they were all thieves. Explanations with the King, and that the captains were kept in irons, and would be sent to England, to be made an example of for daring to disturb the allies of his crown. Difficulties of Roe's position. The goods and presents safely arrived; the latter still unopened by reason of the King's absence. Steele's artificers have arrived; they are to be set to work on trial for two months, under Steele's directions; he has also brought up some merchants that sue for passage into the Red Sea, to which Roe willingly listens, for there will be never any good trade in Guzerat for the English. Has interested Steele in the trade in the Red Sea, whom he designs for chief merchant, "for less than some chief will not content him, and it cannot be in this country to the injury of any." Has received the invoice consigned to him; can keep no accounts, but will assist with his best advice. Is very sorry Kerridge kept the best things behind, he will do well to send some of the "delicate pieces" and pistols, for such ware decays suddenly. The supplies for Agra will be "larger than his [Kerridge's] moneys." Fetiplace having assured Roe of 25,000 rupees credit, the keeping credit of such consequence that Roe has sold the great pearl for 12,000 rupees to Aseph Khan, which is equal to nearly 1,400*l.*; it cost in England, as Steele avows, 1,000*l.* Browne shall and will do all in his power. The Governor has much hindered them; he is gone to the King, and Roe is promised that the restraint shall not hinder them. Will please the old fool upon any conditions when he comes. If he (the Governor, Mocrob Khan,) does not fit Roe with a parcel when they meet, or give full liberty, will petition in the name of all the owners against him. The next Governor will be, or rather is, the Prince; they will trade quietly enough under him. They will do best to lade the Gift. Wonders Banggam is not arrived ; has not heard from him these seven weeks, only by chance a month ago, that he was on the way ; trusts he be well. Leaves all matters of investments to his judgment and experience. Greene, Roe's surgeon, returns this fleet. Desires his passage for England on certain conditions in respect of his goods. [Two pages and a half. Indorsed, "Read. Some mention made of Mr. Steele and his artificers. Capt. Newse went up to the court, and conference between Sir Thos. Roe and the King about the pirates." O. C., Vol. V., No. 578.]

218. Robt. Hughes to the East India Company. Refers to his previous letter, of 28th Dec. 1616, from Ajmere (see first volume of Calendar, No. 1187). His own and Fras. Fetiplace's proceedings ; they repaired to Agra with remainder of goods under their charge in Ajmere, according to orders from Sir Thos. Roe and the Surat factory. Found Joseph Salbancke at Agra with goods formerly sent from Ajmere. Difficulties of disposing of their cloth. Five thousand rupees transmitted to them from Burrampoor factory ; how they were invested. Robt. and John Younge sent from Surat in August to assist them. Purchase of indigo ; advantages of buying it in the country. Account of various commodities bought by them, including 30 Lahore carpets of several sizes. Have sent copy of the three last years' charges of merchandize and extraordinary expenses, both in the Agra and Ajmere factories, in the drawing of which he has used all care and diligence. Have dispatched the goods above mentioned by two caravans to Surat, thence to be embarked for England. Has sold for ready money but little cloth, and few swordblades ; no looking glasses, coney skins, and pictures have been sold this year. Are indebted 23,000 rupees to sundry men in Agra for part of this year's purchase of goods. Salbancke gone to Deccan to recover a debt. Thinks, if the debts be recovered, to pay their creditors in Agra or time enough for next year's investments, is persuaded they will equal the best that have been made in these parts for the Company, the prices considered [Three pages. Indorsed, "By a friend, Mr. Robt. Younge, whom God preserve and prosper." O. C., Vol. V., No. 579.]

219. Nich. Ufflete to Geo. Ball at Bantam. Refers to previous letters. If it be possible, to furnish him with some cask before the Dutch fleet arrive. The Neptune, Green Lion, and three pinnaces already in the road. They unlade great store of raw silk, cloves, and other prize goods. The Dutch would buy some old tackle if he had orders to sell it. Requests supply of money. The Chinese cry out for cask every day. [Half a page. Indorsed, "Pay this bearer 2s." O. C., Vol. V., No. 580.]

220. Fras. Fetiplace and Robt. Hughes to the East India Company. In reply to the Company's letter of 6th Feb. 1617, received by Capt. Pring's fleet. The accounts of the Agra factory for 1615 were sent down from Ajmere by Wm. Edwardes, with intent to dispatch them to England ; how it is they have never been sent ; copies have this year been transmitted. Are altogether unable to give the Company any account of the estate and goods of their deceased factors. The delay in lading the Lion, and also the Globe last year; the goods were at Surat a month and a half before her departure. Most of the looking glasses broken in coming over, and the frames warped. Will do their best to transmit copies of their letters to the several factories. Refer to previous letters (all of which are calendared), wherein they transmitted copies of their journal and accounts for the year 1616. The King and his whole camp removing from Ajmere, and after a tedious progress determining to settle at a place called Mandow, six days journey from Burrampoor, and with him the Lord Ambassador and Wm. Biddulph; the writers were advised to send the remainder of their goods for Agra. Concerning a debt due to the Company by an Armenian for cloth sold to him in Ajmere. Their remaining commodities are heavy and generally bad, and Agra dispeopled of the buyers of such goods ever since the King's removal hence with his followers and great men. Forced to send to Surat and other factories for some good quantity of money, with the help of which to barter away their goods before they were utterly spoiled. Great quantity of bad coloured and stained cloth on hand. Received 30,000 rupees from Surat; the greater portion employed in the purchase of indigo. Another 30,000 rupees, received in bills from Surat after the arrival of the fleet, they were authorized by the Lord Ambassador to invest in barter if possible. These sums, with 40,000 rupees the Ambassador promised to supply within two or three months, all invested in indigo, all very good except 60 or 70 bales bought in barter, which, to put off the much worm-eaten, stained, and bad coloured cloths, they were forced to buy. Prices at which they rated the cloth; the higher the cloth the higher is the indigo rated at. Have sold but three pieces of cloth for ready money and a few swordblades; all the coney skins, loo glasses, and pictures remain as last year, unsold and little worth. Transmit copies of their this year's journal with balance of their ledger, also copy of their first year's journal for 1615, detained by Thos. Barker, and copy of their three years' charges of merchandize with the charges of the several journeys of W. Biddulph, W. Partridge, Edw. Terry, and Robt. Young from Surat to the King's court; and account of the Company's business passed in Agra in 1616. The two debts made in Ajmere in Oct. 1616, for 14,000 and 30,000 rupees, were for cloth sold. Biddulph gives great hopes of their recovery within a short time, and so does the Lord Ambassador. Joseph Salbanke has gone hence with goods to Burrampoor, whence he goes for Golconda in Deccan, to recover from a Persian a debt of 1,700 rupees made in Agra. Inconveniencies attending the sale of the Company's cloth; it is so unvendible that they are glad to be rid of it on almost any terms; the Company will do well not to send any more for a year or two. Have sent by Robert Younge musters of such sorts of cloths as are to be had in Agra in quantities. The calicoes desired by the Company will hardly be provided in Agra, for litte fine cloth is made there. It requires a long time to get well-chosen carpets;

true Lahore carpets are not suddenly to be gotten. Know not what commodities to advise to be sent from England, all are so generally bad. Quicksilver strangely fallen in price these few years, partly through the quantity the Company has sent over and partly through the discovery of a mine about Lahore. Elephants' teeth will sell in Agra in good quantities; the women wear them for bracelets, "which is the greatest occasion of the venting of that commodity." They are worth more in Agra than in Surat. Coral is also vendible in Agra. The Portugals bring over scarcely anything but jewels and ready money. As to the sale of rich stuffs, "the greatest and royalest merchant in this country," the King, did not offer for the velvets as much as they cost. Refer the Company to the Lcrd Ambassador for the prices of all such fine commodities. Remarks on the value of other goods. Recommend the factories of Burrampoor, Ahmedabad, and Agra to be called down to Surat. Think the goods landed would be sold to better profit in Surat than in other inland places, whence the charges of transportation are great. For the speedy dispatch of the ships homeward, the Company must either forbear one year's return, or send a sufficient stock of money to provide the next year's cargo. To remedy the extraordinary charge of yearly sending four or five ships to guard one, the Company must come to a composition or make a peace with the Portugals, which done, no more ships need be sent out than can be yearly reladen immediately for England. The Company have power of the Guzerat seas, and may, if they please, force a trade by compelling the purchase of their goods. Competency of the Lord Ambassador, who is judicious and provident for the Company's good; congratulate them on having referred the disposing of all business to him. Have but lately understood of the determination of the Ambassador to send a ship this year to Persia to establish the factory there to better purpose; have no great hopes of success. The remains of the old joint-stock account will be great; how to dispose of it, by sending it to the Red Sea, Bantam, or some other place. Great quantities of spices will vend in Agra and to great profit; cochineal is spent, but in mean quantities; the prices. The musk in these places inferior in its price to that of China. [Seven and a half pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 581.]

Dec. 20.
Firando.

221. Wm. Eaton to Sir Thos. Smythe, Governor of the East India Company. Since his last he has been to Siam in the Sea Adventure. They endured much misery in the tedious voyage; 34 of their company died, and all the rest were sick and not able to do anything, save 12, who brought the junk to Tushma. They had neither cables nor anchors nor scarce a sail left, and were no better than a wreck. Lading of the junk at Siam. Great store of Indian cloth and other cloths from the coast of Coromandel may be sold at Siam to great profit, especially if the trade of Jangama be once opened, which it is thought it will be next year. The returns from thence are gold, rubies, and other precious stones, also benjamin and sealing wax, commodities in great request at the coast of Coromandel; besides deer skins, which are very cheap there. Jangama is now under the King of Pegu, who hath gotten it by wars from the King of Siam. The merchants of the country of Lan John, a place joining to the country of Jangama, arrived at "the city of Judea" before Eaton's coming away from thence, and brought great store of merchandize. No news of him who Lucas Antheu-niss sent to Jangama with a cargo of goods belonging to the seventh voyage. The factory of Siam cannot have less than six factors to be employed up and down the river as occasion shall be offered. At Eaton's departure there were but two merchants left in the factory, John Johnson and Richard Pitt, assisted by Thos. Winterborne, a seafaring man; Benjamin Farie, who was principal there, died 21st Sept., more than a year since. The Company should give orders to their factors at Bantam to furnish Siam and other factories with the goods that are vendible in each factory. The factory of Bantam is likewise bare; the great hinderance to the Company's proceedings and discontent to the factors in consequence. Commodities vendible at Siam. George Savidge has settled a factory at Camboja, although he was much crossed by the Portugals there resident; he writes there is great hopes of good to be done there both for venting of goods and buying of commodities fit for Japan and other places. Only Savidge and one other Englishman in the factory. John Browne writes from Patani that there was neither money nor goods left in that factory, not so much as to buy them victuals withal, until he received a thousand ryals from Farie, from Siam. The factors at Siam sent in March last a small pinnace with goods and money for Chiampa, Robt. Burgis, master, and Peter Hall and John Ferrers, merchants, the mariners all Japanese. Great hopes of good to be done in that place. Since his coming to Firando, Eaton has received a letter from John Ferrers dated from Chiampa 18th May last; he writes that the King of Chiampa received them with all kindness, and hath granted them free trade to all parts of his kingdom on paying customs hereafter; also that there is merchandize to be had, but not so sound as they expected. The commodities which that city affords. The junk wheron the 4,560 deer skins were laden last year at Siam arrived at Nangasaki in June last, having been forced to put into Chiampa, where they wintered all last year. Prices at which the skins were sold, as also the 9,000 that Eaton brought from Siam this year. Prices at which he has sold other commodities. Richard Wickham went cape merchant in the Advice, last year to Bantam and returned 3rd July; goods which he brought this year from Bantam in the Advice. Prices at which the Emperor bought all the lead and some of the silk. Edmund Sayer made a poor voyage to Cochin China this year, most men returning their money, because there was but very little silk to be had. There is no hope of recovering the goods Peacocke carried thence last year, all are lost. All commodities in Japan this year very cheap by reason of the abundance of silk from Holland, the Manillas, and Amacocoa [Macao]. Five Holland ships arrived this year at Firando, three from the Philippines, where they had a "bickeing" with the Spaniards, in which they lost three ships and the Spaniards one or two. Two of the Dutch ships fully laden with silk and stuffs taken from the Chinese, as also two junks; a storm drove one of the junks ashore at Shashma, where the Chinese cut the throats of the Hollanders, being but seven men, and so recovered all. The Hollanders have rifled some say 25 junks, others 35 or 40; they take all that comes in their way. The Chinese and Portuguese, with the Spaniards, have been to the court at Japan to complain of the Hollanders, to compel them to make restitution and have them banished out of Japan; but the Emperor would not meddle in their matters, and referred them to their own princes. Is ready to sail with the first fair wind for Siam in the Sea Adventure. His letter to the Company "is all one as this." Rich. Cocks and the rest of the factors at Firando will no doubt write at large. Hopes the presents he sent to Sir Thos. and Lady Smythe last year have come to hand. [*Three pages. O. 224. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Request of John Munden, master of the Moon, for increase of salary, but finding his motion so distasteful he craves pardon for his error. Gratuity to John Courtys for extraordinary services. Capt. Becke to be released from the Marshalsea on his submission. Draft of petition in the Company's name to the Lords of the Council against Capt. Best, read; to rest till after Xmas. Brother of Peter Arnold entertained for a midshipman. As to the factors' wages and their places of residence in India. Grant of 5*l.* to Ried. Ames, M.A. of Oxford, for his apparel and commencement; the former exhibition of 5*l.* to be continued for one year longer. Petition of Malachi Mallett, prisoner in the Compter, for relief. Suit of Thos. Pibourne concerning Tecoe pepper delivered to Barkeley at Bantam. John Weddall chosen master of the Lion in place of John Munden. Respecting the turning over the remains of the old stock to the new at Surat. Petition of Richd. Weekes for pardon; referred for employment. Edmondes, nephew of Sir Clement Edmondes, entertained for employment at Surat, and to have 10*l.* per annum for seven years. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 98-100.]

226. Richard Cocks to Jo. Johnson and Rich. Pitts at the Siam factory. His last was dated from Fushamy, 1st October last, he being then at the Emperor's court; since when he has received their joint letter of 23rd May last and all the goods according to invoice. The divers debts or monies disbursed by the deceased Benjamin Farie. Cannot tell what has become of Shoby Dono for four months past; bad condition of the skins he delivered and difficulty of selling them. Thought to have sent some one with 1,000 or 2,000 taels in plate this year to Camboja, in respect of the great hope Savidge writeth of the great benefit to be made in that place; but the junk had gone before Cocks left the Emperor's court. Cannot comply with their desire to have 10,000 taels sent in money; it is contrary to the Company's orders to send any more at all, but to Bantam, yet has always presumed to send 2,000 or 3,000 taels each voyage. As to their opinion to have the Japan plate coined, it may not be suffered to stamp any coin, but only to melt it into bars, and very strict looking to that too. Send two or three sorts, as they have done to Bantam, and whichever they find the best for sale he will send hereafter. Most part of the goods they sent are sold, also all which came from Bantam, but not all the money received. Names of some of the purchasers and the prices. Has divers times written to Lucas Antheunis, Gourney, and others, to advise him of the value of their Siam plate, but has never received an answer from any one. Their accounts are kept in Japan in tais, [taels] mas, [mace] and condrens [candereens]; a tay is ten mas or five shillings sterling, a mas is sixpence, and ten go to a tay, and ten condrens go to a mas. Wishes to know how many tais Siam make a catty, and how many mas a tay, or any other smaller specie go to a mas, and how many ryals of eight go to a catty Siam plate; they reckon in Japan the ryal of eight at eight mas Japan, or four shillings sterling. Must be certified the truth hereof to know how to keep their accounts. Have understood hitherto that 48, some say 49, ryals of eight go to a catty Siam's plate. Inconvenience and danger of not quickly dispatching away the junk. Esteems lead and skins a better commodity than wood. Understands "the Japan Ompra" is a man that may help them much in lading their junk, and especially in keeping under their mutinous Japan mariners. Privileges granted to the officers on condition of there being neither mutiny nor misbehaviour among the mariners. Hopes Eaton will go captain. Thanks for the book of Sir Walter Raleigh's which they sent him. Begs their acceptance of two "scritoris" [escrittoires]. Urges them to write, if but briefly, by each junk that goes to Japan. It is not good to send any commodities in small boats neither to Camboja nor Chiampa, the Portugals having set out many frigates to scour the coast and spoil the trade. Eaton, the bearer, will inform them of all other matters needful. Kept till 30th December. Has given the packing bill of the goods laden aboard the Sea Adventurer to Eaton. Understands that Peterson, the English umpire as they call him, is a man who may do the Company good service; has written to and sent him a small present, and done the like "to the Japan Umpra." [Four pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 584.]

Thanks for an increase to his wages and for permission to adventure his savings out of them in the joint stock. Craves pardon for having offended in the point of private trade; promises, when he returns to England, to lay at their feet the trifle he has made. Thos. Jask. 230. Edw. Monox to the East India Company. Refer to their last of 11th July from Saldanha Bay, with account of the chief occurrences in their passage. But twenty days' sail from the Cape to St. Augustine, and nine days' sail from St. Lawrence to the island of Mohilla. The captain gave a good sword to one of the natives named Toman Allee, who spoke broken Portuguese, but he did them more hurt than good. The Governor of the south-west end of the island, Xariffe Abboobacker, could not be persuaded to come aboard. Orders given to fire a salute, but through the negligence of the gunner five shots sent ashore close to where the Governor, many of the country people, and our own were attending; a servant of the Governor's unhappily killed. Notwithstanding, the King, whose name is Van o mar Van Odell, came, but no cattle, which they chiefly looked for. He afterwards gave the captain thirty beeves, who requited the King with several presents. Commendations of Mohilla and the many good things it affordeth in abundance; the people affable and courteous to strangers; desire rather guns and other weapons, and will accept rather toys than money for their commodities. Linens, slight knives, hatchets, and other edged tools may be exchanged with advantage. The road is called Demon, "and it may well be so called, for a devilish place I am sure it is." The James sprung a leak. A Portugal ship of 130 tons, laden with about 38 tons of elephants' teeth taken; 7 pounds 10 ounces of gold taken from the purser and captain of the ship, delivered to the factory at Surat. The vessel belonged to Don Pedro de Almeda, Captain of Diu. Weights and scales wanted in the ships and factories; books, ink, and paper should also be sent by every ship; all such things wanted at the Surat factory. All the gold which the people in the Portugal ship had, to the value of at least 500*l.* sterling, was returned to them, and 20*l.* more given to them at their departure; only one black woman and child retained for Mrs. Steele's nurse. Sir Robt. Rich's two ships taken in making prize of a Surat junk, with, by report, 35 tons of silver, besides gold and goods of great value; she was 1,400 tons burden, and had 1,000 persons aboard. This good service exceedingly well taken, both by the Mogul himself and his nobility, from whom also the Lord Ambassador conceived good hopes of good issue in his business at court and at Surat. Is sorry nevertheless to certify to the base usage they still receive at Surat; an example of it; wrongs committed by the customer of Surat, and their presents detained. The Guzerats make false informations against them. So long as the Lord Ambassador resides at court they will have no better usage. It were better to seize their junks; undertakes it would breed better blood in the natives towards the English than the course now taken, which will never properly manage their business in those parts. Incloses note of deceased men from their departure from the Downs to their departure from Surat towards Jask [wanting] on the 14th November. Thinks the Portugals will leave their ships in peace this year; four caracks arrived. Mrs. Steele delivered of a goodly son to the no small joy of her husband. The families of Steele and Capt. Towerson and their retinues pester the house at Surat, and call upon the Company's purse. Towerson knows not what course to take; the Company had better have given him 500*l.* than his passage. The Royal James hauled ashore to repair her leak. The strong waters and their rich cases, with other goods, spoiled through being badly packed. The Portugals and Guzerats have concluded a peace; the Portugals better respected and more feared than the English, because the Portugals keep them more in slavery than we do. Sugar no commodity for England. Left Swally 14th November, in the Bee; arrived at Jask 6th December. Found letter dated from Ispahan, 30th September, subscribed by Connok, Pley, Pettus, and Tracy, directed to an unknown commander, wherein they state they had obtained capitulations from the Sophy for free trade and commerce in all his dominions. Pley died four days before the writer's arrival [2nd December]. His death a great hindrance to the due prosecution of Monox's commission. Sickness of Thos. Barker. Only Connok and Tracy, who is but a young man, come to them. No advice received at Surat from Persia and no supply sent thither. Remains in Persia contrary to his commission; desires the Company's approbation if they think he has done well. Annexed,

230. I. *Reasons for the stay of Edw. Monox and Fras. Tipton in Persia contrary to their commission. Death of Connok on Christmas Eve [who died a professed Roman Catholic], the death of Pley, the sickness of Barker, and the death of Tracy, and not one servant of the Company able to do any business. 231. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Capt. Best, acknowledging the worth of Mr. Governor and of the honorable, puissant, and great East India Company, "who are ready to show mercy and extend favour to offenders, which is the true imitation of God," and resting in the expectation of their favour. Resolution to forbear the delivery of their petition (to the Privy Council) for a time, until better satisfied of the truth of his conceited submission, and the delivery of a more direct and plainer submission. Suit of Malachi Mallett; to be left to free himself from prison as he may. Petition of Henry Drimble about pepper. Joseph Colfe entertained. Jourdain to have power to ship home any irregular person. Bond of Giles James accepted on the surety of the Treasurer. Richard Fursland accepted for four years' service. Wages of Richd. Welden. Gratuity to John Jourdain towards his furnishing forth to sea. George Pike entertained. Debt of Malachi Mallett compounded. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 101-104.]

232. Nich. Uffete to Geo. Ball, at Bantam. Sent with his last, of the 25th inst., a bill of exchange of 400 ryals, and apprized him of a murder committed on board the Attendance. Has since unladen the goods from, and hopes within two days to send away the Attendance. The French vessels both very richly laden; the Flemings have taken out of the Admiral 17 men, and out of the Vice-Admiral 10 men. Capt. Dickers, General of the French, detained all night on board the Dutch Admiral's ship by order of the Dutch General. Presents given by the Dutch General to the King of Jacatra on taking leave; he afterwards sailed with six vessels for the Moluccas. Account of the lading of the French vessels; they have good store of ordnance to sell. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 587.]

233. Petition of Thos. Marmaduke, of Kingston-upon-Hull, mariner, to the King. Is able to prove that the shortest way to China, Cathay, and Japan is by the North East, which for six months in the year is navigable without impediment and for that time almost all daylight, the air temperate and wholesome. This discovery once made, and a trade in Japan established, it will be a six months' summer voyage, being by computation about 5,100 English miles, which may be sailed in about forty days. The Hollanders by proclamation have promised a reward of 4,000*l.* to the discoverer, but the petitioner, regarding his duty to his Sovereign and the general good of the realm, prays, "this passage being certain and the charge small," that he may be set out at the King's charge, or for leave for himself and friends to undertake it. 234. [R. Wickham?] to the East India Company. Sent copy of his last by Capt. Harris in the Peppercorn. The master of the Advice, John Totten, since visited with a grievous sickness. Departure of the Thomas for Bantam, 14th January [1617], with six chests of plate and 200 peculs of copper. Because of the unruly and misgoverned company of the Advice, it was thought necessary that the writer should for the present leave the business of Miako, and undertake the command of the ship for Bantam, also because of the inexperience of the young master, Richard Wedmore, and that the writer might negotiate himself with the Company's principals at Bantam on the affairs and state of Japan. Arrived at Bantam 10th March [1617], heard of the death of their agent of those parts [Geo.] Barker [Barkeley], who left a Babylon of papers to his successor, George Ball, "to rectify so great a business unskilfully managed before." No stock left in this principal factory for the supply of the adjacent factories, which is the cause of those at Patani, Siam, Succadana, Banjer-massin, Macassar being unfurnished; "with the now factory near Banda achieved with the loss of the Swan and the Defence." At present is to return for Java in the Advice, with a cargo of vendible goods, as lead, silk, wax, drugs, &c., hoping to procure trade in Cochin China. Could speak of the disorders and wrongs of many within these few years, to the great hindrance of the East Indian trade. Begs to be released from the labyrinth and thralldom of Gen. Saris and others' disgraces, and that he may be allowed to return to his native country, where he shall be able to do more for the good of the Company than where he is. At present is to depart for Japan. [Draft with corrections not signed, see ante No. 105. Two pages. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 790.]

London.

235. Nathaniel Brent to [Sir Dudley Carleton]. The merchants of Middleburgh and the East Indies have undertaken to furnish the Exchequer with 50,000*l.*, of which the King has assigned 12,000*l.* for Ireland, 8,000*l.* for the arrears of artillery, 17,000*l.* for Lords Hamilton, D'Aubigny, Hay, and Haddington, and 4,000*l.* for the Prince's mask. [Extract from Domestic Jac. I. Vol. 95, No. 3. Cal. p. 510.]

Jan. 5.

236. Robert Jackson to Geo. Ball, president at Bantam. Report that they should go away out of the ship as to-day, but if they come not ashore begs him to let diligent search be made among the ships for them. Was obliged by the master of the Admiral that took their ship to take down his flag and ancient, and was taken by force before the General. Begs, if not much to Ball's dishonour, that he may be released, and Robt. Ambrose paid two ryals of eight which Jackson owes him. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 588.]

Jan. 8.
Jacatra.

237. Nich. Ufflete to President Ball at Bantam. The rice and boards requested in Ball's letter of the 4th inst. are ready. Wil. Wilson sent to the Sabundar, who showed him a writing from the King, in which was demanded a kind of duty to be paid for every ship coming to Jacatra, called in Malay, Rooba Rooba. The King said Capt. Jourdain agreed to give out of every ship two barrels of powder, two pieces and four yards of broadcloth, or else the value; Ufflete replied he could say nothing until he had written to Ball for directions. Capt. Dickers arrived this day in a Dutch pinnace, and is to go for Holland. Two Flemish pinnaces at present in the road. A French fleet ten leagues off in want of a pilot; the King has forbidden either English or Dutch to go aboard, the which Ball may certify Mons. La Cane. Lading of the French ships. It is thought the King himself will buy all that he is able, which is thought to be the reason why he will allow none to go aboard. Has fifty butts of rack and a lot of pickled fish, in want of cask and hogsheads to put them in. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 589.]

Jan. 9.

238. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning payment to the wife of Wm. Addames of money lent to the sailors of the Thomas by her husband. Doctor Wood's book "for the comforte of navigators and such as shall travaile by sea," dedicated to the East India Company, commended as a very good work. Felix Kingston, the printer, willing to give 1,000 copies of the said book for his freedom, which the Company held proper to be distributed in several voyages amongst their mariners, sworn a free brother. Twenty jacobus given to Dr. Wood for writing the book and preaching aboard the Company's ships. All the ships to fall down to Gravesend this week, and then to be dispatched together by the committees. Imprest money to be paid to the ships by Atkinson. Request of the Lord Chancellor for one of his bed-chamber to be admitted to the freedom of the Company and allowed to adventure 1,000*l.* to be granted, if he will not accept 100 jacobus instead, which the Governor is desired to offer, as also to beg the Lord Chancellor not to make any further request of the like kind. Request of the Attorney-General for his brother-in-law, Sir Edward Cockett, to be admitted a free brother, and to adventure 500*l.*, to be granted, upon his assurance that it shall be the last request he will make of that nature. Letters read from Christopher Farewell, of 26th December last, for payment on account of his salary and goods, referred. Petition of William Wilye, surgeon in the Peppercorn, to remit freight for his pepper, refused. Letter read from Capt. Best, "making a dark acknowledgment of an offence, and citing certain places out of Solomon to prove that it is the part of a wise man to pass by an offence; resolved to respite his business till the departure of the ships. Petition of John Smith, craving satisfaction for losses sustained by the Flemings, and for the wages of Henricke Sedens-nore, a Dutchman, who bequeathed them to him, referred. Reasons for deciding that the patent for "the custom of the knees" should not be interfered with; Hukeley to be granted his freedom, and his good offices secured that nothing be done prejudicial to the Company by that patent. Philip Richardson being disabled, dismissed the service, with a gratuity of two double jacobus. Purchase of plank by the "committees for the yarges;" also of corn out of the east country; "in 10 years the company have not spent of English 300 quarters, whereby a great deal of clamour is stopped." Capt. Pepwell's goods to be delivered to Raphe Handson. Petition of Lucy Delemove for part of her husband's wages and payment of a debt and a month's pay yearly out of the wages of one Allye, an Indian, refused. Proposals delivered by Sir Noel Caron, from one of the "Maïos" of the Low Countries, for the English and Dutch Companies to unite, "whereby they shall be able to give the law to others in the Indies, seeing there is a new company setting up in France and another in Denmark," to be considered. Sir John Wolstenholme to procure a warrant for the transmission of the piece of brass ordnance to the King of Acheen. Purchase of two pieces of brass ordnance from Lord Lincoln. [Three pages and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 104-107.]

Jan. 9.
Aboard the Unicorn.

239. Ric. Hounsell to Capt. Geo. Ball, president at Bantam. Requests his directions for the removal of the surgeon of the Hope to the Unicorn. There are Thos. Symons and two other surgeons in the Hope. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 590.]

Jan. 13.
Bantam.

240. W. Stonywell to Edward Longe at Jacatra. Has not yet received the money of Mr. Swanley. The French Admiral arrived; he will have great care in laying out the money according to Longe's direction. Has delivered his two letters to La Cane, and advised Ufflete of Gen. Decker's escape from the Flemings, and of his being at the court; it is supposed the Dutch will detain the ship till the General be given up. Two ships sailed to day for Jacatra, but no news as yet of what they have done. Will remember Mr. Powle. The Solomon and the Thomas left for Macassar three days past; the Charles and the Hope are laden and ready to sail. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 591.]

Jan. 13-16.

241. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Resolution concerning Beale, who was bound for certain sums for Lutterford. Provisions to be got ready for the relief of the factories at Bantam and Surat, and a surgeon to be left at Bantam. A pipe of wine a piece to be provided for Sir Thomas Dale, Capts. Parker, and Bonner, as chief commanders. Petition of Alice, widow of Robert Walldo, against her daughter-in-law, the widow of John Walldo, for certain moneys, to be determined by Hump. Smith and Handford. Capt. Best's business deferred for consideration. Mountney's recompense for his servant's services increased to "eight score pounds," to make it 20*l.* per annum. Value of Christopher Farewell's goods, money due to him, referred to next general court. New lease of Leadenhall to be rewritten. Letter read from Nathaniel Martyn concerning his losses and crosses and the great expenses he has been at through his troubles ; motion to make him an allowance for his antelope, which cost him dear, and was very chargeable to bring home, refused, because by commission all were forbidden to bring any such rare creatures but for the Company's use ; but being unwilling to send him away discontented, he was given 100*l.*, and promised further favour at his return if he deserved it by his good service. Request of Sir Thos. Dale for Capt. Harris and Capt. Christien to accompany him in the fleet owing to his Vice-Admiral, Capt. Parker, being old and corpulent, refused. Orders drawn out by John Woodall, "general surgeon for the Company," to be delivered to the chief commander of each ship, who is to see them observed on the voyage. Careening of ships in the Indies. The carpenters' wives to be relieved out of their husband's wages during their absence, although an inconvenience, because of the difficulty of procuring carpenters. Complaint as to the smallness of the breadrooms in the ships, amended. Forty hogsheads of wheat to be bought at Surat and carried to Bantam yearly, for relief of the ships and factory there.

Jan. 16. Information from the Lord Admiral that Sir Thomas Bromley and Capt. Harvy were making a voyage from Flushing to the East Indies in a great ship, and that he had sent orders to the narrow seas for staying them till further order ; the Company, doubting not their designs, desired the Governor to thank his lordship, and so to leave the business. Discovery of copy of an act, confirmed by the States General in Holland, of the resolution of the Dutch to proceed against the English in the Indies as disturbers of the peace and likely to overthrow their conquests and trade. The Company, knowing their innocence therein, regard this as a fair warning, "which does second some speeches delivered heretofore by Sir Noel," [Caron] and therefore "direct our people to goe on peaceablie, be the more circumspect, take care of themselves and proceede soe much the stronger." Resolved to conceal the knowledge of this act till some convenient time present itself, "the Company, distasting much the carriage of the Dutch generally against the English in all places in the Indies, being more bitter and violent against them than the Portugals, who are content (as is thought) to wink at the English in their trade, although not to give them leave, and to forbear any further meddling with them." As to the Company compounding for Mitton's "patent for the custom in Ireland for transporting timber." Burrell suspended for discovering things out of court. Oliver Stiles to send in his adventure. Request of the Earl of Arundel, on behalf of his cousin Lamplugh, for some composition "for erecting and maintaining a light at Dungeon Nesse," all other merchants having conformed thereto, refused, as it in no way concerned the Company. Concerning John Holloway and his ungarbled pepper. Answer to Withington's bill to be presented to the solicitor. Capt. Best's case to be referred to the Lords if he do not present himself in person and acknowledge his fault. Burrell blamed for carelessness in paying certain moneys lent to Anthony Gomye to Mrs. Sheffield.

Report of the Treasurer on the great charge of shipbuilding, the charges of one ship with the rigging standing the Company in 18,000*l*. Committee appointed to confer with Browning of Ipswich for the building of a ship of 500 tons. John Chesheire, a steward, dismissed for bad conduct. A mark a week to be paid to Robert Freeman for his diligence as clerk in the counting-house. John Steele and Edward Fleetwood entertained, the latter to attend upon Mr. Fridaye, the preacher. 242. William Stonywell to Edward Longe at Jacatra. Has received by his letter of 16th inst. news of the arrival of Staverton and the purser at Jacatra, and of the death of honest Mr. Hanson, for which he is heartily sorry. The French Admiral arrested by the Dutch till they deliver the General back again; she rides between Bantam and Jacatra. The Vice-Admiral rideth in the road, but has not as yet sold any of the ship's goods. The Charles and the Hope to depart on Tuesday next (20th January). [Half a page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 592.]

244. Geo. Lord Carew to Sir Thos. Roe. News Letter. February 1617. Nine great ships left Holland for the East Indies. March. The Holland fleet returned from the East Indies; forbears writing of their actions in those parts, and particularly at Malacca, as they must be best known to him. May. The Dragon and the Expedition come safely home from the East Indies, but yet are not unladen. September. Entreats him to be careful to make the map of the Mogul's territory as he intended; it will leave to the world a lasting memory when he is dust. Also begs him to get the story of that country offered to him "by an old gentleman, the new Governor of Scinde," translated. Admires the greatness of that monarch; the description of the riches he saw, when he left Ajmere, exceeds all the reports ever read, yet he observes more baseness in that Prince and people than can be imagined. His letter sent overland mis-carried; knows not where to lay the fault, "and yet I am sure there hath been some trumpery used." Hopes he may, with the next shipping, be the messenger of his own health, "for your time spent among infidels hath been sufficient, if not too much." Refers to the friar's journey from Lahore to Pekin, and to his discourses upon the Indus and Ob; thinks he will do well to inform himself of those rivers. November. The Hollanders this summer again attempted the discovery of the North-west passage by Fretum Davis, and it is reported that all difficulties are past. They found a nation of pigmies, and took two of them in a small canoe; but seeing the cook dressing a piece of pork, and conceiving it to be man's flesh and fearing to be devoured, both leapt into the sea and were drowned; has

245. Geo. Ball, Thos. Spurway, and John Byndon to the East India Company. Since the departure of the Peppercorn for London they have lost Geo. Barkeley, he died on 30 March 1617, and was buried the next day, leaving to his successor, Geo. Ball, "an imperfect, cumbersome and miserable business." They have spent nine months over Barkeley's accounts, and cannot now send a statement according to the Company's orders. Stock of this factory under 170,000 ryals., debts only excepted, of which the most part were desperate, when Ball succeeded as chief. The rest of the factories remain as Capt. Jourdain left them, Firando only excepted, where the remainder is less by 110,000 ryals. Difficulties of making up the accounts; no factory except Bantam hath Barkeley's discharge for expenses of housekeeping, building, presents, men's wages, and such like, which during the three years of his negotiation will amount to no small matter. Unsatisfactory state of the Company's affairs in the Indies. Many invited out by golden rewards, but none stay, indeed it were madness to do so. "At home men are famous for doing nothing; here they are infamous for their honest endeavours. At home is respect and reward; abroad disrespect and heartbreacking. At home is augmentation of wages; abroad no more than the third of wages. At home is content; abroad nothing so much as griefs, cares, and displeasure. At home is safety; abroad no security. At home is liberty; abroad the best is bondage. And, in a word, at home all things are as a man may wish, and here nothing answerable to merit." Arrival of the Charles and the James on 21 July last after touching at Masulipatam; also of the Hope and the Hound on 15 Aug. and 21 Oct. As to their letters no spurs are needed, where there is willingness and bounden duty remembered. The Dragon, Clove, Globe, Expedition, and Peppercorn are past the Cape homeward bound, and Capt. Pring and his fleet towards Surat. The Solomon, with Mr. Lucas from Masulipatam, and the Osiander, by way of Acheen, have safely arrived; the Unicorn and Rose have also arrived from Tecoe with pepper. On the increased powers given by the Company to their chief servants. Scarcity of spices prevented their sending cargoes to Surat and Masulipatam. The Flemings thunder it most terribly in these parts, that the inhabitants, "for fear of taking," have in a manner given off trading. Two years past, notwithstanding Pooloway was surrendered to the King of England, the Flemings took it by force of arms, and the English factors and people there were forced to fly, leaving behind them their goods. Last year the Swan and Defence traded to Pooloroon, and the English were so well thought of by the natives that they would needs be fellow subjects to his Majesty, and made surrender of the island, with earth and a young tree, and with writings drawn and confirmed under the hands of the principal of the gentry, and seal or chap of the country. The like was also done by the inhabitants of Rosingyn for their island and town of Ware, situate on the island of Lantar, as appears by the translated copies of the surrenders inclosed [wanting]. Hostile proceedings of the Flemings in consequence. The Swan, on leaving Ware, was captured by the Flemings, and Sophony Cozucke with four others killed; as many more were maimed; the rest as prisoners were committed to irons, the master and his boy excepted; since which 20 are dead. Some of the crew of the Defence, the master and chief officers being ashore, in the night "ran away with the ship to the Flemings." Restitution of both ships was demanded by Mr. Courthope at the hands of the Dutch general then at Neira, but refused unless the forts were surrendered to the Dutch and all English interests disclaimed, not only in Pooloroon but in all the islands of Banda. The natives anxious "to embrace us," and repent not their doings. A prow sent to Bantam waylaid by the Flemings and chased into Booton. Another arriving at Macassar found the Attendance there. A boat laden with mace cast away upon a ledge of rocks joining the main of Booton, and the goods all lost, the men only being saved. If his Majesty accept this surrender the rest of the islands will fall to him, and will not be worth less to the English than Amboyna is to the Flemings, which yields them at least 400 tons of cloves yearly, and in years of plenty three times as much. Remarks on the insufficient pay of the Company's servants. Inconveniences which arise from the independent powers given to commanders of fleets. Hugh Greete, for fraudulent dealing, confined a prisoner to his chamber by order of Council, but released without leave by Capt. Pepwell. Observations on the Company's orders prohibiting private trade. Many of them compelled by necessity to trade on their own accounts, their third being too little to maintain charges, "for the other, it is merely fiction." Do their best endeavours to prohibit private trade among the factors, but earnestly entreat the Company themselves to take care of their captains, masters, and mariners. No goods for the Company's account have arrived from Surat these four years. Authority and power brought by Captain Keeling to give the fatal blow to all private trade. Review of the Indian factories. Surat and the dependent places, of all others, the most commodious both for England and these parts, if supplied with wares answerable to their markets. As to the abuses from the Governor and great men, remedy may sooner be found in the Red Sea among their junks than at the Mogul's court. "Nothing but fear keeps a Moor in awe; use him kindly, and he will abuse you; but deal with him in smooth words and nipping deeds and he will respect and reverence you." Sumatra and the two factories of Acheen and Tiku vend great store of Cambaya and Masulipatam commodities to good profit, and yield, besides pepper, the best gold, camphor, sulphur, wax, and benjamin. The mischief is, the King is a tyrant inconstant and covetous, and his officers corrupt, and no certainty of the English continuing there. The license for trade in Tiku, granted to Capt. Keeling, withdrawn by the King, who strives to bring the trade of all strangers to Acheen, and is, it is said, assisted by Nicolls, the chief factor. Remarks on the untowardness and peevishness of Nicolls; his trade with a 1618.

French ship at Tiku. The stock at present in Tiku and Acheen very little, but it is hoped Capt. Pring's fleet will touch at both places, supply their wants, and obtain a renewal of the King's licence and privileges for trade in Tiku. Bantam, the greatest place in the East Indies for trade, it yields at least 60,000 sacks of pepper yearly, and in years of plenty 140,000 and 150,000, which is commonly clearly swept off by the English, Flemings, and Chinese. Cause of the present dearth, the contentions between the English and the Flemings, which being known to these Moors and Pagans, is wrought upon to their advantage and the damage of the English. Impossibility of managing trade without credit; unless the English agree with the Flemings, the Company must either continue to trust or leave off trade. At Bantam the English mostly deal with the Chinamen. Outrages of the Dutch last year upon them, staying their junks and getting a ransom of 2,000 sacks of pepper. Interruptions to their building operations. The produce of Jacatra; a good road for shipping and a convenient place for building a warehouse. League between the Kings of Jacatra and Bantam against the Mattaram, by which their hopes of building are overthrown in both places, except by force. Jambi, though newly entered into, of great hopes, the trade increasing daily. It yields at present 10,000 sacks of pepper yearly; cloth of Cambay and Coromandel will vend at good prices. The English well thought of and well treated, and the Flemings, as in all other places, only feared. Patani yields little, and in respect of great charges, taxations, and other unkind usage imposed on strangers, begins to be forsaken, and is at present little worth except for sales of Coromandel and Surat cloth. At Siam, Coromandel cloth will sell to the value of 50,000 ryals a year; there are deer skins and Sapon wood for Japan, and gold and rubies to good profit, and if the country were in peace a place of far greater expectation in trade. Have had but little experience of Camboja and Tsiampa, which places they have very lately entered; the Company's factors there report that there are sales for Surat and Coromandel goods, and that they supply camboja, benjamin, lignum, aloes, and other commodities for the Indies. Japan gives out silver, copper, and iron, and good store of victualling. Although no great benefit accrues from returns from thence, they are of opinion that were Japan supplied as it should be, not with gally-pots, pictures, looking glasses, table books, thread, and spectacles, and such like trumpery from England, but with commodities from these parts of the world, it would prove none of the worst factories. Succadana is the rendezvous of trade for diamonds, bezoar, gold, wax, and other commodities, and a place where they have been time sufficient to know it; but for want of able and industrious men opportunities are slipped, and they seldom, if ever, get any but refuse diamonds and at dear rates. Stones now worth twice as much as at their first entrance there; the Flemings send greater supplies than ever. Accounts Banjermassin among the number of needless factories. Cassarian [David] is returned thence, and Bishop and Kendal left there for recovery of debts, which it seems they have small hopes of getting in, and being unprovided with goods or money to maintain their charges, are minded to leave the place. Macassar is much resorted to by the Portuguese and Spaniards, and still followed by the English, but forsaken by the Flemings; trade has fallen off since the Flemings by proclamation have forbidden trade to Banda, Amboyna, and the Moluccas. About 40,000 ryals worth of Cambaya and Coromandel cloth is sold there annually and other commodities. It yields the very best rice in abundance, and some quantity of turtle shells, but the chief profit of the factory must come through Banda, Moluccas, or Amboyna. If the English can keep what they have in Banda, Macassar will be of great import for victualling, otherwise of small moment. Banda will sell 40,000 ryals yearly of clothing, victuals, and other necessities. The islands will yield 1,000 tons of nuts and mace annually. General observations. There are no factories but will yield profit worth the keeping if supplied with fitting commodities, and with men of discretion to manage them. Through bad management, despite their best endeavours, they have been for a time forced to live upon the main to the Company's loss, and, in the opinion of many, to their shame also. The Company not altogether mistaken in imputing to them the shearing of sheep, while the Company shear the hogs. Dishonest dealings of Hugh Greete, by profession a jeweller but in practice a juggler and connivance of Capt. Pepwell. Forced to lay up the Osiander for want of victuals. Banda must be succoured; "the Dutch horse will not travail without provender at his nose, nor we English able to endure without beef, bread, and good drink, of all which we are too much destitute at present; would to God it were otherwise!" Greete sent home a prisoner; his diamonds cannot be found, and he will not give any satisfaction for the wrong he has done the Company in his accounts. Complain of the Company not sending over the prices current of goods at home, as the Flemings do, which helps to assist their investments. "The glory of a factor is the gain of his employers, and the contrary his discredit." The Endeavour, built from the junk Grievance, is serviceable for nothing. His Majesty's letters to the Emperor of China they can get none to translate, much less to convey them; have therefore sent them to Cocks in Firando, if happily his friend Capt. Dettis, who is a Chinaman and the only one, can get them done and sent. It is upon the promise of Dettis that Cocks depends, and as it were makes himself sure of trade in China. Fear Cocks' understanding is blinded with the expectation of incredible wonders. It is death for any "Chiness" to translate or carry those letters, or to give passage to any Christian carrying them. It was revealed by oracle to the Emperor that his country should be subdued by a grey-eyed people, and he therefore forbids all Christians his country. If letters be so hard to be delivered, trade will be harder to be procured, and cannot be expected by any fair course. Desire arms for their security against the Dutch, considering the weak state of the factories, and that they can no longer live in security with their neighbours the Dutch. Have of late had bickerings on shore with them, and lost men on both sides; neither is it expected that it will so end, for they are grown insolent and desperate, and strive in all possibility to oppress the English. What can they do without arms, in comparison with the numbers of the Dutch ? nothing. Insufficient victualling of the ships ; they are manned for the most part with as honest men as are in Newgate, or any other prison of common rogues. Bad quality of the ships' stores ; supplies required to be kept in the country. Remarks on the mariners sent to India. The Solomon and Thomas sent to Macassar to take in rice, and so proceed to Banda. The Attendance, now at Jacatra, will likewise proceed to Banda. Threats of the Dutch. Capture of the Speedwell on 26 Nov last by the Dutch between Jacatra and Bantam. Arrival in February last of four French ships, two from Dieppe and two from St. Malo. The Dutch took 49 Flemings from them, mostly officers and pilots, and the chief commander Hans Dekar ; they bought pepper, but, as the matter stands, their voyage is likely to be overthrown. The value of the cargo of the Charles, commander Henry Pepwell, 58,675 ryals, "as they cost first penny;" that of the Merchants' Hope 36,587 ryals. Hope they will arrive in safety. Account of the estates of deceased factors left in the writer's hands. Copies of the surrender of Banda sent, by both ships ; the protest of the Dutch against the English, and the answers ; copy of the Court Book, and their proceedings against Capt. Henry Pepwell and Hugh Greete. Refer the Company to Lucas Anthéunis and Thos. Brockedon for the more perfect relation of all things. Imperfect account of the estate of the late Geo. Barkeley and Ralph Coppindall, as also of Jno. Millward. The accounts of Patteson likewise imperfect ; during the short time of his negotiating at Tiku he has purchased himself a good estate, "though, as we are given to understand, in a very bad fashion, because he appropriates that to himself which in truth belongeth unto you." 246. William Methwold to the East India Company. When the Globe left the fleet, 9 March 1617, the rest of the fleet proceeded along the coast of Malabar, and they in the Unicorn gave chase to a frigate. The factory at Calicut, settled the previous year by Capt. Keeling to little purpose, intended to be dissolved, so little encouragement had Mr. Keridge either of the place or trade in the letters from thence. On their arrival at Calicut, Peter Nedham was principal, in lieu of Geo. Woolman, deceased of the flux. Nedham confirmed what had been formerly written to Surat, "that this country neither gave vent to ours, nor produced commodities in any quantity or at reasonable rates to return for England." Most of the cloth and other commodities left there were sold, but complaints received in place of payment from the debtors, who say they were forced to buy by the King. Each of the three Queens, sisters to the Samorin, presented with a looking-glass, the better to colour the designs of the English to quit the place, which was accordingly done, and their presents accepted. Refers to Nedham for other circumstances, whose year's service will enable him to give better satisfaction. Arrival of the Charles and the James ; their kind usage at Dabul. They freed the Dabul ships which the Lord Ambassador had solicited the General [Pepwell] to take. Nedham and the Banian broker having come aboard, they went the same day to Cranganore, the residence of the Samorin, where the broker landed and brought hostage from the King, so Nedham had conference with the King, who used his accustomed fair promises of payment, but willed the General to come ashore. The General refused. Methwold's advice not taken. Sailed the next morning. Three frigates of Calicut put themselves under their protection, for fear of the Portugals. Discovered two great ships laden, and of no force, under the Portuguese fort of Colon, but the General refused to make any attempt against them. Came next day to Berenga. Arrived at Tiku, where Henry Patteson, Diego, and Geo. Pybourne had been left merchants by Capt. Keeling. The Rose, laden with salt, newly returned from Bantam; John Millward commander, commissioned by Capt. Bartlett to re-assume the place of Cape Merchant at Tiku, and Patteson to return to Bantam. Presented the Vice-King with a looking-glass, fowling-piece, and other things, and gave other presents to the captain of the King's slaves and the three priests. Did not think fit to insist upon being principal, as he was commissioned from Surat, knowing that "titular respect were no just grounds to breed disturbance in the Company's affairs." Robt. Everard appointed second, to whom Patteson willingly gave way. Prices of Surat goods at Tiku. Death of Millward on 13 July [1617] intestate; his goods removed to Bantam. Death of Patteson; how his estate, which he valued at 1,700 ryals, is distributed by his will. Tiku will yearly produce upwards of 600 tons of pepper; goods vendible there. A factory at Baroach absolutely necessary, which may also on occasion supply Cambaya, not two days journey from thence; goods which Methwold has heard will sell there. Inconvenience of the commands conferred on masters, mariners, and merchants; the care of negotiation depends upon the latter, and they should be free to treat for trade or otherwise with the country people. The private trade carried on by the commanders, which he is aware of, but knows not how to prevent, only to give advice at Bantam. After upwards of four months stay sailed from Tiku; during that time were buried 23 persons, including four merchants, Patteson, Pybourne, Millward, and Everard. Left the goods, which were of small importance, in charge of Lewis Smith and Richard Harris. Arrived at Bantam 22 Oct., where were all the ships belonging to the Company in the Indies, except the Rose and the Advice. [Indorsed, "Concerning his voyage in the Unicorn from Surat to Tiku and Bantam, and all accidents. Received by the Hope 1 Sept. 1618." *See Court Minutes Sept. 11. Three pages and a quarter. 249. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Burlamachi to deal with Sir Noel Caron for the stay of the ship of Sir Thomas Bromley and Capt. Harvy, if Sir Noel think fit. Suit of Merabell, widow of Arthur Jackson, merchant, pretending that her husband had been robbed at sea by Turkish pirates, and complaint made by the English Ambassador to the Bashaw for restitution, he having detained those goods for certain supposed losses which he sustained by the Trades Increase in the Red Sea, and therefore craving relief from the Company; but they conceiving it a business fetched very far off and strained exceedingly to draw it to such a head, gave answer that it nothing concerned them, and so dismissed her. Offer of Bullock, through Sir John Wolstenholme, to join with another in the patent to attempt the discovery of the North-west Passage, "by reason that they understand in the bottome of Bottons Bay, which runneth in 450 leagues from the mouth, where a greate tyde of floode runnes and riseth sometimes 17 or 18 feet in height, which is supposed cannott bee butt by some current from the sea in some other place, which in probabilitie may prove the desired passage, whereof Mr. Brigges hath a very greate hope." On the motion of Sir John, that this Company have formerly contributed towards the discovery, and that he himself intended "a good round adventure in his own particular," and will persuade his friends to do the like, so that two pinnaces, which will cost 2,000*l.*, may be furnished forth; seeing these works bring forth some good, "as the whale fishing was found by the like occasion," a grant of 200*l.* was allowed towards the discovery. The surrender for Leadenhall, being engrossed, to be delivered to the officer of the Staplers. A patent for the transportation of money, presented by the Governor, which he had procured from the King. On the recommendation of the Lord Treasurer and the Lord of Buckingham, adventures of 800*l.* each were granted to Wm. Robinson, sec. to the Lord Treasurer, and to Sir Kaphe Freeman, a master of requests; also one of 500*l.* to Sir Richard Weston, though much distasted by some of the Company; but resolved to deny all others hereafter, and that if any of the Company shall move for an adventure for a friend it shall in future be paid out of the party's own stock. Adventures of 1,000*l.* each confirmed to Sir John Villiers and Lord Wm. Compton. Edward Seager entertained in Mountney's service at 30*l.* a year and sworn a free brother. Resolution for the exporting of 20,000 pipe staves yearly from Ireland, and for conferring with Leate on his offer of supplying pipe staves at 5*l.* per 1,000. Forty shillings given to Christopher Dive, constable of Poplar and Blackwall, owing to losses he sustained by the escape of one of his prisoners. Purchase of elephants' teeth at Amsterdam. 250. Letter [from a Dutchman?] to "loving and trusty friends" [at Bantam]. Intelligence from Sir Cornelius Vanberre. In great hindrance of knowing the great trouble and danger they all are in at Bantam. Has received letters with news of the arrival of their ships, the Harlem, the Amsterdam, and the Hart, with two prizes. Desires they should go presently for Amboyna, and that there they shall find that the General Jan Peterson Coome, with the whole fleete, have departed from hence; that upon this occasion the whole strength of the Worshipful Company [of Holland?] be gathered together and return with all possible haste. A new agreement has been made with the King of Jacatra, which is well liked by all. The consequences of treachery, if any be meant. Would have sent the agreement but for fear of its falling with their letters into the hands of the English, and that thereby it should be known how much they have paid for the freedom of the town and other purposes intended by them [the Dutch?] The Javas are glad of this contract, and come and go into the Dutch as before. The Chinese have bid so high for the cloth that the English President will not meddle with it. The Charles and Hope have left for England, the Unicorn, James, and Rose accompanying them to the straits, the Dutch having reported that the Charles should never pass the straits without they took all the Dutchmen out of her. 252. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Sir Julius Cæsar having desired his freedom in person, and "persuading that he is as willing and ready to do as great kindness for the Company as others are or can be," to be permitted to adventure 2,000*l.*, if no less a sum will please him. The act of the last Court to refuse any further adventures confirmed and resolved to be constantly observed. William Legge entertained at 4*l.* a month. Petitions of John Humphry, John Huffe, Thomas Hamlyn, and Robert Bell, gunners, craving imprest and relief for their wives during their absence, refused. John Nicholls, gunner and "partaker of the mishap which befel Capt. Davies from the straits," entertained. Gratuity to Thomas Russell, prisoner in the King's Bench, for his services and expenses in setting up lights for the preservation of shipping. Measures to be taken for the better provision of saltpetre. Canvas to be sent to the Indies for the use of the ships, as the cloth of the country is slight and unfit for service. Wages of Richard Stanley, purser of the "Sun," to be increased. Gratuity to Wm. Biddulph, factor at Surat, for his services, and his salary to be increased. Request of Sidgwick to receive money due for goods sold belonging to the late Capt. Downton. Wm. Browne's debt of 170*l.*, for goods bought of Capt. Downton, forborne until payment of a dividend on the seventh voyage. Calculation that the goods in the Indies are sufficient to lade home all the Company's ships, "which giveth fair encouragement to the adventurers." Committees for the commissions

255. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Committees to conclude with Bromrig for the building of a ship of 600 tons. Gratuity to Martyn Harrington, formerly "nouzeled up in popery, wherein he took orders according to the Church of Rome," but now conformed to his Majesty's laws, and in great want. Committee to go to Gravesend with the commissions and letters, and dispatch the ships for Surat. The piece of ordnance (for the King of Acheen) to be sent down on Friday. Capt. Best, presenting himself in Court, "submits himself plainly by writing;" the Company promise to write to Sir George Calvert and to use their best means to have his offence remitted by the Lords of the Council; he is to be ready to appear whenever sent for and to give his best advice. Permission to Francis Fetiplace, factor in India, to return home to take possession of an estate left to him, and then to return back again. Committee appointed to justify to Doctor Amye the truth of the accusations against Withington. At the earnest suit of the Earl of Arundel, on behalf of his kinsman Lamplugh, for some composition towards the maintenance of lights at Dungeness, "where are 25 or 26 nightly of 2 in the lb.," it was resolved to grant 20 nobles per annum so long as the patent is in force. Forty chests of money for Surat to be placed in the Dragon, Lion, and Expedition. Information of an Englishman being at Ispahan, supposed to be Connok; letters to be sent to him complaining of his not having written overland since his arrival. Suit of John Hills, carpenter's mate in the "Sampson," for part of his wages in advance, refused. Part of the wages of Richd. Griffin, factor, to be paid to Alexander Stafford in payment of a debt due to him. Increase of wages to John Courtys [Curtis], master's mate in the Lion. [*Two pages and a half. Court Bk. 256. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. Our East Indian fleet setting out stronger than ever, there being nine ships of great burthen, three or four of them newly built. Sir Thos. Dale should go general, but is like to lose his employment if he return not from Holland soon. The King has granted a patent to Sir Jas. Cunningham to raise a Scottish East Indian Company, he and his heirs to be governors; other large privileges directly infringing upon former grants. They only yet make a noise and show, and seek everywhere for adventurers, who come slowly in; hears they would fain compound and sell their rights and interests to the East India Company. Acheen.

257. [William Nicolls] to Thos. Kerridge and the rest at Surat. Has received the packet of letters sent in the "Gogeratt" ship which he sent for Bantam in the Osiander, which came from Masulipatam with a cargo of steel, all of which is sold to good profit. Commodities of those countries fit for Acheen. The King has commanded five hundred men to plant naught but pepper, which in two years will grow to perfection. This King will permit no trade at Tiku or Priaman without his sanction, which must cost a good bribe. The Company has sustained much wrong and loss by denial of their debts, as appears by the accounts of Millward and Patteson, who died there, being poisoned, he fears, for having sent the Rose hither to complain. Richard Harges now primefactor there. Baker, Phillips, Stratford, Uppington, and Whitelock, merchants of General Keeling's last fleet, all dead, with many more not now in his memory. Was in danger of being poisoned himself by a slave. Capt. Geo. Ball writes from Bantam in August last that the Hollanders, being at the Manillas with twelve ships becalmed, the Spaniards burnt and sunk six of them and took the best of their prize goods which they had robbed the Chinese of; in this fight the Hollanders lost 700 men. Also of the Hope's arrival at Bantam, Commander Capt. Newport, who says seven ships were sent this year for Surat. Also that the Hollanders took the Swan, John Davis, mr., about Banda, and stayed the Defence; the master and all the officers fled ashore to the Flemings, and are by them detained. Arrival of two French ships of St. Malo, the St. Michael and St. Louis, Louis Hance general and Nicholas Fruter Berdelero captain; merchants, John Decker and Michael Hance, the general's brother, all Dutchmen. The ships were laden with cloth taken in the Red Sea from Guzerats and Dabuls. Dispute between two native merchants; the writer interceded with the King for Nocada Amye, for the favour he showed to the English; begs Kerridge to use him kindly for the writer's sake. General Keeling, on his arrival in April 1616, procured a letter for trade at Tiku for the sale of his own goods, under colour of which the Unicorn has this year procured most of her lading; her goods landed are near upon sold. Return of the Hollanders after two years and a half, with letter from their president at Bantam to prohibit the English, Guzerat, and Dabul merchants from trading at Acheen, Tiku, or Priaman; the King's ire at their peremptory demands, and bade the writer ask them if they could overmaster the English. Depreciation in the currency of ryals of eight. [Three pages and a half. O.C., Vol. V., No. 602.]

258. Ric. Hounsell to Geo. Ball, president at Bantam. "Discourtesies pierce deep, especially where they are not deserved;" is free from deserving any from him. In reply to his demands whether Capt. Pepwell had been aboard the Unicorn and confirmed Hounsell captain; whether Pepwell had power to do so, and that Ball would ere long alter what had been done. Has six men with him who came from the Dutch at several times and are in want of apparel. [One page and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 603.]

259. Wm. Stonywell to Edw. Longe at Jacatra. His last was by the James. The French report that the Admiral is daily expected in the road, and thinks when she unloads that good may be done; but in the Vice-Admiral can lay out nothing to any purpose. The Chinese report that two junks will arrive in two or three days, "as their devil telleth them." Remembrances to Mr. Powers. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 604.]

260. Wm. Methwold to President Ball at Bantam. On landing their first care was to get oysters, but their longing desires were frustrated, because "in the time of rains the coming down of the fresh kills or makes uneatable those salt shell animals." Ufflete will advise him of the provisions sent aboard the Attendance. Conspiracy on board, the men refusing to leave the place, but they were reduced to an unwilling obedience and the ship has sailed. In favour of Soverin, late master's mate of the Unicorn, now of the James, for an advance of wages, he being sick. Desires his commands as to his return or longer stay. Disbursements on account of the Attendance. Requests his "dispensation or excuse" for Buggins, purser of the Unicorn, who came to Jacatra for his health, without the president's leave. [One page and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 605.]

261. W. Stonywell to E. Longe at Jacatra. He will receive his money by the bearer, Robt. Carter, purser of the Rose; is sorry he could not do according to Longe's desire. The French ship still in the Flemings' custody, not one ryal's worth of commodities sold as yet, and not so much as a shirt suffered to be delivered out of the ship to shift men ashore. [*One page. 262. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Sir Julius Cæsar allowed to adventure 1,500*l.* Cause of Best suspended in the Council Chamber, but still in the Company's power to have him called up again if he do not demean himself as is fitting. Accusations against Withington. General order to the commander of the fleet against taking any on the voyage but those entertained for employment. Letter from Sir Thomas Dale, dated from the Low Countries, 15th Jan., stating that the Dutch commanders have orders from the States to engross the pepper at Bantam and Jacatra into their hands, to undersell the English at home, and to weary and punish the English so as to force them to the desired union; advises them to stand upon their defence if the Flemings shall attempt against them. His intention to return to England by the end of January. On Lady Dale's application, 50*l.* to be lent her to provide for her husband's return. Thomas Mitford desires to have his goods and satisfaction from Nath. Martyn for things stolen from his cabin; he also pleads for some gratification for his good service; but "he, having deserved so ill, gave no encouragement to think any further of him." Committees to go to Gravesend to hasten the departure of the ships. The ships that go to relieve any ships they meet standing in need of men and provisions. Bargain to be concluded for certain frames, feathers, and pictures. Ships to take two pinnaces with them from Bantam to the Moluccas, to carry goods and run in and out to discover as occasion shall be presented. Lord Zouch having acquainted the Privy Council with a bill set upon the Exchange by a new East India Company, they all wondered that the Lord Mayor had allowed it to be set up so publicly to the discountenancing of this Company, and resolved to let the King know "how ill they all do conceive thereof and to crave reformation." Thomas Spike to be sworn a free brother on his return. Gratuity to Rand the preacher. Samuel Hazard entertained as a factor. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 122-125.]

263. Sir Thos. Roe's instructions to the chief factors, Thos. Barker and Edw. Monox, in Persia. To be instant with the Shah to force the Portugal to consent to a free trade; all relief to Ormuz from the main forbidden, or some port fortified for shipping. To avow Connaught [Connok] to have been a messenger sent from the King, though not with absolute power, as ambassador to treat and conclude; but that if the Shah fulfil the desires of the English, his Majesty will send ample authority further to contract with him. The points to be concluded upon which Connok already began to treat—the quantity of silk to be bartered for and how; privilege for a staple and standing mart at Shiraz, where the English may barter and trade with the Shah's subjects; free passage for all their goods on the conditions granted to Connok; powers to sign such contract. Directions in detail for carrying on the trade; John Leachland, factor, to be employed in buying the silks. Monox appointed second factor, and in the event of Barker's decease to succeed him as Cape merchant. True inventories to be taken of the estates of factors dying in the Company's service, particularly of that of Wm. Tracy, and the goods and moneys or debts of the late Ed. Connok to be seized to the use of his creditors and the Company. [*Two pages and three quarters. may be put into the second joint stock. Henry Elwaies to be admitted a free brother on his return. 50*l.* lent to Lady Dale by her brother, Sir Wm. Throgmorton, because he would not trouble the Company. Request of Jonson and his wife, Sedgwick's daughter, that the 200*l.* reserved by the Company to the use of Capt. Downton's daughter and child should return to them if both die without issue. Petition preferred against the Muscovy Company at the council table to be read, many of this Court being of that Company. Concerning a debt of 100*l.* due to the Muscovy Company by the late Mr. Basse, the dispatch of Paul Trigs with the King's letters into France, and the fourth voyage; Freman, not approving of the proceedings, renounces his interest in the voyage. Petition of John Myller for relief for the loss of his right hand, which was shot off in the Advice. Disposal of the 36,000*l.* put up in chests into the several ships. Committees to go to Gravesend for the dispatch of the ships. Gratification to Tucker. The allowance of powder and shot to each ship to be increased. Annuity of 20*l.* granted to Daniel Wight's father. Samuel Hazard, entertained for a factor. Loan of 100*l.* to Sir Thomas Dale. [Two pages and three quarters. Court Book IV., 125-127.]

266. John Browne to the East India Company. In reply to their letter of 6th February 1616-7. Concerning their affairs in general; the death of Robt. Gipps, the accountant, before he had prepared his books, left the accounts very confused, and as Browne could not trust on Chr. Farewell's judgment, he has run through them himself in the form they will see. Touching the accounts of those deceased, particularly of Thos. Aldworthe, Robt. Gipps, who died 23rd May 1616, and Wm. Bell, who died 19th June 1617. Reason of the detention of the ships, a fault where means are used to accomplish their dispatch. The office of mint master is in the nature of a monopoly, and the sheriffs are poor and beggarly; dares not trust them further than a pawn; they have not in all his time compassed the buying of a chest of ryals at once. Reply to Capt. Keeling's brutish and untrue advice; wonders if it were not by community to make his own filthiness the less; believes that none but those of Keeling's own fleet have been touched with that disease. The negligence of John Willoughby, a young merchant, prevents him sending the Company copies of their factory letters. In point of private trade, is guiltless of sending one pennyworth of commodities either north or south. Little encouragement to him when he sees Capt. Towerson, Rich. Steele, and others laden with commodities, and last year Martyn, Mitford, and others returned unfit proportions of commodity of more moment. Is persuaded the poor condition of their servants there will keep them clear of this crime. As to the payment of too great a proportion of their servants' wages, a cause of private trade. Concerning "the request or disrespect of goods," those which are unprofitable and those which will sell the best. Their treatment by Mocrob Khan and Aseph Khan, who disgraced them in the King's presence; suggestions for preventing similar treatment in future. Account of the trade of the Portuguese.

Supply of commodities; the sales at Surat cannot be hindered by Ahmedabad, because Ahmedabad is supplied from Cambaya, as Surat is from Deccan, Burrampoor, and those southern and south-eastern countries. Two things for consideration, the sale of the Company's commodities, and the prevention of others from serving this place. Disposal of the two ships of Capt. Joseph's fleet. A barrel of window glass received by the last fleet, but the glaziers all gone to Persia. Difficulty of selling the goods after they have been refused by Aseph Khan, who must first see them; hopes he may deserve as well of the English as Sir Thos. Roe opineth. Observations upon the powers given by the Company to the ambassador, Sir Thos. Roe. Arrival of Richard Steele and his engineer; account of his proceedings; anticipated failure of his grand projected water-works. Brought up last year from Surat the Unicorn's horn, and showed it to Mocrob Khan at the price of 5,000 rupees, "a price too high only for the shape, and five times too mean if it had the virtue he expected; and made trial of by the lives of a pigeon, goat, and man, which they losing, it also lost his esteem, and so I returned it aboard from whence I had it." Prices at which the quicksilver was sold. Two bales of sugar candy and two jars of borax sent by the Globe. The expectation of the King's arrival makes all things dear. [Seven pages and a quarter. Indorsed, "Received by the Bull 13th Feb. 1618-9." O.C., Vol. V., No. 609.]

267. Sir Thos. Roe to the East India Company. Their letters by the Charles arrived safely in Sept. 1616, and answers were dispatched by the Globe the following March. A journal and transcripts of letters will make the Company acquainted with their business in court and factories. "You may in some clauses find me sharp and censuring your advices from home, but you will find my reasons justifiable and my ends honest and upright." The little doubts that arose between Roe and Capt. Keeling soon vanished. Roe found him in all things a reasonable and discreet man. The English, suffering from the insolencies of the Prince, have this year made trial of Gogo, and searched all the bay, but can find no place but Surat fit for the Company's head residence. To waft the Mogul's subjects into the Red Sea will never give the Company's men bread and water. Jealousies of the Moors on the motion of building a fort; the English were disarmed at Surat, and "I am not yet clear of liberties lost upon it." Has wondered at the patience with which the many insolencies of the English have been borne, yet the English complain. Last year 200 naked men were sent ashore from the ships to take Surat, yet ten men would have kept them from passing the Great River; this year they offered to force the custom house. Is against building forts; all their profits may be eaten in garrison; and it is no way to drive their trade by plantation. The Dutch have spoiled the Moluccas, which they fought for, and spent more than they will yield them if quiet in seven years. Scinde they may go to, to lade and relade, but it is inhabited by the Portugal, and lies not well for the Company's stock. Bengala has no ports but such as the Portugals possess for small shipping; it will vent nothing

English, the people being unwilling in respect of a war they are expecting. Knows not what profit they can make by residence there, "speaks upon searching the bottom of all the secrets of India." The Prince has been his enemy these two years; had Roe yielded he must have been the Prince's slave; has stood out to the last, and they are now so reconciled that the Prince is now Roe's effectual mediator; his father grows dull and suffers him to govern all his kingdoms. The Company can never expect to trade upon capitulations, but by phirmaund and promise from the King; "all the government depends upon the present will." What became of last year's presents after they were seized by the Prince on the way. The Flemings planted at Surat have obtained a phirmaund upon almost as good terms as the English, though he did his endeavours to cross them. Connok got hold of Roe's letter to the Shah of Persia, and used it as his own; the substance of which was not to make any sudden conclusion with the Portugals, but to offer in general terms the English shipping upon the Persian coast. What Roe has done in reformation of particular wrongs and recovering of debts. There is no place of security up the river of Surat to land goods; they must stick to Swally Road. Great mortality among the landmen this year; fears greater in time to come. A peace with the Portugals the best service Roe could do the Company; made an overture to the Viceroy, which his pride never answered; since then the English have given them a knock or two, and at this instant Roe is in hopes of a treaty; but that the Company may understand the true state of this business, gives a full account of all the passages. Has tried many ways to force the Portugal to a peace; finds the best to be chastizing their neighbours for their sakes. The loss, hazard, and inconvenience the Company sustain by the stay of their fleets; dares promise to provide their lading by October, and so they shall prevent the Portugal, who cannot be fit for an attempt two months after. April and March the seasons to buy. The remainder of the old stock very great. As to the future lading of the ships. Whatever discontents Roe took were soon digested; the place provides him daily with new to put out the old. Never desired to know any of the Company's secrets in trade but for their good; is satisfied with their opinion of him, and shall, he doubts not, fulfil part of theirs to him; a little experience will confirm both. Banggam's service; every man seeks his own preferment; his factory upon good reasons, has been dissolved, so could not deny his desire to return, though a very good servant and an honest man. As to the Company's doubts of Roe's providence and thrift in regard to his servants. Difficulty of suppressing private trade, which hath gotten such head last year. The master of the Globe then ran riot. Large investments by Mitford. The powers given to Capt. Keeling; the care with which Roe has been entrusted he will use with modesty and take no more upon him than is fit. Kerridge quick, and will do them great service, he could not now be spared; is engaged to assist him in any of the Company's good intents towards him. Browne well contented with his first agreement; he is an honest man, and Roe hopes he will hearken to his advice for contracting his expenses. Fettiplace a most discreet good servant, and is now with only one other at Agra; the Company have not a better servant; his desire for increase of wages. Next year the Company will see what Agra will afford. Persia has taken many of the Company's supplies last year and this. Most of their old servants ready to return. Biddulph follows the court by reason of the many debts. Suggestions as to the colours, price, and sale of cloth. What has been begun in Persia should not now be given over, though begun imperfectly; remarks thereon; doubtless, if to be done, it is the best trade in all India; can see no way sure but a composition in Spain, which to Roe's poor understanding his Majesty's authority might effect, though Roe knows not by what pretence the King of Spain can prohibit the Company trade in a free Prince's country to which he hath no pretence. The means to furnish this trade will not arise from England; it is folly to deceive with hopes that will fail. Commodities which will sell well. Distate of the Grand Signor, who doubtless will seek to hinder the passage of the Persian commerce by sea. Steele is settled upon waterworks, rather for his own ends than any profit to the Company. Will do his best to settle this trade, if he may do it upon such grounds as he may have credit by. Has written at large to Sec. Winwood on the point of the peace and all else that may help the Company. Steele's other projects will be found in letters to the Company. Concerning the bringing of goods by the Indus to Lahore, an old project very hard to be effected. Twenty thousand camels pass yearly by Lahore from Agra and other parts with spices, indigo, sugar, and goods for Persia. Advantages of having the trade of Persia free and the Portugals friends. Steele's proceedings; has bound his wife to Mistress Towerson at her suit; was resolved to send her home, but she hath one child sucking and, as they say, forward of another, it were unfit to send her home alone among men. Steele's private trade; he laid his own plot well, having stole a painter [Hatfield] on board at the Downs, who is bound to him for seven years, and is a very good workman both in lynning and oil; they are to divide profits, as also he and his smith, who makes clocks. Dares not send the painter home for fear of the King's displeasure. Tower-son and his wife find poor reception; her friends are poor and mean, and weary of them; he came with hopes of great diamonds; is sorry for him and his little vanity, and has used his best advice to persuade his return; he pretends the Company's licence for private trade. Evils of granting this favour; it makes all their servants grudge. Mrs. Hudson claims the like for her proportion, but has also denied her; is the same to man and woman. Exaggerated report of Capt. Hawkins' money; it has fallen from 2,000 to 200 rupees, and is not worth recalling. Remarks on the presents sent; things not worth what they were, the Company's ships have made all things common; they imitate everything the English bring, and embroider now as well as the English. Thanks for the tokens sent him, their love to him is sufficient present. Was fully resolved to return by this fleet, but their earnest desire prevails above his own occasions; he will not fail them in his utmost endeavours. Shall take their offer to return next year in one of their ships, and to command her. There were never fairer words and less faith among the Cretans than in these people. The Company may sell 50,000*l.* of the jewels specified by him yearly for ready money, and their free recourse be desired by the King and Prince and great men, and if they are pleased the cry of a million of subjects would not be heard. Advice as to the supply, &c., of commodities. These seas begin to be full of rovers; Sir Robt. Rich and one Philip Barnardoe set out two ships to take pirates, which is grown a common pretence for being pirates; they missed their entrance to the Red Sea, and gave chase to the Queen Mother's junk, and had not the English fleet arrived would have taken and rifled her. Remarks on the danger that would have ensued had the design succeeded, and how Sir Robert and the others should be dealt with. As to the Dutch, who wrong the Company in all parts, and grow to insufferable insolencies. Advises the Company never to join stock with them to profit and loss, for their garrisons, charges, and losses by negligence will engage the Company to bear part of their follies for no profit; "but your accord must be by a stint at those parts common to you both and agreement to what ports you may resort without offence one to the other. If they keep you out of the Moluccas by force, I would beat them from Surat to requite it. In both these I have been large to Mr. Secretary and some of the Lords, that they may have feeling of the injuries and be assistant to you." Arrival from Ispahan of a footman from Edw. Connok with letters; remarks on Connok opening and suppressing the contents of Roe's letters. Has this day received news from Ormuz of a revolt of all the Mahometans subject to the Portugals; if it be not suddenly appeased, it may occasion the Shah to take the fort into his hands, which by a little help from the English might easily be effected. Audience refused to the new pretended Spanish ambassador, principally because his presents were not of great value, but by a later pretence because he was no right ambassador and had no letters from the King of Spain, but had come suddenly from Damaun, a city of the Portugals, the new Viceroy of which could neither prepare a fit present nor letters. Concerning Steele, who follows the court with as great expense and as many servants as Rce. Sends copy of the will of William Hemsale, the King's coachman, who is dead; he formerly served the Bishop of Chichester, Dr. Overall. Commendations of Mr. Young. Has sent his servant, Ed. Haynes, as one of the merchants, which he hopes the Company will consent to. Is forced to send home Wallys and others who have disorders. Progress of the King; he is good to Roe; his son lately better, who is absolute King; he has granted Roe a few privileges, and reconfirmed their trade and liberties at Surat, but will hear of no more ports. Is so weary of the ways of this court, which are governed by no rule, that he opens to the Company his full resolution. Assurances of his affection and right and honest services. [Seventeen pages and a quarter. Indorsed, "Received 4 January 1618-9." O.C., Vol. V., No. 610.]

268. Sir Thos. Roe to the East India Company. Answers to Steele's projects concerning the discovery of a port in the Gulf of Persia, where one ship may safely ride. The trade between Scinde and Ormuz; the great profit to be made on spices sent to Persia from the south; the trade of the Guzerats in the Red Sea; and how there can be any profit from the projected waterworks. Would have sent home Hatfield, the painter, but Steele would not then have followed the business, and may have complained to the King "that I cross his pleasure in painting." Steele avows that he came out with the Company's consent and privity, allowed by Mr. Salmon, and that no waterworks can be made without him; but Roe knows his drift and will prevent him. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 611.]

Feb.?

269. Sir Thos. Roe to Thos. Kerridge. Has received his of 21st January. Understands his conclusions as to the Red Sea, and it seems Kerridge thinks Dabul will vent all his dead commodities; remarks thereon. Would make prize of the [Guzerat] allies of their enemies; if the English do not, the Dutch will; had rather the English began to compel these allies to take them for their protectors than another, by which the English will hinder and bridle the Portugal of his profits and force them to some composition. "Now he lets us rust and decay in reputation while he gets credit and heart." The company of our ships will awe the Guzerats, as I have often urged, and make them see our friendship necessary to them, for my opinion is we cannot hold long in peace with them. Reasons why Roe advises the taking of any junk or ship of Diu. Suggestion for the disposal of the ships; the James for the south, the Bull for Sunnatra, the Gift for England, Capt. Shilling, and the Ann, for the new voyage, and the Bee, if she arrive in safety, to attend the Admiral. Will send no commission for discourtesy's sake. Two things considered; what merchants are fittest and what kind of trade to use. Steele intrigued in a work without end. Thinks Monox fit for the chief with two assistants. Not only approves the dissolving of the Burrampoor factory, but has ordered their sales and dispatch down, which Roe desires Kerridge to second effectually. Ahmedabad is cloyed. Masulipatam corresponding with Bantam; cannot expect a ship from them, the season is late and Roe's counsel good. Agra shall have four, the two now remaining and Biddulph, who must settle there for the King is removing; Banggam might also be sent thither. If Steele make a waterwork it must be in Agra. Agrees to Kerridge's motion for employing Rastell, Martin, and others; well approves of Martin's employment in Baroach. Consents to Banggam's return as merchant of ————. [Fragment. Four pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 612.]

270. Sir Thos. Roe to Capt. Pring. All the papers from Persia directed to Pring and Kerridge returned by the same messenger, and Roe's proposal to relieve the factory speedily if it may be done, and the entrance to the Red Sea not lost. Has sent instructions for the voyage to the Red Sea, to which Kerridge must add his for merchandizing affairs, and deliver goods to Pring to begin their trade. Answers objections. Thinks Jask and the Red Sea of most consequence. A ship shall be as soon laden from hence and upon the old joint stock as she can be from Bantam. To the objection that the Grand Signor "will embarque our English in his dominions for our molesting his trade, to which I say we go to offer peace, to secure his seas, and not to disturb any but our enemies that deny us trade." In the Red Sea the English will best make the Guzerat understand their danger and the benefit of the offer of the English. "If we are so jealous of our friends at Constantinople, how can we proceed in Persia?" Advice for the disposal of his fleet; how the inconveniences which have arisen this year may in future be avoided. Concerning the junks of Diu and Mocrob Khan. "The women are almost arrived at court, but I hope I shall depart this town before." Directions about a box of letters and toys for England for Sir Thos. Smyth; commends the charge of another to Banggam. Has long expected Mr. Cooke; thanks him for the surgeon. Assurances of his affection; "I have loved you seven years We live in a barbarous, unfaithful place; you in the sea, with more security and constancy. Pray for us, that God will be pleased to keep us, that among heathens we may be as light in darkness, at least that we shame not the light. . . . All the blessings that attended Jacob when he went out with a staff and returned with troops of servants and herds of cattle accompany you, that in the seas you may find Machinyma [Mahanaim], and at your return Bethel." In a postscript Roe takes leave of Capt. Newse, Copeland, Coytmore, and others. In favour of John Hatch. Perceives by his letters just received that it was impossible to supply Jask, and so that unfortunate business must lie in its wounds until better occasion. Has sent a declaration and instructions to the Red Sea. Is well assured of Capt. Shilling's sufficiency. Knows not how Rastell can be spared. Hopes his servant Haynes will prove diligent and honest. The Company will be weary of this trade at this expense, and Roe knows not how to help it, but agrees to the necessity of the ship for England. Begs him, in the name of justice, not to suffer Roe to be abused by slanderous knaves who he has fed and kept from the gallows. All the wrong Roe has done the surgeon is to suffer him, by a plot of Biddulph's, to receive his whole pay in the country and to cheat up and down; has found him a drunken, perjured, malicious knave, no surgeon, but a mountebank impostor, and demands justice from him if he will make no public recantation. Desires that Hill, who is an idle boy, may have "at the mainmast three barricoes of water poured in his neck." Wonders to see Goulding here. Gave consent for the rest to Mistress Steele but never for the minister; now her husband discovers himself, but one of them must break in this business. Expects to hear from him no more, for the King is entering into the woods. "The God of heaven bless you and all your company, and send me once more to live among men of honesty." [Four pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 613.]

the Great Mogul.

271. Sir Thos. Roe to the King. His Majesty's reception of his Travels has given him new life and quickened him almost in the grave. The result of the negotiation with Persia is that the Shah has sent his Majesty a very noble letter, with ample privileges for quiet commerce to the King's subjects. There are yet many difficulties unconsidered, which forbid him to give judgment either of the convenience or possibility of this trade. He delivered to the Mogul his Majesty's letters and presents, which were received with as much honour as their barbarous pride and customs afford. He has sought to maintain upright his Majesty's greatness and dignity, and withal to effect the ends of the merchant, but these two sometimes cross one another. The Mogul has written his Majesty a letter full of good words but barren of all true effect. He will not suffer his Majesty's name to be diminished for any consideration, and will establish by courtesy for his subjects as good terms for their traffic as any strangers or "naturals, or teach them by force to acknowledge his Majesty lord of all the seas, which this King cannot yet see for swelling." The Portugal is not wise enough to know his own weakness; the want of peace makes the trade to India and hopes of one to Persia dangerous and heavy to the undertakers. [*One page. 272. Wm. Biddulph to the East India Company. They will perceive, by his last by the Globe, what goods were sent to the court last year and the sales that were made. Since the arrival of the fleet, has had little advice from any of the factories, all business and letters being addressed to the Lord Ambassador (Roe), who will acquaint any with what and when he pleaseth. Excuses himself for not being able "at first sight" to answer all the particulars of their letter, having but once had the perusal of it from his lordship. Goods sent to the Lascar all directed to Roe. As to the sale of the pearls. The hangings and greatest part of the rich embroidered goods given to the King, Prince, Aseph Khan, &c., with the pictures, globes, and knives. Strong waters not in request; glass for windows not worth anything, being of no use here. The cochineal sent enough for two or three years, and will not yield the price it cost in England. Worth of other commodities. Enumerates goods which are not needed for another year and those fittest for the court. The debts at court slow in coming in by reason of the King's never resting long together in one place. Had hoped to have come home in this ship, his seven years time being near expired. Richard Steele, his wife, and his projects. Sir Thos. Roe's expenses. Is bound to follow the King; now is the worst and hottest time of all the year. Death of Wm. Hemsall, the King's coachman, on 11th present. [Two pages and three quarters. Indorsed, "Received by the Bull, 13 Feb. 1618-9." O.C., Vol. V., No. 614.]

273. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. His last was of the 1st Jan. 1617 [see ante No. 1]. Has since received their letters by the Advice, which arrived at Firando 2nd Aug. 1617, with advice of the receipt of his letters of 10th December 1614, and directions to attempt trade once more to Cochinchina; to dispose of large quantities of broadcloth even at a lower rate than before; to procure a sale for sandal wood, skins, &c., to be brought from other factories, so as to furnish good store of silver, which the Company are informed abounds in Japan; for, except upon the hopes of purchasing trade into China, there is small encouragement to maintain a factory in Japan; that the Company had procured his Majesty's letter to the King of China, and sent as presents his own and other pictures and some scarlet cloth. Also touching the purchase of the junk; a supposed error in his accounts; the supplying of patterns of all dyeing stuffs used in Japan; and the appointment of Edw. Connok about the Company's business in China. Result of an attempt at trade in Cochin China; Ed. Sayer going with a cargo of goods in a junk belonging to Wm. Addames. Endeavours of Sayer and Addames to find out the truth of Peacocke's death; he was murdered by a Japan, his host, with the consent of some of the chief men about the King, and it is said the young Prince was of their council. The old King knows nothing but that Peacocke was cast away by chance or misfortune; the great men and his host shared all the money and goods of the Hollanders as well as of the English, who were all slain together in one small boat. Peacocke's ill behaviour partly the cause of it; the King used him kindly and gave him large privileges to trade in his dominions; how Peacocke, being in drink, tore up these privileges and cast them under his feet, with other matters which much estranged the people's hearts from him and were the chief occasion of his death. Addames and Sayer very earnest to have speech with the King, but when he knew they would bring in question Peacocke's murder, "he being guilty of it," put them off, and had they not left they would doubtless have been murdered also; the treacherous host fled in a boat with a company of slaves and was driven on the coast of China, where they had all their throats cut. Things Cocks lent to Peacocke when he went for Cochin China, which Cocks requests may be kept from Peacocke's wages. Walter Carwarden said to have carried away all the goods and money which Peacocke left behind; "at least, they can understand of nothing which may be recovered, for there is no news of Walter Carwarden, so that out of doubt he is cast away." Goods returned from Cochin China by Edmund Sayer; money stolen from him; the Mandarin has promised to recover it. Thinks of sending Sayer again this year with Robt. Hawley, and to adventure two thousand taits in refined plate to buy silks with; is the more willing to do this the Chinas having hired Wm. Addames to go pilot in their junk, and the King of Cochin China having given the English large privileges to trade in his country, with offer of anything they desire, only he requests a piece of brass ordnance given to him, and asks no other custom; the Hollanders have already given him a demi culverin of brass. The quantity of broadcloth and cloth of India that will be vented in this place. As to what the Company direct may be sent to China. Hears nothing as yet of the King's or of any other picture, neither has he seen any sort of wood called sandal, but has only received red wood and deer skins from Siam. Is of the same opinion as the Company, "that except we procure trade into China it will not quite cost to maintain a factory in Japan, for now it is worse than ever, we being debarred of our trade into all places of Japan, only Firando and Nangasaki excepted, and to have our shipping only to come to Firando." Has been again this year, in company with Wickham and Addames, to the Emperor's court, hoping to get their privileges enlarged; their presents received as from his Majesty, including a "scritoris," with gloves, mittens, looking glass, and other silver implements in it, with many complimentary words, but in the end were answered they had as large privileges as any other strangers, wherewith they might rest contented, or if they found not trade to their content they might depart when they pleased, and seek better in another place. To his request for an answer to his Majesty's letter it was answered that the letter was sent to Ogusho Same the deceased Emperor, and therefore held ominous among the Japans to answer dead men's letters. To assurances that the English had no acquaintance with the priests or padres, they were told that was all one; the Emperor would have his own vassals to get the benefit to bring merchandize rather than strangers; so now it has come to pass, as Cocks feared, that a company of rich usurers have got this sentence against them. The Portugals have no privileges, only a monsoon trade. Has used his best endeavours to procure trade into China, yet matters have fallen out so contrary that nothing is effected, through the pillaging of China junks by the Hollanders under the name of English, instances of which Cocks details; whenever the trade is effected it must be in Cocks' name, as his China friends tell him. Desires to return to his native country, for he finds he has ill-willers, who go about to disgrace him, as Ball, who last year detained his books of accounts, and Jourdain. As to the junk having been bought at too dear a rate. Shoby Dono's junk, supposed to have been lost last year, wintered in Chiampa, and arrived at Firando with the first monsoon. Money received on Benj. Farie's account. The junk Sea Adventure returned again for Siam, Wm. Eaton commander and Jas. Burgess pilot; her cargo. In answer to a supposed error in his accounts, according to the advice of Geo. Ball. Remarks on the wills of Barkeley, the late agent at Bantam, and Baylie, who came over merchant in the Thomas and died at Firando, leaving Totten and Osterwick his overseers; "dead men many times are said to be poor, especially those which die far from their country." Sent last year a piece of the right root which is sold for its weight in silver; that which came from the Cape was dried up and worth nothing. Capt. Addames expected General Keeling's coming to have conferred about the discovery to the northward; it is reported that the Hollanders pretend to take the matter in hand and to employ Addames. Five great Holland ships arrived this year at Firando, the Sun, Red Lion, Flushing, Black Lion, and a galliasse; they report ten sail of tall ships at the Moluccas, for the purpose of seeking out Don John de Silva's fleet and to fight with the Spaniards at their arrival. Great cruelties to the Chinas, their junks seized, pillaged, and then set on fire by the Hollanders. Fight between the Holland and Spanish fleets; the Admiral of the Hollanders, the New Sun, sunk and two other ships burnt, without any loss of shipping on the Spaniard's side. Resolution by the Hollanders that their ships which remained should save themselves, one of which, the old Sun, went to Japan with John Derickson Lamb. The Red Lion and the Flushing, after fighting with a Spanish ship, brought two China junks fully laden to Xaxma, where the King would not let them stay, being no friend to the Hollanders; no news heard of them since. Complaint of the Spaniards, Portuguese, and Chinese to the Emperor against the Hollanders as common thieves or pirates, in which they would have included the English, but the Emperor answered "he would not make nor meddle in other men's matters." The Chinese persisted in having restitution from the Hollanders for taking their goods without law or justice, but the Emperor said, "If they had taken you within the precincts of my dominions, or that any of you had gone under my pass or protection, then would I have made them do you right." Vile usage of both Hollanders and English by the Japans at Firando; Cocks obliged to tell the Emperor's council that the English were not misused as the Hollanders were, or the debts had been lost. Great sales by the Hollanders through giving great presents to all the council. The Black Lion, of 1,000 tons, sent away, fully laden with silk and stuffs for Bantam; the Flushing, of 700 tons, sent to the Moluccas; disposition of the rest of the Holland ships. Broil between a Portuguese carac and some Japanese, in which one or two of the latter were slain. The Tono or King of Umbra, had ordered three or four Lascars or slaves to be executed, which it was thought better men deserved. Indignities offered by the Hollanders to the English, in "an island" taken possession of in the King's name; they "pulled down the [English] colours, tore them in pieces in disdain, and wiped their backsides with the pieces." Those who saw this done reported it to Cocks. Ship set out for discovery by certain merchants of Amsterdam "found a passage in 58 degrees to the southward of the Straits of Magellan, not a narrow long strait, as Magellanus is, but after they entered came into a large sea, and so passed about Nova Guinea and came to the Moluccas, where the President of the Hollanders seized on the ship and men, for that they came not out under licence of the Winthebbers or Holland company." The Chinese lately begun to trade with the islands Fermosa, but none but small shipping can enter. Whether he should accept an offer to trade. Has previously made this demand of the Company, but had no answer. Has received two letters from his Majesty to the King of China, sent from Bantam by Mr. Ball, one in friendly sort, the other some stricter terms. Ball writes that no Chinese at Bantam dare either translate them, or carry them when translated, upon pain of their lives and ruin of all their generation. Their China friends, Andrea Dittis and Capt. Whaw, will not only translate them but send them by such as will see them delivered, but they are of opinion not to send the threatening letter, for they are assured there will nothing be done with the King (of

China) by force; Peacocke's threatening speeches made him and the English nation worse thought of and brought him to his end. Will soon go to Nangasaki and see Ed. Sayer dispatched away towards Cochin China, and take counsel with these China friends to get his Majesty's letter translated into Chinese and sent away. All the silk sold and the prices; no present given to the King or his officers. Suggestions for the transportation of goods to different places. Employment of shipping to Siam; impossible to send shipping from Bantam to touch at Patani and Siam and then sail for Japan; and to send a ship directly for Cochin China would require a great stock and most part ready money, otherwise silk cannot be bought. As to Addames' debt of 50% to the Company, who gives many thanks for the care they have had of his wife. His desire to have gone for England this year, but the Chinas earnest to have him go pilot for Cochin China. Ambassadors from the King of Corea to the Emperor of Japan were attended by about 500 men and were royally entertained, by the Emperor's command, by all the Tonos or Kings of Japan through whose territories they passed, and at the public charge; they dined at the Emperor's table and were served by all the Tonos of Japan, every one having a head attire of a reddish colour with a little mark of silver like a feather in it; Addames was present. Endeavoured to gain speech with the Ambassadors, but was unsuccessful, the King of Tushma the cause, he fearing that the English might procure trade if Cocksgot acquainted with the ambassadors. His answer to the Japan lords who wished to know why he sought acquaintance with such barbarous people. The elephants' teeth all sold. Great charge of sending shipping to Siam. Suggestions for avoiding the sending of money from Japan to Siam, Camboja, and Chiampa. Concerning money due to Benjamin Farie before his death. The dangerous sickness of [Capt. John] Totten caused his stay at Firando last year. As to the cargo of goods sent from Siam, also Capt. Jourdain's account. Expenses of Richard Wickham, Wm. Eaton, Edmond Sayer, and John Osterwick. Cannot trust their cloth to Japans to sell. The three thousand taels borrowed last year of the Chinas, to pay 20 per cent. interest, has been repaid. The King of Firando has paid two thousand taels in money and rice out of the three thousand he owed. His frequent journeys to the Japan court hinder him considerably, in matters of account especially. [*Eighteen pages. Indorsed, "Received the 6th November 1619, by the Little James." 274. Abstract of letter from R. Cocks, agent for the East India Company in Firando. The manner of the Emperor's acceptance of the King's letter, and the present delivered in his Majesty's name he very kindly accepted, but denied to renew privileges taken away in his late father's time, saying the English had as many as any other strangers. Describes the entertainment of ambassadors coming to condole for his father's death and to congratulate him on his accession to the crown, and the presents they brought, 100 falcons and 100 tiger skins. Relates divers fights by sea betwixt the Spanish and Dutch fleets in those parts ; and outrages and cruelties of the Dutch to the Chinese, giving themselves out to be Englishmen so as to lay the imputation upon the English nation ; their many injuries to the English nation and opprobrious and insufferable behaviour to the King's sacred person. Describes the great superiority of the Daire or chief priest over the Emperor to that of the Pope over any prince in Christendon. [One page. East Indies, Vol. I., No. 60.]

275. Rich. Cocks to Geo. Ball at Bantam. Has received his letters from Rich. Wickham by the Advice. As to the death of Capt. Barkeley ; believes it is more trouble to keep the accounts of the factory of Firando than of Bantam ; the lading of ebony for the Hollanders in the Osiander ; the death of Damyan and the honesty of other Spaniards ; and the favour Cocks has shown to Andrea Dittis and his brother, Captain Whaw ; these do not find it a matter of such great difficulty as it seems the Chinese do at Bantam to translate the King's letters to the Emperor of China, they having promised to translate and send them. Touching the opinion of the Company that the Japan factory should furnish the factory at Bantam and all other factories in India with silver and send an overplus to England ; the advice of General Sayer to send iron to Japan ; and Cocks informing Capt. Saris that silks were to be had in abundance at Siam and Patani. As to privileges for trade in Japan, the English have as large as any others. Money transactions with the China Captain Andrea Dittis and Wickham. Ball's judgment of the trade with Japan, Siam, and Cochin China. Account of the lading of the Thomas from Japan to Bantam. Reasons for the hasty departure of Wm. Eaton for Siam and his dealings for the late [John] Baylie for which Ball thinks Cocks will not pass blameless without giving a better account thereof. As to Ball's taxing him with speaking well of Capt. Saris and Peacocke, and keeping back his (Cocks') books of account, and Cocks writing in commendation of Andrea Dittis the China captain and W. Eaton, and saying that Ed. Sayer was the best pilot to save junks and goods. The Hollanders give out in all places where they rob that they are Englishmen, which reports have reached China. Replies to Ball's charges that Cocks gave passage to Chinese to trade to and fro in English shipping to the prejudice of the East India Company. Is of opinion that their Japan trade is at the best which is "starknaught" except entrance into China be purchased, Cocks' only hope. The junk from Siam which was thought to have been cast away has arrived, as also the junk Sea Adventure. If Ball thinks fit the factories of Siam, Camboja, and Chiampa may be supplied yearly from hence. The junk set forth last year by Addames in which Ed. Sayer sailed was chiefly to learn the truth of Peacocke's death, there having been so many contrary reports, but now it is known for a truth that he was treacherously murdered by means of his host a Japan, yet not without the privity of the King's chief man or secretary, and it is thought the young prince had a hand in it but the old King knows nothing of it and thinks Peacocke was cast away by casualty. Addames and Sayer did their best to get speech with the King but were not permitted, and had they ventured to go to Court they would have been murdered by the way as Peacocke was. This year Sayer goes again [to Cochin China] accompanied by Robt. Hawley to buy silk. All their silk, deer skins, and red wood sold, and some broad cloth; the prices. Went this year to the Japan Court accompanied by Wickham and Addames to endeavour to procure greater privileges but was told that their privileges were as great as other strangers'. Five great Holland ships arrived this year from the Manillas where they had a bickering with the Spaniards who got the best of it, the Hollanders losing three ships and the Spaniards one. The Hollanders did not leave empty handed in spite of the petitions of the Spaniards, Portuguese, and Chinese to the Emperor against them, but the Hollanders have got enough to make war these seven years. The Flushing left a month past for the Moluccas fully laden with provisions and much ready money. The Sea Adventure sailed for Siam in January last, with Eaton, chief commander, and Jas. Burgis, pilot; her lading. Thanks for the two English chronicles sent by Wickham. Presents he sends to Ball. Incloses copies of letters he has received from Siam, Camboja, and Chiampa, and invoice of goods received by the Sea Adventure [wanting]. Debts due to the factory from their host of Osaka, the King of Firando, and others. [*Fourteen pages. Indorsed, "Copy of his letter written to Geo. 276. Sir Thos. Roe to Sir Thos. Smythe. The people weary of the English; the King hath no content; he expects great presents; no trade but what feeds his insatiable appetite after stones, rich and rare prices of any kind of art. His promises not to be relied on; "fear only keeps us in, and until they feel us once more and that his own subjects petition for us, we shall never obtain more than to rull out in a chargeable trade." "To give you testimony of your power in me, I changed resolution to stay this year, which will fulfil my banishment of five years." The presents sent this year were too good; wishes no more to be sent in the King's name; until the whole course be changed, the merchant that goes to court to show his goods will give one toy for his entrance; this will be less trouble and charge, they have got into a custom of slavery now duly expected. Is not desirous of command over his servants. Certifies to Mr. Kerridge's services. Has received some tokens from the Company. The pearls are either over-rated or dearer in England than there. Expressions of gratitude for his love and kindness: "If I live you shall find what impression your love hath made in me, and if I die you shall lose more than yet you know of, because you cannot know my heart." The ship sent out by Roe in which Smythe was an adventurer is returned rich; he left all her papers with Sir John Brookes. Money matters; is not yet so rich as to send home any. The privileges for trade to Persia are very good, but the port and ground to proceed in the trade yet uncertain. His own and Mr. Kerridge's proceedings in that business, "be for love to his own project, I for your general good." Has sent home Anthony Wallys and some others. In reference to Mr. Steele who brought a maid of Capt. Towerson's to sea and married her at the Cape under a bush, and their intriguing themselves into the King's favour; he dares not trust him with goods seeing he will follow the court with his wife; "I assure you he is now our affliction, and may be my shame for ever yielding to suffer him to land." Capt. Towerson pleads leave to trade; he will be deceived in expectation of his friends. Roe's surgeon, Greene, and one Hill, late servant to Sir John Scott, have obtained passages; the former is a slanderous, drunken, malicious knave, the latter a vain idle boy; wishes Greene's goods may be seized until he be humble and confess his dishonesties. Is infinitely weary of this unprofitable employment; the success is not what he aimed at or has had in other employments, "but he that will please all men can never please the honestest." 277. Edmund Sayer to Sir Thos. Smythe. His last letter was dated 26 January 1616-7. Arrived in Cochin China 22 April following, and received message from the King that they were welcome into his country, and should be well housed and should trade for anything his country afforded. Inquired very diligently concerning the death of Peacocke and Walter Carwarden; their host, a japanner and a mandarin, now secretary to the great King "the greatest occasion of their making away" because of their money and goods. It is said that Peacocke set the King at nought, tore the commission which he had given him, and trod it under his feet, besides giving them threatening speeches. How they cunningly got Peacocke to go up the river to Miako with a parcel of silk, "stumbled his boat and overset him into the river and afterwards killed him with their lances in the water, they presently reporting that they were cast away by mere mischance." Carwarden who stayed behind to look to the house, escaped aboard a junk to save his life but was cast away in a great storm. The japanner, Peacocke's murderer, fearful the writer would seek justice from the King, secretly left in a vessel with 30 other Japanese and put into China not far from Macao where all their throats were cut by the Chinese. How the mandarin secretary prevented their going to the King, being fearful of losing his head, but obtained very large privileges for the English to trade and settle a factory. The King much displeased they were not suffered to go to him themselves saying he desired much to see their nation; hopes to see the King next year. Commodities he has sold and bought. A bag of money stolen through the wall of his house, made of reeds. Intends going again this year to Cochin China with a cargo of money to buy silk when he makes no doubt of recovering the lost money. [*Two pages and a half. Feb. 17. 278. Rich. Cocks to the East India Company "by the Advice by way of Bantam." Addames has sent 50*l.* more by this ship to be paid to his wife in England besides the three score he sent in the Thomas last year, out of which the Company may pay themselves the money lent to her; he also gives humble thanks for the care they have had of his poor wife in his absence. Sends note of monies received by Ed. Camden at Bantam out of the Clove, Hector, and Thomas; also copies of the journals to Geo. Ball to go by first conveyance to England. Wickham goes in this ship for Bantam; does not know whether he will return to Japan or go for England. Account of Japan plate sent over. - Feb. 20. 280. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Charge to Sir Thomas Dale, Capt. Wm. Parker, and Capt. Jourdain to seek trade at the Moluccas and there to endeavour it by all means possible and not to be put by with threats or attempts of the Dutch. Sir Thos. Dale to be informed how distastefully the Company take his employing his money in private trade in the Indies contrary to his promise and bond. A day to be appointed for the departure of the ships and Sir Thos. Dale to have notice. Application for the freedom of Thomas Mustard. Request of Christopher Brooke for payment of a debt of 1,000*l.* out of the means of Sir Thomas Roe, granted. Lutterford's accounts to be examined; debt due for Canada voyage. Thomas Span, gunner, dismissed for his drunken and mutinous character. Claims upon the estate of Aldworthe for certain indigo, and during his shrievalty, to be examined into. Differences between the widows of Robt. and John Waldo, to be determined. Request of Wm. Russell touching his debt to the Company. 100*l.* paid to Bucket, the painter, and another, for painting and gilding the Moon. [Three pages. Court Bk., IV., 127-130.]

- Feb. 21. 281. Nich. Ufflete to Geo. Ball. His last was by Master Roberts by the Rose. The Dutch report they have trade at Acheen, at Priaman, and at Tecoe. Hears flying news that the Hollanders are to remove from Bantam to Jacatra. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 620.]

Desires to be commended to Mr. Barker. [One page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 622.]

Feb. 24-25. 284. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from the Lord Chancellor [Bacon], of thanks for having admitted his servant Wooder a free brother, and allowed him to adventure 1,000*l.*, "which his Lordship would be ready to deserve and confirm by some real testimony unto all the Company in general, or to any of them in particular as occasion shall be offered." Yearly allowance granted for the maintenance of Aldworthe's children. Lutterford's accounts; Russell's business concluded. An eighth part of the stock, or about 204,000*l.*, to be called in for adventure this year; resolved not to proceed any further this year in the Persian business until some more certain news be received from thence. No time to be lost in preparing ryals for next year. Wm. Palmer's accounts to be examined. Sir Robert Rich having set forth two ships for the East Indies and procured protection from the Duke of Savoy, who has written to the King to permit them to bring their goods to England custom free, and also from the King of France, it was thought fit that both this Company and the Turkey Company should prefer their petitions to the Privy Council that he has sought foreign protection to the dishonour of his Majesty, prejudice of their country, and great damage of both their companies."

Feb. 25. Minutes of a General Court. Regarding the sale of indigo and two fair cabinets gilded and inlaid with mother of pearl. An eighth part to be brought in this year upon adventure. Half a year's capital to be divided at Lady Day upon the old joint stock. Sale of various goods, with the prices and names of purchasers, also of adventures in the old and new joint stocks, the old at 21*l.* 10*s.*, and 21*s.* per 100*l.* whereof 3½ capitals have been taken out, and the new at 18*l.* 5*s.* profit per cent. 285. W[illiam] N[icolls] to [Geo. Ball at] Bantam. Replies to charges against him of forgetfulness, in not having certified the sales made by him, or the pepper bought for the ships lading, and in not having laboured to redress abuses to the English at Deccan. The King caused the Polema to be sent for to Acheen where Ball again moving for redress, the Polema had his members cut off "which will be, I hope, a scar to future wrongs, although small amends to the matter of injury." The King has caused five hundred men to do nothing but plant pepper these two or three years. These pepper trees nearly destroyed by a wonderful fresh of water, "at which time the Hollanders' house and goods were carried to sea with multitudes of other houses and persons, one not able to save the other." Arrival of two Holland ships, the chief captain, Cornelius Gomers, bringing message from the Dutch President to this King to seclude the English from trading at Acheen, Tecoe, or Priaman, which the King told the writer of and grew in a great rage about. The Hollanders allowed to bring one ship to trade but no time limited. The King of Sollimatt sent Nicolls a letter and present, wishing the English to settle a factory there and promising them kind entertainment and freedom of trade, which the Hollanders have often petitioned for, but been denied; has resolved upon its being a place worth looking after, as from Meslepatam (Masulipatam) to send first over land; yet, if factories be not better stocked than they have been these last three years places of trade were better left than sought after. Has lately heard from Richard Harness, at Tecoe, that Millward, Pattesonn, and Geo. Pybourne are all dead. All debts owing to the factory should be registered by the clerk of the Custom House, which has not been observed. What may be shall be carefully done for the continuance of trade at Tecoe; yet the King is very covetous, as are the people, and this place very chargeable to continue in favour with King and nobles. 286. "A direction given by me, Martin Pring, captain of the Royal James, and Commander of the Fleet, to Mr. Robt. Addames, master of the Bull, now bound for England, to whom I wish a happy return." Having doubled the Cape to water at Saldanha, but for other refreshing there is little hope unless it please God to alter nature in that savage, nasty, and brutish nation. The quilted coats to be given to the mariners, to keep them warm, when they draw near the coast of England. To be very careful to set a guard over the passengers that came out of the men-of-war, especially Capt. Joanes and Jas Moolan, though Pring is persuaded Capt. Joanes would not attempt to escape. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. V., No. 624.]

287. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Evelyn to be conferred with about the supply of powder. To conclude with Browning about building a ship of 5 or 600 tons, at Ipswich. Christopher Farewell's wages. Petition of Edward Lutterford to have his brokes remitted. The Governor made known that he had had some speech with the Lord Chancellor [Bacon], who "having heard of the justice of this Company and their upright carriage in managing their affairs, it hath drawn his desire to be accepted into their society, which because he supposeth it will not be offensive to have him admitted, he entreated that it might be with the like favour and privilege for adventure that they have granted unto some others his peers, whom although he will not strive to exceed yet he hopeth of the like grace, being as ready and willing to deserve it in public from the Company or in any particular man's private. And also to make his first year's payment presently as others have done and the future at their several days according to the Company's order. But whereas Mr. Governor objected some doubt made that his Lordship would write more than he would supply himself and give it away to others, he assured him of that contrary, with promise to return so much unto the Company as he shall not furnish in his own name, and never to dispose of any part otherwise except to some godly use, as giving it to an hospital, college, or the like, if God should take his Lordship out of the world, which his Lordship referring to his letter unto the Company they then purposed to resolve accordingly, not knowing how to deny his Lordship upon his motion but willingly to give way thereunto." Lady Winwood to be allowed to continue Sir Ralph Winwood's payments in the new joint stock. Petition to be preferred against Sir Robt. Rich, for endeavouring to disgrace and damnify the Company, in causing sailors to be examined, searching into the Company's actions abroad and trying to take all advantage against them. A ship having returned from Ireland with timber for the Company, a committee is appointed to speak with Lord Buckingham against the impost claimed by virtue of the proclamation upon the patent. 288. Sir Dudley Carleton to [Sec. Lake]. Has already informed him that the States, upon the King's recommendation, had given Sir Thomas Dale his full entertainment, 1,000*l.*, for the whole time of his seven years absence in Virginia. Hears that he left the States service the very day of the receipt of his money sans dire adieu, it being given out that he is employed into the East Indies by the King's command. Shall gladly receive some civil excuse, the King's name being interested both in Sir Thos. Dale's good treatment by the States and in his ill manner of leaving their service. 289. Patrick Copland to Sir Thos Smythe. After their departure from the Cape, there was on 6 August a total eclipse of the moon about 8 at night, which continued from 8 to 12; she was almost an hour in the eclipse and another in clearing; the rest she was darkened; both before and after the eclipse she was so clear that one might have read by her almost as well as at a candle. Had all good and loving entertainment of the people at Mallalla (Mohilla); a shot accidentally killed one of the country people, but the King was satisfied it was only through the fault of the gunner and presented them with beeves, &c. Captured a Portuguese vessel, which they afterwards dismissed at Swally. Took two English pirates in the act of chasing a junk at Gogo. Congratulations of the Dutch. Mistress Steele brought to bed of a boy at Surat. News by the Bee, returned from Persia, of a league concluded and trade settled with the Sophy by Edward Connok, who died with two or three other merchants before the Bee left. The Lion fired by a piece ordnance and burnt in their sight, the most lamentable fire Copland ever saw; two men burnt alive and three or four others scorched who died a few days after. Exhortations of Mr. Golding, the gentlewomen's chaplain, at Surat, to the fleet; 200*l.* collected on their voyage for Wapping Church. Golding left the fleet to go to Ahmedabad, "after the women," although expressly forbidden by the commander and ordered to come aboard by Capt. Schilling. So long as the Company choose preachers recommended by noblemen's letters, how can they expect to be better served; beseeches the Company to send honest preachers or else to send none, for how can they work faithfully in the factories when they are dissolute themselves. "Memorable accident" related by Sir Thos. Roe in one of his letters, of a Rajah, or great Prince, "a desperate atheist," who died through one of his women plucking a hair from his breast, which being fast rooted caused a drop of blood to issue, and the wound gangrened incurably and almost miraculously; the rajah's lament that he had been a despiser of the Godhead, and though a soldier that he should die by a wound less honorable than from a lance or sword, "but now I confess that great God whom I scorned needed no greater weapon than a hair to revenge himself." [Two pages and a quarter. O.C., Vol. V., No. 625.]

March 7. 290. Sec. Lake to Carleton. Has been told that his [Sir Andrew Charing Cross. Sinclair's] errand into the Low Countries was to have hired mariners and masters to have sailed some ships of Denmark to the East Indies and to have treated of an association with the States for that trade. Secret intelligence received of his purpose before his arrival, and prohibition to the mariners of that State to serve a foreign prince in any voyage to the Indies. Carleton will know if there be any such thing. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

March 9. 291. Rich. Cocks to Robt. Burges in Chiampa by way of Cochin Nangasaki. China, by Ed. Sayer. No man will buy the wood Burges sent. Eaton gone captain of the Sea Adventure to Siam, Jas. Burges, pilot. Warns him against joining in war against the King of Cochin China who has permitted the English free trade in his country, but to return to Cochin China with the bearer, where he will find Capt. Addames and Ed. Sayer, upon pain of being cashiered out of the Company's service; they will not see him want and Burges may return for Japan in their company, [Half a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 626.]

March 9. 292. Ric. Hounsell to Geo. Ball, at Bantam. The repairs to the Unicorn finished; desires instructions for her employment. [One Aboard the Unicorn, Bantam. page. O. C., Vol. V., No. 627.]

March 10. 293. Sir Thos. Roe to Capt. Pring. Complains of not having Baroach. heard from him or from Surat for more than a month. Is sorry to hear that the Anne has no other cargo than the refuse of India. Roe meddled not in the subservient parts of trade but left that to the wisdom of the factors. Is confident "Surat will never be a trade unless the Red Sea both supply it and awe the Guzerats." Fears those at Masulipatam write at random or else great changes have taken place there. Hears a fleet is preparing for the Dutch plantation below that factory which Roe believes is worth nothing. Greene is a most malicious knave; he should be warned how he uses Roe who has provided for his welcome into England. Reasons for the Anne's keeping company to Dabul; Joseph Salbancke undertakes the voyage. Haynes stands not upon place, and the old man loves Roe. Pring is not so desirous to see Roe as Roe is to confer with Pring. "God in heaven bless you and send me once among men for these are monsters, the trouble and false heartedness of their own I will trample on in time, you know not these men nor I hope never shall. The God of heaven again and again bless you and all your fleet." [One page and three quarters. O. C., Vol. V., No. 628.]

March 10. 294. Court Minutes of the East India Company. About the purchase of the elephants' teeth bought by Hamersly, at Amsterdam. About the building of the large ship, at Ipswich, by Browning, as it will be three years before she can be ready. To confer with Evelyn about the saltpetre from the east country which is very dear. Sir James Cunningham commanded by the King to desist from proceeding any further upon the new patent on his allegiance; the King very favourably disposed to this Company; and though the new company offered 5 per cent. custom for all goods brought in by them, yet his Majesty would not be swayed by fair promises against the East India Company, and assured them, that if any beneficial grant should be made for Scotland prejudicial to this land it would be cancelled. Petition of widow Phillips for the admission of her son into the hospital. Those who made the Company's oars being dead, whether they should be provided out of the East country. Gratuity to Wm. Testin, to be employed in picking oakum. Petition of Christopher Bricket for some constant employment, having served six years without any certain pay, to be considered. Overplus to be repaid to Jeremy Elwys. Motion on behalf of Henry Warde, servant to Devereux Wogan, to have his freedom. Hukelye to be treated with about the timber brought from Ireland. Gratuity to Allen Cary. [Three pages. Court Bk., IV., 138-140.]

March 12. 295. Thos. Keridge to the East India Company. Complaints of the long delays caused by "the customers" at Surat. Indigo bought to lade the Bull. Three bales of goods sunk in the boat at the shore side. Allowances to the factors who return in the Bull. Thirteen chests of ryals go in the James Royal for Bantam, three in the Gift for Sumatra, and two in the Bee for Masulipatam, besides 500 ryals delivered to the Anne for her provision. [One page and a quarter. Indorsed, "Received 4 Jan. 1618-9." O.C., Vol. V., No. 629.]

March 12. 296. Consultation by General Pring and the Surat Agency. The Anne to sail directly for the Red Sea and there carry out Ambassador Roe's instructions. Signed by Martin Pring, Thos., Keridge, and Thos. Rastell. [Half a page. Indorsed, "An alteration of the Anne's going to Dabul." O.C., Vol. V., No. 630.]

March 13. 297. Declaration of the crew of the Unicorn, addressed to President Ball and Council, at Bantam. That Richard Hounsell, appointed commander of the Unicorn by Capt. Henry Pepwell, never insinuated with any of them or desired their assistance to maintain him in such authority. [*Signed by all the crew or with their marks. One page and a half. 299. Ric. Hounsell to President Ball and Council. As to the speech delivered by the President aboard the Unicorn, whether Ball was the lawful successor of Capt. Wm. Keeling and whether they purposed continuing Hounsell commander of the Unicorn; has no intention of resisting Ball's authority, but is resolved not to give up his command until he has sufficient warrant under their hands to do so. Begs them to consider the consequences of displacing him. [Three quarters of a page. O.C., Vol. V., No. 633.]

300. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. Abstract of his journal of the voyage outward. Refers to Capt. Addames for what was done at the Cape. Kind entertainment by the King of Mohilla; one of the country people accidentally shot. The King and a pilot, who was with him, told them this rode was nought and therefore called the Devil's harbour. Capture of a Portugal junk belonging to the captain of Diu, with forty tons of elephants' teeth and about 8½lbs. of gold and ambergris. Consultation in reference to allowing two junks they had chased to escape. Arrived at Swally 20 September, whence the writer was sent to Ahmedabad. Mocrob Khan would have the making of all the indigo and buy all the herbs of which it is made. Jas. Bickford and the writer sent to Cambaya for indigo but none there worth sending home. From Ahmedabad went to Baroach where he saw the goods through the custom house and then left for Surat. Commendations of the Lord Ambassador (Roe), though he is of opinion it will not be for the Company's profit to maintain an ambassador in these parts. Steele gone to Agra; news, that he and Frances Webbe were married at the Cape, by Mr. Golding, Capt. Towerson the only witness. Long detention of the Company's ships in these parts caused, as these factors allege, by the want of provision of stock before hand for their lading. [Five pages. Indorsed, "Received 3 January 1618-9." O.C., Vol. V., No. 634.]

March 17.

301. Court Minutes of the East India Company. No commission to be allowed Hamersley for purchase of the elephants' teeth, seeing others write for commodities without expecting profit for their pains. Letter read from the Lord Chancellor [Bacon] to the Governor, "desiring him to proceed to let his Lordship be admitted into this Society, which motion seconding the former gracious speeches delivered by his Majesty (and honorable reports given by many of the Lords of the Council of his Majesty's constant resolution to preserve and maintain the privileges and honour of this Company) gave good satisfaction, both of his Majesty's and their Lordships' favour, and doth infer that the troublesome business for the Scottish patent is ended. This Court approved of his Lordship's request, desiring Mr. Governor to admit of him and of his adventure." Petition of the inhabitants of Stepenhreth [Stepney] parish, on behalf of Margaret May for two months' pay, from the wages of Oswald Gibson, carpenter in the "James," for the maintenance of his child. Langley's business to be concluded. [One page. Court Bk., IV., 140-141.]

302. Capt. Pring to the East India Company. Journal of voyage outward. Many of the rich goods damaged; all the soldered heads of the strong water bottles loose through the extremity of heat in the hold; the gold lace fallen off and discoloured by damp, but well repaired by Jas. Troughton, showing how necessary it is to have men of all occupations on these voyages. Capt. Towerson's maid, Mrs. Francis [Webbe], found to be with child by Steele; being examined they both confessed to having been lawfully married before leaving England; cannot but admire Steele's foolish insolence, who has attempted what Capt. Keeling durst not presume to do; how fit Steele will be to perform his business with a clog at his heels, Pring leaves to the discreet consideration of the Lord Ambassador. Arrived at Saldanha, 22nd June, with the Anne; the Gift, the Bull, and the Bee had arrived the day before; found the Hound there; the Hope left for Bantam in May previously, and by letters and inscriptions on the rocks had notice of the Dragon and Expedition arriving from Bantam in January 1617 and leaving for England in October following. Other ships which have sailed outward and homeward; obliged to use force at Saldanha to get a supply of beeves and sheep; eighty English and twenty Dutch men landed for that purpose who returned with 140 beeves and 200 sheep and lambs, which overjoyed the hearts of his sick men, the owners receiving brass in payment, to their hearts' content. Dispatched the Hound for Bantam with six chests of ryals. Friendly reception by the King of Mohilla, whose name is Fannomary Fannodell; one of the country people killed through the extraordinary negligence of the gunner; presents to the King of a vest, sword, and other toys, "which gave him great content," in requital for beeves; the island yields plenty of beeves, sheep, goats, oranges, and cocoa nuts. Exchanged knives and toys for coarse calicoes. Captured a Portugal vessel bound from Mozambique to Diu, laden with elephants' teeth and some gold and ambergris; the Moors and Bannians set ashore from the Portugal prize, and their goods returned to them, that it might be understood the English would not pillage their friends but be revenged on their enemies. Account of the capture of two English pirates, the Francis, 110 tons, set forth by Sir Robt. Rich, and the Lion, of 100 tons, belonging to Philip Bernardi, an Italian; the rescue of a junk belonging to the Queen mother, which they were about to surprise, very kindly taken by the Great Mogul and the great ones. Arrived at Swally with their prize 24th Sept.; ships found there. A chest of ryals and thirteen chests of ingots sent to Agra, the rest of the ryals to Ahmedabad, by a convoy of 40 Englishmen for better security. Congratulations of the Dutch factory on the safe arrival of the English fleet. Loss of the Rotterdam, of 1,000 tons; the captain, Peter Vanderbrooke, and his mariners marched to Masulipatam, and had divers conflicts with the country people by the way, in which they lost a few men. Murmurings of the mariners for being debarred from pillage, which was freely granted in former voyages. Sends description of sands and shoals along the west coast of the Gulf of Cambaya, from Gogo, for the benefit of succeeding voyages. The dangers of passing money to Ahmedabad the cause of his hastening "this discovery." The Bee dispatched to Jask after consultation by Sir Thos. Roe's orders; Edw. Monox with Francis Tipton appointed to go in her; they arrived 6th December, and found Connok returned from the Court of Persia with the King's letter to his Majesty and ample capitulations for a perpetual course of trade. Pley died 2nd Dec., and some days after Connok and Tracy also died. Moghistan seven days journey from Jask. Hopes the want of supply this year will be fairly excused to the Shah, and such a cargo sent as may convert the whole trade to England, and then it will be worth all the other in India; if not followed at once the Dutch will be found interlopers there. Dangers of venturing in future to Jask with only one ship. Understands by Mr. Hatch that there is a salt water creek in the bay of Jask, twelve feet deep; a little fort should be built by the water side to repel the forces of the Portugal. Thinks when he considers the remoteness of Jask from Ispahan and the chief mart towns of Persia that they should always be confined to Jask. The Lion prize accidentally burnt, several men lost their lives and those that escaped lost all they had. Return of the Bee from Persia, on 17th January, with the King of Persia's and other letters. The Anne sent to trade at Mocha, the Dutch having been kindly received as Englishmen. Steele promised to work wonders at this business, but did nothing; is now at Ahmedabad with Mrs. Francis, who he calls his wife, and who the Lord Ambassador gave leave to accompany Mrs. Towerson and Mrs. Hudson thither, on condition that she went as Mrs. Towerson's waiting gentlewoman. Hears that Capt. Towerson is weary of his new kindred already. Roe writes that Steele is in public rebellion, that he has no allowance from me "but follows the Leskar with a train that will soon humble him." Golding, the preacher, went to Ahmedabad against the Ambassador's command, in the disguise of a Moor's dress, but from that day nothing has been heard of him; supposes he is with Steele and his wife. Commendations of Mr. Copland. The strayed minister since returned to his flock; has pardoned him in hopes he will be a new man. Incloses Roe's instructions to John Hatch, for Jask, and to Capt. Addames, for England. Merchants appointed to the Anne. How the rest of the fleet are disposed of. [Eight pages and a half. Indorsed, "[The original th]ereof came by the Bull and now y^e coppie from Bantam by y^e Lesser James 1619." This copy was inclosed in Pring's letter of 23rd March 1619. O.C., Vol. V., No. 635.]

304. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Timber to be sold to Sir Francis Fane and Sir Robert Brett, for the repairing of Rochester bridge. Request of the Lord Chancellor [Bacon] to adventure 4,000*l.* agreed to, "having found his Lordship very honorable and expecting the continuance thereof as occasion hereafter shall present." The Governor made known that his Majesty had acquainted him by letter of a suit made for a patent for the south west by a strait (beyond that of Magellan) discovered by Isaac Lanneere [Le Maire], "a business that his Majesty hath a very great affection unto, to have it brought to perfection, yet, unwilling to proceed further than may stand with the good of this Company, desireth to be informed of the state of the said business and to be prepared with answerable reasons against the petitioners shall come to propound their further suit." Committee appointed to confer with Sir Thos. Dishington, Mr. Burlamachi, Sam. Deviscare, and young Lannere "(who are all interested in the said business)" to learn the particulars, the Company "esteeming it a project fit for this Company to hearken unto, being to treat with persons of good sufficiency, honesty, and understanding, that Mr. Governor may give satisfaction to his Majesty accordingly." Report upon Nich. Sadler's accounts and building a house at Deptford. Purchase of gunpowder. The beams of the ships to be covered with thin sheet lead to preserve them from decay, caused by the moisture of the pepper and spices. Discussion upon the advisability of amalgamating with the Muscovy Company; committee to be chosen to endeavour to effect the union of the two companies in a yearly stock of 30,000*l.* for a certain term of years, and "wished to have it remembered unto his Majesty that this Company had condescended, conditionally, that his Majesty would be pleased to call in the former patent and not to grant any other, hereafter, to their prejudice, and to procure a proclamation, if it may be, to signify his Majesty's intents, that those patents were never granted with intent to disturb these companies in England. 305. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Lake. The King's officers have compounded with Sir Robt. Sherley, who is allowed 1,500 ducats a month, besides the rent of a house, and a coach to attend him, "in which both the King and Sir Robert have made a good bargain." As yet he has got no kind of answer to his propositions. His brother, Sir Anthony, will go and live in the Canaries upon a pension of 3,000 ducats a year, where "he shall be out of their sights, and they free of his daily begging and importunities." The Lord Ambassador [Digby] will give his judgment upon the proposition Sir Robert Sherley makes for the good of his Majesty's service. [Ex-tract from Correspondence, Spain.] extraordinary expenses of the buildings at Blackwall to be considered. Report of Burrell on the means of saving the Company 500*l.* in the labourers' charges at the Company's wharves and on the purchase of timber. Proceedings of the committees for the yards at Deptford and Blackwall. Petition of the nailmakers for the purchase of English instead of Flemish iron, which is bad. As to the lease of a house, at Blackwall, in the possession of John Lampier. Business with Lord Wentworth for the yards at Blackwall to be concluded. Whether John Martyn should not be discharged. Account of the profits of the Muscovy Company for the years 1608 to 1615, the highest being 90 per cent., in the years 1611 and 1612, and the lowest 11 per cent., in 1614, but the business having been ill managed most of those profits are swallowed up, yet the trade not to be condemned, especially as it is said the Muscovy Company has the sole trade into Persia; proposal to join with them discussed; all of opinion that the two companies must join; committee to be appointed to determine the business, in conjunction with one to be appointed by the Muscovy Company. As the Levant Company will participate in the benefit of the disannulling of the patent (granted to a Scottish East India Company), Mr. Leate is requested to move that they contribute towards the charges thereof.

Minutes of a General Court. Sale of goods, with names of purchasers and the prices. Consideration about joining with the Muscovy Company; efforts of the East India and Muscovy Companies to overthrow the patent granted by the King for a Scottish Company, successful; his Majesty's assurances to uphold the reputation of the two former Companies "and that if anything were granted and found beneficial to Scotland, yet, if it prove prejudicial to this Company he will cancel it"; audience of the Governor of the King, who, knowing the East India Company to be a strength to his kingdom and honour to himself, wished that this Company would concur with the Muscovy and both join to sustain each other; the proposal recommended by the Governor; some against it, others of opinion that, except the Muscovy Company be upheld, there will be no East India Company long, because there cannot be sufficient cordage provided without them, all agreed to recommend the consideration thereof to a committee, those distrusting the proposal the most to be chosen of the committee for the better satisfaction of the generality; Greenland to be included in the agreement; names of the committee chosen. Adventures put to sale in the second joint stock; 200*l.* of Owen Saintpeere sold to John Langley for 16*l.*, per cent. profit; 200*l.* of John Derham to Thos. Keitley for 16*l.*, per cent. profit, also 300*l.* of same to same at 16*l.* 5*s.* per cent. profit; and 200*l.* of Mr. Deputy in the first joint stock to Fras. West, a capital and a half having been taken out in commodities, at 215*l.* per cent. profit.

March 27. Minutes of a meeting of the Committee about joining with the Muscovy Company. The Governor having made known sundry things that were thought fit to be concealed, at a public court, after long debate it was resolved to have the two companies join equally in a stock of 30,000*l.* a year apiece, to continue the term of the present East India joint stock, to commence from 25 March last past ; any of the East India Company to be permitted to adventure in this present joint stock on a fine of 20*l.* ; committees to be appointed to manage the business ; the inducements to the agreement being his Majesty's desire and surrendering up the new Scottish patent ; the Governor requested to solicit the King and the Council that Sir Jas. Cunningham may make a surrender of his patent in form of law. [Six pages and three quarters. Court Bk., IV., 144-151.]

307. "The translation of a letter from the Duke of Russia to the King's Majesty of Great Britain, sent by his Ambassador." The great care of his Majesty's ambassador, Sir John Merricke, in the businesses committed to his charge, which he hath very faithfully and with great diligence performed. As touching the Persian voyage, to grant the English merchants free passage through the Emperor's countries to trade by the river Volga, as also to discover the great kingdom of Cathay by the river Ob, "sorry we cannot at present accomplish this desire through many occasions hindering the same, the said voyage cannot go forward at the instant, as hath been by us and our Council made known to your ambassador and delivered to him the same in writing ; the like concerning the discovery of the kingdom of Cathay through our kingdoms of Siberia by the Ob." Desires the King not to take this as a denial or excuse, but hereafter, as it may stand with the convenience of his [the Emperor's] estate, will be ready to perform the same. Desires some reasonable reconciliation may be made between himself and the King of Poland ; when a settled peace is made between them he will conclude about this business. Has dispatched Sir John Merricke from his presence with all honour to his Majesty, leaving it to his own choice which way he will take for his own passage. [*Six pages and a quarter. March 28.

308. "Memorial, delivered by Sir John Merricke, of such points as the merchants humbly desire their Lordships to speak with the Muscovite Ambassador upon." As touching the Emperor's excusing the passage by the Volga by reason of his troubles with the Pole, it is desired by the Prince of Persia that the King will suffer his merchants to settle a trade upon the sea coast at Jask, where he has promised to transport all the raw silk of his country and to grant English merchants free and large privileges ; but the King was more desirous to have settled this trade in the Emperor of Russia's dominions ; whether the ambassador has instructions to treat in this business, and whether the Emperor will be content without any further excuse to grant this passage by the Volga or not to his Majesty's merchants. 310. Reasons [by the English merchants] to induce his Majesty to the loan of money to the great Emperor of Russia, now required by his Ambassador. The ancient amity, of above threescore years, between the two countries. The benefit of trade in the vent of English commodities. The maintenance of shipping and the increase of mariners. The needful and serviceable commodities of those countries. The hopes of getting the trade down the Volga into Persia which will be a great benefit in venting thither English cloth and tin, from whence great store of silk, indigo, and other rich commodities, now brought out of Turkey at a high price, will be returned. The advantage the Hollanders will take if content be not given to the Emperor of Russia, they purposing to send an ambassador to Russia who will make large offers to obtain privileges to expel the English, and make England and all Christendom beholden to them for materials for shipping. Lastly, if content be given, the hope of preventing the Dutch from proceeding farther into that country than Archangel. [*One page and three quarters. Abuses against the Muscovy Company at home and abroad to be amended. Sales of adventures : 215*l.* 10*s.* per cent. bid by John Langley and 216*l.* per cent. by Rich. Giles for adventures in the first joint stock ; and 16*l.* 5*s.* and 15*l.* 15*s.* profits per cent. bid respectively by Arthur Robinson, Wm. Allot, Wm. Cocks, and Rich. 315. Thos. Wilson to the King. Sends letters from [Japan] the most remote part of the world, which were more than two years coming. No true relation of the greatness of the Princes of those parts by our cosmographers or any other writers. The writer gives particulars of wars wherein 300,000 are slain at a time ; a King's court of 100,000 men continually resident, his palace capable of lodging 200,000 men, far bigger than the city of York. Immense cities, temples and "colossoes," greater than Rhodes and many other wonders. The Jesuits banished and severity used to those who have perverted the natives from their former religion. Abridgement of our merchants and all strangers privileges. Describes the papers enclosed ; the long scroll of fine paper, one of their annual almanacks, shows their characters and manner of printing ; a relation of the greatness of the states and revenues of all the nobles under the Emperor of Japan. The writer also saw the Emperor go hunting with above 10,000 men in suite ; he sets down the species of their game and the punishment for destroying it. [*Indorsed by Wilson, "An abstract of letters lately arrived from the East Indies, from Mr. Cox, written from Japan to myself in Jan. 1616-7, and arrived here in March 1617-8, which his Majesty read and discoursed with me about them, but could not be induced to believe that the things written are true, but desired to speak with the writer when he comes home, who I told him is very shortly to return ; he is the chief factor for the East India Company, and hath been in those parts almost seven years last past." 316. List, by Sir Thos. Roe, of goods proper for presents and for sale at the Court Factory. These include knives of the largest size, swords, pieces of gold and silver cloth, gold, velvets, and satins, silk stuffs ; a light Hague armour, engraved and gilt ; a rich field furniture and saddle, with plumes ; black and white well cut agate figures, neatly set in enamelled frames ; emeralds ; a suit of arras of four pieces for the King ; cross bows ; looking glasses ; forty pictures on cloth, to be rolled ; imagery in iron, brass, crystal, or stone, curiously cut ; china ware ; embroidered silks, in flowers with birds and antique works ; nick-knacks, as needlework, purses, gloves ; wines, strong waters ; various kinds of dogs ; ostrich plumes ; handsome halberds. "These people are very curious and can judge of workmanship well, but you must fit them with variety, for they are soon cloyed with one thing." [One page and a half. O. C., Vol. V., No. 636.]

317. Advice, by Sir Thos. Roe, of goods and presents fit to be sent from England to Surat. The goods include broad cloths of various colours, coral, lead, quicksilver, vermillion; but not wine, hot waters, swords, knives, unless large and rich, or glasses, or "any such like trash;" pearls and chains of pearls, rubies and other precious stones; recommends a rich stone, worth 20,000*l.*, to equal the Portugal, to be sent over, which would give the Company great profit and credit; dares be bound that 100,000*l.* worth of large size precious stones would sell at a profit, and without which the King will be weary. Is persuaded the Tower could furnish the Company with many great old stones that are useless. Arras, satins, gold lace, shirts of mail, light, arrow proof, and well made, embroidered coats of Indian fashion, quivers, for bows and arrows, of Indian fashion, all kinds of embroidered needlework. Presents should not be made to the King every year, but once in three years a letter and a good present; precious stones welcome to all. Cloth of gold and silver and fine ware, to the value of two or three thousand pounds, should be provided yearly; is sure all will be bought and the King better content, for all their trouble is about the presents. Aseph Khan first gave Roe this counsel, telling him the English were fools and had brought up a custom to their own hurt, the King expected nothing of the merchants but to buy; none practised it, neither the Dutch, Persian, nor Armenian merchants. Fit presents for the King, once in three years, four or five of the things mentioned, with one of good value. Pictures of all sorts, if good, in constant request; some large story; Diana this year gave great content. List of goods from the southwards which give good profit; these include spices, china dishes, and all sorts of fine ware and gold embroidered taffetas. [Three pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 637.]

319. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. Great business agreed upon yesterday between the East Indian and Muscovy companies for furnishing the Emperor of Russia with a loan of 100,000 marks, whereby they hope to engross the trade in cordage and other real commodities, and to trade with Persia that way; the Muscovy Company, unable to undergo the burthen of the loan without assistance, both companies to have an equal stock of adventure for eight years, and for their better encouragement the King has recalled and delivered into their hands the Scottish [East India] Patent. 320. Nich. Ufflete to Geo. Ball, at Bantam. A chest of ambergris, landed by John Peterson, from the French Admiral. The King has borrowed 100 ryals and wanted to borrow 200 ryals more;

Ufflete made excuse that he had not money in the house, but gave him and his son a present. The Dutch have mounted all their canon in their house, and train their people every Sunday; knows not for why. Most of the English lately fallen sick of a burning fever. [*Half a page. O. 322. Sir William Lovelace to Carleton. The only novel thing is this embassy of Sir Dudley Diggs to the Emperor of Muscovy. His errand is to satisfy the Duke's request for the loan of 100,000 m. thousand roubles [sic], which is one hundred thousand marks of our money, which sum is imposed by his Majesty upon the East India Company, for that other of Muscovy is grown so poor that this of the East Indies is fain to join partners with it and so share equally in all dependants. Diggs is to have 40 followers and servants, his charges defrayed by the Company, and to have the Emperor's reward and the Company's, which it is guessed will amount to 1,000 marks apiece; he told Lovelace that one of his errands was, if levies from hence were demanded to grant them freely, so good conditions were proposed for their payment, which he hoped would come from our own monies. Sir Thos. Dale is long since departed our coast. [Extract from Domestic, Jac. 1., Vol. XCVII., No. 9., Cal. p. 533.]

April 10.

323. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Opinion that the Levant Company ought to contribute to the great charge of the calling in of the Scottish patent, but, hearing Mr. Walter's opinion that Sir James Cunningham's release here is not sufficient unless it be made in Scotland, the Court were satisfied with what had been done already, having had so many gracious assurances of favour from his Majesty. As to the purchase of Canary wines, for the next voyage, at 15*l.* a pipe. Petition of George Scott for consideration towards his losses in his bargains of indigo refused. Committee appointed to confer with Sir John Merricke as to the purchase of a present for the Ambassador (to Muscovy) and cloth coats for his followers at the Company's charge; the former Ambassadors were wont to be feasted at the Company's expense before their departure, but it was thought fit to give this Ambassador good content, to make a feast to the Company at his lodgings, when those who have received New Year's gifts from him may requite him with presents. The business for the south-west passage, which it was intended to conceal, having been renewed by another letter, and messages from his Majesty, who, at an expense of 300*l.* sent Sir Thos. Dichington to satisfy himself of the particulars from Isaac Lameers, [Le Maire] who gave such encouragement that the King will not have it neglected. Reasons for attempting the discovery with a ship and a pinnace. Complaint against the farmers at the Custom House concerning the impost on pepper dust; committee appointed to speak with Sir Wm. Garway and the farmers. Request of Lord Exeter to purchase ten or twelve tons of timber out of the yard, to build a gallery, refused; but Goulston, who provides the Company's timber abroad, may buy some for him. Articles of agreement with Capt. Wm. Parker, dated 28th November 1617; he is appointed Vice Admiral of the next fleet, with a salary of 320*l.* per annum; also with Sir Thos. Dale, of the same date, who is appointed Chief Commander, with a salary of 480*l.* per annum.

Minutes of a General Court. Sale of commodities with names of the purchasers and the prices; also of an adventure of 200*l.* belonging to Richard Bennett, whereof five payments have already been made, bought by Randal Cranfield at 17*l.* per cent. profit. The Governor made known that the Company were not ignorant of the reports of a new discovery lately made called the South Passage or the New Passage, which his Majesty hath granted by patent unto some. But conceiving how commodious it may be for his subjects to enjoy the same, hath written a letter to the Governor on the 1st pres., which is now read, and hath since by several messages urged to have it dispatched, so that answer cannot longer be delayed. The King's wish that Sir Thos. Smyth should take upon himself the Governor's place and move the East India Company to join either for half or part, forcing nothing, but leaving it to their own choice. Yet if they think it inconvenient to prosecute the same, then that Mr. Governor shall associate some others with himself "(his Majesty being so well affected thereunto as that he esteems the prosecution thereof a great honor to himself and that it will prove a great benefit to his subjects)." Question how the passage might be more commodious to this Company than that which is already, and whether it may not be a means to infringe their liberties and privileges. Answer that the strait of Magellan is very tedious and uncertain, and his Majesty's care of this Company is shown in many ways, that the Governor is not drawn into it by the persuasions of those interested but to satisfy the King's command and pleasure, which he respects. The Governor's care to prevent many mischiefs threatened against the East India Company remembered, and the Court of opinion "that it will be fit to be undertaken by this Company to prevent further mischiefs (being no new matter but formerly intended by advice of Sir Jas. Lancaster and others)." "The objections urged were conceived no sufficient reason to cause the action to be disliked." Committee therefore appointed to confer with the patentees, examine the business, and report their opinion to a General Court. Some of the patentees being of mean esteem, as Bownes and Laineere [Le Maire], it was wished that the King might be moved to grant the privileges to the Company, who may make trial next year with a ship and a pinnace. David Bennett, keeper of St. James', the Prince's house, admitted a free brother. [Five pages. Court Bk., IV., 153-157.]

the States for satisfaction from the East India Company, touching losses of considerable value sustained in the East Indies, his Lordship recommended to Carleton at his first coming to the Hague; but the effect has been nothing answerable to Carleton's expectation or desire. [Holland Correspondence.]

April 14-15. 325. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The proposition to join in the discovery of the South-west passage considered. Sir Thomas Dichington and the other patentees inform the Company that it is a new passage towards Mare Zur, under the tropics towards the Isle of Solomon, where the navigators passed by 300 islands, and saw ginger, cloves, and other spices in the hands of the inhabitants, who are savages. Reasons for not conceiving it fit to be undertaken by the Company, who hope that the King will not be discontented with their refusal. This patent was rejected by the new Scottish company on the opinion of Sir Richard Hawkins that nothing more was discovered than had been formerly, by him. Committee appointed to draw up "a fair answer" to his Majesty that they are ready to attempt the discovery for the honor of his Majesty and good of the commonwealth, with their reasons, but not to do it by virtue of the new patent nor yet to join with them therein. It was also thought fit to let the King know, "as occasion of speech might be presented," that the Company do not publish all their discoveries, and therefore to crave his Majesty to forbear passing any such grants, because all things cannot be followed at one time, and that the Company had discovered the end of the patentees was to make profit out of the patent to answer the great charges they had been at. This answer not to be sent without the approbation of this Court.

April 15.—Answer to the King's letter, drawn up by the committee after conference with those interested in the patent of the South-west passage, to be presented to his Majesty if the Court approve of it. That by late manifold experience they find all matters of discovery to be in their beginning full of difficulties, charge, and dangers, and not to be undertaken but by such as shall be content to expect retribution of profit after much expense and many years' patience, yet they are willing, with all possible expedition, to set out convenient shipping for that discovery, though they conceive this passage, and all others beyond the Cape of Good Hope, discovered, or that may be discovered, to be sufficiently and in express words granted to them in their patent of 31 May 1609; and that in due respect to his Majesty's gracious pleasure, upon conference with Sir Thos. Dichington and his associates, they are willing to admit him and the rest of those patentees freely into their company and council, touching that passage and the benefit thereon depending. Offer to the patentees, "there are but four of them," to admit them into this Company. This answer approved, and because of his Majesty's departure after dinner, dispatched away. 326. Richard Westby to President Ball at Bantam. Certifies to the behaviour of the chief men during the voyage; the Company in general greatly dislike the master. Has been constantly sick since he left Bantam, and wishes to return to his own country. Some pepper bought at Jambi, Henry Eltonhead can give particulars. 327. Capt. Wm. Polhill to President Ball. Journal of his voyage since leaving Bantam on 3rd March; news from two junks to which he gave chase that there were only two Flemings, a ship and a pinnace there; he then dismissed the junks without suffering the value of a shilling to be taken from them. Arrived at Jambi 3rd April; great want of water and wood and many of their principal officers very sick, of whom one quarter have been buried, the rest are well recovered. Upon consultation with Rich. Westby has taken in certain decayed goods, list of which he transmits. *[Two pages and three quarters. Indorsed, "Received from Jambi Road 10 May 1618." O. 328. Edward Longe to President Ball. Arrived 3rd present; their purser with [Robt.] Johnson were sent up to Jambi who hardly escaped the Portugals, these last having eight frigates and leaving the river after burning thirty towns, and were determined to take Jambi had not the English pinnace been there; they sent the King word that what they did was because of their loss by the Flemings, who it seems had taken a Portugal frigate and put all the men to the sword; the Portugals treacherously give out they have nothing to do with the English, but the Flemings they will have and purpose to return hither very shortly. Westby will advise of all matters concerning the Hound's business. Hopes to depart this day. [Three quarters of a page. Indorsed, "Received 10 May 1618." O. C., Vol. VI., No. 643.]

329. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The business of Alice and Ann Waldo to be referred to arbitration. A difference between Mr. Palmer and Mr. Rud having subsisted a long time, and the Lord Chancellor desiring the Company's interference for his sake, the Court, weighing the danger that might ensue by such a precedent, resolve to have a petition presented to him to explain the truth. Reasons for accepting an offer of 20,000*l.* from the East Country either at 7 or 8 per cent. A committee having been to Court to present the Company's answer to the King respecting the South-west passage, his Majesty read the same twice over, and having argued some points and received satisfaction, replied that he esteemed his merchants more heroical than to be terrified by dangers in their discoveries or animated by expenses without present profit; but to that point of power which the Company claim by their patent he was a little amazed, and demanded whether he were like Pope Alexander who divided and distributed the whole world, conceiving it reasonable that the right of discoveries should be to such as made them; but aiming only at mines, of the discovery of which he has hopeful expectations, the King's desire is to have the business prosecuted as soon as possible; he cares not by whom, so long as it be effected, that he may not seem to neglect these proffered hopes as his grandfather did the West Indies; and understanding that the Company have already given order to Ethiopia which is the fountain, and that some few have adventured to Tomecatto, the place whence the King of Barbary has his gold, it gave him good satisfaction, and he desired to have this prosecuted with all expedition, and well approved of the Company offering to take in the new patentees amongst them. Resolved to respite the matter for a few days, because of information that if they undertook the discovery all other Companies would fall off from attempting anything by virtue of the new patent, that if the Company abandon it, means to the extent of 20,000*l.* or 25,000*l.* will be found to go through with it, and that Sir Thomas Dichington will procure an order from the King to prohibit the East India Company proceeding therein; also that an answer may be first received from the King to a letter written by the Governor on the subject. Petition of John Chamberlain to sell six bags of pepper in town, denied. Petition of the shipwrights to receive 6*d.* a ton granted to them by patent upon all ships above 100 tons, referred. Petition of the nailers against the introduction of Flemish rod iron into the land, and on behalf of the patentees to cut English bar iron into small rods fit for nails, referred. Request of John Holloway and William Bonham concerning their bills. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk., IV., 160-162.]

Ispahan.

330. Edw. Monox to the East India Company. Will briefly give the Company a little taste of his endeavours in Persia. His letters by the Bee were no sooner sealed and delivered to John Hatch than the writer posted towards Moghistan to overtake Blunstone, Connok's man, which he did at Costack, a day's journey short of Minau, where Monox left him and arrived at Minau 1st of January. Found Adam Tanner turned out of possession of the silk and everything else belonging to Connok, and sealed up by the Sultan; an infamous scandal raised that the English were robbers and thieves, and had carried away all the goods of the Ambassador, as they styled Connok. The Sultan sent one of his chief men "with some forty shot" to apprehend all the English at Jask, and to bring them prisoners to Minau, but meeting Monox two days journey from Jask, proceeded no further. This was only a villainous practice of the Sultan to make prey of all the goods there. Detailed account of his sixteen days proceedings with the Sultan of Minau of the reason of his long detention by him. Invoice of 71 bales of silk taken by Geo. Pley, ten bales of which were evidently intended for Connok's use; fraudulent doings of Connok's men, Adam Tanner and William Blunstone. Four hundred ryals of eight found in Connok's chest sealed up in a bag; has delivered them and all things else to Thos. Barker, and knows now that he has done Tanner no wrong. The goods of Connok, Tracy, and Pley all sold. Commendations of George Pley; he had the reputation of an honest man and of one that lived an unblemished life. Barker's character wholly composed of pride, envy, sloth, and gluttony. Will vouch that he has cost the Company upwards of 1,000 dollars given in presents and spent in housekeeping, by settling the factory at Shiraz without either judgment or discretion. Barker induced Capt. Childe, master of the ship, to return with the goods to Surat and leave Connok and the rest without money or means; he also proclaimed that Connok had not any commission from the King to treat with the Sophy upon any capitulations, which the Portugal friars informed the King, who caused his Majesty's letter brought by Connok to be compared with that brought by Sir Robert Sherley, and finding them to be like, granted capitulations. Thinks that although defective in some points these capitulations may in a short time produce a very beneficial trade. The English translation sent from Jask clean contrary in a material point or two to the true translation inclosed. All the Company's factors said to be young and vicious. Prices of both English and Persian commodities current in Ispahan at present. The azer or piece of gold contains 20 shahees, and 10 azers make a toman. The lighter and more pleasant colours of cloth have the best sale. Annexes the nearest estimate he can gather of the quantities of silk made in the several cities of Persia. His intended proposal to the King to take 8,000 bales of Persian silk for which the quantities of cloth set down should be given in exchange. No profit to be made on cinnamon, mace, and nutmegs from thence. Unless he can contract with the King, fears the trade will not be driven without great sums of money. Connok's offer to the Sophy was one third in money and two thirds in English and Indian commodities. Note of the things which the King desires out of England; these include guns, armour, coaches and coachmen, sword blades, turkeys, fowls, dogs of various breeds, a skilful falconer, terrestrial and celestial globes of English make, beautiful pictures, a clock, watches, and looking glasses. Cannot now send a copy of the King's phirmaund, so begs them to rest satisfied with the substance; the King has remitted the payment of all customs, acknowledging that it was never his meaning to tie them to the payment of any. The King's letter to Connok, a very gracious letter; he promises the English nation all his kingdom can afford, and has more fully expressed by three several phirmaunds. The King sorrowful at the news of the death of Connok and the rest of their people, and vows to have better inquiry made touching the same. They have been in expectation of the King's coming ever since their arrival at Ispahan, but as that is uncertain, has thought good to dispeed Francis Tipton for India, when they purpose repairing to the King with all possible expedition. Their business ended with the King, will dispatch to their Honors and to India ample advices of the success of their hopeful designs. 331. Minutes of a Court of Commissioners of the East India and Muscovy Companies. Letters read from Connok from Persia of 2nd June and 4th, 5th August 1617, [see ante, Nos. 91, 122, 124,] mentioning a packet of letters sent at same time, but not received. Question as to the prosecution of the trade; judgment suspended until receipt of the principal letter; an answer in the mean time to be returned to Connok so that the Emperor may see he is not neglected, informing Connok that he should be seconded with commodities and shipping if the Company had any certain grounds to proceed upon and knew what to provide, but for want of his letters this is not known. The letter to be written before Sir Dudley Diggs' departure for Muscovy that the Ambassador may, if necessary, expostulate with the Emperor to allow a messenger to pass through Muscovy by the Volga with the letter; Giles Hobbes to be employed in that service. Other letters to be sent by way of Aleppo which may be with Connok within five months. [Three quarters of a page. Court Bk., IV., 162-3.]

Pooloroon.

332. Nathaniell Courthoppe to President Ball. His last told of the hard fortune befallen to their ships bound hither this year. The Thomas not heard of since 25 March. Account of a fight within five leagues of Pooloroon, between four Holland ships and the Attendance and Solomon; the English being so overmatched, yielded. Had Courthoppe been in Cassarian (David's) place, he would have "sunk down right in the sea" before he would have struck his colours. The English and some Bandanese secretly armed themselves with swords, and when the Hollanders came aboard, at least 40 of them were slaughtered, and more hurt, which was mostly done by two of the Bandanese only; at last, being taken, the Hollanders killed 12 and saved 7 men of the youngest of them alive. Had the English ships been one day sooner, they had got in in spite of the Hollanders. These last, in Neira Road, wore the English ships' colours at their ships' sterns in disgrace of the English nation. Marvels Ball should send so weak a force this year, when he knows the force of the Flemings, the tyranny they use towards the English when they get the upper hand, and that they use all possible means to bar the English from all trade. If Ball means the Company to have any trade in these islands, such forces must be sent as there are, or all will be lost and not to be expected hereafter. Complains that he has but 38 men to withstand the Hollanders' force and tyranny. Their wants are extreme; they have neither victuals nor drink, only rice and water. Is determined to hold out until the next westerly monsoon, or else all to die in defence of the place. Great Dutch force ready to come against them; the English must not let go of the footing they have in Pooloroon. The Oran Kayes demanded of Courthoppe whether he intended to stand out this year, and upon being told yes, offered the surrender of all the island of Lantar, which he purposes to accept, relying this year upon assistance and forces from the President of Bantam. David writes, by permission of the Hollanders, to persuade Courthoppe to go over to confer with them concerning composition which he has promised to do. Has not so much as received any letter or advice from Ball since the writer's first coming to these islands. News from the Lantar men daily of the Hollanders' preparations to assault the English, which, to the uttermost of his power, Courthoppe is making provision to withstand. Begs relief by the first winds, and not to defer it till the last of the monsoon, which was the cause of the loss of the English ships this year. [Two pages and a half. Indorsed, "Received 4 July 1618." O. C., Vol. VI., No. 644.]

April 24. 333. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The King desirous to have the new discovery [of the South-west passage] effected, but yet loth to overthrow their patent, and seeing their patentees will not join with this Company, a month's respite is given to the patentees to see what they can or will do. Whether Martyn shall be cashiered for his dishonest courses. Sir Robert Anstruther allowed to adventure 1,000*l.*, conditionally that he will keep and not sell it. Sir John Wiede's stock not to be accepted for Holloway's debt. Petition concerning Withington to be presented to the Lord Chancellor. [One page. Court Bk., IV., 163-164.]

April 25. 334. Carleton to Sec. Lake. Somewhat of no light consideration The Hague. has happened betwixt our English and the Hollanders in the isles of Banda, two English ships being taken in fight, 10 or 12 men slain, and many hurt. The Hollanders impute the cause to our men assisting the enemy with munition of war, and hindering them by force, at Pooloway, from dealing for nutmegs and mace. Believes, when the other side is heard, that all things will not go so clear as these men make it, as it seems that restitution of ships and damages was offered afterwards by the Hollanders to our men at Bantam and refused, and the matter referred to be heard in these parts. The particulars are kept from Carleton, but he hopes, within a few days, to understand more exactly what passed. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

April 25. 335. Carleton to Chamberlain. Understands of a bickering The Hague. betwixt our men and the Hollanders, in the Moluccas, wherein we have lost two ships. It is to be feared that the Spaniards and Portuguese will enter into their ancient possessions by this breach if it be not soon made up. Sees not how that can well be with our honour, though they here say our men were chiefly in fault. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Will not consent to his paying Isaac Beage anything. "If he dare tell the Prince, I will have right for all injuries, and that upon his ship." good supply has been sent to Ahmedabad; has not heard from Agra. Muddo will return within 10 days to Ahmedabad; he trusts, with good news. Has sent Sprage to Gul Chanda (? Golconda) for good reasons. Salbancke should have prosecuted Roe's order, which was indeed more needful than the Red Sea, without Roe's knowledge. Could not conceive there was any need of more help at Agra, when the number he appointed was lessened by one; Capt. Shilling has neither bill nor copy of the debts; Fetiplace of opinion they had been recovered, if prosecuted, last year, and so is Roe. If the cloth gone for Agra had such another wetting as Roe is waiting against, it might be dry in a river. [One page and a half. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 645.]

338. Matthew Slade to Carleton. The advocate of the Indian Society, M. Coen, is sent to the Hague with all the advertisements, to make report of that unlucky fight to the States, the particulars of which are to be communicated to Carleton. Mons. Bas speaks of the great need of a combination with the English Company; told him that it was especially one man's fault that the union was not made when his Majesty's Commissioners were here. Hopes that this one and other like officers of Grotius will one day come in consideration. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

339. Thos. Barker to Sir Thos. Roe. Acknowledges receipt of his commission, instructions, and other papers of 6 Oct. 1617, (see ante, Nos. 155, 156,) and his appointment of chief manager of these Persian employments, in case of Edward Connok's death or miscarriage. Immediately conferred with Monox and Tipton, who had arrived at the port of Jask on 6 December, in the Bee, which was despatched for Surat on 30 December, and determined, for reasons expressed in a consultation held at Shiraz, (transcript of which, with all other consultations, are inclosed,) that they would repair to Emanguolyque Khan and solicit from him justice against Sulpheckauze Sultan, his substituted governor, of all the sea coast from the port of Jask to the port of Ormuz, who had offered them, contrary to the tenour of the King's phirmaund, many insufferable injuries. Could not proceed on their journey until 12 February, because of the delay in the arrival of the camels from Lar, and the King's capitulations, which they wished to take with them. Travelled five days. The Khan being on his hunting progress, were desired to deliver their complaints without an audience, but would not do so, and were promised audience at Shiraz. Their complaints read in their presence to the Khan, who commanded that the Sultan should repay the money, about 80*l.* sterling, which he had received of Connok for three horses, not worth about 10*l.*, and make restitution of the cloths given to purchase their release; also of the money charged for camel hire above the usual rate. Their complaint about detaining the silk at Moghistan, the Khan said was the sole act of Lalabeg, the King's treasurer, and trivial, but granted his phirmaund for prohibiting any similar detention in future, and gave express orders to lend every assistance to whatever they desired concerning the restitution. Returned to Ispahan on 4 March. Has been engaged with Connok, Pley, and Bell in taking inventories and making sales of the goods of Wm. Tracy, deceased. Will first give a taste of last year's proceedings, managed by Connok, "which will have so ill a relish in the palate of any discreet man, that we know you will spit it out again." Having despatched the James from Jask, 19 January 1617, they set out for Moghistan, where the goods were housed; here Connok, notwithstanding his many large presents to the Sultan, could not procure camels, and was forced to leave the goods for Barker and others to bring up, Connok departing for Shiraz to complain to the Khan and obtain his phirmaund for their release. Connok's "slow speed,"—15 days' riding to Shiraz, travelling as the King's ambassador, and spending the Company's money so profusely, that the camel men reported he valued money as dirt. Connok's "more choleric than discreet" behaviour in trying to procure their release from imprisonment, going to the Khan's gate, who, being with his women, denied him audience, and his "high strained" speeches, that he was not only come to treat of buying and selling, but that the perpetual welfare or utter ruin and subversion of the Persian empire depended on his employment. At their arrival at Shiraz, Barker, Pley, Bell, and Pettus wrote to Connok, persuading him to desist from the further prosecution of such indirect and sinister courses. Connok exasperated with Barker in consequence. Copy of part of his letter dated from Shiraz, 25 May 1617, to Connok, at Ispahan, in answer to imputations in Connok's letter of 8th current. Hopes this will make it sufficiently apparent with what pains and diligence he endeavoured to bring up the goods to Shiraz. Had not been many days there before they received letters from Connok at Ispahan, ordering Barker's stay at Shiraz, and to settle a factory there, sending money by Wm. Bell, with "his groundless advice" as to sorts and quantities of goods which would be vendible. Determined, nevertheless, on sending up the goods which they gathered were vendible to most profit. Connok's rancour and indignation for this digression from his prescribed order, his letter to the factors at Surat, accusing Barker of sundry trivial untruths; but "the record of mine own conscience is to me a sufficient antidote against such poisonous, false, and malicious detractions." None who know him (Connok) will give credit to his writings. An instance of the truth of this in his letter to the Company, wherein he accuses Captain Pepwell of being confederate with others in running away with the Unicorn, though there was never so much as a whisper of it throughout the whole fleet; the reason plain, Captain Pepwell having taxed Connok "to have practised the taking away of his life by poison." Letters and papers discovered at Connok's death, which he had broken open; among them, a letter from Sir

Thos. Roe to the Sophy, dated from Ajmere, 14 February 1616. Connok's needless stay at Ispahan, after the arrival of the goods. Remarks on the capitulations he obtained from the King; some of the articles they will endeavour to have confirmed; others of so trivial a nature, that they shall omit them in their next treaty with the King. Particulars of silk received from Lalabeg, the King's treasurer, in lieu whereof he is to take cloth. Comments on this account; on the preposterous haste with which their cloth has been bartered away at a far less rate than it was worth, ready money, and the unvendible and ill conditioned silk taken in exchange, "that it had been much more beneficial for the Company to have wanted the first year's return (as, by the event, they have done,) than to have admitted of such a precedent." Connok's expenses; he is indebted about 1,000*l.* sterling to the Company; it is imagined there is money packed in the bales of silk which his servant Adam Tanner cannot be ignorant of; intend finding out the truth when they get to Moghistan. Connok's stratagems to arrive at Ispahan before Barker, whom he plotted to detain at Shiraz. Occurrences during Connok's passage to Jask; his "needless fear" of the Spanish Ambassador, on coming in sight of whom he "set spurs to his horse and with as much speed as their horses could carry them directed their course towards an adjacent village to the great disreputation of our King and nation, he being in the opinion of these people an Ambassador." In his letter to Barker he certified the cause to be an apprehension that the Spanish Ambassador intended to have seized and murdered him, of which scandal the Ambassador professed to be much grieved that they being Christians should raise such false scandal on each other to the disgrace of the Christian profession, and that he should be ready to do any service in his power for the subjects of the King of Great Britain with whom the King of Spain had concluded a perpetual peace, league, and amity. Folly of taking a greater quantity of silk than there were means in the country to pay for, the Sultan not allowing any silk to be put aboard the Bee. A cursory survey of the expenses of the Ispahan factory has been taken which amount in less than one year to 3,000*l.*; the presents alone given by Connok amounting to 800*l.* He died at Gaytoun on 24 Dec. 1617 "his life and death may be drawn into this short epitome: he lived an Atheist and died a Papist." Wm. Tracy died on 27 December and George Pley at Jask on 4 December 1617. Suspicion of poison; Connok reported that Monox had poisoned him, but there was no appearance that they died other than natural deaths. Particulars of their goods registered in the consultations. On the exceeding benefit of establishing a trade in these parts and the hopes of obtaining from the King the enjoyment of it even on the conditions sent to them in writing by the Company and Sir Thos. Roe. Answers to the several objections made by the Company concerning the benefit and possibility of obtaining this trade; the silks of Persia may be transported by sea into England at less charge than by the way of Turkey; the port of Jask assigned to them by the King is free of either of the inconveniences expressed, for by raising a fort

there, as they have no doubt the King will be easily induced to do and maintaining it at his own proper cost and charges, the English ships may ride free from the least molestations or stratagems of the Portugals; no reason why there should be delay in settling a trade in these parts; it cannot be contradicted that Persia hath and doth at present vend but a small quantity of English cloth, about 400 or 500 cloths annually, yet the reason is not the heat of this climate for it is as cold both for extremity and permanency as France, England, and other parts of Christendom which have more northerly latitude. Will contract with the King of Persia for 8,000 bales of silk of 180 pounds avoirdupois per bale, according to the Company's injunction, which they calculate will not be less in stowage than about 1,000 tons; it is an undoubted truth that the silk made in Persia will yearly amount to 1,000,000*l.*, but half of it has not yearly been exported, being spent and wrought in Persia in making sundry sorts of stuffs. Cannot fathom the King of Spain's intent; whether he be determined to undertake the transport of such a quantity of silk as is made in Persia or no; however probable that the King may treat with other Princes for diverting the trade of his silk other ways than through the Turk's dominions because he would impoverish his enemy by exhausting such an annual treasure yet as to a peace being concluded with the great Turk, there is no appearance of it at present, neither is the King so effeminate or such a lover of peace, that he will make peace on dishonourable terms; the King of Persia will expect in reason no other security for the yearly exportation and payment for the quantity of silk agreed for, than that there be continually resident an English Ambassador whose expenses will be between 600*l.* and 700*l.* per annum; it is altogether improbable that the Spanish Ambassador now lately arrived in Persia is sent to procure a fort on the Persian shore to supply the wants of the barren island of Ormuz with fresh water, victuals, &c.; it is not understood that they should take all the silks brought to the mart town assigned to them though they think all would be less than the 800 bales specified in the Company's order; they have already given their opinions of the Spaniard's undertaking this trade, yet they are of so insolent, proud, arrogant, and aspiring a disposition that though happily they have no use of this trade, yet they may undertake it so as to make all Christendom attend at their doors for it; they are sufficiently resolved that England does not spend the tenth part of the Persian silk, yet they make no question but they may vend it to the French, Dutch, and other neighbouring nations who have formerly been supplied from Aleppo. After conference and treaty with the King they will be prepared to give their opinions more maturely and to better satisfaction, which shall be dispatched to Sir Thos. Roe. Answers to the Company's limitation sent by Sir Thomas; as to the distance of the several places, where the silks are made, from the port of Jask; the commodiousness of the assigned port of Jask; the yearly quantity of silk exported from Persia and the ordinary current price in these parts; the charge of carrying the silk to the port. Concerning the three articles to be propounded in their treaty with the King of Persia and which the Company inserted in their limitation; the customs to be paid in Persia, the procuring of a secure port, and inducing the King to take all English commodities specified at the prices set down. Their opinion touching Roe's instructions [dated 6 Oct. 1617, see ante, No. 156]. It only remains for them to show by what means this trade, yet in embryo, may receive both life and growth; this will come to pass by the profits and benefits arising from the sale of foreign goods in Persia and the export of commodities from thence to such ports and places where they are vendible to most profit which the following particulars will demonstrate. List of goods originally to be had in Persia and vendible in England, with the prices; these include silks, the names of the places where made and the quantities; rhubarb, musk, carpets, velvets, satins, damasks, taffetas, gold and silver cloths, bezoar stones, opium, fruits. Also particulars of commodities originally to be had in Persia and vendible in India; of goods brought out of India and vendible in Persia; these last include steel, ginger, sugar, all kinds of preserves, saffron, gumlac, indigo, copper, iron, camphor, sugar candy, opium, tamarinds, paper, cords, and cotton wool; of southern commodities vendible in Persia; these include pepper and all kinds of spices, china dishes, and all sorts of china ware, tin, sandal and log wood, camphor, ginger; of English commodities vendible in Persia; all sorts of cloths, tin, brass, morse teeth, Muscovy hides, vermilion, quicksilver, lead, coney skins, cochineal, coral beads, iron, copper, sword blades. Particulars received by Connok from one of the King's nearest attendants, supposed to be most acceptable to present to the King; if any such be brought to Surat in the ensuing year's fleet, they request orders may be given to send them to these parts; armour of proof complete both for the King and his horse; coach or carriage with furniture, and a coachman that knows how to manage and drive horses; clocks, watches, and horizontal dials which may answer to the latitude of Ispahan; looking-glasses; dogs of all kinds, game cocks and hens, peacocks, maps, and pictures, bearing the resemblance either of man, woman, or other creatures drawn to the life, are much desired by the King. Account of the weights of Persia, of the coins current there, and of the measures in use. Nothing remains for the perfect accomplishment of this trade but his Lordship's presence in these parts; they know his zeal for the good of England's commonwealth in general and the benefit of their masters in particular, therefore think it needless to be importunate in beseeching his presence amongst them. In confident assurance of his arrival this ensuing year they intend procuring the King's phirmaund that his charges shall be borne by the country. Sundry particulars in which Richard Steele's information is not correct. English beams, scales, and weights, necessary to prevent cozenage in the weight of the silk. [Forty-four pages. Imperfect; the last part wanting. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 792.] Incloses,

Feb. 2.—At Shiraz, present Thos. Barker, chief merchant, Edw. Monox, and Fras. Tipton. Barker appointed by Sir Thos. Roe, his Majesty's Ambassador to the Great Mogul, chief manager of the East India Company's affairs in Persia. Reasons why Adam Tanner should remain at Moghistan. Valuables found on Wm. Blundestone, servant to Edw. Connok deceased, and alleged to have been given to Blundestone by Connok, seized to the use of the Company, to which Connok "is supposed to be much indebted and therefore in equity requisite that he should first pay his debts before he gave gifts." Proposal to dissolve the factory either at Shiraz or Ispahan; resolved to make Ispahan the place of their residence at least for the present year and to capitulate with the King for a convenient mart town to be appointed for the English; all the merchandise remaining at Shiraz to be taken to Ispahan; resolved that Ispahan is the fittest place from whence to direct their advice for India. Complaint to be made to the Khan against the Sultan of Minau for taking away part of their goods and detaining the rest. As to Sir Thos. Roe's orders limiting the expenses of their housekeeping.

March 6.—At Ispahan, present Thos. Barker, cape merchant, Wm. Bell, Edw. Monox, Edw. Pettus. Reasons for not admitting Francis Tipton one of the Council. Resolved not to deliver, because of its ancient date, the Lord Ambassador Roe's letter to the King of Persia, dated 14 Feb. 1615-6, which had been intercepted and opened by and was found among the papers of the late Edw. Connok who treated with this King as an absolute and immediate Ambassador from the King of England. Monox to give up the papers he found in the chests of Connok and Pley deceased, and copies of such of Connok's letters as he had written against Barker and Bell that they might, if needful, give answers thereto. Inventory of goods belonging to Edw. Connok deceased, in Gaytoun, a village in the Persian territories, the 24 December 1617, with the prices they were sold for, Francis Tipton and Wm. Blundestone, late Connok's servant, being also present, some of which Blundestone challenged as of right belonging to Adam Tanner and himself, having been given to them by their deceased master, but not producing any testimony, it was determined to dispose of those goods also and refer them to the Company's resolution. Inventory of goods, with the prices they were sold for, belonging to George Pley who deceased in Jask 2 December 1617. Similar inventory, the goods being delivered to John Fletcher, purser of the Bee, and consigned to the cape merchant of Surat to dispose of. Inventory of goods, with the prices they were sold for, belonging to Wm. Tracy who deceased in Gaytoun 26 Dec. 1617.

March 7.—At Ispahan, present Thos. Barker, cape merchant, Wm. Bell, Edw. Monox, and Edw. Pettus. Books and papers found in the chests of George Pley examined; letters found subscribed by Pley and Pettus containing charges against the cape merchant which Pettus was told he should either justify "his said false accusations or else (as often he had done) deny his own hand by subscribing to the contrary." Concerning the admittance of Fras. Tipton to this consultation. Desire of the cape merchant that a letter from Barker and Bell from Shiraz, 25 May 1617, wherein Barker frees himself from certain false yet trivial imputations, wherewith Connok, Pley, &c. had taxed him, should be put upon the register.

March 9.—At Ispahan; present Thos. Barker, Wm. Bell, Edw. Monox and Fras. Tipton. Concerning the disorderly carriage of Edw. Pettus, his drunkenness, blasphemy, and immorality "with these infidel women," for which he is dismissed the Council and Fras. Tipton admitted. List of copies of the letters sent to and written by Geo. Pley to be sent to Sir Thos. Roe.

March 10.—At Ispahan; present Thos. Barker, Wm. Bell, Edw. Monox, and Fras. Tipton. Concerning the examination of the books, letters, and papers found in Edw. Connok's chest; those which affect the Company's business to be sent by the next sea conveyance to England. A letter without date from Adam Tanner to his master Edw. Connok, at Gaytoun, where it was received the day after Connok's decease was thought by the Council to be written in such a strange and unwonted strain that they, supposing it concerned the disposal of some money in the custody of Tanner, ordered it to be revealed by none.

March 13.—At Ispahan; present Thos. Barker, Wm. Bell, Edw. Monox, and Fras. Tipton. Answer of Edw. Monox to the account required of him of the moneys found in the chests of Connok and Pley. Concerning the revoking of an act decreed at a consultation held at Moghistan, 31 December 1616, that all the English in the factories, servants to the Company, should yearly take sufficient cloth at the price it cost in England to apparel themselves. Reasons for awaiting at Ispahan the arrival of the King, who is expected in about twenty days; and whether in the interim they should advise for India; resolved to defer writing until they had obtained trade on the conditions expressed in Sir Thos. Roe's instructions, "and so the consultation ended." [Twenty-six and a quarter pages. O. C., Vol. V., No. 606.]

Ispahan.

340. Thos. Barker and Wm. Bell to Thos. Kerridge at Surat. Refer to their letter to Sir Thos. Roe for a particular account of their proceedings in the Company's affairs in Persia, who they doubt not will send Kerridge a transcript. Received his letter of 9 Nov. 1617 at Shiraz in the following January. Believe bribery was used to make out that the prize they took belonged to the Governor of Surat, the better to recover damages against the English. Ample supplies required to prevent "this trade the hopefulest without exception that ever England enjoyed" from falling to irrecoverable ruin; the death wound to it caused by Connok's profuse and inconsiderate management of these Persian negotiations. They are not only destitute of money, commodities, and credit, but fifteen hundred pounds in debt. Will follow Sir Thos. Roe's instructions in every particular. Concerning Kerridge's reasons for not sending a supply this year, the letter to Kerridge and Rastell of 15 May last (see ante No. 74), and the accusations against Barker; he (Barker) has always been of such an austere carriage, and so far from taking delight in any licentious entertainment, has neglected even lawful recreations; instances of Connok's vicious way of living. Connok met the Spanish ambassador not very far from Ormuz, from whom he very manfully ran away, to the perpetual dishonour of his Majesty and the English nation. In reference to disposal of the goods, and the giving of presents. Admits having abused Connok to his face, but details the provocation he received. If any man think Barker has transgressed the bounds of charity, let him know that charity hath first respect to a man's self, and but that Barker's reputation was called into question, he should have been content to have interred Connok's vices with his body. In great want of a sufficient linguist, those in Persia being so wholly addicted to drunkenness. Thinks Jaddow very fit for such an employment if he might be spared. Pean, who served Edwardes at the Mogul's Court, died at Jask. In favour of John Goodwin's abilities. Have delivered their journal and accounts to Ed. Monox. Sends original of waste book kept by himself at Surat, and other papers [wanting], by Fras. Tipton. Purpose going to Kasbin to speak with the King. Utterly destitute of paper, quills, and ink. [Six pages and a half. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 647.]

April 28. 341. Court Minutes of the East India Company. A tent, intended as a present to the Prince, but, refused by him, given to the Governor "to take the air therein this summer in the country." John Awberye and Humphrey Browne, brethren of the East India Company, admitted into the Muscovy Company. Order concerning Lutterford's debts. The Countess of Derby having neglected to pay in 800*l.* she had leave to write for, by reason of her lord's death, to be allowed to do so, which she intends for her grandchild, conditionally that she does not sell it. Those who have been admitted gratis not to be allowed to sell more of their adventures than they have paid in. Sale of the adventure of Sir John Villiers to Sir Lionel Cranfield to be confirmed, he being ready to perform any good offices for the Company, though no part has as yet been paid in by Sir John. Petition of Thomas Harvy to be a free brother refused. Dividend to be received on the joint stock. Sir Marmaduke Darrell, Sir Allan Apsley, and the rest of the green cloth to have a meeting about satisfying the Scottish Company for the remainder taken from them by the East India and Muscovy companies. Letter read from the Low Countries importing the differences between the English and the Dutch concerning the islanders of Pooloroon, with "many untruths to colour the proud and insolent carriage of the Dutch towards the English, which they have ever most maliciously and injuriously prosecuted without any sparks of religion, honesty, or common civility." [One page and a half. Court Bk., IV., 164-166.]

April 30. 342. Carleton to [Becher, Cottington, and Wake]. There has [The Hague.] been some small bickering in the Moluccas between these men and ours, in which the English lost two ships and five or six men. They say our men gave the first cause of quarrel, but the circumstance of the Hollanders conducting our ships after they were taken to Bantam, and offering restitution and reparation, which was refused, shows the case not to be so clear as these men would make it.
[Extract from Holland Corresp.]

April. 343. Carleton to Sec. Lake. His often and earnest instance in [The Hague.] behalf of William Carmychel, a Scotchman, who has had a suit hanging four years for satisfaction from the Dutch East India Company, for goods taken from him in 1612 at Hitto in the Moluccas.
The seven judges selected from the high courts by the States to determine the matter now make the question, whether the goods were taken from Carmychel in time of truce or war with the Por-tugals, a point of decision, as if they were taken in time of war they are to be adjudged good prize. Carmychel protests against this, and claims his rights as a subject of his Majesty, and has desired Carleton to certify the point to his Majesty, and his determination to appeal to his Majesty for such further remedy as the justice and equity of his cause may require. [Holland Corresp.]

May 1. 344. Matthew Slade to Carleton. Doubts not but that he has Amsterdam. been fully informed by the advocate Coen of the accidents in the East Indies last year. Has received a letter written at Bantam by a preacher in August 1617; he writes that negotiation is in those lands reasonable good, but mixed with much strife and war both with the inhabitants, who greatly fear the Hollanders, and also with the English who traffic there. The cause of the fight between the English and Hollanders before Pooloway in March [1617] was given by the English themselves, who sought perforce to hinder the Dutch at Pooloway from dealing for nutmegs and mace. "This revolt hath caused such hatred between them and us throughout all the Indies that well there may shortly arise from thence open war."
Dutch ships arrived and expected from Banda, Ternate, the Moluccas, and Amboyna with nutmegs, mace, and cloves. Abundance of pepper growing in Bantam, more than has been seen for many years; likely to have lading for three ships in one harvest. There will be sent home [to Holland] from India in this year more than the worth of ten millions that is 20 tons of gold, Spanish barks laden with silk wares from China, taken by the Hollanders, worth about two millions. A Portuguese carac taken by two English ships, with 2,300,000 ryals of eight, "which was the pay of all the soldiers in the East Indies." The above are the principal points of his letter; the rest concern the nature and religion of the Indians, and the little regard which "our men" [the Dutch] have to piety. Two French ships waiting before Bantam for lading of pepper, which by reason of the plague are almost unmanned and very likely to be transported to the Hollanders there, "whereupon he addeth these words 'If godliness took place here as much as ungodliness doth,

May 5.

345. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Petition of Isabel, widow of Benjamin Joseph, for a further consideration for the ryals and plate of her late husband; forty pounds granted which her son Mr. Madox thankfully accepted, to conclude the business. Petition of John Wadsworth, coxswain of the Lion, for relief, having received a dangerous wound on each leg. Agreement with George Hall, anchor smith. Proceedings of the committees at Deptford and Blackwall. John Martyn to be displaced. Nailers to serve the Company with iron at 16s. a ton. [Three and a half pages. Court Bk., IV., 167-170.]

May 6.
Jacatra.

346. Geo. Cokayne and John Hayward, to President Ball. Arrived three days past; hope to sail this night. Three tons of nails eaten away with rust. Kindly welcomed by the King. Have desired Ufflete to go to Bantam to settle his accounts. [One page. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 648.]

May 8-15.

347. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Request of John Halloway to meet his bills by payment of 500*l.* stock, purchased by him of Sir John Wilde refused. Letter read from Thomas Mitford, desiring a reward for his long service and his extraordinary expenses in apparel in the Mogul's Court; the Company finding some future use may be had of him, and that the complaints against him happened by the fury of his youth, granted him one hundred nobles. Permission to Geo. Thorpe and Sir Henry Neville to adventure 300*l.* each. John Martyn to be discharged from the Company's service and brought into the Star Chamber.

May 12.—Request of Williams of Bristol, for some means for the maintenance of Aldworthe's children from his estate. Letter of thanks read from the Countess of Derby for accepting her adventure when in justice she was excluded. Sir James Cunningham to be concluded with, if 500*l.* will clear that business finally. Petition of Jeremy Sambrooke to adventure 200*l.*, refused.

May 14.—Letters read from Edward Connok, dated from Persia in April and June 1617, (see ante Nos. 56 and 91), and one of special import of 4 August 1617, (see ante No. 122), all to be “abbreviated” by Mr. Ellam, who is to buy 500 cloths for Persia, and as many for Bantam and Surat. Advice read of Anthony Fugars, who has lived long in Persia and knows those coasts, (see ante No. 21.) Authority to be procured from the King to confirm Connok in his appointment as agent in Persia. Answer to be sent to his letters that he may find he is not neglected, and that seeing how late his letters came to the Company's hands, it was not their fault that he had not the things expected, and for safety some letters to be sent by the way of Muscovy, some by Marseilles to Aleppo, and others by Constantinople.

Resolution to prosecute the trade in Persia with all possible means, being of opinion that it may yield 70 or 80 per cent. ; the fleet to go first to Surat and thence to send a convenient strength to Jask to countenance the business and oppose any attempts of the Portuguese. A ship of 500 tons to be built at Blackwall, to proceed with another at least to Jask to secure the trade and two pinnaces to be bought. Ellam ordered not to allow any letters or Journals to be carried out of the house without special permission, but those belonging to the Company to have leave to read them in the counting house. Complaint against Harlowe for having a book with the names of all the adventures and their amounts; the Governor requested to try and get possession of it. Information of Carmychel, a Scotchman, that something has been enacted in the Low Countries against this Company; all desired to endeavour to procure a copy of it. [Four pages and three quarters. Court Bk., IV., 170-4.]

May 15.
Paris.

348. Wil. Becher, his Majesty's agent in France, to the Privy Council. His endeavours to obtain reparation for a depredation committed upon a ship belonging to the East India Company on the coast of Brittany. The French King has commanded the President of Brittany, who was formerly employed in the business, to be sent for, at the King's charge. Will do his best to obtain justice for the Company. [One page. East Indies Vol. I., No. 63.]

[May 15.]
[Siam.]

349. [Richard Pitt, Chief at Siam,] to [Ric. Cocks at Japan.] Desires Wm. Eaton to come over next year to take the post of principal in this place or in case of his decease, John Osterwick; wishes to return home. After John Johnson's death the writer was struck with a miserable sickness. A great junk may be built as large as the Hollanders' provided two or three English carpenters be sent; the King will furnish them with two hundred men to cut timber or perform any other service for the English. Commodities that will sell, and the prices. [Draft fragment; unsigned. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 649.] of their octroi; they are suitors to the States to have it renewed for 50, 40, or at least 30 years; Holland and Zeeland are only interested now, the other provinces now require to enter, so that a new grant will not be yielded to without alterations in the conditions. 353. Thos. Staverton to President Ball. The Solomon and Thomas arrived in safety on 2nd February; the Attendance with Cassarian David on 12 February; all laden with rice and left under the command of David on 6 March. Nine men lost, including Capt. Handson, in the voyage from Bantam; three died while at Sambopa, and five left behind sick, three of whom are since dead. Kellum Throgmorton accompanied David. Found with Kellum, Geo. Jackson, [John] West, Wm. Withers, Thos. Fowle, Daniell, and Hance, a German, who promised to go with David to Banda, but turned Moor and ran to the King of Gooa's protection who would not give him up, saying it was against his law which he must not violate; Hance has since murdered a Moor and married his wife, which the King "now villain and Moor" tolerates; Jackson, Fowle, and Daniell gone with David, so that only West and Withers remain. Found this factory without goods of any sort. The King uses them friendly and accepted their presents gratefully. No China junks have arrived this year. Concerning Hernandez, the Spaniard, who left secretly in a Spanish frigate, which is said to have robbed the Viceroy of Malacca of a large sum; Richard Short, one of Mr. Hawkrige's mates supposed to have gone away with the Spanish vessel; some think he has been secretly murdered by the Portugals. Jackson gone with his junk for Jambi and so for Bantam. Report from the Portugals who came from Ternate, with rotten cloves, that the Hollanders in the Moluccas were in great want and had few ships there. Also, it is confidently reported, that the Hollanders intend this year to regain the King's grant for a factory here and it is thought the King is likely to entertain them "though to our appearance no such matter." Letter brought by a junk from Succadana, directed to Kellum Throgmorton and signed by Wm. Raven and Geo. Collins, state the factory there to be in great want which if not shortly supplied could not be continued. The Queen of Gooa accepts his good will as though she had received the gold twist mentioned in Ball's letter. The King of Gooa sends his love and recommendations; Crayne Angillo, the King of Tollowe's [Tolo] eldest son, often asks if there is not something for him aboard the ships. Likely to be a plentiful year for rice. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 651.]

354. Matthew Slade to Carleton. The Dutch East India Company complain much of injury done by the English at Banda and Bantam. 355. W. Becher to Sec. Lake. Answer from the French Council concerning our traffic. They have agreed that the President of Neptunières should be sent for to give an account of the "pursuit," of the East India Company (in reference to the loss of one of their ships wrecked among the rocks upon the coast of Brittany by the inhabitants of Audierne). Letters from the King and the Privy Council lately delivered to him on the subject. [Extract from Correspondence, France.]

May 19-23. 356. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Christopher Farewell's bonds for "true service" to be cancelled. There being many points unfit to be divulged in the letters from Persia which both the Spaniards and the Hollanders will be ready to take advantage of, the Committee only to be allowed to read them. Letter read from Aleppo, that the delay of Connok's previous letters was caused by his sending them by way of Marseilles; also of the danger of sending the two Arabs according to Connok's advice. Discussion whether in the letter from his Majesty to the King of Persia, the King's kindness in offering to give credit to his Majesty's subjects for 2,000 or 3,000 bales of silk, should not be acknowledged. A pinnacle of 130 or 140 tons, and not to draw more than 11 feet of water and of extraordinary length, to carry good ordnance "for offence," to be built for the coast of Persia. A Committee to appear before the Privy Council concerning Sir James Cunningham's business. Request of Mrs. Walthall to sell 100*l.* of her husband's adventure in the first joint stock, referred. Petition of Nathaniel Basse about brokerage. Petition of divers poor men of Blackwall, Ratcliffe, and Limehouse for employment and to be relieved from the opposition of the porters of London. Petition of Eliza, wife of John Noble and a prisoner with the Turks, for payment of certain debts. The lease of Leadenhall to be sealed by the Company.

The recal of Laurence Ryall was to answer certain complaints made by the English against him for wrongs they suffered in the Moluccas. Have already spent a month in soliciting from the King a grant of two years trade at Tecoe, that being declined, of one year and then of four months to recover their debts, for which grant they promised four pieces of ordnance, but are still denied and detained in the hope they will buy the King's pepper. Although they have followed the King six miles two days together, lying on the cold ground they cannot speak with him. They are therefore resolved to repair forthwith to Laxaman and to desire only the King's letter for recovery of their debts at Tecoe, which may incline the King to lower his rates for pepper. 361. Wm. Raven to President Ball. Lewd and prodigal conduct of Geo. Collins, whom Geo. Cokayne left chief in the factory; he has spent in idle expenses 16 and 20 shillings a day, and the Queen and the Governor have often been disturbed in the night by his drunken rioting. Has been a long time in fear of his own life; heard Collins say he had murdered an Englishman at Surat, and has no doubt he would also kill the writer so there be none to bear witness. [*One page. 365. Wm. Nicolls to President Ball. Arrival of the Gift from Surat, in April last, with commission and purpose to obtain yet longer trade at Tecoe, which the King will in no wise grant, he being fully resolved to bring the trade to Acheen, so that the price of pepper will be greatly increased. The Dabuls do the English more hurt in buying pepper than any other nation. Wishes the Hollanders and themselves were joined, that they might burn such ships as trade there. The King's base usage, notwithstanding the present Nicolls gave him. Sends copy of his journal, in which he will see the charges Gen. Keeling was at in obtaining trade for two years. Calls to mind, now too late, Solomon's saying "the heavens in height, the earth in depth, and the King's heart no man can search out." The King has promised his letters to Tecoe for the recovery of their debts, which [Rict.] Harris makes little doubt of recovering. Wishes greater supplies to enable them to buy larger quantities of pepper. Has been living even in purgatory under a brainsick King. Requests Ball would send for him to Bantam, to answer the false accusations of Millward and Patteson against him. Protestations of his desire to do the Company good service; would sooner suffer his flesh to be torn from the bare bones than not effect it. Hopes to see him at the arrival of the next ships from Surat. [Four pages. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 659.]

367. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Offer of a brother-in-law of Abraham Cartwright, residing at Antwerp, to deliver about 400*l.* at Seville, in Spanish money, at 4*s.* 6*d.* the piece of eight. Letter read from Henry Bacon, lately returned from Sir Walter Raleigh's voyage, stating that Don Diego de Mollena, who was prisoner in Virginia, incites the King of Spain to send forces to suppress Virginia, by the hopes of a silver mine there, from which he shows a piece to justify the truth thereof. The King's letters sent to the Emperor of Persia and Connok, one by Muscovy, another by Venice to the Ambassador of Constantinople, and a third to Aleppo by Mr. Treasurer's means. Letter read from Sir Robert Sherley, from Spain, professing his desire to do the Company all possible service, but complaining of having received no answer to his letter. Proposal that a ship be sent to Bantam every October, to furnish ships she may meet with at the Cape with provisions or men if required. Concerning the suit of George Scott against the Company.

Terringham to provide ryals at Middleborough. Richard and Rowland Beresford to be proceeded against by Bateman the Company's solicitor on a bill due in August last. Wages of Andrew Burrell for building the ship at Blackwall. Unjust complaint of the "moneyers of the Tower," who pretend, in their petition to the King, that they are grown poor for want of silver to coin, which is carried away by the Company and request a larger allowance, from his Majesty, for their labour in coining "the two pences," which comes to a matter of 17*l*. June 14. 369. Articles propounded to the King of Persia, in the name of King James, by Thos. Barker, authorized by virtue of a commission from Sir Thomas Roe, Ambassador to the Great Mogul. That there be perpetual love, league, and amity between the two mighty Princes, and that "great or little ambassadors" should reside at the respective courts; that the governors at all the Persian ports shall peaceably and quietly suffer the English to land their goods, and furnish the shipping with provisions at the accustomed prices; that in case of shipwreck the English shall be allowed to use the best means they can to save their goods, the governors assisting and compelling the restitution of any such goods which may be found in the custody of the Sophy's subjects; that the English shall freely exercise their own religion and not be forced to become Mussulmen, but should any Englishman voluntarily become a Mahometan, everything in his possession shall be given up to the ambassador, agent, consul, or English merchants; that the English shall be allowed to carry arms for their defence, and lawfully to kill any who may assault them, whether thieves of their own or any other nation; that the English ambassador shall have a house, not only in Ispahan but wherever else he shall reside within the Persian territory; that any of the English nation transgressing the law be delivered up to the English ambassador, to be by him punished according to his offence; that the English ambassador shall have power to appoint consuls in any of the Sophy's dominions, and his dragoman the same privilege with English subjects; that the English have the privilege of employing any subjects of the King of Persia, or other strangers, as their servants; that all English subjects taken prisoners of war, or by sale, gift, or otherwise in the custody of a Persian, shall be delivered up to the English ambassador, agent, or consul, upon paying the price cost, if slave or bought for money; that the English shall have a place given them to bury their dead; the property of the deceased shall be given up to the ambassador or consul, and the orphans, whether of Armenians or any other sect of Christians, placed at the disposal of the ambassador or consul; that English goods shall pass in and out of Persia duty free; that in case of highway robbery or goods stolen in transit, the governor of the country shall pay to the English their value; that in any difference, whether between Moor, Armenian, Jew, or any other nation, and the English, justice shall be declared by the Cadi in presence of the Ambassador or Consul, but if it exceed a certain amount the Chief Justice of Persia is to decide; that the English shall be at liberty to export any of their imported goods; no Englishman to be imprisoned for debt, except under certain conditions; that the English shall be permitted to attack and seize the ships and goods of the Portugals, if they continued to give impediment to the proceedings and quiet trade of the English; that in any future treaty between Persia and Turkey, the treaty hereby made between England and Persia shall continue inviolable, and the conditions of the trade for silk be faithfully performed; that the King of Persia shall erect a fort, at Jask, at his own expense, and furnish it with a garrison sufficiently strong to prevent any attempts or stratagems by the Portugals, the said fort to be given up to the English at any time, upon payment of all the charges incurred for building and fortification; that should the Portugals, previous to the building of the said forts, seize any vessel or goods belonging to the English, the King of Persia shall use every means to force them to make restitution; that the English shall be allowed to take such sums of money, as may be agreed on, for their protection of any foreign vessel, while, discharging her cargo or otherwise; and that the governors throughout the Persian territories shall be required to furnish the English with horses, camels, mules, or other beasts of burden, for the transport of themselves and goods. [*Signed by Thomas Barker. Bruce has quoted this proposed treaty in his Annals of the East India Company, I. pp. 207-8, as though it had been concluded, but from a minute made at the India Office there is abundant evidence (abstracted in the collection of Persian grants and treaties) that the Shah refused to sign it, and would only confirm a previous treaty made by Connok, the first agent in Persia. Succadana.

370. Geo. Cokayne to President Ball. Arrived at Succadana on the fourth, and found their people and factory in a strange confused fashion, that if the Governor himself had not related the ill carriage of their men, Cokayne had minded to have left both house and country and returned with all speed to Bantam, for he never saw a more disordered and shameful business. The trade is good and would maintain a factory to the Company's profit, if they had careful and honest servants. Conduct of the Flemings when they thought the English were going to give up their factory, they reported having taken English ships and bragged that they would force the English to leave both this and other places next year. Difficulty of settling Geo. Collins' accounts; he has done nothing but filch, spend, and consume; knows that one third of the debts will never be recovered. Large quantities of (precious) stones bought by the Flemings; one of $8\frac{1}{2}$ carats, bought by Cokayne of the Queen, though the Flemings stayed five days longer with their ship for this stone; other stones he has bought; fees demanded for the sight of any over four carats whether they be purchased or no. Large stones expected from Landak, the largest of 16 carats of a fair water, another of $12\frac{1}{2}$ carats, and a third of $10\frac{3}{4}$ carats; haste of the Flemings to send off their ship to procure money and goods to purchase them; the Governor has promised Cokayne the first sight, and refusal of all. Purchase and sale of goods; the Sabundar has agreed to build them a fair and comely house for 96 ryals. Wishes an honest man to be sent by 1st October to remain [John] Hayward's second, for Cokayne would not lose his passage for England this year, especially as he fears Ball will go in the first ships himself and leave Cokayne behind till next year. Complains of John Italiano; it is always the writer's misfortune to hail with one finger more than he can well put off with both hands. William Raven has endeavoured to have all things in good sort and fashion. Account of diamonds bought and their prices. Jackson very careful of his charge. 371. John Haywarde to President Ball. Arrived from Jacatra on the fourth and found the English left by Cokayne in good health, but the factory in a strange and confused state. Perceives that with a little care and diligence this place may be well and orderly governed. The Company's business carried on in such a manner that all the country cries out Fie at it, and had not Cokayne come all had been given over and lost. Has been obliged to bring the accounts of that negligent fellow Geo. Collins to some head. Would have written to his brother Richard Ball, to his father and mother and others, but time would not permit. [Indorsed, "Rec. 4 July 1618." One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 663.]

Desire a phirmaund for their good usage and leave to settle a factory at their discretion at Sana, Ties, Mocha, Aden, or any other place under the Sultan's dominion. Also a confirmation of the articles, freedoms, and liberties already granted to them by the Grand Signor and the Sultan's royal chop to procure the Grand Signor's phirmaund against their next coming to this port. Annexed, and the Dutch there, also that the Flemings in their letters from the Moluccas boast of their conquest of two Sillie [Scilly] ships. Report that when the Bandanese perceived the English willing to yield, the former would have blown up the ship which the English prevented, and slew more of the Bandanese than the Flemings did; thinks it a Machiavellian trick of the Flemings to bring the English nation into hatred with the Bandanese in Pooloroon. The Dutch have aboard their ships twenty Java men and ten Java women in irons, whom they took in the Moluccas and have made lawful prize of. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 664.]

July 3-4. 377. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Petition read from Richard Gyles, patentee for the burning of logwood. Answer to the Lord Treasurer on the disadvantages of logwood, "a vile deceitful wood that will strike upon cloth divers colours of itself but none that will hold;" that it would be a great credit and benefit to the commonwealth if logwood could be utterly abolished, and recommending that all in the kingdom should be burnt, and a proclamation issued to burn it accordingly whether found in ship, vessel, or house, and the importer, owner, or user thereof to be liable to fine or such other punishment as the Privy Council shall inflict upon them in the Star Chamber. Theophilus Feild not to be allowed to have any adventure. Alterations in the transfer of adventures.

Minutes of a General Court. Dividends declared of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per cent. upon the sixth voyage "to clear the same," and one capital upon the seventh to equal them which have taken forth formerly in commodities. Election of Officers. Sir Thomas Smythe, governor; Morris Abbott, deputy; William Harrison and twenty-four of the Committee. Expenses of the transit of a load of silk by way of Aleppo. The King has commanded that whatever quantity of goods they bring it, he will take them all and deliver silk for the same at the prices current in the country; but he absolutely refuses to make any certain contract with them. The King has confirmed his former phirmaunds for non-payment of custom or any other duties whatsoever. Has no doubt that the King will be found tractable enough to grant whatever in reason they may require, but first their goods and shipping must come in. Acheen.

384. Wm. Nicolls to the East India Company. Relation of occurrences since the writer was left on the coast of Sumatra by General Best for the sale of goods brought from Surat. The great dangers he has gone through; his detention at Bantam by Capt. Jourdain; arrival at Tecoe, where they were utterly denied trade without the King's licence or letters patent. Their voyage to Acheen, where they found the Hector, Spicke commander; Oxwicke, the chief merchant, having lately deceased, one Mr. Sangcraft [John Sanderofte] was in his place. The King's conditional promise for trade could not be accepted; successful endeavours of the writer to procure trade for two years at Tecoe, the King causing his name to be put in the letter to the Signor of Tecoe. The King afterwards swore to General Keeling that he would never grant trade to any other general longer than the ship's stay, even though they brought his Majesty's letter. The Rose afterwards sent with Walter Bennet and Millward to complain of abuses; but three months before their arrival Nicolls had acquainted the King thereof, who caused the Polema's members to be cut off. The King's reasons for refusing to grant licence for further trade. Complaints of the proceedings of one Diego; that the Company have very few experienced servants left in these parts alive. His negotiation with the King for his pepper. Fruitless efforts of the Dutch to get licence for trade at Tecoe, although they brought a letter in the Malay tongue from their President at Bantam. Those of Guzerat and Dabul should be hindered from prosecuting their annual trade by every possible means, or the trade in these parts will be little worth. Danger of the Portugals combining with the Spaniards and the Hollanders' devices to drive the English from trade at the Moluccas as well as at Surat. The factory at Acheen should be well supplied to prevent the Hollanders from securing the trade to themselves. Concerning the goods in the Gift, some being damaged and others lost. Henry Woolman, the man who set fire to Evans' bed-clothes on purpose to blemish the writer's credit. [*Four pages. sold at. Has got the Governor to send to Landak for the [precious] stones. Flying report that the Dutch have sunk an English ship at Banda, and that two other English ships had fled. Has been much troubled about the debts Collins left behind him; falsity of his accounts. Intends shortly setting up a new house; the Flemings also are building a fair new house. They have good store of their stolen China commodities; thinks they mean with their stolen goods to drive the English out of all trading everywhere, for all their capital in all their factories costs them nothing. Is in great fear of losing his passage this year for England, but will not stay a day behind Ball in these turmoiling affairs, not to gain the Company's wealth in India, for he well knows, when Ball leaves, all will be out of frame, however wise his successor may be. Remembrances to Mr. Darley. If Brechcheck hath become a more careful man, recommends his being sent to drive a round trade in this place on account of his old experience, "for knaves must be employed sometimes." A few lines are added by John Hayward, requesting any letters for him to be forwarded by the first vessel [Two pages. O. C., Vol. VI., No. 668.]

387. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Committee appointed to attend my Lord Duke (of Buckingham) about Sir Jas. Cunningham's business. Improvements and new buildings at Blackwall and Deptford. Survey of the workmen there; 232 at Blackwall, and 337 at Deptford. Refusal of the Company to meddle with the business of Sir Robert Rich, being "of that nature and quality which may concern the State, being yet unknown what his men had done abroad." His request to the magistrates at Emden, for leave to bring in his ships, answered, that their port being free, it was lawful for any to bring in their ships and goods; would give Sir Robert no hopes of relief from the Company. Letter read from Paul Triggs from Reims, giving notice of a great forest of timber near Brest, by the seaside, to be sold, belonging to the Marquis of Assigny; but because of the price, not to be entertained. Touching bargains of timber from Sir Richard Lovelace and Sir — Southwell. Offer of Richard Amis, the scholar, and the Company's exhibitor at Oxford, to preach before the Company, referred till the winter. Gratuity to Thomas Border, of the "Globe," who lost his leg in a fight with the Carac. Difference between Alice and Ann Walldo referred. from trading at Acheen, the English may price their goods at pleasure. The quantity of Surat cloth fit for the place. Attempts of the Hollanders to get trade these two years, since General Keeling's departure. Is sure Ball will pay no attention to any rumours or slanders against the writer. Samuel Bass, George Robinson, and Richard Allen, his three companions in this place; has freed the factory of the three previously there as altogether unfit; Richard Barkley speaks very good Malay, and is therefore fit for Ball's service. 402. Articles proposed to the Prince Sultan Coronne, Lord of Ahmedabad and Surat, by the Ambassador, on the breach with the Portugals. These consist of eleven articles, under which Sir Thos. Roe has written,—“That which I demand is bare justice, and which no man can deny that hath a heart clear and inclined to right, and no more than the laws of nations doth freely give to all strangers that arrive without any contract, and in no case so much as the great King doth promise and command. If it please the Prince to confirm these articles freely and without ill-meaning or collusion, and to command that they be observed precisely, I shall rest content, and shall give satisfaction to my Master and to my nation; but if not, and that any part be refused or written fraudulently, according to former experiences, then I desire the Prince to take knowledge that I will be free of my word given the great King in his presence, and of all blame or inconvenience that may happen after it, having given promise upon these conditions, or else to be at liberty." Roe adds, that after almost three years' experience of the falsehood of these people, who only seek their own interest and are governed by private interest and appetite, he was forced to relinquish many points often insisted upon when he could get nothing; but after many disputes he went to the Prince and had there read and discussed the articles as follows:—The first, that the Prince should publicly proclaim that he had received the English into his protection and had concluded peace and amity with them, was wholly agreed unto. The second, to lend frigates, was agreed to; but in no case would the Prince yield liberty for more than ten men to land armed or to wear arms in Surat, instancing the disorders and quarrelling of the English people, their offering to take Surat in 1616, the fear of the English fortifying their house or surprising the castle, and other foolish jealousies "arising from our own faults," so that Roe consented to the grant of ten armed men at a time, and the resident merchants to wear arms, on condition that other articles were granted sufficient for their security. The third article was absolutely refused, that they should buy, build, or hire a house near the castle or upon the water, but that they should rent a house in the city. The fourth, that the Governor of Surat should receive the English Ambassador with marks of honour, and his servants be allowed perfect liberty, was fully agreed to. The fifth, as to their taking the house of Cojah Arab, would not be allowed on any conditions, because their earnest suit caused suspicion that it was the ancient mint, that it stood against their great mosque, and the filthiness done by the English against the walls offended the Moors, who with reverence regard their holy places, and for fear that the English intend to make a fort of it and annoy the castle; so seeing the choice of all the town was offered to them, Roe could show no material reason why only that house would serve them. The sixth and seventh articles, viz., that freedom of trade should be granted to the English in the fullest manner on payment of the customs agreed to by a former treaty, from which pearls and all other jewels were to be exempted, and that the English might live in their own houses and among themselves, according to their own religion and laws, were agreed to. The eighth, that all causes of difference among the English should be wholly referred to themselves; but controversies with Moor or Gentile should be referred to the Governor and his officers, was agreed to; but it was refused to deliver up any English that fled under pretence that if they returned Moors they could not refuse them protection; to which Roe replied he would never consent to any leaving his faith, for under that colour they might rob. After much contention this point was yielded, because Roe utterly refused all [the articles] if that liberty were left to any misguided person. The ninth article, granting free liberty of speech to the English linguists and brokers in everything on behalf of their masters, was fully agreed to. The tenth was agreed to, that the presents, after being opened and examined at the custom-house, should be sealed and delivered to the English to pass duty free; but if "the said pretended presents" were not given they should either pay custom or not be delivered to the English; which, adds Roe, though most base, and in our power to give any or none, he consented to, but especially because else he could have nothing, "for these presents trouble all our business." The eleventh and last article for speedy justice in all causes of complaint or controversy, and protection from all injuries and oppressions, was agreed to. A draught to the above effect, given to the secretary writer of phirmaunds to be digested into form, was sealed and sent to Roe, who, finding a prohibition against any English landing in Surat, with or wearing any sort of arms, Roe only excepted, with other show of wicked cunning and malice, not once mentioning free trade or liberty to pass without exactions, or any other point faithfully set down, Roe having taken leave of the King and Prince, and not being able to go and complain without leave, sent back the phirmaund, utterly refusing to sign it. His reasons for so doing. To disarm the English entirely was an unworthy suspicion of their ill intents. Roe could not face his sovereign after having reported a peace with the Ghehangier, who had given the English full liberty of trade, which was now contradicted by an under treaty with the Prince; he could not command his countrymen to draw their swords in defence of the King's and Prince's ships at sea, which Roe had promised, when the Prince will not suffer them to wear their arms for their own defence. No such condition was ever demanded in times of peace with the Portugals, neither of the Hollanders, who had crept in and had offered no service or assistance to the King. Roe has added a note, that upon this a phirmaund was issued to disarm the Hollanders, and to prohibit them or any other Christians from wearing arms in Surat. The dangers to which the English were exposed by thieves on their yearly journeys to Ahmedabad and to other parts with great sums of money and goods. Lastly, all other points agreed on being left out or utterly falsified, showed ill meaning towards the English, and that it would be better to deal clearly and prohibit them all trade, giving them licence to depart, which Roe now only desired, and would settle his people in Gogo and Cambaya under the King's protection, whose grants were sufficient security to them; that upon no terms would Roe accept this phirmaund or stay in the port of Surat; that he recalled his promise given to the King, and protested he was guiltless of all that would happen in consequence. A new commission sent to the next fleet to disarm all the ships and frigates of the Prince's ports was added by Roe to these reasons, and the original sent to Surat to be published. These, with the phirmaund, all left with Afzul Khan. Roe sent for in the night, and after large dispute upon all the particulars, a confession that the phirmaund was not written with good meaning, Roe covenanting that the English should not land in a hostile manner to annoy the peace, and other articles which appear in Roe's contract, a new draught was made of all Roe's demands, which the next day Afzul Khan acquainted Roe had given the Prince satisfaction, who sent him draught of a new phirmaund, which the Prince had yielded unto; the first time Roe ever got sight of any phirmaund before it was passed, they always giving what they please. Had the draught translated, and finding it according to promise, with a few immaterial omissions and alterations, Roe was not willing to have a new brawl and the Prince gone, so he took a copy and sent the other to the secretary with warrant to pass. Masulipatam.

403. Wm. Methwold to the East India Company. His two years' service in India have been almost equally divided between Surat, Tecoe, Bantam, Masulipatam, and the sea. The Charles and the Hope bound for England. Was chosen by the President of Bantam, during his stay there, principal of the coast of Coromandel, and arrived at Masulipatam 25 May, where they found two Holland ships, the Bee from Surat then being in the road of Pettapoli. His endeavours to gain experience before Denton's departure. Arrival of a ship from Holland; cannot advise her exact cargo, as they do not enter their goods in the custom-house as the English do, but pay a yearly rent to be free of all duties; it is intended to relade her with indigo, a coarse cloth used by the Hollanders for Guinea, and cotton yarn, in all of which the English cannot deal for want of the Company's allowance. Suggestions for keeping up the factory and making it worth while to maintain the extraordinary charges of it, which, if not adopted, he fears the Company will find it as profitable to trade nearer home. The Bee dispatched by Denton for Bantam 14 July. The insolvency of the Dutch, or the impotency of the English, will, Methwold fears, altogether deprive the Company of the best part of their trade; the good prices at which spices sell; the great profit first obtained on porcelain has filled all men's hands with plenty, which makes theirs not sought after. Inventory of goods remaining in the factory; prices given for lead, quicksilver, and vermilion. "Indeed this place never yet (nor will it be better) gave vent to any quantity of our commodity nor produced lading proper for our country." The Pegu adventure accounted desperate by the undertakers. Will send to Bantam the several sorts of goods required. R. Thomas and W. Hughson from the Unicorn, and John Clarke from the Bee, left to assist Methwold in the place of seven persons, of whom two are dead, two gone to Pegu, and three are leaving with the ship. Only (Thos.) Jones and himself left as merchants, and at Pettapoli Francis Futter and Mathew Duke; has appointed Jeremy Sayer, left by Capt. Pepwell, an assistant. In great want of the Company's yearly letters of advice; what they hear from Bantam arrives ten months after it happens there. [Two pages. Indorsed, "Of good importance." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 679.]

Masulipatam.

404. Thos. Jones to President Ball. The Bee sailed for Bantam 14 July. Denton ready to sail in the Unicorn with a large cargo; fearfully suspects the bad quality of some part, Denton presuming on his own judgment alone; his private trade. Sale of the spices; prices fallen. Henry Forest and John Stavely sent to Pegu to recover certain moneys and goods and to sell some other goods;

letters received by Denton from them in January and March last ; wishes them safely returned. Commodities in demand and vendible at Masulipatam. Methwold determined to wait a month for the monsoon before sending goods to Tenasserim, Pegu, and other ports, when the Moors' ships will be gone and cannot hinder them, neither can the Hollanders, who are busy lading cotton yarn, indigo, and a sort of cloth which Jones imagines will sell in Guinea or Binney. Two-thirds of the capital left them will be ready for a ship by the end of December, when he hopes one will arrive with a larger capital than before. Capital now remaining in these factories. [Three pages. Indorsed, "By the Unicorn ;—received ultimo December the same year." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 680.]

Aug. 17. 405. Rajah Baga, Governor of Mocha, to Sir Thos. Roe. Joseph Salbancke and Edward Heynes arrived at the port of Mocha in April last ; they took a house of their own choice, and nothing they demanded was refused. All the merchants of these ports and all others are well satisfied with them. Desires to be friends with the English nation, for the love of which the Governor petitioned the great Bashaw and obtained security of trade for the English. The port is at Sir Thos. Roe's service to come with one ship or ten ; they shall be welcome, and whatever they need shall not be wanting. Hopes Roe will write to him and command him in whatsoever he requires, for the Governor's love to Roe and the English nation is ancient, and that Salbancke will write to him in this year to come and make the Governor understand all their desires. [O.C., Vol. VI., No. 681.]

Aug. 17. 406. Ufflete to President Ball. Audience with the King, who sent for him, in company with Capt. Totten, and demanded the news from Japara ; he also desired to buy two of the largest pieces of ordnance from the French, "not honeycombed, but truly bored," and wished an English gunner to try them. The Dutch have dispatched two ships for Japara, and they have three at the island and in the road ; they have built a turret over their gate-house as high as the English one. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 682.]

Aug. 17. 407. Richard Cocks to Richard Pitt at Siam. Received the goods according to invoice in June last. Accidents to the Sea Adventure, in which Eaton went captain ; to another junk which sailed for Cochin China with Sayer and Robt. Hawley, and to a third which was sent for Island Formosa, but returned without any lading. No shipping arrived this year from Bantam, notwithstanding Wickham sailed from hence the last monsoon. Two Holland ships which were at Firando last year have returned and taken fifteen or sixteen China junks with much riches, and also an English ship, but not an Englishman in her ; the Hollanders say she is one of three they took at the Moluccas, the Thomas, the Solomon, and this one, the Attendance. Is secretly informed they have also taken the Advice and the Rose, which was to have come from Bantam, and have thrown all the men overboard. Is of opinion the ship the Hollanders have now brought in is the Rose. By general consent Cocks is now ready to go up to the Emperor's Court to make known their thievery, Nealson to accompany him. Is sorry for Johnson's death. As to Eaton or Osterwick taking Pitt's place, has no order from the Company to furnish other factories with men, but rather the President of Bantam, who has perhaps supplied Pitt's wants before now by the way of Patani. Complains that Geo. Savidge and another Englishman who came this year from Camboja have not written to him. Regrets Robt. Burges' foolish conduct. As to building a junk at Chiampa, the Company have given strict orders not to build any. Is now ready to start on a three, if not four, months' journey to Court. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 683.]

408. Thos Staverton to President Ball. Sent with his last a letter from Mr. Courthope with copy of invoice of rice sent to Banda, and begged his remembrance for a piece of ordnance for the King of Tallo [Tolo]. Sends letter received from Banda (wanting) by a Java who was present at the assault of Lantar by the Dutch, who were soon repulsed with the loss of ten men, the Lantars losing one man, and also reports, "which is not to be lamented, if true," that the Hollanders were dying fast of a great rot amongst them, as well the bacon-faced captains as the poor soldiers and sailors. Sends letter received from Pooloroon with copy of one from Nath. Courthope, who only writes concerning the providing of rice; the bearer of these, a Java, being off Booton with a cargo of spices, was chased by the Hollanders, and obliged, in sight of Sambopa, to sink their junk and all their goods to prevent them being taken by "those hungry hounds." Wishes the King of England would call them to account and vindicate his own wrongs, "but, as the saying is, a dog hath a day, and so I hope the like shall they." Hourly expects some Englishman from Banda, with directions for providing rice. Needful to supply this place with some cloth; little left unsold. [*One page. 409. Nath. Courthopp to [Wills, Churchman, Stacy, Lane, and others, prisoners of the Dutch at Pooloway]. Is well satisfied with their care in sending away the Bandanese out of the ship, considering the impossibility of defending themselves against the force that assaulted them, and wishes the Solomon had done the like. Sends money and messages to Churchman, Stacy, Lane, Kellum. Has written to Cassarian David touching the delivery up or keeping of this island. Hopes by fair or by foul means to procure their release shortly, but exhorts them in the meantime to bear their captivity with patience. Has suffered as great a loss as any of them, for it is well known Courthopp had nothing left but an old suit of apparel upon his back. As to a certain boy sold by Henry Baker to Churchman, although Baker gave the boy absolutely to Courthopp, "it was such a brute as was not worth the keeping, which was sold by Robt. Hayes for 30 cattes of mace." Hayes sends money to Lane and Pettus. Special message with money sent to [Robt.] Jackson. [One page. Indorsed, "Rec. 19 Aug. 1618." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 685.]

412. Robert Bell to Carleton. A French ship lately arrived at Dieppe from the Indies. Incloses the informations taken from three of the principals in the ship concerning the differences between the Flemings and us, whereby it will be seen that instead of enjoying a profitable and peaceful trade, the English are now entering into a bloody war. The Company, being composed of the greatest part of the Privy Council, the nobility, judges, and gentry, and furnished with an assured stock of 1,600,000*l.*, will not endure such affronts and disgraces as have been offered to them. Several overtures have been made to the Company by the Spaniards and Portuguese; the Spanish Ambassador has been twice to Sir Thos. Smythe, and new overtures have come from Lisbon; "notwithstanding all these, we like honest men have gone on with an inclination towards them [the Dutch], because we were in treaty, and in the meantime they most treacherously have taken and surprised our ships." Although there was some kind of neglect when Carleton was last in England, entreats him to take the matter to heart and give his helping hand to so great and worthy a business, wherein the honour of their country lies bleeding, and so many of his noble friends are engaged, and doubts not but the issue will prove both honourable and profitable to him. "Assist us with your best advice, and, if it be possible, to dive into the secret of their intentions, especially what preparations they make against next year, the number of their ships, the manner and time of their going." What he writes is from himself, because he has a good round adventure, but he will acquaint Sir Thos. Smythe with whatsoever Carleton wills him to. [Indorsed by Carleton, "Received the 27th," who has also written, "Merchants:—Bass of Amsterdam, Merman of Delft, Borrell the younger of Zealand, and Henrick Rier. States:—Gogh of Guelderland, Vanderdussen of Holland, and Joachini of Zealand; the names of the Dutch Commissioners appointed to settle the differences with the commissioners on behalf of the English East India Company." Incloses,

412. 1. "Informations out of France betwixt the English and Dutch merchants in the East Indies." At the departure

(of the French vessel) in December 1617 from Bantam, eight English ships were there, named the Charles, Unicorn, James, Hope, Dragon, Thomas, Solomon, and a small one of 80 or 100 tons, which traded to the coast of Java. The Greyhound left Bantam the 10th or 12th Dec. for Jambi, carrying Ousawicq [Oxwick] to be chief of the factory there. About Nov. (1617) the Dragon arrived at Bantam from the coast of Coromandel; learnt from the English that she was old and leaky, and that they had filled her with fireworks to burn the Flemings, their enemies. The English daily expected their fleet from Surat, which would greatly assist them in resisting the Flemings. About July 1617 the Flemings forcibly took two English ships in sight of Macassar, at which time two English merchants, among others, were killed, and the rest were cast into prison or put to the galleys. The Flemings took the said ships, because, being at deadly war with the Bandanese, they forbid the English assisting them with any provisions or war material; the Flemings finding these two ships laden with provisions, took them as their own; had even forbidden that those of the Isle of Banda should give themselves to the King of England, and as a proof of this the principal persons of Banda, amongst others the brother of the King of Banda, which king was killed in the war by the Flemings, took refuge with his company in the English house at Bantam, taking the King of England for king and protector. This was the origin of the war between the Flemings and the English in the Moluccas. Relation of two quarrels "during the time I remained in the English house in the service of the Company," one caused by the Bandanese testifying the friendship they bore to the English, and how inimical they were to the Dutch on the purchase of fish by the Dutch purveyor from the English maître d'hôtel, when five Flemings were killed, merchants and officers, and a black slave of the Flemings, whose head a Japanese cut off, and also an English writer was killed; the other arose when some Portuguese and Spaniards, who were prisoners of the Flemings but had fled to the English, were walking in Bantam; a Spaniard was called by a Fleming into a Chinese house where there were many Flemings, which the other Portuguese seeing, ran to the English, who armed themselves and forced the door of the Dutch factory, killed three or four men belonging to the Flemings, among whom was the captain of the Japanese of the Flemings, and the Dutch purveyor received a tremendous sword wound from Mr. Gris, which separated his shoulders, "and he was not cured when we left." The day previous to this dispute an Englishman was killed, but by whom no one knows; and as to the Portuguese, the English took them to Sumatra, and there gave them their liberty. The Spaniard taken by the Flemings was found in their factory, feet and hands tied, in pepper (dans un morceau de poivre). The Flemings have likewise made every endeavour with the King of Bantam to prevent the design of the English building, notwithstanding these last were diligently building when they (the French) left, which buildings were handsome, being finished to the prejudice and heartache (mal de cœur) of the Flemings, taking away from them the sight of the sea. What passed between the Spaniards and Flemings at the Philippine Isles. The Flemings took an English bark going to Jacatra, killed some of the English, put the Flemings on board the bark they had taken from the English at Bantam and cast her anchor near the Charles, Admiral of the English fleet, which was then before Bantam, meaning by that to defy the English to retake her. "This is briefly the war in which we left them at our departure, which makes me believe and judge that if the King of England does not make it his particular care, the English run the risk of having the worst in the Indies, as being weaker than the Flemings are in that country." [Dieppe, $\frac{1}{2}$ Aug. 1618. Signed, "Beau Pin." French. Indorsed as above. Together eight pages. Holland Correspondence.]

1618? 413. "Relation of the Frenchmen lately arrived from the East Indies, concerning the damages, wrongs, and abuses which the Hollanders had lately done to the English there." They have assaulted and taken the English ships coming to Bantam (Banda?), slain 7 or 8 men, put the captains and merchants in chains and the mariners in the gallies, challenging all "those parts" to be their proper inheritance. They also took an English ship going from Bantam to Jacatra, and shot at the English and French colours in most contemptuous manner. They had great dispute with the English in the road of Bantam, but the Governor forbade them to fight, threatening, if they did, to cut the throats of all their men on land. They proclaimed war on the 27th November against the English at the Moluccas, Banda, and Amboyna, and threatened to make all prizes and put them to the edge of the sword, and fixed the proclamation upon the doors of the English lodgings at Bantam, "challenged all to be theirs as their proper inheritance." (which is no doubt correct), and not to Bantam as in the preceding copy ; also the Hollanders fixed the proclamation upon the doors of the (English is struck out) lodgings at Bantam, &c. [*One page. 415. Peter Waddon to President Ball. Hopes the wholesomeness of the place will cure him with the help of the medicines. Insecurity of the Company's business when their house (at Jacatra) is divided against itself. The disputes between Ufflete and Powle, if written of, would seem almost incredulous ; thinks Powle is in the greatest fault. Forwards letters from Japara from Bishop and another. Report that Robt. Jackson has been murdered at Jourtan by the Portugals. The Hollanders in great awe of the country people ; they expect Laurens Reall every day and three ships with him ; a ship of theirs ready to sail for Solor with soldiers and great store of provisions. 416. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Lake. Sir Robt. Jambi.

418. Richard Westby to President Ball. Has received his letter by Gordone, master of the Hound. Is heartily sorry for the ill success of the Company's business to the eastward, "but every man will do his utmost endeavour both with heart and hand to keep up that which else of force will fall." Marvels at the bad supplies the Surat factories send for these parts. Hopes to return to Bantam in November. Goods in the house. Supplies of cloth arrived for the Flemings. With good store of money and cloth some 500 or 600 tons of pepper may be had yearly. If this place be followed as it should, it cannot have yearly less than 12,000 ryals in ready money and 8,000 in Surat and Masulipatam cloth. This place is sickly, and there should be two assistants besides the Cape merchant. George Smart is dead, and the factory will much miss him. Peter Waddon, if he recover, will do the Company very good service. In want of 2,000 pepper sacks. Sorts of cloth vendible and the price. Remembrances to Capt. Pring, Mr. Wickham, and Burraway. Sorry to hear Mr. Bindon is so ill. News, which is confirmed, that the King of Mataram has caused three Flemings to be slain and the rest seized, together with their goods, and put in prison, and their house pulled down. [Two pages. Indorsed, "Rec. September 1618." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 689.]

Sept. 1. 419. William Gordone to President Ball. Delivered his letter fully laden within twenty days. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. VI.,

No. 690.]
- Sept. 4. 420. Ufflete to President Ball. Conference with the King Jacatra. respecting the price the English are to pay for the ground (they occupy); he demands 800 ryals per annum and two whole culverins for the 39 months they have been there, and 1,200 ryals yearly hereafter; message sent to the King to persuade him to accept less.

- Sept. 4. 421. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Richard Steele, from Saldanha, of 10 July 1617, craving pardon for carrying his wife with him against the Company's orders, and relating how the Saldanhans were forced to sell to them bullocks and sheep. Letter read from Nicholas Ufflete from Jacatra of 7 January 1617-8, describing the abuses committed by the Flemings against the English; giving notice of their providence in having kine kept near that place to relieve their people, of their building, repairing, and carrying many ships there yearly, and the great quantities of goods they bring in, which they robbed the Chinese of, and other people upon those coasts, under English colours. Discourse also read by Ufflete, Edward Young, and John Powle, relating the original cause of the Flemings abusing the English in taking a pinnace betwixt Jacatra and Bantam, killing a man, and cutting another asunder after boarding; and "the arrogant, bold, and audacious insolency that durst set up the French colours in the poop of one of these frigates, in manner of a triumph, the English in the middle and Prince Maurice's colours above all the rest, maintaining and triumphing in the doing thereof, because they have overcome both." Concerning the punishment of [Robert] Jones (see his petition, 20 January 1619), for his notorious abuse and wrongs done at the Mogul's Court to Sir Thos. Roe, to whom he was recommended by Lord Carew. The mariners to pay freight for goods brought home by them. Complaint against George Ball, Cape merchant at Bantam, for detaining the ships so long in the road. Letter read from George Ball on the state of the Company's affairs in the East Indies (see ante, No. 245). Ellam appointed to collect, out of the several writings, the most material things relating to the outrageous abuses committed by the Flemings against the English at Bantam, the Moluccas, Jacatra, and elsewhere in the Indies, that they may be made known to the King and the Lords of the Council. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 194-196.]
- Sept. 4. 422. Sec. Sir Robt. Naunton to Carleton. Reminds him anew Easthamstead. of Ald. Sir Wm. Cockayne's suit, which he assures him his Majesty takes more and more to heart. Assures him that the whole city and all parts of the kingdom they come to are extremely exasperated against the pride of the Hollanders and Zealanders, and complain of their indignities both in the East Indies, the Moluccas, the fishing in Scotland, Newfoundland, and our coasts, and where not. The merchants are preparing a general remonstrance against them, by his Majesty's return from progress. Would gladly have Sir Wm. Cockayne relieved before the fever comes to its paroxysm. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

423. Capt. Martin Pring to President Ball. Presented at Court to the King, Queen, and Prince, and gave the presents allotted to them; tedious discourse in a private room with the King; but Pring found "the gentleman so avariciously benumbed that he was not sensible of any reason at all;" his desire to know the utmost the English would give; Pring's answer was 600 ryals a year, and two whole culverins. Received letter from the King two days after that they must pay 2,400 ryals for their residence in his land for three years, and 1,200 ryals a year henceforward, because Capt. Jourdain promised to give more than the Flemings, and two whole culverins for the ground where they live; reasons for the King's high demand; has promised to reply within three days. Remembrances to Spurway, Bindon, and Jackson. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 692.]

Sept. 7.
Bantam.

424. Extract of a letter [written by Thos. Spurway] to the East India Company. In Acheen the Dutch have offered the King great store of money to turn the English out, and at Bantam they do all they can for the same purpose; the King, nobles, and commons being content to receive their bribes; "but while the Flemings continue these practices to circumvent us, what is it that we may do more than look on?" The Thomas, Solomon, and Attendant sent last year for Banda; the two latter seized by the Flemings, after some small resistance, and the English taken prisoners; the Thomas never since heard of. Mr. Davies and the rest dispersed in Banda, Amboyna, and the Moluccas. The English, notwithstanding, make good their forts of Pooloroon, in hope of being succoured this next monsoon. The spices provided by the Company's factors in Banda bartered away for victuals to certain junks, which were way-laid by the Flemings. Such insolent courses are to the shame and dishonour of the English nation till revenge be taken. Bargains for pepper prevented by the outbidding of the Dutch. The house is covered in, but at a stand, though much work has yet to be done; "thus are we every way abused and know not how to remedy the same." The Hollanders have made large offers to the Pengran to turn the English out. Capt. Ball gone this day to Jacatra; Capt. Pring already there, with the Royal James and Advice, to have parley with the King about building a gedong. The Hollanders have already built a house there, which they have mounted with 30 pieces of ordnance and put 300 people in it, Dutch soldiers, and black men, women, and children, and do marry divers in the house. In the Solomon and Attendant were taken by the Hollanders Geo. Jackson, Cassarian David, and Kellum Throgmorton, merchants; Hugh Lane and Mathew Wills, masters. [*Two pages. 425. Secretary Naunton to Carleton. Sends two complaints, which have been presented to the King and to the Privy Council, which will show the cause of resentment which the Dutch have given to all that have any sense at all of the honour of his Majesty and of our whole nation. The King requires Carleton to present them to the States, and to demand their answers how far they will allow these insolences of their subjects, or how they will punish them and make reparation; and to insist particularly that they send commissioners, articulately instructed, to give satisfaction at the treaty to be instantly held between us and them. To press them to accelerate all they can, commissioners having been expected in England on the 1st, upon a former agreement between the Lords here and Sir Noel Caron before the progress. Besides his general remonstrance to the States General, Carleton is, in particular, to acquaint them with these high aggrievances and indignities, from whom his Majesty will expect an exemplary animadversion upon the delinquents, as being Admiral, &c. [Holland Correspondence.] Incloses,

425. I. Declaration of the East India Company to the King. "Of the manifest and insupportable wrongs and abuses lately done by the Hollanders unto your Majesty and your Majesty's subjects in the East Indies." That the English sent last year from Bantam two ships to trade to Pooloroon, where they were well received, and the island was voluntarily surrendered to his Majesty. That soon after the island of Rosingyn and the free town of Wayre, on the island of Lantar, likewise surrendered and desired to trade with the English. Efforts of the Hollanders to dispossess the East India Company, by force, of these places; capture of the Swan; five of her men slain, eight wounded; their most outrageous behaviour, "as any mortal enemies could do," showing "our chained men" to the people of the isle of Neira, the mother of the isles of Banda, "saying, Lo, these are the men whom ye made your gods, in whom ye put your trust, but we have made them our slaves;" 20 since dead through bad usage; the rest still detained prisoners. Unjust seizure of the Company's ship Defence; refusal of Lawrence Ryall, the Dutch Admiral, to restore her, unless the English would give up all claim to Pooloroon; and his assertion that he could show the King's own writing for authority to take any English ships to the east of the Celebes Islands. Difficulties of getting from Pooloroon to Bantam for fear of the Dutch. Outrage upon the Speedwell; taking the men forcibly out of her and keeping them prisoners in irons. They threaten mortal war against any English who dare trade to the Moluccas, Amboyne, or Banda, and declare they will take from the English all the trade in the East Indies; they have often robbed the Chinese under English colours, "to bring us into hatred and contempt." Their endeavours to disgrace the English nation; "one Holland ship would take ten English, that they care not for our King, for St. George was now turned child," and other insolencies. [Indorsed by Carleton, "The petition of the East India Company to his Majesty." Three pages. Domestic, Jac. I., Vol. CIV., No. 62, Cal. p. 607.]

425. II. Statement of the injuries done by the Hollanders to the English in the East Indies; to the King in his dominion and in his honour by word and by fact; and to his subjects in their fame, in their persons, and in their estate. [Indorsed by Carleton and also by Bradshaw, "Abstracted." One page. East Indies, Vol. I., No. 70.]

[1618.] 426. Copy of the last inclosure, indorsed by Sir Edward Coke. 1. The King's honor. 2. Restitution, &c. 3. The time to come to be free.(?) 4. Sept. 8. 428. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The mariners to be made to pay freight for their pepper. A copy of the abstract of the abuses committed by the Flemings against the English to be given to each Lord of the Council before being presented at the Council table. Letter read from the Countess of Nottingham to borrow 300*l.* declined. Promise to Sir Thos. Lowe to give employment to a kinsman of his. Concerning Norden and Bryan Edlyn's accounts. Dividend upon the first joint stock to be referred to the auditors. The ships being expected at Gravesend this night or to-morrow, some of the committees to go there to welcome Lucas Anthéunis on his return. Sir W. Garway to be spoken with concerning the custom taken for pepper. Whether any tin shall be sent by the next fleet. [Two pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 196-198.]

Sept. 9. 429. Sir Thos. Smythe to Sec. Sir Thos. Lake. Has received information that a ship of great burthen is preparing to sail from Flushing for the East Indies, and that it is intended that another shall follow within a month. [Holland Correspondence.]

Sept. 11. 430. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning a dividend on the first joint stock. No tin to be bought until the return of some ship from Surat, to know whether it is needed in those parts. Petition from Anne Herod for payment of a debt due from Daniel Dunkyn, deceased. Petition from Alice Reade for payment of a debt due to her from John Reade. Names of the committees to go daily on board the Hope and the Charles to superintend the unloading of them. Lee's brother to assist Moantney. The Merchant Royal to be made ready and victualled for 100 men for two years, and with as much provision as she can carry to relieve other ships at the Cape and Bantam. The Muscovy account for Greenland to be seen by this Company. Complaint against Gordone, master of the Hound, for wasting her provisions. Barwick to be sent with the Merchant Royal to Bantam. The Hope and Charles to be made ready to sail with the fleet. Letter read from W. Methwold, from Bantam (see ante, No. 246), commending the trade between Surat and Bantam, at Tecoe and Acheen, to be very profitable. [Two pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 198-200.]

Leadenhall.

431. Robert Bell to Carleton. Two ships have arrived from the East Indies; out of their advices complaints to the King have been framed, a copy of which he incloses; begs him to keep it private, as the King has not yet seen it. Understands it is purposed to send over commissioners to treat upon these businesses; "God grant we may agree, else will it be ill for us both." Although the Dutch have done us wrong this year above 100,000*l.*, yet have they little occasion to brag, their charges and losses are so infinite. They maintain 22 forts in the Indies, wherein they keep 4,000 men in pay continually, and have near 30 sail of ships in the Indies; "the trade of merchandise is not able to support any such charge." [Holland Correspondence.]

432. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Although his Majesty "was born in hand" by Sir Noel Caron that deputies should be sent to accommodate all differences with his Majesty's subjects, the States waver in that resolution. Deputies from the States and the Company will have commission only to treat of the East Indian business; this is not all that his Majesty expects or the present differences require. Requests instructions upon which to ground his complaint in their public assembly. Has recommended Sir Wm. Cockayne's affairs in general terms with much earnestness. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Sept. 15.

433. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of John Martyn to make nails referred. Shareholders to be allowed to take out one capital upon the first joint stock in pepper, and to receive their dividends in money with the rest. Tender of surrender by John Lamprier of the lease [of a house] at Blackwall. The diamonds, cotton yarn, bezoar stone, and ambergris to be sold. Petition of Lydia, widow of Edward Mason, to continue the nail-making at Blackwall. Petition of Millicent, wife of William Lucas, boatswain in the Unicorn, now in the Indies, to have some pepper sent to her by her husband. Petition of a prisoner for a debt of 12*l.* due to him from Hugh Greete. Letters brought in the ships for the Low Countries to be sent over, though "their discourteous carriage towards the English doth not deserve it." Crathorne, one of the custom-house, gratified with five jacobus. Answer to be sent to the letter from the Lords of the Council, that the Company has not more than 20,000*l.* in the Low Countries in indigo or spices, not meddling with money. Letter read from Robert Lorkyn, a factor in the East Indies, to Sir John Wolstenholme, endeavouring to justify his proceedings by giving an account of how he had raised that estate he left. Desire of Sir John to receive his estate for the use of Lorkyn's friends. It was suspected Lorkyn was poisoned by a black who he took into his house. [*One page and three quarters. Court Bk. 434. Robert Bell to Carleton. Sir Thos. Smythe is very thankful to Carleton, and begs him to continue his favour to the East India Company, especially at this time when the wrongs done them by the Hollanders are insupportable, as he may perceive by a declaration which they have drawn out of their own informations and delivered to the King. Grievances with the Hollanders at Greenland. If, when those nominated by the States and the Dutch East India Company to treat of these businesses come, they do not agree with them, it will not be their [the English Company's] fault. They have long foreseen that except they do agree it will be the ruin of both, and agreeing there is the richest trade in the world before them. Requests him to advertise the time of their [the Commissioners] departure, and if need be to dispatch away an express messenger beforehand. [Holland Corresp.]

436. Thos. Spurwaie to President Ball at Jacatra. Arrival of the Bee. The Bandanese lodged in the new "godowne" until the old house be fitted for them. Kewee still in his house. Very still with them; they hear nothing from the Pengran or any of the nobles. The French ship left; the surgeon of the prize and three Japanese gone with her; gave the letter for the Company into the hands of the French captain, Sig. Christophe, who promised its safe delivery. to be given up to him. Letter read from the Merchant Adventurers concerning impositions on foreign commodities from such as are not free of their guild. Two ships to be sent to the Cape with money and provisions to relieve the Company's ships and men there. "A very honorable answer" received from the Privy Council in reply to the relation of the wrongs done by the Dutch to the English in the Indies. Some contracts read betwixt the governors and principal men of the islands of Pooloroon, Rosingyn, and Waire of the free surrender of their countries and themselves under the obedience and sovereignty of the English, together with some attestations of the Flemings in the Indies concerning the differences between them and the English, showing the insolent behaviour of the Flemings, and their endeavours to confine the English to such places only as the Flemings pleased, presupposing contracts with those islands who deny the same and utterly renounce them, hating them to death; together with such matters against the English as are altogether most false and scandalous, and are manifest proofs of their insolent, proud, inhuman, and bloody courses held both against those poor people and continued against the English, professing open hostility and threatening fire and sword against them except they surcease from their trade in those places where the English are possessed with the love and entire affection of the inhabitants. Macassar.

439. Thos. Staverton to President Ball. His last was by Geo. Muschampe, who sailed 25th Aug. News brought by a Portugal that Hawkridge had been at Tidore, and partly through his own good carriage he and all his company received kind usage from the governor, and laded thence a quantity of cloves, being, as it is said, fully minded to come to Macassar. Hopes he has safely arrived at Bantam; has no doubt of Hawkridge's care in looking after the goods, and of those who so unfortunately left the ship, Geo. Jackson, Wm. Swetland the purser, Tatton, [? Totten] and others, to fall in all likelihood into the same misery as Cassarian David and the rest of the two ships' companies. The directions from Courthopp left by Muschampe the writer fears he cannot accomplish, having had to satisfy King of Gooa, King of Tallo, and Crayne Angillo. In favour of the bearer, a Chinaman. Not to forget the piece of ordnance for the King of Tallo, and also send him a small case of English hot waters for a present; also a present for the King of Gooa, and some small remembrance for Crayne Angillo. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 695.]

The Hague.

440. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. His letter of the 8th pres. arrived late last night; will speak to the States in conformity therewith. Regrets the absence of the Prince of Orange, but delay in cases of this nature breeds danger. The States have already had in deliberation the sending deputies to his Majesty; hopes what he shall say will quicken their dispatch. Has already spoken in private with some who do much lament these just occasions of complaint given his Majesty's subjects. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Firando.

441. Edmund Sayer to Rich. Wickham at Bantam. Was obliged to put in at one of the Leques islands for a new rudder; heard that Eaton was at one of them with the junk, but believes he has since sailed for Siam. On his return to Japan found the Jurabassa, who Sayer left in Cochin China, returned, he having taken the thieves who stole the money, the most part of which is in the King's hands. They are alone this year and desolate, without ship or junk; the Hollanders monopolize the whole cloth trade; afraid whether Wickham reached Bantam last year or was taken by the Hollanders. Capt. Cocks and Neelson gone to Yedo to make known to the Emperor how the Hollanders use them. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 696.]

Sept. 22.

442. Court Minutes of the East India Company. A prohibition for bringing in whale fins from other parts to be inserted at the end of the proclamation intended for logwood, according to the Company's wish made known to Sec. Naunton. Wages of the sailors of the James and Hope to be stayed until their bad conduct in the Indies be examined into. Petitions read from Robt. Perkins, executor of Henry Perkins, claiming satisfaction for fifty ryals, delivered to Christ. Newport and paid over to Ball at Bantam; from Will. Croft for a debt; and from Joan, widow of Thos. Bacon, for payment of money due to her from John Baylye and Thomas Sheppard. Letter read from Sir Dudley Diggs, wherein he seemed to be doubtful about going into Moscow by reason of the troubles of the country, the Poles having given the Emperor an overthrow, and quite close to the city. The governor communicates the promise of the King to speak to Sir Noel Caron, and to write to the Landgrave Maurice, governor of Zealand, "to right the wrongs and outrages committed by the Flemings." Petitions read from James Bayley that the two sailors for whom he was bound, were drowned in the Company's service; and from Margaret Porter concerning the estate of Thomas Heath, her deceased brother. Complaint against Decrowe for absenting himself, there being a want of money to satisfy debts due by the Muscovy Company. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., No. 206-208.]

Sept. 24.
Hampton Court.

443. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. Instructions for his speech at the next assembly of the States General; that they of their own accord first propounded, by Sir Noel Caron, that there might be a meeting of Commissioners on both parts to treat of the settling a joint stock between the companies of the merchants of both States that trade in the East Indies; that the King was again moved to the same effect by Caron, who undertook to the Privy Council that Commissioners should come over instructed not only to accommodate the former business first propounded by themselves, but with full power to treat and conclude and give satisfaction of all differences; and that they should have been here by the 1st pres. The King's dissatisfaction at the delay; the daily insolencies and wrongs done to his subjects, and the indignities to his own person and the whole nation, cannot with honour be endured by any prince; he is enforced to call upon them to hasten away their Commissioners, fully instructed, to give speedy justice and satisfaction to the King and his subjects, that he may not be driven to right himself, which their further delay will in honour force him to. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

444. Capt. Martin Pring to President Ball. Glad to hear of the safe arrival of the Gift. According to what Pring has heard in the Chinese quarter, he means to find out whether they have been fortifying at the islands by sending a boat to sound the channels. Hopes to effect his business with the King to-morrow, who has invited Pring to his park, where he hopes to make an absolute, though high priced conclusion, for the King is no changeling in his insatiable desires, yet as inconstant as the ocean in performing his promise. Remembrances to Spurway, Jackson, Beaumont, and Holman. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 697.]

Sept. 25-26.

445. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Sea-horse blubber belonging to the united companies to be sold at 6*l.* 10*s.* or 7*l.* a ton, to save the trouble of boiling it into oil. Richard Brand, a clothier, to be paid. Decrowe not to exceed his commission, nor to mix the two accounts of the old and new joint stock. Westrowe to pay his debts to the Muscovy Company. Hugh Greete's accounts to be examined, and his diamonds sold. Edward Charley to be guardian to Edward, son of the late John George, deceased, late gunner of the Defence. John Bickley, master of the Hope, referred to the committees to regulate the question of freight of goods brought home. Concerning the wages of three Dutchmen employed in the Company's service, and the stoppage of the wages of those of the Osiander for having robbed divers junks in the East Indies. Petition read from Katherine Gybon for a debt due to her by John Brackstone, deceased. Peter Nedham left at Cranganore by Capt. Keeling, and much condemned for his carriage in the country, to pay freight for his pepper. Barrett, the King's grocer, to have four bags of pepper for his Majesty's use. Petitions read from Joan Allen widow, whose husband died three years since at Bantam, for relief; from Richard Furbusher, master carpenter of the Charles, to have his goods without paying freight; and from Alice, widow of Richard Taylor, of the Osiander, who was taken by the Flemings and kept in chains till his death, for relief. Decree made by the States at the Hague, authorizing the Dutch to use all violence against the English in the Indies, to be inquired into. Petition read from Abbacuck Kirbye, glazier, for two of his servants sent to the Indies as glaziers to be sent back, as there is no employment for them there; from Joseph, brother of John Tucker, who died two years since at Jambi, for his late brother's wages and goods according to his will; and from Eliza, widow of Richard Clare, to have her goods without paying freight. Petition read from Margery, widow of Thos. Archer, who died in the Hope, to have her very small estate without a letter of administration. Letter read from Richard Carmarden to have the legacies bequeathed to his children by Capt. Pepwell at his disposal for their benefit.

Minutes of a General Court. Sale of diamonds and other commodities, with names of purchasers and the prices. 300*l.* adventure in the second joint stock belonging to Mr. Buxton sold for 10*l.* per cent. to Morris Abbott, deputy governor, and 200*l.* in the first joint stock sold to Geo. Swynnhowe for 203*l.* 10*s.* per cent.

Sept. 26.—Court Minutes. John Bickley, master of the Hope to have his goods on paying freight. The mariners questioned for robbing the frigates in the Indies, laying the whole fault upon their commanders, were discharged from all complaint, and ordered to have their wages paid. [Six pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 208–214.]

Sept. 27.
Ispahan.

446. Edward Pettus to the East India Company. Barker and the rest of the merchants arrived from Court 25 July with a confirmation of the capitulations procured by Connok and two several phirmaunds, one for the export of their silk lying at Moghistan, the other for the Shah's treasurer to take all their imported goods and deliver them silk all at price current. Connok had the like promise last year from the King's mouth, who, however, refused their lead, quicksilver, looking-glasses, and whatever he pleased, and took their cloth at his own price. In case of disagreement with Lalabegg, the King's treasurer, merchants are to estimate the price, though whatever Lalabegg says they dare not gainsay. What happened last year in that way. The English have not credit in the country for a penny, either upon pawn or otherwise, and were deceived in the loan of some money from Lalabegg, who gave them a letter to his vizier in Ispahan to receive it a month past; a portion only paid to Barker and Bell; they left for Jask 1 September, leaving Monox and Pettus behind, who were put off from day to day with the answer, I have no money. Thinks it a wilful excuse, and that the treasurer is bribed by the Spanish Ambassador now resident in Ispahan, and with no small sum of money; is sure the great present which the Spanish Ambassador has lately given to this King will work some strange effect contrary to their expectation. Does not believe that the Spanish Ambassador was only sent to congratulate this King and give him presents; thinks the King will see the event of their proceedings this year, whether they continue not to lie to him as his Treasurer says they have, talking of ships to come in, but he sees none, and as they keep promise, so answer the Spanish Ambassador, "Indeed upon his honour he must give us this year trial." If the ships fail to arrive this year, they will be at their wit's end; they are masters of neither means nor money to buy themselves bread, neither have they credit in the least, and the merchants of all ports are generally their enemies, and throw every impediment they can and dare upon them, filling the King's ears with doubt. The fault lies with their deceased principal (Connok), but the survivor is the most to blame. So undeserving a servant as Barker the Company never employed. This place requires a man of spirit and presence, who dares talk to the greatest of them. The Company have lost a worthy servant in Connok, who would rattle the best of them ; such an one must be here, or all will be nought. These people full of lies from the greatest to the least, especially those with whom they have had to do. Disgraceful conduct of Barker at Court, when he went to obtain new capitulations of the King, striving to make void those procured by Connok, making a dragoman of Mr. Robins, whom he commanded to say nothing to the King but what he was bade, and offending the King, who perceived he was in drink and called him opprobrious names. Fears the trade will not fall out according to their expectations ; his reasons : the country most miserably poor of money with little trade in itself, the Banians, the chief merchants, selling linens from India of all sorts and prices, which the country cannot be without, except the people go naked ; and unless the King be a mere merchant, as he half promised, the Company will never receive benefit from the trade, nor themselves, the merchants, any credit. To be plain, the experience of this year teaches him that this country will not vend so much as expected. The writer's sudden change of opinion must not discourage the Company from giving all the furtherance they may to "this once hopeful trade ;" another year's experience will give a true light to all, for ever since their arrival in the country they have lived in want, occasioned through the ill husbandry and quarrellings of their principals. The chief reason why the country at present is without money, is because of the wars between the Turk and the King ; no merchant or caravan can pass to or fro in safety. The Banians, in return for their linens, carry most of the silver and gold out of this country, which being prohibited, if taken they suffer death, and this happened to several when the English were at Kasbin, one of Connok's dear friends being the principal person who suffered. This King is a tyrant and will not suffer any of his subjects to be rich ; he caused one of the richest merchants in Ispahan to be beaten to death with cudgels, took away his estate, and then had him hanged up in the Midan, to the annoyance of any coming near, and no man knows the cause. The King's cruelty makes the merchants afraid to have any quantity of goods, which is the reason of "their peddling dealing." The King is a merchant, and has the refusal of all goods that come to town, forcing his subjects to take them at his price ; the danger therefore of overloading the country with commodities, the King having conditioned to take all. A great quantity of money with commodities must work this trade. The King's successor is doubtful ; he has three sons, the eldest most butcher-like, having some five years past attempted to murder the King and seize his crown ; the youngest son the favourite upon whom it is thought the King will confer his crown. There are two other potent and mighty princes who the King suffers to keep state, Emanguiliok Khan, Duke of Shiraz, and Cassum Khan, Duke on the frontiers between Turkey and Persia, both of whom it is feared will rebel at the King's death. The King is not beloved by his nobles, but feared for his tyranny. Insecurity of their goods in the event of the King's death. Ispahan is being daily beautified

and enlarged by the King, who makes it the chief mart town for all merchants; in his father's time it was nothing to what it is now. No fear of anything happening during the present King's life; he is willingly obeyed in everything, and this year the Duke of Shiraz in person with 16,000 horse served him against the Turk. Money owing to Lalabegg and others. Incloses particulars of the English and Indian commodities which will vend in Persia, and what this country affords for investments, with the places set down where to be had, especially those commodities which Pettus thinks are unknown to the Company, and which he has collected together with the help of sundry brokers. Rhubarb, being subject to sweat, will not keep good because of the heat of the ships; the Portugals have not exported any for many years; all that goes to Aleppo goes direct from Tartary, where it grows, and is so transported overland for Venice. Description of the coins, weights, and measures in Persia. Complains of the principal (Barker), keeping Monox and himself ignorant of all proceedings. Monox will send the Company copies of letters which will explain the whole passage of their business up to Connok's departure for Jask in October 1617. Geo. Pley and Connok's accounts given to Pettus to perfect. Methwold's perverseness in all the Company's affairs. Arrival at Tauris of Malill Bashaw, the grand vizier of Aleppo and General of the Turkish army, with 400,000 men; his success against the Persian army not known. The vizier's aim is to take Ardabil, where all the King's ancestors lie interred; the Turks will never again be able to bring such a force against the King if he be able this year to hold his own; his army of 100,000 men he has divided into three parts, and does everything by policy, cutting off the supplies of his enemies; if the Turks have provisions for two months, all will be endangered, but wisdom and valour were never daunted, nor is the King. William Nealson dispatched with letters from the Court to the Company; was met by a Frenchman fifty days since within three days' journey of Aleppo; "if he accomplish his journey he escapes fair, considering the great wait laid for Englishmen and their letters; if any, of what nation soever, be taken carrying letters for England, nothing more sure than death." The merchants at Aleppo in a burly-burly about this new intended trade of the English; fears Nealson will put the English consul at Aleppo to much trouble and danger before he can ship Nealson away. Incloses, the island; is informed that for certain the Hollanders fetch away the earth from Hector island to build a fort upon their island. For licence for Waddon to stay and finish the accounts. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 698.]

Sept. 29. 448. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Will punctually observe his
The Hague. instructions. The return of the Prince of Orange, and the arrival of certain deputies from Zealand, who are all expected before the end of the week, will be the most proper opportunity to draw the States to a resolution. Has given his Majesty an account of what he has already performed. Causes of the delay in sending over Commissioners. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Sept. 29. 449. Carleton to the King. Has made a remonstrance to the
[The Hague.] States General upon the complaints presented to his Majesty by his subjects against the Dutch for their violences committed in Greenland and the East Indies. The difficulty betwixt the provinces is laid aside, it being judged more than necessary to send deputies to his Majesty, but who will be sent, and how they will be instructed, will yet ask some few days of deliberation. Trusts the King will excuse the delay, it being not as heretofore an artifice to gain time, but real and serious, caused through the distraction of an unsettled government. [Draft. Holland Corresp.]

Oct. 2. 450. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Petitions read from the widow of George Barkeley concerning her husband's goods, and from Catherine, widow of John Wallis, master carpenter of the Solomon, on the same subject. Barwicke to be entertained as chief commander in the next fleet. The allowances to John Hinchley to be increased in consideration of his having served the Company from the beginning of their trade, and his promise to set down in writing "a relation of the Dutch towards the English in the Indies." The letters for India and Barwicke's commission to be got ready against the departure of the ships. Powder to be bought from Lord Worcester at 3*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* per barrell, being cheaper than is paid to Mr. Evelyn. William, father of Henry Walter, to pay 12*d.* a freight for his pepper. Petitions read from Katherine Coker for part of the wages of her husband, who is with Rich. Cocks at Japan, and from Margaret, widow of John Harrison, cooper in the Charles. Suit of Joseph, brother of John Tucker, deceased, at Jambi, concerning his brother's wages. Petition of Parslowe to have Thomas Elkington's estate stayed for a debt. Suit of Mrs. Barkeley concerning her husband's goods and wages. Estate of Thomas Byll, deceased, surgeon in the Charles, charged upon Wm. Methwold's account. Agreement with Edward Charley for the maintenance of Edward, son of John George, deceased. Petitions read from Elizabeth, wife of Simon Smith, brother and executor of Henry Springoll; also from Thomas Taylor, John Baylie, Wm. Cotton, Richard Hales, administrator of John Washington; from Margaret, widow of John Sparkes, concerning freight for pepper; from Joane Bedford, sister to Alexander Trevell, killed at Bantam by the Flemings, for part of his wages. Suit of Capt. Geo. Wood and Patrick Kenneydye, executors of Jas. Kenneydye, deceased, for his wages, and pepper free from freight; also of Anna Partner, sister of Thos. Griffyn, on the same subject. Gratuities to Thomas Doughty and John Staple. [Four pages. Court Bk. IV., 215-218.]

452. Sir Thos. Smythe to Carleton. Acknowledges his careful respect in "tendring the honour of your Prince, welfare of your country, and good of the East India Company here." The informations he has received from Mr. Bell are daily more and more confirmed by the testimony of witnesses now returned from the East Indies. If so worthy a trade be overthrown, they (the Company) will hardly sit still and not attempt revenge, which may in time turn a mischief upon themselves (the Hollanders), with repentance when it may be too late. Begs Carleton's mediation to hasten those Commissioners intended, and to press for satisfaction for our wrongs and losses and damages sustained. [Holland Corresp.]

455. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Two chests of drugs and medicines to be sent to Bantam, there to remain, as other ships may have occasion to use them. Letter read from Wm. Methwold, from Bantam, of 20 January 1618 (see ante, No. 246), concerning the estate of Henry Patteson, deceased; refusal of Swanley to be executor. Hanson's demands for Capt. Pepwell's goods. After conference with Lucas Antheunis as to what goods were fit for the East Indies, resolved that no cloth be sent to Bantam, but 400 pigs of lead. Barwicke's request for a double proportion of aqua vitæ for his ship declined because the country "affordeth good store of rackye, which moderately taken is as sovereign as aqua vitæ." The best means of having a good supply of provisions always ready at the Cape to be considered, whether from the Saldanhians or by planting in the country or leaving a ship there. Pennington, Sir John Holmeden, and Lord North's brother, suitors for the command of the next fleet; can come to no resolution until the Company find the success of the business betwixt the Dutch and English upon the coming over of their Commissioners. Concerning the payment of the wages of Snell, deceased. Thomas Nutt's fine for his freedom to be lowered to 50*l*. Alteration of the names of ships; the Merchant Royal to the Bear and the William and Ralph to the Star; the new ships building at Blackwall and Deptford to be called the Ruby and the Diamond. Whitinge, Charles Clevinger, John Bardon, Saml. Squier, Barwick, and John Hinslow recommended for employment in the next fleet. Petitions read from John Fells concerning his goods. [Two and a quarter pages. Court Bk. IV., 218-220.]

Oct. 8. 456. Memorial of the Ambassador of the King of Great Britain to the States General. Wishing to know their resolution touching the sending of deputies to his Majesty, as he is detaining the courier expressly to send away their answer. [Draft. French. Holland Corresp.]

Oct. 8. 457. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Lake. Hopes the rumours of the Hollanders having beaten the English at sea in the East Indies and at Greenland exceed the truth. Heartily wishes that fame had been a little more sparing, for wherever he is seen, especially in the best places and company, there passeth little other discourse. [Extract from Corresp., Spain.]

Oct. 8. 458. Fras. Cottington to Sir Dudley Carleton. The Court is full of advertisements of divers disgraces done to the English nation by the Hollanders both at Greenland and the East Indies. Is sorry to hear it so much discoursed among a people with whom in former times we had gained so much reputation, and with whom nothing is held so dear as point of reputation. [Extract from Corresp., Spain.]

Oct. 9. 459. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Swanley to pay 12*d*. a lb. freight for all his goods brought home. Silvanus Man recommended for employment. Committee to confer with Sir Henry Marten how far the Company may proceed in the business concerning Cartine. John Young, recommended by Sir Thos. Lowe, entertained for a purser. Gratuities to Richard Atkinson and Robert Washbourne. [One page and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 221-2.]

Oct. $\frac{9}{19}$. 460. Resolution of the States General to send over to England their Commissioners with the deputies of the East India Company with instructions to treat to the satisfaction of his Majesty and that of their own country. [French. Holland Corresp.]

Oct. 12. 461. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Has had audience in the assembly of the States General, and presented the petitions of our merchants (translated into Dutch) according to his Majesty's instructions. They afterwards resolved to send over three Commissioners of their body, besides the deputies formerly appointed by the Dutch East India Company. Two of these Commissioners, MM. Gogh of Guelderland, and Vanderdussen of Holland, visited Carleton and brought him the written resolution. Has had three visits during the week from the Prince of Orange, who Carleton desired to remind the States that his Majesty would expect the Commissioners to be particularly instructed and fully authorized in all the points specified in Carleton's proposition. His speech in particular with the deputies of Zealand, also concerning Sir Wm. Cockayne's business. The deputies of the Dutch East India Company to be at the Hague by the end of the month ($\frac{2}{3}$), and the ships of war to be ready to carry all the Commissioners over by the $\frac{23 \text{ Oct.}}{2 \text{ Nov.}}$ so as to be in England within a fortnight. 464. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the sale of commodities, including morse teeth, beaver and squirrel skins, whale fins, isinglass, and indigo. Account between the Muscovy Company and Sir William Russell Theodore Fall appointed purser's mate in the Palsgrave; John Wetherall purser's mate in the Star; William Kerford purser in the Bear; Guy Tildesley purser in the Palsgrave, and John Booth purser's mate in the Bear. Letter read from the agent from the King of Sweden discovering the intention of an English captain to get his Majesty's leave to transport 1,000 men into Poland, as if to be employed against the Turk, but are found to be meant against the Muscovites, which may prove the overthrow of the Muscovy trade, and a breach of the peace with Sweden. Gratuity to Thomas Mills. Minutes of committees for Deptford and Blackwall concerning alterations and improvements. Honesty and sufficiency of boatswain Ingram, his allowance to be increased to ten shillings a week. Agreement wth John Bickley, who went forth master mate at 4*l.* per month five years since, now returned master in the Hope; the freight for his spices brought home, amounting to 155*l.*, allowed him as a gratuity for his services, and concluded with at 8*l.* per month. was the sum of the whole loan, in some trusty hands there. Knows not how his coming away will be taken, but makes no doubt he will make some good apology for his doings. [This was a joint loan by command of the King from the East India and Muscovy Companies to the Emperor of Russia, then at war with the Poles. Extract from Dom. Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CIII., No. 33, Cal. p. 585.]

Oct. 16-23. 466. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Agreement with Edmund Linngs to be master. Sylvanus Man's suit for employment referred. Difference between Sir Richard Smith and the treasurer respecting payment of a loan. Suit of Henry Danyell for a purser's mate referred. Concerning the accounts of the Muscovy and East India Companies. Bond of Edward Harvey and John Dameron, not to proceed to the East Indies in the Jason, to be delivered up to them. Petition of William, brother and executor of Geo. Pybourne, deceased, at Tecoe, for his brother's goods; also of Edward Charley, surgeon, for his pepper free of freight.

Minutes of a General Court. Sale of commodities, with names of purchasers and the prices. Concerning a claim of Catherine Gibson to the estate of John Brackstone, deceased. The accounts of the seventh voyage to be ended. Respecting the money proffered by the executors of the late Sir James Lancaster for his adventure; declined until further advice, for the reasons stated. Gratuity to Thomas Brockedon, a factor, employed since 1611. Letter read from the Lord Chamberlain recommending Sir John Holmeden as a captain; deferred "until some further time shall discover the passage of business betwixt the English and Dutch." Message from the Prince by Sir John Douglas, recommending James Erwin, kinsman to Capt. Wood, for employment. Letter read from Sir Dudley Carleton, from the Hague, of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inst. (see No. 461). Thanks received from the Admiral of France and other French noblemen for the kindness shewn to Mons. de Cane during his passage in the Company's ships from the Indies; present of a bason and ewer weighing 100 ounces accepted from De Cane. Sylvanus Man and John Bardon to be employed as masters. Gratuity to James Ferdinandus. Concerning the estate of Henry Patteson, late factor at Tecoe, deceased. Letter of Sir Dudley Diggs requesting that all censures be stopped concerning him until he has been with the King and delivered his reasons to the Company.

Oct. 21.—Concerning the estates of Wm. Marynell and Henry Patteson deceased. Suit of Diego Fernandus for a further recompence for his services at Surat, Acheen, Tecoe, and Bantam. Suit of William, brother and administrator of Robert Lorkyn, touching his brother's estate.

Oct. 23.—The King to be acquainted with the proceedings of Lord Rich with his ships in the Indies; also with a brief relation of the hopes of trade with Persia, and the dangers that might have ensued through Lord Rich surprising the rich ship appertaining to the Grand Mogore's mother. Sir Lionel and his brother, Randall Cranfield, to enjoy all the privileges of their freedom. Examination of the business of Henry Patteson, deceased ; found guilty of dishonesty ; Methwold, his executor, to be sent for home, who abetted him in his wrongs, and the charges against him set down in writing. Arthur Hatch to preach from the first verse of the first psalm before the Company. Concerning the late Robert Lorkyn's wages and debts. Gratiuity to Libby Chapman, consul at Aleppo. Wm. Nelson's account to be audited. Claims of Richard Widdowes and Aaron Crowe Debts of the old joint stock to be called in. Committee appointed to meet two days a week about the Persian business. The accounts of the seventh voyage to be concluded. Concerning two houses built for the Company ; one very fair at Sia [? Siam], which is as great a city as London, and the trade great that may be made there ; the other at Patani. Henry Bates, now returned after seven years' service, to be retained in the Company's service. Petition of Thos. and Wm. Gourney and Anne Eyens, brothers and sister of John Gourney, deceased, concerning their brother's wages. Gratiuity to Diego Ferdinandus. A court appointed for the fourth voyage. [Fourteen pages. Court Bk. IV., 227-240.]

467. John Pory to Carleton. Letters from Persia to the East India Company relate how Capt. Pring, who went general of the East India fleet last February twelvemonth, found Lord Rich's ships with a prize worth 100,000*l.*, the goods of the mother of the Great Mogul, which Pring conducted to Surat, where it was restored to the true owner, for which act the ambassador and the merchants had great thanks and have purchased themselves much favour. "This is the fair tale which the East India Company do tell for themselves." There is news also which hath recompensed Sir Dudley Diggs for his defeat in Russia and his return home ; having lent the Russian Emperor 60,000 marks in the King's name, towards the maintenance of his wars against the Poles, he has obtained privileges for the silks of Persia to be conveyed across the Caspian Sea up the river Volga, and so through all Russia ; the same trade is settled to the use of the East India Company by way of the Persian Gulf, Jask being their port, and Shiraz, a city some ten days' journey off, their staple town or place of their factory ; the principal factor, Edward Connok, died a year ago. 468. The Archbishop of Canterbury to Carleton. It is well that the States are sending Commissioners hither to treat of all differences between our people and them, for albeit the East Indian business be a matter worth the congratulating against the Portugal, yet other things in Greenland are fit to be accommodated also. Their insufferable acts and lewd speeches against the King and English nation no wise man can imagine but that they were fomented by Barneveldt and his accomplices. [*Extract from Holland Corresp. 469. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Conference on the best course for procuring coral to be sent to Persia; the unpolished yields 25 per cent. profit, of which 300 chests go yearly to the Red Sea. Letter read from Wm. Hatcher from York House, giving notice, by direction of the Lord Chancellor, of a patent brought to the Great Seal granting Lord Rich, Sir Robert Mansell, and others sole trade in Guinea and Binney, "which his Lordship caused to be stayed until he might be satisfied from Mr. Governor whether it would be prejudicial to those Companies he is interested in; the Company, much bound to his Lordship, appoint a committee to attend him with explanations and let him know how far other adventurers have proceeded in the voyage to Senegal. The commission and letters for Persia to be sent by the next ships. Finch to be present at the examination of Gourney's business. Richard Haselwood to be a factor, and Francis Stephens a purser's mate. Thomas Thornton appointed steward. James Erwin on the recommendation of the Prince's treasurer, "hearing that he is a pretty artist, yet never brought up to take pains as a seaman, they resolved of entertaining him for a master's mate." 470. Carleton to the Marquis of Buckingham. The States Act of authorization of the resolution taken by their merchants in the East Indies against the English came casually into his hands before his journey to England, but he would not presume to take any public notice of it until he found by sounding some of the States that it could not be disavowed. Design to frame a West Indian Company after the East Indian Company; if the King allow of the proceeding, and there be any concurrence in England, it will soon be resolved. Mons. Gooch, the Deputy of Guelderland, is much devoted to his Majesty's service and well affected in religion; with him more confidence may be used than Carleton can promise for the rest. 471. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The ship is in readiness at Rotterdam, and the Commissioners promise to be within the space of a week. Is intreated by the States to request the King to countermand any order for making stay of their East Indian ships, lest proceeding by force should interrupt a treaty wherein they profess to go sincerely minded. Told them he understood of no such order given. Thinks no time so improper to alienate the minds of these people, as they are in a fair way of stricter conjunction to his Majesty than ever. Price given by the Flemings for pepper. The James not yet arrived. Thinks when "the Mallancaboes" come down there will not be a cloth left. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 705.]

- Oct. 30-31. 474. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from the Lord Admiral desiring to be informed of the truth of a report of the capture of two of Ld. Rich's ships in the Indies; his Lordship to be given an inkling of the business to the same effect as to his Majesty, that the relation came overland, but nothing can absolutely be known until the return of a ship which is daily expected. Letter read from my Lord of Buckingham signifying the King's good acceptance of the news sent, saying that Sir Thos. Smythe's letters ever brought such news as he liketh. The Charles, Diamond, and Ruby to be sent to Surat. A good capital in money to be sent to, and all the Muscovy Company's dollars bought for, Persia and Aleppo. Extraordinary report of Mr. Pennington, who was captain in a ship with Sir Walter Raleigh, for his knowledge and sufficiency to command.

Oct. 31.—Petition read from John Helmore, a gunner at Pooloroon, subscribed by Nath. Courthope, to allow his wife four months' of his pay yearly. Suits of Matthew Saywell concerning the freight of his pepper, and of Cuthbert, brother and executor of Thos. Armstrong, on the same subject. Petition of Joan, wife of Josias Underhill, who was taken by the Flemings in the Swan and remains with them in bonds for part of her husband's wages. Petition of Anne, who asserts herself to be the widow of Simon Score, for her late husband's wages, refused, as he was never married, and she is found a "consoning quean." Suit of Samuel Squire, having served nine years and as commander of the Endeavour to Jambi, and of Henry Crosby for gratuities. [Two pages and three quarters. O.C., IV., 242-245.]

- Oct. 31. 475. John Pory to Sir Dudley Carleton. Our East India Company have contracted with the King of Persia to bring their silks by the Persian Gulf, paying one-third in money and two-thirds in commodities. This will undo the Turk, who bring that for 150,000*l.* by the year which costs Christendom 800,000*l.*, and unspeakably enrich our kingdom, themselves at least. [*Extract from Dom., Jac. - Oct. 31. 476. Geo. Cokayne and John Hayward to President Ball. All Succadana. the cloth, copper, iron, and some lead sold. Goods which are vendible at Succadana and which the factor is in want of. Cokayne hopes a pinnace will arrive in time to prevent his losing this year's passage for England. No Dutch ship arrived since the Rose departed. Hears no news from the eastward except that at Japara the Mattaram has put the swaggering Flemings all to the sword. [*One page. 478. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The King expects that the Commissioners will be fully instructed to treat and conclude upon all points. News from Mr. Cottington that throughout Spain the Spaniards speak of their glorious triumphs over his Majesty's subjects in the East Indies and elsewhere, "and make legends of their valiant exploits achieved upon our men." What he mentions of staying the Dutch East Indian ships is untrue; the merchants have been earnest to procure their stay; but if the Commissioners give no satisfaction when they come, "doubts our people's patience will hardly be forced by the authority of the State to endure such foul insolencies and indignities unrequited." [Holland Correspondence.]

Nov. 3.

479. Minutes of a Court of Commissioners for both (the East India and Muscovy) Companies. Robt. Turberville appointed purser's mate in the Elizabeth. Letters read from Captains Parker and Jourdain, from the Cape, of 6th and 7th July past, with news of their arrival there on 26th June previously, and the loss and sickness of many men, partly through the stinking beer, which they were obliged to throw overboard, the tainted beef, the lack of fresh provisions at the Cape, and the want of warm clothes. Request of Capt. Parker, that 100*l.* be paid to his wife, granted. The complaints above mentioned to be inquired into and amended in future. [Half a page. Court Bk. IV., 245.]

Nov. 6-10.

480. Court Minutes of the East India Company. There being a want of surgeons in the Indies, two more are to be sent over, one to remain at Bantam. Jonas Colbye entertained for employment. Robert Fotherby appointed overseer for making cordage, in the room of Edlyn, deceased. Gratuity to Thomas Gifford. Thomas Barker, who speaks the Turkish, Arabian, Persian, Italian, and Spanish languages, appointed a factor at 60*l.* a year, rising 10*l.* per annum, for seven years. Gratuity to William Nelson, who is re-appointed to carry the letters overland to Persia. Richard Haselwood appointed an accountant at Bantam at 40*l.* a year, rising 10*l.* per annum. Salary of Thomas Barker, now in Persia, and "graced much by the Emperor of Persia," who hath only 30*l.* a year, to be increased to 100*l.* a year, with an annual rise of 10*l.* (notwithstanding the Company's former intents and advice upon Mr. Connok's complaint), and to assure him of the Company's good opinions of his service. Directions to be sent for Monox to remain chief at Shiraz, "or some other place of eminence for profit in those parts." No further letters to be procured from the King to the Emperor of Persia at present, three having been sent already; and seeing the Emperor rather expects deeds than words, the other letters to be despatched overland, it is thought, will give good satisfaction. Agreement with Diego for seven years. No more Noialls[Noyaux] or French cannons to be bought in France. Committees to peruse Sir Dudley Diggs' instructions, confer with him about his other projects, and consider what they conceive fit to satisfy his travels and pains for his voyage. Journal made by Stephen Newboll of the voyage, to the time of his death, bought of his widow for 40s., to keep it from the press, as it contained some things not fit to be divulged or read.

Minutes of a general court. Sale of goods, with names of purchasers and the prices. Letters having been received from Persia, whereby the Company are satisfied of the state of their affairs, it is resolved to send a good supply of commodities there, and that allowance be made on all Christmas payments that are paid at once.

Nov. 10.—Henry Bates appointed a factor, to go with the first ships. Arthur Hatch, who preached on Sunday and was approved for his gifts and a good scholar, entertained for a preacher. Old debts due to the Company amounting to 7,000*l.*, "from some men of good note, who will beloth to have their names publicly known;" committee appointed to speak with them privately. Allowance to William Nelson increased. Barwick, on his request, to be sent from Bantam, "being so unhealthful a place," to Surat, with spices and commodities, and so supply Jasques. An act to be made to punish such as shall not transport their ungarbled pepper. Ball to be sent for home, who hath committed so many and such notorious abuses, to the great wrong and damage of the Company. Capt. Pennington informed that nothing can be concluded (touching his suit for employment) until the Dutch Commissioners have been conferred with. Gratuity to John Alexander, master of the Diamond. Offley desired to treat with some bachelor sailors, for their consent to stay in the country, if occasion require. The commanders forbidden to increase the sailors' wages, but gratuities to be made to them on their return home according to their deserts. Suit of Katherine Gibson for a debt out of Brackston's account. Concerning Capt. Pepwell's goods; and a dispute between the brothers of John Gourney, deceased, and Finch, about the estate of the deceased. [Six pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 246-252.] to the fleet. Request of John Clynch, merchant, of Ipswich, one of the Company, on behalf of Edward Howe, his servant, to be a free brother, and to be entertained for a factor; the decision respited. 60,000 ryals to be sent out in the Bear, and 40,000 in the Star, "which will come to a matter of 10 chests." The Charles, Ruby, and Diamond to proceed to Surat. The seventh voyage to be concluded. The payment for this joint stock to be considered of. Allowance to Robert Tofield, servant to Hugh Benet, deceased. Agreement with William Nelson for carrying the Company's letters to the Indies for 100*l.*, and a further 100*l.* for returning with letters from thence, he being unwilling to remain in the country. 483. Remonstrance of the States Ambassador to the Privy Council. 484. Robert Bell to Sir Dudley Carleton. Has received his letter, and so has Sir Thos. Smythe, who takes it very kindly. Perceives the resolution of the States General to send over about composing the wrongs and injuries they have offered us, but is afraid both their ships and ours will have sailed for the Indies, and so revenges may fall out amongst them. 485. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The Commissioners' instructions have been somewhat enlarged since Carleton's speech in the Prince of Orange's presence. Alarm of the deputies for the merchants of the East India Company upon hearing of a purpose to arrest their ships; they said they would not venture their persons where there was no safety for their goods, but now that difficulty is removed, they meet with a new or rather an old one revived by the States of Friesland, who, resolving to be no longer excluded out of that commerce, will give them liberty to conclude nothing with our men for more than four years, the time of the expiration of their octroi. It has been agreed to compose this matter afterwards by arbitration, which is approved by the States and the Prince of Orange. Sees no other impediment, so that the Commissioners, who seem resolved to do so, may take the first wind. A ship, richly laden, newly arrived in Zealand from the East Indies, the eighth this year, all valued at ten millions of florins. No small question whether their good success and prosperity will help or hinder the business of the conjunction of the Companies. The deputies have given them full power to treat and conclude, whereas Grotius and those who went to England some few years since had only commission to talk and dispute. Those who know them, and have interest in the advancement of the business, say they must be roundly dealt with, and rather by way of intimidation than persuasion or inducement. Riccard [? Rychaerts], of Amsterdam, and Sounck, of Horne, both good and modest men ; but Bas, of Amsterdam, Meerman, of Delft, and Boreel, of Middleburgh, of the Armenian faction, great dependants on Barneveldt, and therefore less affected to any conjunction with the English nation. 489. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Erasmus Baynham to be an under-factor. Robert Carpenter refused employment. Henry Crewe referred. Edward Howe appointed a factor for seven years, with 60*l.* salary, and an annual increase of 10*l.* Letter read from L. Chapman, consul at Aleppo for the Turkish Company, to Sir Thos. Lowe, governor, with letter enclosed from Thos. Barker and Wm. Bell, dated Kasbin, 14 July 1618, signifying the Emperor of Persia's resolution to embrace the trade of the East India Company in the Turkish Ambassador's presence, and Barker's suspicion of the utter dissolution of the Turkish trade, and his fears for the security of the consul's person and goods, with other occurrences ; which caused Sir Thos. Lowe to request the East India Company not to use the Turkish Company's factors for the conveyance of their letters, because of the dangers that may befall. Ellam requested to school Barker for it in the letters to be sent over, and thanks to be returned to Sir Thos. Lowe. Finnett, lately returned home, to be conferred with about taking over a "character" (or cipher), "whereby intelligence may the more safely pass undis-

The Committees for Persia to investigate into the business of William Swanley, master of the Charles, as to his bringing home such an extraordinary store of spices; also to agree upon what presents should be sent to the Emperor of Persia. Gratuity to Edward Lee. Richard Paulson, Bewley, Thomas Oldenberry, Francis Pinto, James Brierly, Taylor, and Sleigh, "to be put in suit" for money due to the Company.

Nov. 20.—William Hill to be a factor. Edward Howe, factor, permitted to adventure 400*l.*, and to have two-thirds of his wages put into stock. John Benthall entertained a factor. Ships to be furnished with fireworks. Each ship to have a supply of wormwood beer, "a very excellent, wholesome, and sovereign preservation of men's healths." 490. Ufflete to President Ball. Death of Byndon. The King of Jacatra's desire that Ball should help him to the purchase of powder and shot for 200 ryals. The King means shortly to have a bout with the Flemings, and demanded whether the English would help him. Ufflete's reply that they were merchants, and sent by their masters, not to take part with any, but had no doubt the King of Bantam would help him. The King said "Bantam for itself, and so is Jacatra." How the Dutch at Japara invited Jincee Mooda aboard their ships to feast him, well plied him with liquor, bade him send for his wife and friends, who he put aboard his own junk, and then the Dutch set fire to the town, having taken 100 men, women, and children, who they put aboard Mooda's junk with six Flemings. Mooda, his wife, and children daily expected at Jacatra; a house fitting for them. The Dutch have retaken the Englishman who escaped from the Angel. Kendall with the Javas is fled up the country. Progress of the Dutch fortifications. Whether the English be secure, there is no trusting the Javas. The Dutch have five ships at the island, one in the road, and five at Japara. Requests a supply of English beer or Spanish sack; also money, of which they are quite destitute, and some quills and paper. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 707.]

[Dutch] East Indian Company, finally dispatched after many difficulties and delays, and now setting forward. Lodensteyn goes in place of Merman, of Delft. They have desired Carleton to give them a letter of recommendation to Sec. Naunton, knowing that he will lend a willing ear and a helping hand to the business. They promise to go with full commission, and as good intention; but their chief confidence is in his Majesty's favour. [Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 21. 494. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Beseeches him, of the Commissioners and deputies who go all now in the same ship, to take particular notice of the first, Mons. Goch, of Guelderland, with whom Carleton has long held particular correspondence. Though not styled Ambassadors, the Commissioners have all but the title and precedence of the Ambassador resident. The rest, as they are deputed by the Company, so they are authorized by the States to treat and conclude the business of the East Indies. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 21. 495. Memorial of Sir Dudley Carleton to the States General. The report of the arrest in England of some of their East Indian ships is false, the King never having thought of doing so, but, on the contrary, has been expecting the arrival of Commissioners to treat amicably upon all differences. That the Commissioners be fully instructed on all the points in dispute, so that their voyage may not be without fruit. [Draft in French, corrected by Carleton. Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 24. 496. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter from Sir Wm. Russell about purchase of the beavers' wombs. Agreement concluded with Sir Dudley Diggs; 1,000 marks allowed to him. Dividend of Robert Young, now at Surat, to be paid to his wife. Arthur Hatch, the preacher, to have 50*l.* per annum. Gratuity of 100*l.* to poor ministers. Nov. 30. 498. Edward Pettus to the East India Company. Delay in the receipt of the loan promised by Lalabegg on 28th September last. Concerning their "unworthy and undeserving servant," Thos. Barker, and his insupportable injuries and cunning practices. Arrival of the Turkish General, with his army, within half a day's journey of Ardabil. A dishonourable peace, it is feared, has been made by this King, and, if truly reported, a most unprofitable one for their trade. The conditions. Lalabegg's unkind usage to them of late. It is not unknown to the Turk that, if the English trade goes forward, Aleppo and those parts are overthrown. Effect of a report of the Consul from Aleppo, that the English agent had run away. Their endeavours to take soundings about the port of Combran [Gombroon], by demanding a boat and guard from the Governor to "free them of the Portugal," denied. The Governor said he had written to the new Governor of Ormuz Don Luis de Susa, that he would be friends with the English. His proposals; but was answered they were merchants, and had not power to accept them. Relative advantages of Gombroon, Ormuz, and Jask for shipping. The fort of Gombroon, taken by the Duke [of Shiraz?] from the Portugal three years since, destroyed, and another built a furlong from the sea-side; a pretty platform of resistance enough, if well manned. All water used at Ormuz is fetched from wells by the labouring people of Gombroon; the rain-water is saved in cisterns; the island of Ormuz, all salt. Prices for carrying an ass-load of goods; a camel will carry four times, and a mule half as much again. Will be forced, for want of camels, to use asses. Tolls paid upon each ass-load; and nature of the towns between Ispahan and Gombroon. The distance between Ispahan and Jask, about 550 or 560 English miles, which is performed by camels in 45 days, by asses in 40 days, by mules in 36 days, and by horses in 30 days. Monox and the writer, with a Turk and servant of Lalabegg, arrived at Moghistan 31st October. Barker had left Jask four days before their arrival. Requested licence of the Governor to follow him, but were told that Lalabegg had given orders they were not to leave before paying for the silk. His unsuccessful attempt to get away. Believes the King thinks they will cozen him as he has been cozened by other Christians. Were kept prisoners at Moghistan 29 days, and only procured their release upon news of a ship's arrival at Jask with goods of more value than the silk. Proceeded thither, but on his way heard from Barker that he had laden 42 camels for Moghistan, and wished Pettus to return; so Monox went alone. Is thus ignorant of what passes at the water-side. The Portugals have for certain lost this year five ships to and from Ormuz, two of which had much money. Hears that the English ship, arrived at Jask, had taken two more. [Three pages and three quarters. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 700.]

Dec. 1-4. 499. Court Minutes of the East India Company. A trunk which belonged to one Decker, a Frenchman, deceased, on his return from Bantam in the Charles, and applied for by Whittacres, his administrator, to be opened in the presence of Ellam. Letter read from Anne, widow, and mother of Benj. Farye, concerning her son's wages. Misdemeanours of Jno. Osborne. Geo. Scot's business. William Nelson refused further satisfaction concerning his allowances. Mr. Lowe's man (Finnett), as more fit and understanding than Nelson, to be conferred with to undertake the carriage of the letters overland into Persia. The wants of the surgeons in the Indies to be supplied. Concerning the wages of Wm. Wallis, servant of John Harrison.

of Capt. David Middleton, in whose right he is administrator to Sir Henry Middleton, deceased. George Scott's business to be heard before Mr. Solicitor. Agreement with Thomas Barker to take over the letters to Persia; he is also sworn a free brother. Letter from Thos. Spurwaye, factor, dated Bantam, 12th December 1617, to the wife of John Davis, master of the Swan, discoursing of their voyage, and the surprise and capture of that ship by the Hollanders, near Pooloroon; the insults offered to the English, carrying them up and down in irons, with the death of some; together with a petition from the wives of several of the Company's officers against the Dutch. The Committee promised them their best assistance, granted them a month's wages apiece, and willed them to present their petition to the Dutch Commissioners. No Dutchman to be employed in the Company's business. Agreement with Robert Jeffreyes, a factor, to be employed at Surat or Persia, but not at Bantam. George More to be appointed to train men at the Cape or elsewhere on their landing. Lucas Antheunis' business concerning the seventh voyage. [Five pages. Court Bk. IV., 263-267.]

Jacatra.

500. General Coen to Sir Thos. Dale and the Council for the English Company at Bantam. Has been informed this morning that their [Dutch] ship, the Black Lion, laden from Patani, has been taken by four English ships, the Dutch factor having been previously enticed on board an English ship with all friendship. Does not know what reason the English have for this act, and what their intentions are, because the Dutch have never been able to trace in these parts any such ill will from the English Governor or chief officer. Notice should have been given to them in writing, as they gave the English notice several times before they undertook to keep the English away from the Moluccas, Amboyna, and Banda by force, though they had put up for more than 10 years with the English assisting their enemies, injuring their allies, and stirring up rebellion against them to deprive their masters of the trade in spices, granted to them alone, and endeavouring to make themselves masters of it by false practices and by force. This seizure of the Black Lion exhibits the evil intention of the English; yet he cannot believe that such an unreasonable act was committed by common resolution, nor that the treachery attempted by Nicholas Ufflete and his accomplices against them at Jacatra was by their master's orders; for no just cause has ever been given to use such iniquitous and inimical proceedings against them. Sends this express, and requests in a very friendly way that he will make restitution of the Black Lion in the same state as she was in when seized, and that he will punish the traitor Ufflete as he deserves; or, if not, that he will at least give reasons for these acts, and whether it is his intention to go on in this way to violate the national mutual peace between the States General and the Sovereign of Great Britain, and to have open war everywhere, so that they may know what measures they are to take. Protests before God and the whole world, that if he does not restore the Black Lion in the state in which he took her, and does not withdraw from such hostile proceedings, and does not punish the traitor Ufflete, that they shall be compelled to avail themselves again of the means which the Lord will give them, and that they shall be innocent of all harm, mischief, and bloodshed that may take place in consequence, being compelled by nature and right to take up arms against them [the English] in their own [the Dutch] parts. Complains of the long-continued acts of injustice committed by the English in the Moluccas, Amboyna, and Banda, and declares that the Dutch are ready to submit themselves to an impartial judgment, as they have up to the present time always done. [*With seal and certificate of the authenticity of General Coen's signature, signed by Carpentier, Samuel Kindt, Pieter Dircksoon, and P. Broecke, dated $\frac{1}{2}$ $\frac{2}{2}$ December 1618. Dec. 7-8. 501. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Ships to be dispatched on the 9th inst. John Hinchley to be master in the Star. Edward Smith to succeed Barwick in the Bear. Ryals, expected from Spain, to be received on board the Star and Bear.

Dec. 8.—The masters of the Star and Bear to make search at the Cape for all private letters, either English or Dutch, and to deliver them to John Jourdain, President at Bantam, who is to satisfy himself of the contents according to directions from the Governor. Dec. 9.
Pettapoli.

502. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. Sends analysis of account of the Pettapoli factory. Is but newly returned from visiting weavers in the country; concerning the quality of the cloth and yarn. Great affront to the Dutch at Masulipatam by the Governor, and their attempt to seize an officer named the Cutwall, somewhat resembling the office of marshal in London, but he was rescued by the Governor's soldiers, and a Dutchman died of the wounds he received. Capture of a ship of Cochin China by the Dutch, which they took to Pulicat, but it is thought she will be given up. A Dutch ship lately arrived from Bantam, laden with spices, with news of the taking of two out of the three English ships that went from Bantam for the Moluccas. "These butter-boxes [?] are grown so insolent, that if they be suffered but a while longer, they will make claim to the whole Indies, so that no man shall trade but themselves or by their leave, but I hope to see their pride take a fall." Glad to hear good hopes of trade in Persia and in the Red Sea, and quiet in the Mogul's country. It is feared that the Hollanders, taking the junks sent by the Moors to Pegu, will endanger the English trade in these parts. News that the Mogul's soldiers are on the coast of Gengele, and have taken a strong fort, their army consisting of 1,500,000 (sic.), commanded by a woman, "as the tale goes." Alarm of the inhabitants, but thinks there is no cause for fear. [Three pages. Endorsed, "Per the Ann Royal." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 716.]

Dec. 11. 503. Minutes of the East India Company. George Scot's business concluded. The security offered by Sir William Russell for his debts, amounting to more than 6,000*l.* accepted. Brockedon examined as to his private trade, and gently admonished. Twenty nobles to be paid towards maintaining the Lighthouse at Dungeness. Committee appointed to confer with Sir Jas. Cunningham. Lucas Atheunis to receive a dividend on the seventh voyage, the accounts of which are to be examined. [One page and a half. Court Bk. IV., 269-270.]

Dec. 12.
Madrid.

504. Fras. Cottington to Sir Dudley Carleton. This Court is still full of the disgraces lately put upon the English nation, so many ways, by the States shipping in so many places. Is therefore right glad to understand that Commissioners are going from thence into England, and hopes some satisfaction will be given. [Extract from Corresp. Spain.]

Dec. 14-15.

505. Court Minutes of the East India Company. John Pursey appointed factor for seven years with a salary of 40*l.*, and 10*l.* annual increase. Wages of William Hill, a factor, to be increased. Explanations of the Governor in reference to the Deputy and Mr. Bell having been to Court without the previous knowledge of the Company, at which some of the Committee were offended; that the Deputy Governor and Mr. Bell were admitted by the Duke of Buckingham to the King's presence, with whom were also Lords Arundel and Digby; that the King advised them to see their complaints were just, and not to meddle with trivial matters, saying he was contented to cast behind his back the dishonours he had heard of to his own person; and howsoever the Hollanders have some pretext for the East Indies, yet his Majesty is assured they have none for Greenland, which is wholly his; that he wished the Company to join with the Hollanders in any indifferent matters, but wholly distasted the vigorous war they have formerly insisted upon against the Spaniards, and assured them of his readiness to do them justice for the disorders and mischiefs committed by the Dutch; and as for the Dutch Commissioners who are come over to treat, the King only nominated Sir Thomas Smythe and Sir Lionel Cranfield for the East India business, and referred the rest to the Company's election, as best able to judge of the estate of their own cause. The King blamed the Company for not having yet satisfied Sir Jas. Cunningham, "relating from point to point all particular passages therein, and concluded that he would admit of no further excuse, but expected to have the money paid, if for no other respect, yet for his sake." The Company desiring that Sir Jas. might make a release of his whole right in the Scottish patent because of his speeches that he can take forth a duplicate, the King again promised that neither this nor any other patent hereafter should hurt the Company, and that Sir Jas. should perform whatsoever they would have done. It was then craved of the King that after the Lords Commissioners and the States had sat once, the East India business might then be left to be argued by those and the English committees to draw matters to their proper heads for the King's confirmation, which his Majesty very well approved of. The Deputy further informed the Committee of what passed at the audience of the States Commissioners with the King; of the oration of Burreile [Boreel], who complained as much of the wrongs done by the English, and how desirous the Dutch are of an agreement, and of the King's "noble answer to all the points as they fell;" and the Duke of Buckingham's honourable favour in procuring them to be by, during the interview. Debate on a message from Sec. Naunton concerning Sir Jas. Cunningham's business; a release to be drawn of his patent to the Company, the money to be paid, and an end to be put to "that troublesome business." Message delivered by Sir Clement Edmondes from the Privy Council, commanding some of the Company to attend the next day the Commissioners that are to be appointed, and petitions from Robt. Jones, agent, prisoner in Newgate, complaining of Lucas Antheunis for keeping him in chains, and from Sir Jas. Cunningham for satisfaction for his charges disbursed. Sir Clement informed the Committee how Jones had hazarded the life of his Majesty's ambassador, Sir Thos. Roe, in the Indies, and that the Privy Council had commanded Jones should remain in Newgate until Roe's return; and the Company's resolution to give satisfaction to Sir Jas. Cunningham according to his Majesty's pleasure. "Some particular persons" recommended "to manage their business." The following Commissioners nominated for the approval of the Privy Council: Sir Thos. Smythe and Sir Lionel Cranfield (nominated by his Majesty) Sir Clement Edmondes, Sir Dudley Diggs, Sir Henry Marten, ——— Munckey, Alderman Halliday, Morris Abbott, Wm. Harrison, [Robt.] Bell, and [Hump] Handford, eleven in all. A sub-committee also appointed, to consist of Messrs. Wiech, Leate, Hanford, Garraway, Munne, Skynner, and Ellam. Skynner held "exquisite" to draw things to their heads when Ellam hath given him the grounds. Ellam appointed to draw out of the letters and writings the favours done by the English to the Dutch, and the good done by the English against the Spaniards in the Indies without maintaining an open war against them. Information of Levinus Moncke that the East India Deputies intend to handle their business in presence of the Lords, the States having commission only about the East India trade, and have no power to treat upon the complaints.

Dec. 15.—Resolution to send a letter to Surat by Thos. Baker (? Barker), now ready for his journey. If the English and Dutch agree, then to send the fewer ships to Bantam, because the Company have many ships in those parts already. Barker to be ready by the next post. Petition of William Smith for money and goods belonging to George Smith, who died in the Expedition on his return to England. [Three pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 270–273.]

Dec. 16.
Whitehall.

506. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The States Commissioners and Deputies had audience of the King at Newmarket on Thursday last (the 10th). The four Commissioners who were sent for this morning by the Lords of the Council, have no such commission under seal as was expected, but only instructions to compose the differences about the trade of the East Indies and the whale fishing. Must see how the King will like this diversion after so long and patient expectation, before any entrance is made with their other Deputies. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Dec. 18.

507. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Agreement with Walter Harvey, appointed a factor for seven years, to have 50*l.* the first year, with an annual increase of 10*l.* Christopher Farewell, formerly a factor and shipped home, refused employment because of his former ill carriage abroad. Gratuity of 50*l.* to Robert Ventris, his dwelling in Cornhill having been consumed by fire, and all companies having extended their charity to him. Part of the wages of Robert Freeman, who went factor in the Dragon, to be paid to his brother Edward. Petition to be drawn out to complain of Demetres to the Council table. Petition of Grace, widow of Richard Bowden, master's mate in the Charles, for pepper referred. The accounts of Capt. Pepwell to be re-examined. Petition of Helen Mansell for a legacy bequeathed by Capt. Pepwell to her late husband. Thos. Milles, formerly purser in the Elizabeth, appointed a factor for seven years, with a salary of 50*l.*, and annual increase of 10*l.* [Two pages. Court Bk., 273-275.]

Dec. 20.
Jacatra Road.

508. Minutes of a Consultation in Jacatra Road for the ordering of the intended fight in the morning between the English and Dutch fleet, within an English mile of each other. Signed by Sir Thos. Dale, general, Capt. Pring, Adam Denton, Thos. Hunt, Nath. Martyne, Peter Bowers, Rich. Yard, Tho. Hackwell, Emanuel Brett, John Munden, John Hatch, Will. Hawkeridge, John Roberts, and Rich. Newall. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 718.]

Dec. 21.
At four in the morning,
Whitehall.

509. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The Commissioners' audience of the King and the Privy Council; their "meditated answer at length," enclosed. Lord Bining and Sec. Naunton appointed by the Lords to attend the King for directions as to their Lordships' answer, which was to this effect: that his Majesty found it strange that the Commissioners had not been fully authorized to treat and conclude on all the differences grown between the subjects of both States, and that after such long deliberation they should come at last with a proposition to speak only to the two first points (the disputes in the East Indies and the Greenland fishery), "which his Majesty takes for an imperious fashion of proceeding in them, as if they were come hither to treat of what themselves pleased, and to give law to his Majesty in his own kingdom, and to propose and admit of nothing but what should tend merely to their own ends." The Commissioners are to be told for a conclusion "that his Majesty is resolved that he cannot in honour nor with preservation of his own right treat with them any further at this time, unless they shall procure a fuller authority by way of express commission to treat and conclude punctually and articulately of all and every of the five heads before expressed." [These heads have reference to the trade in cloth, the King's sole right of fishing upon all the coasts of his three kingdoms, and the transportation of money, besides the above-mentioned two points of the disputes in the East Indies and the Greenland fishery.] Thus late has he rhapsodically foretold Carleton the sum of what the Lord Chancellor is to deliver to the Commissioners this morning. As for Carleton "his Majesty bad me tell you that he must either think you an idle ambassador or else little respected and illused by them. * * * Whereof you are expressly to tell them as of a wrong done first to his Majesty and then to yourself, and to intimate unto them further, that unless they shall send over such a full and distinct commission as is required, his Majesty will advise himself how to maintain his own right, and they shall ask him for a treaty thrice before they shall bring him to it another time." [Holland Correspondence.] Encloses,

509. I. Declaration of the Dutch Commissioners to the Privy Council, in reference to the several points of difference between their countries, which they have come over to endeavour to adjust, and which they judge the exigency thereof requires a settlement by mutual accord. Dec. 15. [French. Four pages. Holland Correspondence.]

Dec. 21. 510. The King's answer to the States Commissioners delivered by the Lord Chancellor. [French. Holland Correspondence.]

Dec. 21. 511. Promise by Sir Thos. Dale, Commander of the English fleet, that the Dutchmen who were taken in the Black Lion shall have the same pay as they had in the service of their former masters, as well as all pay due to them for services done to the Dutch Company, and likewise shall have maintenance during their term of life, provided always they do the English true and faithful service to the utmost of their power. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 719.]

Dec. 21. 512. Aug. Spaldinge and Geo. Ball to Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Bantam. Martin Pring. Arrival of the James and the Hound from Jambi with pepper. News of the murder of Richard Westby, Cape merchant at Jambi, who was invited by the Dutch to supper, and by them murdered at their own house. Ships expected from Jambi and Tecôe, which they hope may be met with. Are determined to keep the James or Hound or both, to be ready on all occasions to intercept the Dutch vessels. The Hound has blown away all her powder in idleness. [One page. Endorsed, "We expect answer by the same prov." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 720.]

Dec. 22. 513. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The Lord Chancellor gave the Whitehall. King's answer to the States Commissioners this forenoon to the same effect as set down in Naunton's last letter; they heard him with a troubled and dejected countenance. Their reply; they doubted not but to have procured an authentic ratification of whatsoever they should have agreed upon with our men before their departure. We persuade ourselves the Commissioners will give the King better satisfaction hereafter. His Majesty is resolved not to lose or neglect his right, his honour, or his time. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Dec. 22. 514. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Wages of Thomas Milles to commence at 60*l.*, increasing annually 10*l.* for seven years. Opinion of Mr. Solicitor concerning Sir Jas. Cunningham's business. Complaint against Demetres to be forborne a while.

Business of Osborne and Marsh to be examined. Discussion on a request of the King for a loan of 20,000*l*. Lease of Crosby House for seven years granted to the Countess of Pembroke, mother to the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Montgomery. Information from Capt. Keeling that two Danish ships are in Cowes Road ready to sail to the East Indies, and three more expected, "being encouraged by an ambassador sent from that King to Denmark, giving out that they have contracted for all the pepper in the Great Samorin's country." Matthew Cardrowe entertained a preacher with 50*l*. per annum, and 20*l*. to furnish him forth to sea. Concerning a debt of Mr. Pinto, deceased; and the order formerly made for those who have not paid in their adventures. Satisfaction given about the money motioned to be borrowed for the King; through the many losses and discouragements the Company have sustained, they cannot do it, and so concluded with an absolute negative; in the governor's opinion it will never be further moved or urged again. Quicksilver sold at 3*s*. per lb. 50,000 ryals of eight to be brought from Middleburg and taken on board the Diamond in the Downs. A great new ship to be built at Deptford. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 275-278.]

Dec. 24.
Acheen.

515. W. Ni[colls] to Millward and Yates at Tecoe. Cloth sold at a profitable rate. Has invested part of his money in steel brought from Masulipatam. The King of Acheen returned from Malacca, having had an encounter with four Portugal galleons; he burnt one galleon and two or three small vessels. In the galleon were 40 pieces of ordnance and the son of the Governor of Malacca, who was taken prisoner with upwards of 60 soldiers; has since given them liberty. Concerning investments for Tecoe and Bantam. Brimstone, benjamin, camphor, and raw silk from Acheen, fit for Masulipatam if the Company had a factory there. There are now at Acheen two ships from Negapatam, one from Collimatte [? Calicut], and one of 600 tons at least from Masulipatam with an ambassador to this King. Questioned the ambassador respecting the bad treatment of Floris in the Globe; he vows that the King and Commons would rejoice to see the English settle there as the Hollanders: "if these Hollanders prevail to settle there, they will forthwith eat us out of our profit for these parts, by the knowledge of vendible goods here." By going to Surat with another merchant he will gain for the company above 20,000 ryals by one ship. Insecurity of trusting letters to the portorage of strangers; has light of two letters dated a year since, sent by Capt. Jourdain to Surat by way of Masulipatam; the stranger remained a long time in Bantam, and has returned hither from Masulipatam, and protests there was no conveyance. His endeavours to urge the King to grant them leave to settle and build a house at Tecoe, upon paying customs and giving a higher price for pepper than either Guzerats or Chinese. The King in the dumps; wishes him to suspend his resolute answer until the arrival of the next English ships; in the meantime he will confer with his nobles, who, all sending their servants thither, will be enemies to this business. Has lent money to the Governor of Tecoe to supply his wants:

"he is there of great rank and esteem, by which I might not deny the lending him so little;" hopes he will requite the courtesy. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 721.]

Dec. 26.
Bantam.

516. Aug. Spaldinge and Geo. Ball to the General (Sir T. Dale), the President (Jourdain), and commanders of the English forces aboard the Moon at Jacatra. Jurabassa Tanyonge, with others, despatched for the Dutch island, by the Pengran's orders, to pillage. The James Royal not yet ready to sail. Have received their letter since the fight when they put the Flemings to flight. Request of the Pengran to have the ordnance of the Flemings left upon the island; Spaldinge promised him a note to that effect, but refers it to their discretion. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 722.]

Dec. 26.
Bantam.

517. Aug. Spaldinge to same. Has written this letter at the earnest request of the Pengran, who desires to have of gift the ordnance left by the Dutch upon the island. Put him in little or no comfort of obtaining his desire, neither did the Pengran promise any requital should they be granted to him. Thinks the Pengran will claim their former promise of lending him ordnance for his house at Jacatra. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 723.]

Dec. 26.
Bantam.

518. Aug. Spalding to Sir Thos. Dale, General, John Jourdain, President, and Geo. Ball, in Jacatra. Arrival of the Dutch prisoners. The speed made by this greedy Pengran to send two or three thousand men in vessels and junks to fetch away all the Hollanders and their luggage from Jacatra, or else to make war against those who withstand him. His last letter was for safety wrapped in a small bond of tobacco, which Keywee sent to the General for a token. Discourse with the Pengran, who, thinking that Capt. Jourdain had arrived, wished Spalding to tell him that Jacatra and all the business about the Dutch there, was at this King's command or disposal. Spalding told him it was no equity for one man to hunt the deer, and another to catch him away; the Pengran replied these were no good meaning words, for they agreed with those of the men who said that Jacatra was at the disposal of the English, and not of the King [of Bantam]. Further discourse respecting the English going to the Moluccas. Spalding's remark, that they would keep their forces hereabouts until the next fleet arrived, not pleasing to the Pengran. Many averse to the Pengran's proceedings, and sought to persuade him to act differently, so as not to breed heart-burning in the King of Jacatra as well as in others. All day prow after prow, full of men, has been leaving for Jacatra, and many more ordered to be ready at half an hour's warning. Five or six Dutchmen have also gone for Jacatra by the Pengran's order. Has bargained with Keywee for a quantity of cloves, in exchange for iron and lead; nutmegs also to be had. Store of white and brown rice. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 724.]

[Dec. 27].
Bantam.

519. Richard Harryes to [John Jourdain?]. Whether Wm. Bennett has paid the workmen; Spurway and the writer gave him the money to do so. Sends note of goods and money delivered to Rich. Griffin, merchant, deceased. Spaldinge has hired a prow to go to him [Jourdain?] and so to Jacatra. [One page. O.C. Vol. VI., No. 725.]

1618.
Dec. 29. Whitehall. 520. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The treaty with the States Ambassadors still suspended till they make a better explanation and construction of their former words. They are required to receive some more particular commission and authority than yet they have. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]
- Dec. 29. 521. Examination of James Littill, sailor, concerning what he, Owen Bodman, and Adam Douglas saw of the burning of the (Dutch prize) Black Lion. Examined by Thos. Hunt, Peter Bowers, John Munden, Tho. Hackwell, Richard Yard, and William Gordin. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 726.]
- Dec. 29. Bantam. 522. Augustyne Spaldinge and Geo. Ball to General Sir Thos. Dale, aboard the Moon. A goat and fruit sent by Wiley, the surgeon. Sorrowful news from James Turner of the "fyringe" of the Black Lion; also of three Flemish ships plying in through the straits. Griffin died last night and was buried this morning. Dale's kinsman, Henry, still sick. Have sent twelve blacks aboard the prize, wishing her to accompany the James and the Advice, and all the Bandanese remaining at Bantam are likewise ready to go aboard the James. The Bandanese have the muskets pillaged out of the Black Lion by the English, of whom they say they bought them. This business should be examined into. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 727.]
- Dec. 30. The Hague. 523. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The Prince of Orange being absent, and the Commissioners' letters concerning his Majesty's resolution not to enter into treaty with them unless they procure such authority from hence as is required, not being yet arrived, he has forborne demanding audience, for which he received the King's orders in Naunton's letters of the 21st and 22nd inst. Under certain circumstances is determined not to defer it longer than a day or two. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]
- [Dec.] 31. Jacatra. 524. John Jourdain to Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Pring. The surgeons have effected the business they came for about Mr. Jackson, and hopes their business with him is to good purpose. Could have no private speech with the Pengran, all the "Penganies" from Bantam being present. "He is desirous of your presence;" but as concerning the capitulations, does not wish that any of Bantam should know what passed between them; Welden affirms the Pengran is willing to yield to all reasonable conditions. Has determined that Capt. Kling [? Keeling] and Welden shall meet Sir Thos. and bring him to their poor weak house among the musqueteers. As for the wreck, cannot find any Chinese as yet to dive in above three fathoms water. The King has given directions concerning houses for their sick men and powder. Provisions very scarce; thinks they should be had from Bantam. Capt. Pring hath long looked for the arrival of the James with Argus eyes. [One page and three quarters. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 728.]
- 1618? 525. The Great Mogul to King James I. Has received by the hands of Sir Thos. Roe, "who well deserves to be his trusty servant,"

the King's letter of love and friendship, and the presents, tokens of his affection, "upon which my eyes were so fixed that I could not easily remove them," and accepted them with great joy and delight. Has commanded that all the kingdoms and ports of his dominions should be freely open to the English nation to live and trade in as they desire; and that neither Spaniard, Portugal, nor any other shall dare to molest their quiet. Desires English merchants to bring in their ships all sorts of rarities and rich goods fit for the Great Mogul's palaces, and the King's letters by every opportunity, that their friendship may be interchangeable and eternal. [One page. East Indies, Vol. I., No. 68.]

1619.

Jan. 1. 526. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Arrival of the Bull from the East Indies with prisoners, Sam. Muse, Jas. Mootham, captain and master of the Francis, and Thomas Jones, master of the Lion, and others. Letters read from Nic. Banggam for instructions; and from Libby Chapman, Consul at Aleppo, and Henry Saville, excusing themselves for conveying in future, letters for Persia, the one being a principal man of the Turkey Company, the other agent for many merchants, because if anything should be discovered, their goods would be in danger; they have already had a narrow escape: some other course to be thought upon. [Three quarters of a page. Court Bk. IV., 278-9.]

Jan. 2.
Whitehall.

527. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The Commissioners' audience of the King; they explained themselves to his Majesty's better satisfaction, who required them to interpret themselves in the same terms to the Lords (of the Privy Council). Mr. Gogh's interview with the Lords. Mons. Caron helped to sweeten the matter with the King. The King requires an assurance from the States of an authentic commission under seal, with full power to their Commissioners to treat and conclude on the great fishing upon all the coasts of his Majesty's three kingdoms, and on the other four points, viz., the traffic in the East Indies, the fishing of the whale, the tare and the proportioning of moneys, to be sent over with the first commodity. The Commissioners promised to write to their masters to that effect. They made a motion to have had some of the Council nominated to treat in the interim about the East India Companies, but for that they are left to our East India merchants and such as they have named; none of the Council are like to be deputed until their required commission under seal is seen. If anything be accorded between their deputies and our merchants for saving of time, it will be but provisionally, and not sealed, till the whole be concluded, for honour's sake. The King expects that Carleton will move the States to the same effect as the Commissioners have promised to do. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 2.
London.

528. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. A ship called the Bull arrived the day before from the East Indies, with news, it is said, that Lord Rich's two ships are cast away in those parts. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CV., No. 2, Cal., p. 1.]

Jan. ?

529. Journal of occurrences from the 5 December 1618, the day the Dutch ship the Black Lion was taken by the English, to the 2nd January 1619, when Sir Thos. Dale went ashore for the first time at Jacatra; showing that the Black Lion was burnt in the night or morning of 27-28 Dec. 1618, the same day that the English had appointed to unlade her best goods into the English ships, and therefore before the English fleet went into Jacatra road, and three days before any English went ashore at Jacatra to consult with the King concerning the besieging of the Dutch fort. [One page and a quarter. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 713.]

Jan. 3.
Whitehall.

530. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The King has changed his former advice so far as to appoint Lord Digby, Mr. Treasurer, Mr. Comptroller, the Master of the Rolls, and Sir Edward Coke, or any three of them, to attend conferences, and regulate the Deputies of our East India Company "if any should offer to fly out." [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 5.

531. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letters read from Thos. Keridge and the rest of the factors at Surat, dated in March last, with a large relation of the passages of business, both in those parts, in Persia, and with the Lord Ambassador at Court; the proceedings of Capt. Towerson with his wife and those women with her, Steele's wife with the rest, with their opinions of sundry other occurrences; from Capt. Pring (see ante, No. 302), with account of their voyage since their departure from England, the loose carriage of Mr. Goulding the preacher, with his penitence for the past, and promise of amendment for the future; and from Edward Terry, preacher, "comfortably and divinely written," of the hopes and satisfaction of their voyage. A new ship to be built at Deptford. Petition of Richard Frobosher, carpenter, for some gratuity for his past services. [One page. Court Bk. IV., 279.]

Jan. 7.

532. Sir W. Smithe to Carleton. The States [Commissioners] honourably entertained by the King at the Prince's mask, and at the banquet at Whitehall, and now it is hoped the grievances on all sides shall be argued and composed. A ship of great wealth lately come from Surat. Sir Thos. Roe gone into Persia about trade for silks, and writes that in June next he will be in England. Young Lord Rich's two ships both said to be lost in those parts—one burnt, the other sunk. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CV., No. 3, Cal., p. 1.]

1619.

Jan. 7.
Bantam.

533. Aug. Spalding to Sir Thos. Dale. Sends Mr. Houlman in a prow to give Sir Thos. notice which way a Dutch yacht, the Hart, that arrived at Bantam last night has gone. Is told she is newly come out of Holland in company with six sail, but dispersed from the rest by weather. She alone met an English ship at the Cape, homeward bound from Surat, very richly laden, but in great want of men and provisions, and this Dutch pinnace spared them fifteen or sixteen men to carry her home. She had taken a French ship upon the coast of Surat. At her leaving Bantam, the Hart shot off 23 pieces of ordnance. This is the fifth prow Spalding has sent since Ball went hence, and not one has returned as yet. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 729.]

Jan. 8.
Whitehall.

534. The King to Sir Thos. Smythe, Sir Lionel Cranfield, Sir Dudley Diggs, Sir Clement Edmondes, Sir Henry Marten, Levinus Muncke, Morris Abbott, Wil. Harrison, Robt. Bell, and Hump. Handforde. The States of the United Provinces having sent Commissioners to whom they have committed divers businesses, "which remain now questionable between that State and ours," and some of the King's Privy Council having been already nominated to correspond and treat with such as come from the United Provinces, the above, or any five of them, are appointed to treat and conclude, with the advice of three of the Privy Council, with the Dutch Commissioners, for the peaceable ordering and establishing of the trade to the East Indies, "as for any other things that may be incident thereunto." [One page. Dom. Jac. I., Vol. CV., No. 5, Cal., p. 1.]

Jan. 8.

535. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Bateman, their solicitor, to put Swanley in suit for payment of 100*l*. Letters read from Libby Chapman, of 18 Sept., from Aleppo last, promising his best assistance to Henry Saville in the conveyance of the Company's letters (to Persia); and from Saville, of 13 Oct., from Aleppo last, excusing himself from sending any more of the Company's letters to Persia, because of the danger to the messenger, who is liable to lose his life and goods as well as he who sent him, but recommending Strahanna, a Scotchman residing at Bagdad, a physician, as very fit to do so, giving also notice that divers Dutch, Italians, and Portugals are come from Ispahan to Aleppo, and that one of the Dutch told him the English at Ispahan agreed very ill, every one striving to be superior and live at interest, which they obtain by the King's letters, "for otherwise none would be lent them." Also another letter read from Libby Chapman, showing that a Portugal Jesuit, is at Jask, endeavouring by all possible means to cross the proceedings of the English. The Diamond to be despatched away with all possible speed. Two new ships to be built at Deptford and Blackwall. The house of John Lempries at Blackwall to be divided between the surgeon and the keeper of stores. Disposal of the goods brought home by the Bull. Petition of Mary, wife of Wm. Addames in the East Indies, for some money left by her husband's order; to have some small matter, supposing her want cannot be great, having a yearly allowance of 5*l*. from the Company on her husband's account. Suit of

"a poor fellow that lost his leg in the Hope," for some employment. He is condemned of negligence to his face, for not attending at the Trinity House, according to appointment, when he should have had a licence to row upon the Thames, and is therefore rated and appointed to attend Mr. Salmon. Letter read from Joseph Salbancke, from Agra, 22nd Nov. 1617 (see ante, No. 203), discoursing of the pedigree of the Grand Mogore and his power. Quicksilver to be bought of Hamersley at 3s. per lb. [Two pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 280-283.]

Jan. 9. 536. G. Gerrard to Carleton. A vessel lately arrived from Salisbury House. Surat brings news that Sir Thos. Roe, who lives yet, is to negotiate some business in Persia, and, God willing, returns next summer. He has written of the death of [Thos.] Coryat in those parts, who has left enough written to fill the world with new relations, and to have made any printer an alderman. [Extract from Dom. Jac. I. Vol. CV., No. 8, Cal., p 2.]

Jan. 9. 537. Robert Bell to Carleton. Has no doubt he has been particularly advertised by Sec. Naunton of the many difficulties which have staggered the King from settling a course to enter into treaty with the States and the Deputies of the East India Company of Holland. Sends copy of the King's letter (? ante, No. 510,) order being lately taken therein. None of the Commissioners have yet met; Monday the 11th is appointed for the first day of meeting among themselves. Is told the Commissioners pick out matter against the English from the French depositions he sent Carleton; if they had them from Carleton he will be blamed. [Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 9. 538. John Jourdain and Geo. Ball to Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Jacatra. Martin Pring. Instructions to Bishop sent to Japara with a stock of money and cloth. Dare not send much money for fear of betraying him, but it will buy about 200 tons of rice for Bantam. A man of account must be sent to entreat with the Matran for establishing a factory. Capt. Pring with his five ships should depart with all expedition for the straits of Sunda to intercept the Dutch ships expected there, and the rest of the fleet to follow with all speed. Think the Dutch ships that fled have gone to Patani, whence they cannot return for three or four months, and that others have gone towards the Moluccas. Hope to end to day with the King of Jacatra; must have a chest of money to enable them to do so. Accident to Denton; he is about to provide a present for the King of Japara; his cabinet stolen from his bedside worth 400 or 500 ryals, besides his writings. Altogether without wine. [One page and three quarters. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 730.]

Jan. $\frac{10}{20}$. 539. The King of Cheribon to the President and Council of the English at Jacatra. Refers to the friendship he had with the President, George Ball. Is glad of the good help they gave to the King of Jacatra in chastising the Hollanders. Should the Dutch fort be given up, he should value at a true price, either for money or exchange, one of the pieces of artillery from it. Should much esteem any opportunity of showing his goodwill. [Portuguese. One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 732.]

Jan. 10.
Bantam.

540. Aug. Spaldinge to Sir Thos. Dale. Instructions by Holman to give Dale notice of the departure of the Hart and occurrences in Bantam, such as the Pengran planting ordnance on the town walls, and the Hart relieving an English ship in distress at the Cape. Was told the English ship, supposed to be the Bull from Surat, had taken a French ship, but has since understood it was Italian. Has received intelligence of the speedy departure of the whole fleet from Jacatra. A junk arrived from Tiku laden with pepper and rice; report that a Dutch ship similarly laden will shortly arrive. Speech with the Pengran of Bantam on the conditions Sir Thos. has made with the Pengran of Jacatra; less credit should be given to the Pengran of Jacatra. Since Dale landed ordnance 20 Dutchmen have fled from the castle to Dale, "the best news that I have heard since your departure." [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 731.]

541. Proposition made by Sir Dudley Carleton to the States General of the United Provinces. His Majesty's surprise and discontent that after so much delay their Commissioners are only charged to treat upon the two points of traffic in the East Indies and the whale fisheries. Earnestly requests that an ample commission with special instructions to treat and conclude on all the five points specified may be at once sent to their Commissioners. [*French. 543. Court Minutes of the East India Company. A thousand ounces of polished coral to be bought at 3s. 3d. an oz., and quicksilver at 3s. a lb. to be bought. Petitions of Matthew Cardrowe, preacher, concerning the terms on which he was willing to proceed to Persia, and of John Rose, midshipman of the Charles, to be entertained again; his conduct in the Indies; Keridge blamed for employing him after he ran away. Pursers blamed for allowing the men to take up more than a third part of their wages. Concerning an offer made by the city of 20,000*l.* a year for two years for "extinguishing" pirates; it was supposed they might be destroyed in two years, if his Majesty would take the business to heart and set it on foot again. Jacatra.

546. Minutes of a Council held at the King's Court, Jacatra ; present, Sir Thos. Dale, John Jourdain, Geo. Ball, Adam Denton, and Richard Welden. The King of Jacatra and his son having signed the capitulations of peace with the King of England, and desiring the loan of some more ordnance to batter the Dutch fort, it is agreed to lend him 10 more pieces with 20 barrels of powder and ammunition sufficient for the same. 547. Translation of an extract out of the Dutch General's letter coming in the ship Delft. Arrival of English ships in the year 1618. Three sailed for Surat, the other five arrived (at Bantam) 8 Dec. 1618, having lost their Admiral with everything on board, including 130 men drowned, at the island of Engano before the straits of Sunda. Fifteen English sail at Bantam. Arrival of the Dutch vessel the Black Lion from Patani, and her surrender to the English ; Adam Denton's conduct. Message sent by the Dutch to the English General (Sir Thos. Dale) demanding restitution, answered by strange reproachful words, "that they would take all our ships that they could get, and that in great passion." On 31 December the English fleet of 11 ships demanded the surrender of the Dutch fleet of seven ships ; it was replied that, if the Black Lion were not restored, the Dutch would revenge themselves by force. Fight between the English and Dutch fleets on 2 January, which lasted three hours, the ships on both sides not a little "beaten." The next day the Dutch fleet take refuge in the fort of Jacatra, sail inwards to find the six ships lately gone to Japara, and then "attend with advantage the fury of the English." Their resolution to sail to Amboyna. The English fleet 18 strong, but compelled to man their ships with some Bandanites and Javas. Resolved to send the Delft home on 6th January. [*Three pages. Letter read from the Lords of the Council, renewing a business which was in question two years since about the suppression of pirates, for which the city proffered 20,000*l.* a year for two years conditionally, desiring to know what the Company will undertake, as the King intends to have it put in execution this summer. Acquittance read from Sir Jas. Cunningham for losses sustained by himself and company in their Greenland voyage, but no mention made of any release, according to the Lords' promise; to be shown to Mr. Solicitor to get an effectual assignment and release for Sir James to seal. Three ships to be employed for Bantam and two ships and a pinnace for Surat, "being uncertain of the Portugals' attempts, and therefore to go with a reasonable strength to Surat and so to Jasques." Petition of Richard Giles and John Wilson for some consideration for burning of logwood. Small pearls to be sent back from Surat, as they will not yield the profit expected. Letter read from George Ball from Bantam, 15 June last; also a letter from the Low Countries, both stating that the Hollanders had taken and sunk some ships of the English, near Pooloroon and Bantam, "showing the continuance of their pride and hatred against the English." Petition of Nathaniel Basse concerning his security for bills to the Company for his father. [One page and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 284–286.]

554. Nath. Courthope, Robt. Jackson, and Robt. Haies to Cassarian David and the rest of the English prisoners in Pooloway. Have received their letters, and, according to their demands, will give them satisfaction. Advices and refreshments received from Macassar, Bantam, and Jacatra. Sir Thos. Dale and Jourdain arrived with his Majesty's commission, on purpose to right their abuses formerly prosecuted by the Dutch. At Jacatra the Dutch have fled in the plain field before the English, and left their castles there in distress. One was surprised by the English, and there is no doubt that the other, their strong fortification, with fifty pieces of ordnance, will be either taken or surrendered. The Black Lion, richly laden from Patani, has also been taken. Make no question they will this year be all set free, and regain their former losses. Treatment by the Dutch; they have protested fire and sword; and fire and sword they shall have repaid into their bosoms. Jackson's brother has manfully lost a limb in fight with the Hollanders, and will shortly be at Pooloroon. The Thomas arrived at Bantam; hope Mr. Hakeridge will be here. Encloses letter received from Mr. Lane from Bantam. Fear nothing, for we have the King's Majesty commission for what we do. [One page. "Received the 5 Feb. 1618-9 from Pooloroon." Annexed, Addames to be paid 6*l.* on account of the sum of 66*l.* lent by her husband in the Indies to some mariners, and entered in the purser's books, as she pretends. Arrest of Edwards for beating and imprisoning Whittington. Four new ships to be built, neither under 500 tons, nor above 800 tons. Arbitrators chosen to terminate the difference between the Company and Scott. The small pearls not to be brought back if they can be sold for not above 20 or 30 per cent. loss. Jewels to be bought. Answer of the Company to Lord Rich about the surprising of his ships, that they must and will justify the action, having done nothing but what they had power from his Majesty by his letters patent, and that they intend no restitution. As touching the offenders themselves, Bernardi and Jones are to be put in suit. Letter of Edward Withers from Sandwich; that sundry vessels from Flushing, laden with cloves, have been seized. 559. Sir T. Edmondes to Carleton. Their proceedings with the States Commissioners. We met at first with divers rubs, but his Majesty having allowed them to begin with the business of the East India trade, a difference arose at their first meeting, about "reparation of damages." Arguments on both sides. It was at length agreed that reparation should be reciprocal. Differences as to the terms in which that article was to be couched. They have thereupon come to a stop, and Sir Clem. Edmondes is sent to Newmarket to the King, to acquaint him with the whole proceedings. Our merchants have carried themselves with discretion, and the States themselves are reasonable enough, but some of the merchants who accompany them are both stiff and peremptory in this business. 560. Thos. Locke to Carleton. The States have met very frequently with "our Lords" this week and the last. The selected Commissioners were Lord Digby, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Master of the Rolls, and Sir Edward Coke. This day the Lords in general met with the States at Whitehall, but stayed together only a short time; and, so far as may be conjectured, they were not very well satisfied. The Dutchmen here say that Sir Lionel Cranfield hath spoken some words by way of commemoration of good turns done them in the time of the late Queen, which have given them some distaste, and it is thought they will make no long stay here. 562. Aug. Spalding to Sir Thos. Dale, Jourdain, and Ball in Jacatra. Arrival of a junk from Tiku, which met Capt. Pring with his whole fleet in the straits, but saw no Dutch ships, and it is now reported that they are all fled; one at Tiku, ready laden for Bantam. The Dutch prisoners at the Court arrived last night, but have not yet spoken with the Pengran. Some 2,000 men appointed to go away this night for Jacatra; some say to fetch away the Flemish luggage, others both men and luggage, or else to war against any that oppose them. All the great junks in Bantam road appointed to follow this armada of the Pengran's. Underwritten is a mem. from Sir Thos. Dale. Capt. Jourdain going in the prow for Bantam. Dale has sent this letter to him, that he may see how needful it is to have their ordnance aboard this morning; therefore entreats him and Mr. Wylden [Rich. Welden] to procure help from the King to embark the other 10 pieces of great ordnance, for Dale makes account this Bantam fleet will be there by to-morrow morning, and so he shall lose them. that the treaty was interrupted, and in a manner broken off, inso-much as the Dutch Deputies were sending for men-of-war in which to return home. The Lords, taken by surprise, professedly entreated Sir Noel to stay them; the King, upon being acquainted, directed for answer that if they will be wilful, and will go, it is their own fault, and his Majesty will not stay them, but if they have any complaints they may assure themselves of his Majesty's justice. Jan. 28. 567. Sir Thos. Wynne to Carleton. The English and the States Commissioners like to break off; they have not met for three or four days; Sir Clement Edmondes sent to the King about it, but has not yet returned. The news of the sinking of two of our ships came in ill time. Lord Rich takes it ill of the East India Company that they took his prize from him, which was of great value, and restored it to the Mogul's mother, from whom it was taken. Sir Thos. Roe writ a long letter, that it had been the overthrow of him and all the merchants if it had been carried away. [Extract from Dom. Jac. I., Vol. CV., No. 67, Cal., p. 8.]

Jan. 28. 568. Geo. Ball to Sir Thos. Dale. "Your answer to the Dutch in Jacatra. the fort, I cast unto them, pushing by in the morning, but being open day I stand not to confer with them, but hoped this night, had not Bantam prows come, to have accomplished therein, but now all is lost work, for so much as I can perceive." Finds not the prows laden with men as was reported, and yet the better able to take in goods, for which Ball believes they came. The prisoners, come with them, and part of them within the fort, with fifteen Javas of Bantam: and from what he has already seen, they have accorded with the Pengran of Bantam, and mind to surrender the fort to him, at least to raze it, and make the rendezvous at Bantam again. Will be better informed to-morrow, but thinks in the meantime he need not fear to send for the rest of the ordnance. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 741.]

Again in the evening Adam Denton and Richard Welden were in the fort and spoke on the same subject, but do not know whether they came commissioned by the General and his Council. Hope he will be pleased to send some one to them with a letter from himself to treat briefly with them, and they promise to give said persons free ingress and egress, and are more willing to come to an agreeement with them than with traitors and Moors. Necessity of calling in a greater sum of money next year for the new joint stock, the payment of debts, and the prosecution of the trade with Persia, which will require great sums. Petition of Sam. Squier concerning some money he borrowed in the time of his sickness at Bantam of Hugh Greete, and which Greete left to him as a legacy. The Deputy-Governor to attend the Lords about the pirates and confirm the Company's former resolution of 2,000*l.* a year [sic, see ante, No. 582]; as the Governor and Deputy could not both be spared from a meeting of the States Commissioners to be held at the same time at Merchant Tailors' Hall. 50*l.* a year out of Capt. Jourdain's salary to be paid to Robt. Lee, appointed to receive the same.

Feb. 12.—Coral to be bought; advice received that 100 chests a year will sell. Benj. Charke, formerly a factor in the East Indies, recommended by Sir Thos. Smythe to be warehouse-keeper at Leadenhall. Amount in ryals to be sent in the Palsgrave, the Elizabeth, the Hope, the Charles, the Ruby, and the Diamond for Surat and Persia, and all the dollars for Persia. Letter to be written to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in favour of Capt. Vaughan. The Governor again urges sending into Greenland and Muscovy to know whether the East India Company will lose the half of their 47,000*l.* disbursed last year. Joseph Hopkinson entertained factor for seven years. [Three pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 295-298.]

590. W[illiam] N[icolls] to Thos. Kerridge and the rest [at Surat]. Their two years' trade expired in July last; his earnest suit for a renewal of trade, but could give no present answerable to the King's covetous mind, and the Hollanders suing likewise and giving great presents, his hopes were frustrated. Purchase of pepper from the King of Acheen, much to the discomfiture of the Hollanders, who were ready to quarrel with him, but durst not. Goods and money laden aboard the Gift, which set sail 19 July 1618 with the Unicorn's horn that would not sell. Nothing to maintain this chargeable factory but the stock that ought to be left for investment in pepper against the next ship's arrival. These people buy cloth from hand to mouth only, which they pay for in pepper. If it be possible rinate the Dabuls and restrain the Guzerats and Gogo shipping from going to Acheen. Has had no news from Bantam this year and a half. John Beamond writes from Tiku that the Hollanders have taken three English ships at the Moluccas. "God send revenge or a fair peace." They cleave to the King of Mataram, who Nicolls hears is cutting way through mountains and woods to take the King and country of Bantam, and is like to prevail. The English must be indifferent on both parties. Thinks the Hollanders will join with the King of Acheen in besieging Malacca; in such case this King may unhappily give them the privilege of this island's trade. The English should be beforehand with the Dutch in a present to this King's content, to gain two years more trade with Tiku as the Hollanders lately did, "by being indeed open fisted, * * * this King being so covetous as our lawyers, doing little or nothing without a fee." The Flemings basely respected at Tiku; they endeavour to persuade the Governor to stand out against the King of Acheen, and they will deal with him by sea; also that they would fortify some of the adjoining islands. As to the sale of Surat goods. Plenty of pepper to be bought, but has neither money nor goods to purchase; difference of the prices at Acheen and Bantam. [Four pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 753.]

Feb. 14. 591. Sir Thos. Wynne to Carleton. A ship from the East Indies, called the Bull, arrested by Lord Rich upon an action of 1,600,000*l.* Some of the merchants complained to the King, who sent for Lord Rich to compound the business. Lord Rich very earnest with the King that he might have the benefit of a subject to wage law against them, but the King would not yield to it. [Extract from Domestic Correspondence, Jac. I., Vol. CV., No. 104, Cal., p. 14.]

and Ed. Heynes, which give great testimony of his noble disposition and good affection to the English nation, "wherein you show yourself to be a worthy and discreet man." The good correspondence which has always existed between his Majesty and the Grand Signor should by all means be maintained by their subjects; and whereas intercourse and traffic are the principal bonds of amity, the English desire to resort yearly to the Governor's port to trade in love and friendship as honest merchants, not doubting but that he will confirm the privileges granted last year and procure more ample privileges from the Grand Signor and his Viceroy, the Bashaw of Synan [Sana], whereby the English may be encouraged to bring them all sorts of commodities as well from Europe, as spices from the southward and cloth from India, by which means his port will be more famous and become the mart of all Asia. This on the honour of his Majesty will be faithfully performed, and their ports and seas kept from all trouble to his utmost, neither to molest any trading thence, the Portugals, their utter enemies, only excepted. Has sent according to his desire the same men as last year, desiring him to receive them as friends. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 755.]

Lambeth.

594. Geo. Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, to Sir Thos. Roe. Approves of his making observation of the religious rites of those eastern people, but confesses it must needs be a great labour, since he understands not the language, and the Indians have no books to express their superstition and idolatry. Thinks his account of how a heathen lord came to his end by the pulling off of a hair a marvellous example of the power of God upon rebellious atheists. "Sir Walter Raleigh amongst us did question God's being and omnipotency, which that just Judge made good upon himself in over-humbling his estate, but last of all in bringing him to an execution by law, where he died a religious and christian death, God testifying his power in this, that he raised up of a stone a child unto Abraham." Wishes for Thos. Coryat's return to England, because he would report of the furthest eastern countries in a better fashion than any Englishman hitherto hath been able. Recommends him to get together all the papers which Coryat hath written. The King blames Coryat for writing in his memoirs that he saw men have their eyes pulled out and their tongues cut off, which before an idol were speedily restored again. The King says this cannot be done by the power of Satan, and he is sure it is not by the finger of God. Finds English traffic has a double rub in India by the Portugal and the Hollander. Commissioners are come out of Holland; one of the principal points first to be resolved is the business of the East Indies; they carry themselves with insolency, and sometimes speak very high, "but our men give no ground unto them;" and there is good hope of accommodating differences, and by that means of very soon gaining upon the Portugals in those parts. The King of Spain carrieth fair quarter with the English. Not certain whether the Emperor Matthias be living or dead. Commends him that he is so wary in settling a trade for Persia. Sir Robert Sherley entertained by the King of Spain at Madrid as Ambassador

Lieger for the Persian. News from Constantinople that the Turks have taken Tauris, razed it to the ground, and forced the Persian to seek for peace; if so, it is more than probable that the trade of silk will go on to Aleppo as formerly, "and then there is an end of all our debates concerning the silk of Persia." Lord Rich before the King and Council about his men-of-war which he set out to the Indies; "I think he was so handled among us that you shall hear no more of him there;" he had procured commissions from the Dukes of Savoy and Florence, so it is manifest that he intended his men should bring home some taken goods. Our new admiral, the Marquis Buckingham, has promised to be wary that no more such commissions issue forth. Sir Thos. Lake's strange business against the Countess of Exeter. [*Six pages. Feb. 19. 595. Sir Thos. Wynne to Carleton. The English and the States Commissioners begin "of late to piece better together." They were this day feasted by Peter Van Lore; they say the Lord Commissioners will feast them one after another, and then the Company of the East Indies. [*Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. Dale will be with him at Macassar by the end of June, on their return from the Moluccas. Capital delivered to them at Bantam by Capt. Ball, in money, cloth, copper, iron, and lead. Return of the Rose with diamonds; worthlessness of those found in the factory with Collins. A small Dutch ship here twice within seven months. Eight Landak prows in Succadana at present. Small means to defray their present charges. Through "that lewd and base fellow Greete," this factory hath been in disgrace; "that rascal Collins" hath done the like. Succadana, if stocked with 10,000 or 12,000 ryals worth of vendible commodities, and honest men, would be found as profitable as any ordinary factory in the Indies. The Dutch visit Java, Sumatra, and Borneo, all under one voyage. Reasons why the factory is imputed not to be worth the keeping. Request that Collins, if at Macassar or Bantam, may be sent hither. Arrival of three junks from Patani; also letter from Gilman, who says he is chief there. News from Acheen that the Dutch there have so wrought with the King as to prevent the English from trading at Tiku and Priaman. Imprudent conduct of the English chief in conference with the King, telling him that if he would not grant his request this year, he would force him to it next. "How can business take any good effect when they babble they know not what, and the hearers understand neither head nor foot, for all these kings in these countries, although they be but beggarly kings, yet in their country they think themselves as great as the greatest emperor in the world." Arrival of a Dutch ship at Bantam in October last, with the King of Jhor. Any quantity of gold may be employed. The diamonds they have must be sold, though at a loss. Cokayne has lost his passage this year for England, through Ball, "which is much to my disgrace to stay in every beggarly place to make clean what others have berayed." [*Three pages and a quarter. Feb. 23. 600. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Difference between the Company and George Scot. Letter read from Edward Monox, from Ispahan, of 28 Sept. last, complaining of the want of supplies in Persia, whereby some have taken advantage to disgrace the English and their trade, but yet that the Emperor's resolution is to make a little further trial in expectation of some goods being sent according to Connok and Barker's promise; that he hoped to have speedily settled a most worthy trade, seeing how gracious the Emperor was in granting their goods custom free; confirming the former capitulations made with Connok, and commanding his treasurer, Lalabegg, to buy all the English commodities that arrived and deliver silks for them at the prices current for both, and condemning Barker for a most unworthy servant, to whom he attributed the ill success of the business past. Also letter read from Wm. Robbins, from Ispahan, of 29 Sept. last, showing the distress they had been in for want of supplies, his expectations of a profitable trade hereafter, and the departure of Monox and Pettus to Jask, to meet the ships and commodities expected there. Gratuity of 100*l.* to Robbins for his past services, and to have some certain yearly salary if further employed. Also two letters read from Libby Chapman, Consul at Aleppo, dated 18 Nov. last, giving notice of having sent certain letters overland to Connok in Persia, the charges 3*l.*, and requesting payment. Ellam to write letters to Monox and the rest of the factors, acknowledging their care in sending letters by sundry conveyances, but that the charge of sending messengers overland directly with letters is too great; advising them to make use of Georgian or Armenian merchants, who travel safely and freely, without suspicion, between Persia and Turkey; and wishing them to make use of the "character" that is sent, so that nothing may be discovered, though some letters should be intercepted. Notice to be given at a general court of the despatch of the ships, and of a dividend to be declared on the first joint stock in April next; also to let them know how gracious his Majesty has been to the Company in Lord Rich's business, and to show the seal of the Admiralty that the suit is dismissed; and that the fourth part of the main capital be paid in next year, in regard of the Persian business, for which there is sent this year 180,000*l.* in live stock (sic), besides shipping and provisions; "and, moreover, care must be had to discharge the Company's debts, although not fit to speak of them publicly." Letter read from Rowland Quoitmore, master of the Royal James, from Swalley Road, of 1st March last; a voluntary contribution on board, of upwards of 180*l.*, towards building a new chapel at Wapping parish; account of the voyage and the danger they were in through a great leak. Motion for one ship to be sent off to Persia deferred. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 299-301.]

601. John Pery, purser, to the East India Company. Outward voyage of the Sun, Moon, Clove, Peppercorn, and Sampson. Parted company with the Globe through foul weather. Met with a Portugal vessel of about 120 tons, but took nothing from it; also with a carac, from which they received 22 small chests and barrels of commodities "in part of wrongs done." Death of Capt. Parker, 24 Sept. 1618. At their coming to Bantam, heard of the unhappy overthrow of the Sun, and the loss of most of her company. On 19 November following, the Moon, Clove, Peppercorn and Sampson anchored within four leagues of Bantam Road; "most part of all the company in the fleet very weak." Capt. Jourdain landed at Bantam 22 Nov. Safe arrival of the Globe 2 December. On 5th took a Holland ship called the Black Lion, of about 800 tons, laden with pepper, rice, and other goods. Fight within three leagues of Jacatra between the English and Dutch fleets, which continued near three hours; above a thousand pieces of ordnance shot from the English fleet, and few less from the Dutch; some four Englishmen killed, and divers hurt. Anchored, 27 Dec., near Jacatra, purposing to unload the Black Lion, but next morning, about two o'clock, she was on fire, and burnt in five hours close to the water, without saving anything. "The fire came by some idle fellows, which broke down upon the orlop (deck) in the night." Ordinance and powder carried ashore at Jacatra to lay battery against the Flemings' castle. Departure of the James Royal with Admiral Capt. Pring, the Gift, Unicorn, Globe, Sampson, and Bee, sent to meet some Fleming ships; gave chase to four sail, but could not fetch them up. Arrived at Bantam 31 January. Notice of the arrival of two Flemings (ships) at Jacatra; and orders for all the last fleet to sail with the Rose and Bee thither. [*Three pages and a quarter. 605. Andrew Bredgate, purser, to Sir Thos. Smythe. Hitherto great many men have died on the ten months' voyage between England and Bantam; putrified beef and pork, "not man's meat," the chief cause of sickness. When arrived at Bantam not six men were able to work; the whole fleet in the like distress. The master and seven men drowned at the Cape. Altogether twenty-five men have died and been drowned, whose names and accounts are sent. Concerning the carac, the fight with the Flemings, and state of the country. [*One page. tualling houses at Blackwall, to prevent the men going forth to breakfast and afternoon drinkings. Complaints from India of tainted beef; the fault of the butchers knocking down so many oxen together and letting them lie in their blood until it be settled, without cutting their throats whilst alive, whereby they would strive and strain the blood out of their bodies, and for want thereof their flesh cannot take salt. Petition of Richard Doves, master of the Zouch Bonaventure, of London, with 14 English captains in Argier (Algiers), "who having made a long, bloody, and dangerous fight with the Turks and slain many of them, were at last taken and captived." Doves lost 1,000*l.*, and their ransom is set at 1,000*l.* more. Craves the King's favour to collect charity from certain companies of merchants; to be considered, wishing them to procure what they can of the rest of the companies. Want of a good ship-carpenter in India; agreement with Richard Furbusher, an old servant, who built a pinnace in the Somers Islands, and is known to be very skilful, and willing to go and live in India for seven years with his two sons.

Minutes of a General Court. Return of the Bull laden with calicoes, indigo, conserves, bloodstones, gumlac, carpets, &c. Declaration of a dividend of one whole capital on the first joint stock. The Company having great occasions to employ large sums of money next year in regard of their trade in Persia and other urgent occasions, a fourth part of their whole underwritings to be paid next year by the adventurers. Lord Rich's suit discharged out of the Admiralty; the King's gracious favour to them. Because of the reports that the Hollanders in the Indies have with a strong hand offered violence and wrong to the English, and have brought home great quantities of goods taken from the Chinese and others, "which prosperity maketh them somewhat too peremptory in the eyes of the world, and gives a great deal of distaste to all men in general," but this Company having desired ever to proceed peaceably as merchants, have carried themselves in another nature towards them, it is hoped that some good accord and conclusion may be effected between the Commissioners on either side; but if the Hollanders stand too stiffly upon unreasonable terms, then it was resolved to strengthen themselves sufficiently to withstand and counter-check their violence; and to have a double proportion called in for next year, being a fourth part of their whole adventure for the second joint stock, which if necessary they are contented to double again, or at all events to pay the whole of their adventures; full authority to the Governor to call in what was needful; a double proportion to be paid in next year. Tickets of the amounts to be paid in, to be left at each adventurer's house, "whereby all pretended excuse of ignorance shall be avoided." Leave to the Virginia Company to sell by the candle 1,000 weight of tobacco in rolls, lately brought from the Somers Islands. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 301-304.]

from drowning at Penguin island, where they landed for refreshment; one boat cast away and twelve men lost. A Portugal galleon taken, but, having nothing in her profitable for the Company, was let go. Met with the Portugal Admiral carac, of 1,600 tons and 800 men, exceedingly richly laden; preparations for a fight, but a parley desired by the Portugals, and after 20 days' treaty received 70,000 dollars for the East India Company, and 10,000 dollars for the men in the fleet, by way of restitution in part for former losses by their nation, and so they parted without bloodshed. Death of Captain Parker, 24 September. Loss of the Sun, 15 November, wherein he lost all that he had to his shirt, he and the President both recovering from sickness at the time; arrived at Bantam 19 November; Capt. Pring's fleet there. Resolution in Council to make war against the Dutch for satisfaction of their former losses. Seizure of the Black Lion, very richly laden, without the loss of a man. Account of a fight with the Dutch fleet of seven ships on 23 December, the English having eleven, whereof the Black Lion was one, the Peppercorn, fully laden, another, and the Thomas, fitted as a fire-ship, the third, but five of the Dutch fought, "the more shame for some of them." It lasted from eleven till three, "a cruel bloody fight;" 3,000 great shot fired; many men maimed and slain on both sides, but the Dutch had four times as many slain and maimed as the English; three of the Dutch ships reported to be sunk; knows not how true it is, but is sure they were soundly banged. Next night both fleets came to anchor in sight of each other, but the Dutch having the wind, began not with them. It was their ill fortune to discover three English ships out at sea from Bantam; waited for them to join the fleet. The Dutch made off to the eastwards for Banda; did not imagine they would have run away from their people at Jacatra as they did, "and so by this means we lost them, which troubled me very much, for if our three ships had not come in sight that morning, they had never gotten away from us, which was a great hindrance to our proceedings to the Moluccas." Roger Dale died of his wounds in this fight, his leg shot off. Chased the Dutch fleet through the Bay of Jacatra in sight of all the Javas, to whom formerly they had made their great brags, night overtaking them anchored near Jacatra. Order for the Black Lion to unload the next day. The same morning about 2 o'clock three or four drunken rogues broke open her hold and went to steal "rackapée," and, as they were drawing it, set some that was spilt on fire, and so fired the ship. Amazed at the accident, they stole out of the hold and covered the scuttle, and some fell to breaking open the chests while the ship was on fire about their ears and impossible to be quenched, "and so they consumed all that wealth in her, an unfortunate accident." Despatched the Francis to relieve the English fort at Pooloroon and encourage them to hold it against the Dutch. The Great James, Advice, and Owl joined them on 28th Dec. (?) Went on shore (at Jacatra) next day to make articles of agreement with the King for their abode there, on condition of assisting him and delivering the Fort Royal of the Dutch into his hands, which the King of Bantam for his sake had many times

entreated the English to do. Articles agreed on, concerning the taking of the Dutch Fort Royal. Ships under Capt. Pring despatched to the straits of Sunda to chase six Dutch ships and keep them from refreshing their men, "the which was speedily effected." Conditions of surrender of the Dutch fort. The King of Jacatra to share the goods, ordnance, munition, &c. with the English, and the 360 Flemings to be taken under the protection of the English, guarded from the treacherous Javas, and afterwards shipped for the coast of Coromandel on payment of 2,000 dollars and taking an oath not to serve against the English until November next; the castle to be delivered into the King of Jacatra's hands. Liberated two English merchants who were in irons; twelve of the principal Dutchmen hostages on board his ship. Demand of the Pengran of Bantam for deliverance of seven prisoners, treacherously taken by the King of Jacatra, "by which means we were not able to keep our former contract with the Dutch." Conference with the Dutch and King of Bantam concerning the surrender of the castle, "but in truth meaning nothing." Came to Bantam Road with the rest of the English fleet, where they met Capt. Pring and his fleet. Dogged disposition of the Pengran to the English. Resolution at a Council to leave Bantam; all the Company's moneys and goods shipped aboard within one week, but could not be so closely done but that the Pengran took notice of it, yet never sent to them. Fair promises still held out by the Dutch at Bantam, that the fort at Jacatra should be given up to the Pengran, but after nightly fortifying and daily getting in fresh supplies, they told the King of Bantam the castle was their master's. The King beginning to see himself gulled of so much wealth and lose both Jacatra and Bantam, if the Dutch held their castle no power could beat them out, made overtures to Dale, "but he [the King] is so perfidious that there is no trust to be given to anything he promises by word or deed, which makes us we dare not trust him."

March 15. Account of things sent home in the Little James to his wife, some of Japan ware. Should be glad to hear how Virginia prospers and his (Dale's) business goes forward there. Begs him to tell his wife that John Poll was drowned at the Cape, and the youth Sir William Padye "put to me" and Stephen Pert. Roger Dale was slain in fight with the Flemings. Has only of his servants living Robt. Owen and his nephew, Henry Fusdyck; Smythe's cousin Tracey died in Persia. [Fourteen pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 767.]

Wilson, the cooper, and of Nath. Salmon, 9 April. Petition of Robert White, master's mate in the Bull, about freight of his goods. Letter from my Lord of Buckingham in favour of his servant Cannon about Sir Henry Middleton's goods, the propriety being in the children and not in the woman. Timber to be borrowed out of the King's yard by reason of the Company's building four new ships. Letters read from the Lord Chancellor from York House in favour of Finch's suit concerning Gourney's goods; also from the Lords about advancing part of the money promised against the pirates; opinion that the Company are best able to husband their own affairs, and that being granted, to set forth their own ships, and that "if those moneys should be directed another way, and not against the pirates, they supposed they should be exclaimed of and cried out against." Committee to attend Mr. Chancellor with said answer. Petitions of Anthony Morbeck and Wm. Younge, who went forth in Lord Rich's ship and returned in the Bull, for recompence for their service for the Company; of John Boyde and John Palmer, sailors, for relief for their losses by the burning of the [Black] Lion; and of Mary, widow of Peter Burton, to receive her husband's means, without taking out letters of administration. [One page and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 304-306.]

- March 3. 611. Anthony Finche, purser, to the East India Company. Promotions in the ship in consequence of great mortality; Capt. Salmon and Philip Cr[e?]we among those deceased; John Hatch, master of the Bee, placed commander and himself the purser. Riding in Acheen Road in May 1618, found the books in a most imperfect state, which John Hatch, John Beaumont, and Michael Holman will testify. Reasons for his inability to send home his accounts. Presents given to Wm. Nicolls for the King of Tikou, to procure trade there either for a year or six months, but could no longer be procured, so they took everything on board, and dissolved the factory. Hear since their arrival at Bantam that the Flemings have had the trade granted them. Nicolls suspected of giving them assistance. The loss of Tikou will be a hindrance to the sale of cloth, as well as other things. Loss of the Admiral [ship Sun], and death of seventy-seven men, some from the Lion and the Francis. [One page and a half. Endorsed, "In this ship seventy-seven men dead. Wm. Nicolls suspected." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 770.]

- March 4. 612. Isaac Crowther, steward in the Moon, to Sir Thos. Smythe. Account of provisions consumed on board the Moon, and those remaining, three hundred men having been aboard for a month together at once. [One page. O.C. Vol. VI. No. 771.]

- March 5. 613. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Inquiry of Capt. Adams as to the services of Anthony Morbeck and William Younge. Suit of the brother of Edward Langley, factor, deceased, for his goods. Five new ships to be built, two of 300 tons, "very good warlike ships," for Jask or Surat. Timber from Ireland. Virginia wheat, called maize, much commended for an excellent strong meat and hearty for men at sea, and more wholesome than beef; the Virginia Company to be desired to procure some for trial by the next shipping. Fifty pounds to be paid to Mr. Giles for burning logwood. Wages of John Cooke. Carpets from Surat found to be somewhat dear. Petition of John and Elizabeth, children of John

Averill, taken in the Defence in the Moluccas, and supposed to be since dead, for relief. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 306-308.]

March 5. 614. John Jourdain to his uncle, Capt. John Jourdain, at Jacatra Road. Bantam. Departure of Sir Thos. Dale hence eastward in his own ship the Moon, with the Hound, Bee, and Rose, to try and meet with the Flemings, who were reported to be cast away. Arrival of the prow from Bantam with the purser of the Peppercorn. Their ships want good employment, for they are now very idle. [Quarter of a page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 772.]

March 6. 615. Sir Thos. Wynne to Carleton. The English and Dutch Commissioners absolutely dissevered; Bas, Boreel, and Vanderdussen, all Armenians, thought to be the principal occasioners. They would have pre-eminence, not only in the Moluccas, but in all other places where they are not planted. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CVII., No. 9, Cal., p. 21.]

March 9. 616. Marquis of Buckingham to Carleton. Doubts not but he Newmarket. has long since heard from the States Commissioners what their treatment has been, wherein Buckingham assures himself they cannot justly complain of any want of courtesy. Had a special care to show some particular respect to Mr. Gogh, because of Carleton's testimony of his affection to his Majesty's state and subjects. The King will well consider the project for the new Company before any resolution be taken in it. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

March 9. 617. Court Minutes of the East India Company. John Averill placed with Wm. Townsend, cooper, at the Company's expense. Langley's business; his brother's will not yet proved; the Company will consent to nothing until it is. Gratuity to Adam Bowen for drawing 13 several plots of Surat, Jask, and other parts in the Indies, and writing three journals of Capt. Pring, with directions how to use them. Capt. Pepwell's goods to be sold; abuses committed by him in taking a junk at Surat, &c. Gratuities to John Boyd and John Palmer. Petition of Hugh Emerye about payment of his imprest money. Allowance of 400*l.* or 500*l.* per annum to Giles Martyn, for procuring coral from Marseilles, Leghorn, &c., if he employ 30,000*l.* for the Company. [One page and a half. Court Bk. IV., 308-309.]

March 9. 618. John Smelte to the East India Company. Wm. Evans and Bantam. himself were kept in irons 45 days by the Hollanders. During his imprisonment at Jacatra they pillaged and then burnt the English house there; his losses were to the value of 400 ryals. Concerning the stay of a Chinese junk in May 1618 by Capt. Ball's orders; the death of John Bindon at Jacatra in October last, and the money found in his chest. [One page. Endorsed, "Received 6 Nov. 1619 by the Little James." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 773.]

March $\frac{1}{2}$ 9. 619. W. Trumbull to Carleton. It were a happy turn if our Brussels. treaty were ended about the East India trade before the return of the Spanish ambassador. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

621. Ger^{mo} de Varreda. Instructions and authority to Maestre Ses [Edmund Sayer] to trade for him in the place of Antonio Peres, should anything happen to the latter. [Portuguese. One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 775.]

March 12.

622. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning Martin's allowance for his employment about the coral. Petition read of Christopher Boddam, Thos. Owen, Richard Rist, Richard Fowkes, John White, John Day, Thos. Faulkner, Abraham Hillwill, Edward Joye, and Bartholomew Grove, complaining of want of necessaries on board the Bull. Capt. Adams proved they fared no worse than himself, and that Boddam had been mutinous and punished; Committee appointed touching the business. Proceedings of the Committee at Deptford and Blackwall. Request of the Virginia Company to borrow four minions; acknowledge they owe four demi-culverins.

Minutes of a General Court. Sale of commodities from the East Indies with names of the purchasers and the prices; also of about 1,000 weight of tobacco from the Somers Islands, at 6s. per lb. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 309-314.]

623. George Muschamp to the East India Company. His last was of 12 July 1617 from Pooloroon by Walter Stacey, with relation of their miserable and unfortunate voyage to Banda; the surprise of the Swan by the Hollanders, the loss of the Great Defence, which was carried to Neira Road, and there detained by the Hollanders, and the lawful surrender of the islands of Pooloroon, Pooloway, Rosingyn, and Waye (Ay), signed and acknowledged by the country people, with other occurrences. Since then Courthope, Muschamp, and thirty-two men have kept possession of Pooloroon, enduring much want and misery in the hope of relief to maintain the surrender and settle upon the island of Lantar. This island the country people desired to surrender on the same terms as the others, not to trade with any other nation but the English. Feigned league of the people with the Hollanders. Their hopes frustrated by the late coming of the English ships from Bantam. Fight between the Solomon and Attendance and three Holland ships from two till eight o'clock p.m. Base conduct of Cassarian David, who struck his flag and surrendered to the Dutch. Details of the Dutch taking possession; their disgraceful conduct, treading upon the English colours and speaking in contemptuous terms of England and her King. The Dutch dared not attack the English fort at Neira, but attempted Lantar 2 June 1618 with 700 men, but were repulsed by the country people with the loss of about thirty killed and wounded. The Bandanese hardened against the Dutch, and vow unless they be relieved from them they will abandon their islands and destroy their fruits. Are determined to stay until the next westerly monsoon ; have only rice and rain-water for their sustenance both in health and sickness. Commendations of Courthope. Left for Bantam 2 Aug. 1618 by Courthope's orders. Determination of Sir Thomas Dale to assist them at Pooloroon with the fleet, but "other occasions detained them." Miserable state of the poor men at Pooloroon ; hazard of losing that hopeful trade. Letters sent from Pooloway from the English prisoners there ; tyrannical conduct of the Dutch ; the English kept in irons and their diet bad and scarce. [Three pages. Endorsed, "Received 6 Nov. 1619 by the Little James." O.C., Vol. VI., No. 776.]

March 12.
Surat.

624. Kerridge Biddulphe, Rastell, and James to the East India Company. Wrote by the Royal Ann, which departed hence the 16 ult., and now write overland by a Surat junk for Mocha. The Dragon, Lion, and Expedition, under Capt. Bonner, arrived at Surat 20 Sept. last. Disposal of the goods consigned hither. Advice concerning cloth and the colours most fit for sale. The elephants' teeth intended for Ahmedabad seized by the customer for the Prince, and the merchant refusing to share with him, they are still detained ; care should be had to their soundness and size, &c. Not sufficient lead ; the Expedition landed all she had at Jask. Their endeavours to improve the prices prevented by the customer. Half the tin has been sent for Persia, and the rest landed and sold ; larger quantities, 60 chests, may be sent for the supply of Surat and Persia. Sudden sale of all the coral from Capt. Pring's fleet ; yearly supply of 60, 70, or 100 chests of unpolished required. A hundred or a hundred and fifty skins a sufficient annual supply for Surat. Amber and coral beads not in so much request. The base prices given for quicksilver and vermilion. The sale of sword-blades, knives, glass ware, strong waters, and the like yields little profit, but are fit for presents. Supplies of morse teeth, cochineal, pearls, enamel, gloves, and bone lace may be refrained from altogether. Camlets, mohairs, or the like from Turkey not profitable, these people bringing them from Mocha much cheaper. No reason to encourage a second supply of tapestry, gold lace, spangles, mercery ware and embroideries, pictures, &c., except satin, which is useful for garments. Sir Thomas Roe conditions with "these chiefs" concerning the goods : those liked to be delivered to the appointed agent to carry to the Court for sale ; great inconveniences caused through this pretence of reserving them only for his first sight. Detention of Biddulphe to the hindrance of the Court affairs, the sale of the goods and investing the proceeds. The opportunity of a general reformation of their 'grievances and satisfaction of the Company's debts abroad omitted through the King's departure for Agra, and will never again be obtained. Of the bullion which arrived in the fleet three chests were sent for Persia, the rest landed at Surat. Employment of the Royal Ann in the Red Sea ; on her return the Expedition was sent to Persia. Amount of bullion, specie, and English and Indian commodities taken by the Expedition, which arrived at Jask 22 November, where the factors were expecting her with seventy-one bales of silk provided last year. On her way the Expedition surprised two Portugal ships laden with commodities from Goa to Ormuz, estimated, besides the vessels, "which are very useful for your occasions," to be worth some 2,000*l.* or 3,000*l.* sterling. Find encouragement for the sale of sundry English commodities in Persia, but hope further conditions will be proposed for the Company's trade before a large supply is furnished. The Royal Ann, from which much more was expected, had not such success as the Expedition; the captain and factors of different opinions as to the construction of Sir Thomas Roe's orders and intent. Opinion of Joseph Salbancke, who went up to the Bashaw at Sana, of the sale of cloth there; both Indian and southern commodities will satisfy their desires and yield the Company "contented profit." Certified the Company by the 13 ult., the conditions of their residence at Surat; they have received but poor remedy of former injuries, and have suffered many others since. The mean grace in which Sir Thomas Roe stood with his King and Prince; after three years' attendance, at his departure he could not by earnest intercession procure the gift of a house or ground, or licence to build a habitation, or so much as continue them in this, whence (their time nearly expired) they shortly expect to be removed. Difficulties of finding another; these chiefs will not allow them to have any near the water-side, and in the inner part of the town there is not any either strong or convenient enough, except those belonging to Banians, who will not let them; so where to be accommodated as yet they know not. Debts at Court and terms of his Lordship's licence; his capitulations refused; the fruits of the phirmaunds granted by the King and Prince may be seen in the detention of the Company's goods these six months in the custom-house, and themselves dwelling on every trivial humour subject to change. Another phirmaund granted by the Prince to as little purpose as the former. Roe's proposal to detain the pinks next year. The debts unlikely to be soon recovered; "these are a people that curbed will be brought to any reason, and if suffered in their own ways grow insolent and insupportable;" and this is exercised not so much on the Portugals that encroach so much on them and permit none of their ships to sail without licence, and even forced the Gogo pink appertaining to the beloved Queen to pay custom to the port of Diu (an ancient duty). Account of the Company's "caphila" from Agra, being set upon and robbed while standing on some unjust tolls or exaction; of this they have complained to the governor and chiefs, but fear the Lord of that place, "who is of the chief nobility," is the guilty person, and they dare not inform against him, and so "our relief is delayed." Presents given by Sir Thomas Roe during his residence to the King, the Prince, their ministers and officers, some of whom never till then received any, "who now will make it a custom, or cause your greater prejudice." Lading of the Lion, intended to be sent home next year. Touching supplies for the Agra factory consequent on the long detention of the Company's fine commodities in the custom-house. Goods laden upon the Royal Ann, besides the Persian silk. Roe returns in her, and takes with him in a sealed box, accounts, letters, registers, invoices, and other writings from the

Surat and Agra factories; others distrusting that conveyance have delivered theirs to Captain Shilling, master of the ship. Gabriel Towerson, the wife of Richard Steele, and Mrs. Hudson also go with Sir Thomas. Goods and specie on board the Dragon and Expedition for the coast of Sumatra. The reception last year at Mocha caused them to resolve on a further overture of trade there. Lading of the Lion for that place; she will be returned next year for England. Breach between the Portugals and a people some twenty leagues to the southward of Goa that are "Malabar gentiles;" their country is called Batacala [Battecollah]; a frigate of war sent by them to the English ships in the name of their Prince with proffer of a trade in pepper and other spices; measures taken to prevent any treachery. The Dutch at Masulipatam have divulged the removal of the English from Tiku and their own purchase of trade there for two years; if so, doubt not but that the Dragon may reprocure it. The Company's factories all in health. The plague increases in Agra. The King at Fettiipoore [Futtehpoor], within twelve coss of Agra. No supply from Bantam this year from the Masulipatam factory. This letter sent by the junk of Surat express to Mocha, from thence to be sent express to Alexandria, and conveyed either by the Venetian or French consul. It should arrive before the Royal Ann, but distrusting the consul's fidelity, a great part of this letter has been written "in characters."

March 13.—Postscript. A messenger this instant arrived from Goa with news of the dispatch of the Portugal fleet of five ships, three of which have returned laden for Lisbon, and the other two galleons intend joining the three newly-built ships and other vessels in order to possess the road of Swalley before the arrival of the English fleet, so as to prevent their next year's trade. Good strength requisite to prevent this. Hope the Company will not continually rely on the small strength sent last time. The Lion warned of this news. [PARTLY IN CIPHER. Endorsed, "Sent by ye waie of ye Red Sea, dated, being coppie of one of ye same date receaved by ye Bull, 1619. Barkeley, Edward Wilmot, Richard Cocks, Wm. Methwold, and Jac. Peterson. [One page. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 781.]

March 16. 631. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Thos. Brockedon aboard the Palsgrave in the Downs, giving notice of the ships there, where they remain for want of wind; also letter from Walter Mountford from Deal touching the great expense of fresh provisions. Edlyn's books of accounts to be called in. Concerning the payment of workmen at Blackwall and Deptford and the employment of Robt. Young and Atkinson. Negligence of Henry Daniel, purser of the Charles. Boddam and Owen to be punished for mutinous conduct on board the Bull. Proclamation read, which had been published in Ireland by the Lord Deputy, concerning Milton's patent for prohibiting the exportation of timber or pipe staves from Ireland; the Company finding it very prejudicial to them, the Governor desired to see the commissioners of the navy thereon. Suit of Jane, wife of — Martyn, armourer in the East Indies, for the admission of one of her children into Christ's Hospital; wishing to relieve her poor condition, the Governor and some others underwrote the petition "to see what effect it would work." About obtaining a lease of the ground at Blackwall directly from Lord Wentworth. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 315-318.]

March 16. 632. Sir Gerard Herbert to Carleton. The States Commissioners London. breaking off discontented from the business they came for, gave out they meant to return presently, but received a kind message by the Lord Chamberlain from the King, which much comforted them. They sat anew yesterday with the King's commissioners, so that it is hoped the business will be well agreed on. The Lord Chamberlain is a noble friend to the States Commissioners. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CVII., No. 37, Cal., p. 25.]

March 17. 633. Sir Thos. Edmondes to [Carleton]. Can give but small London. hope of the treaty with the Dutch commissioners being brought to any good issue. Having passed over the point of reparation, the English commissioners fell upon a proposition for joining the stocks of the two companies, but the Hollanders pretending that theirs was much the greater would allow the English so little part of the trade, their first proposition was only a fourth, that another expedient was found out; the trade of the Indies to be free and equal to both Companies, excepting the places possessed by the Hollanders alone, especially the Moluccas. The English commissioners willing to accept one-third of the trade of those places, but the Dutch commissioners could never be brought to consent in writing, alleging that they were not authorized to do so by their commission. Then the English consented to join the Dutch in a course of mutual defence, and to share half the burthen, which before the Dutch bare alone, demanding as a recompence one-half of the pepper trade, but that condition was directly refused, so that further conference has since been a good while broken off. 634. Remonstrance of Cassarian David, Bartholomew Churchman, and George Pettus to the Dutch Commander. "Consideration in things of difficulty is requisite, and therefore more requisite in this our unchristian-like misery; but because this hath been but slightly respected, we are therefore resolved at present to tell you of all your perfidiousness." Gripp and his confederates, who surprised the English ships and vowed not to touch life or goods, forsworn. Their pagan-like usage at Pooloway by that cruel man Lawrence Riall, being kept in misery with stinking water, and rice half full of stones and dirt, not able to keep life and soul together; had not free access to them been granted to the English at Pooloroon, they had all, ere this, been in their graves. Now, again, their misery is thrice doubled; their base usage, and want of sustenance; chained up like so many dogs, and left to lie in the rains and storms all night without shelter; even the Dutch Commander's hogs lie better and drier than the remonstrants. The Dutchmen taken in the Black Lion were used like men; the remonstrants like the most abject of the world. Do not certify thus much by way of entreaty, for that were in vain; but that it may be known their lives are in danger by these cruel dealings, and that they never look to come alive out of the Dutchmen's hands, for manifestly the Dutch seek to take their lives. [*One page and a half. Endorsed, "The copy of a bill of grievances endured by the English under the tyranny of the Dutch in the East Indies, as it was written and sent unto Capt. Wm. March 19. 637. Carleton to Chamberlain. Complaint of M. de Boisis of

Two of the deputies of the East India Company expected [daily from England] to relate what has passed in the treaty in England, which, if it be not the sooner dispatched, is like to find before long much opposition, because both France and Spain, from whence ambassadors are going to England, join in hindering the conjunction of our companies. 643. Captain Martin Pring to the East India Company. Encloses copy of his last by the Bull [see ante, No. 302.] Sailed southward along the coast, anchored in the Bay of Brinjaun [in Travancore], where Capt. Best in the Dragon took in refreshments; goats bought for a ryal apiece, four hens for a Spanish shilling. Presents to the Governor, but his attempts to extort resisted. Death of Nath. Salmon, master of the New Year's Gift, 10 April 1618. The Bee despatched 14 April for Masulipatam to supply that factory with money; the Gift for Acheen, Tiku, and Priaman; four days after, the writer in the James Royal for Bantam, with the Francis and the Portugal prize in company. The Francis leaky and unserviceable. Arrived at Bantam 19 June, and a small pinnace bought of the French, named the François; the Hound and the Advice there. The Pengran highly incensed, and refused to see Ball for arresting a Chinese junk. Arrival of the Rose from Succadana on 6 July, with a small parcel of diamonds. The François sent to Jambi to supply the factory. Orders given by the Pengran to Kewee to commence building the English house, but in less than a week Kewee was put in irons purposely to delay the time, thinking thereby to procure another bribe. "And this hath been the manner of his dealing with the English from time to time, being (as I conceived) bribed by the Dutch to cross us in all our proceedings." The Hound despatched for Jambi 20 Aug., the Rose to Priaman 25th, and on the 27th Pring with the James Royal and the Advice sailed for Jacatra to treat with the King there, for the continuance of a factory and building a house. Arrived 2 Sept.; found six Dutch ships in the mouth of the bay, and three in the road. His presents to the King kindly received; began to move him touching their longer abode in this country which he seemed cheerfully to embrace. The Dutch so strongly fortified in their house, that the King knew not how to root them out without assistance of the English. "We made choice of this time to capitulate with the King, for now was the only time for us to work, when the country people did generally hate them." Advice from Japara that the King had taken the Dutch godong with all her money and goods, put some of the merchants to death, and the rest in irons. Arrival of the Bee from Bantam in September [1618] with Capt. Ball, Rich. Wickham, [Nic.] Ufflete, and others. Their interview with the King of Jacatra for his resolution concerning their stay or departure from his country; his exorbitant demands for the privilege of their trading and a plot of ground. Arrival of the Dutch ship Angel from Amboyna with cloves and nutmegs; also of the Gift, at Bantam, from Acheen; on her way she stopped at Tiku, brought away the English merchants, and dissolved the English factory. Concluded with the King of Jacatra to pay 1,500 ryals for a plot of ground, and 700 ryals per annum for free trade. Arrival at Jacatra of Rich. Bishop from Japara; desire of the Mataram for the English to establish a factory in his country; Ball's answer, that it should be so, if he would utterly exclude the Dutch, but not otherwise. Bishop brought letters from English prisoners in the Moluccas. Certain information that the Dutch had taken four English ships, and "keep our people in chains like slaves; thus have they requited the love of the English, who have spilt so much of their own blood to keep them from slavery. These boorish Netherlanders are now grown to that height of pride and arrogance that they deceive all nations in respect of themselves." Visit of the King of Jacatra, the Prince, and the greatest part of the nobility to the James Royal; their "no little admiration" of it. Opportune arrival of the Gift, Unicorn, and Bee; plot of the Dutch to take the James Royal. Arrived with the James Royal, Gift, [Unicorn] and Bee at Bantam 22 Oct. Found the Thomas, Hawkeridge master, from Ternate, with about 40 pecul of cloves, having, through the Governor's friendship, narrowly escaped the Flemings. Return of the Rose from Tiku with news of the dissolving of the English factory there, and the establishment of a Dutch factory by order of the King of Acheen. Arrival of Sir Thos. Dale's fleet; the Sun struck upon the rocks of Engano. Capture of the Dutch ship Black Lion "without any blows;" she came from Patani, and was laden with rice, pepper, and other commodities. Message of the Dutch President to the English President, to know the reason of her arrest; "before he received our answer he shot at our house at Jacatra." Reception of some twenty Portuguese who had escaped from the Dutch at Jacatra; from them the strength of the Dutch there was ascertained. Departure of eleven English ships to assault the Dutch at Jacatra, 19 Dec. Details of their manœuvres. When within sight of the Dutch fleet, Sir Thos. Dale began the fight with the Sun, of Holland. It continued about three hours, in which time the English shot above 1,200 great shot from six ships. Chased the Dutch the next day through the Bay of Jacatra, in sight of their castle. Dec. 28, about 3 a.m., the Black Lion was set on fire by the wretched carelessness of three wicked fellows, and burnt to the water's edge. The President ashore, with John Jackson, to view the fortifications; death of Jackson, whose leg was shot off. Arrival of the James Royal, Advice, and the Prize from Bantam. Conditions on which the English agreed to assist the King of Jacatra to take the Dutch fort. Return of Capt. Pring to Bantam with six ships. Conditions on which the Dutch agreed to surrender their castle at Jacatra to the English; but the King failed to keep his promise, and the English abandoned the siege. Resolution in Council, in consequence of the Pengran of Bantam's base usage, to ship all the goods and merchants at Bantam, and so leave but a few to take care of the house there. Chase of four Dutch ships and fight with them for an hour and a half, when "they grew so weary of their presumptuous attempt, that the Admiral first of all betook him to his heels, and the rest every one his way, for every way that led them from us seemed choice unto them." Return of the English fleet to Bantam; the skipper of the [Dutch] Black Lion, who was present at the fight, put ashore to contradict the "abominable lies" of the Dutch merchants, that the English had been beaten. News of the casting away of two of the Dutch ships before Jacatra. Arrival of Mr. Powle from Jacatra 4 March, with news that Sir Thos. Dale had gone eastward. An intention of some of the sailors to have mutinied discovered, and five of the chief offenders whipped. Difficulty of governing this irregular and almost incorrigible scum of rascals, whom the land hath ejected for their wicked lives and ungodly behaviour. "Our misery is that we so often see the proverb fulfilled, which is if they be good for nothing send them to the East Indies." It were to be wished that your worships would not lend so free and gentle ears unto the unreasonable requests of many who think they have made an East Indian voyage if they lose an ungracious and disobedient son or an unruly depending kinsman.' Complains likewise of the semi nautæ, or rather seeming seamen," "who cannot want entertainment if they know what point of the compass is opposite to N.E." Knows many proper seamen were refused that would most willingly have been entertained, the only difference being two shillings a month. One good seaman worth five of these sea-gulls. The "damages" and "dangers" the Company undergo by entertaining such sailors, or sea-apes. They come to sea with few clothes but many diseases; they fall into the purser's books, then if once denied money their fingers are like live twigs, nothing being too hot or too heavy for them, that lies in their way; many honest men robbed of the little money they had brought to sea by those wicked villains. All things removed from the house at Bantam. A Council held by the President, Spaldinge, Ball, Denton, and Pring to determine on the quantity of money to be left, and for the building of the house, "the President and principals having long before resolved to leave the place, and seek their fortunes with us at sea." News of Sir Thomas Dale following the Dutch fleet. The dispatch of the Little James deferred by the President in consequence, thinking to have Sir Thomas here at her departure. Certain information that the Mataram, who is King of Japara and hopes to be the monarch of Java major, is levying a great army by sea and land to bring Jacatra and Bantam under his dominions, a thing he has aimed at many years; he has often said to his nobility that Jacatra had a thorn in her foot, which he himself must take the pains to pluck out for fear the whole body should be endangered; the thorn is the castle of the Hollanders, who have so fortified themselves through bribery, that they regard neither the King nor his country, but set him at defiance. Return of Sir Thos. Dale, who was forced to give up chasing the Dutch ships because of a great tempest. Resolution to go for the Coromandel coast to repair their wants, hoping to return by the end of August to meet with the English fleet, which Pring hopes will be provided a little better than the last was. Necessity of the Company's sending a warlike fleet to arrive in Bantam before the Dutch fleet, "otherwise we are like to have a double assault both from the East and from the west." John Coone [Coen], their new created general, resolved to return the first of the easterly monsoon with all the force he can get from the Moluccas, Amboyna, and the Bandas, saying, "he will either win the horse or lose the saddle, expel the English or be expelled himself." Great power given to the Dutch general; his promises to his people to remain in the country. Something must also be given to "the ordinary sort" of the Company's people; a small gratuity better esteemed now than a large one; on their return, they ask what the Company will do for their wives and children if they themselves lose their lives in the Company's service, and say "there is more hope of a living fox than of a dead lion." These men must be fed with hopeful words. "Oh! what a great happiness it were if the Hollanders were united to the English; we should then have all the trade of these countries in our own hands; we might buy all commodities here at our own price, and your worships might make sales at home at your own pleasure." In favour of peace. Are not yet resolved to attend the coming of the Dutch fleet; first in regard of this unwholesome coast, secondly because the Pengran of Bantam debars the English from all provisions, "endeavouring by all his devilish policy to cross and hinder us in all our proceedings." Cannot guess the cause unless it be the accumulation of bribery by the Hollanders. The English wrongs so grievous and intolerable that they can no longer be endured, and they must by force leave the country. Hopes on the arrival of the forces from England to be able to kick him out of his usurped government and draw beneficial conditions with the young King. The Company's desire for present returns, not regarding the future, has been the cause of their unstable estate. Unless means are sent this year to redress their wrongs, all the Company's factories are like to fall to the ground. If the Company intend the extirpation of the Hollanders "then we must hoc agere with all our force and might and not have too many irons in the fire, until your main business be effected, but if it shall please God in mercy to unite the companies of England and Holland (which were most to be desired by all true Christians), then had you none to oppose you but the King of Spain, and he overthrown by the proverb ne Hercules contra duos, so that in fine you might expect both wealth and honour, the two main pillars of earthly happiness." 644. John Jourdain to Sir Thomas Dale aboard the Moon. Sends abstract, as Jourdain conceives, of the true meaning of the Company's commission to them both, which if Jourdain mistake in anything, then is he content to be censured by those of better judgment, being indifferent persons. Has thought fitting before the departure of this ship, to send him these five articles that he may send them home to the Company, who can best decide this business and their meaning. Desires all things may be carried with peace in the meantime, without prejudice to the Company's business or any man's honour or reputation in particular. Encloses,

644. 1. The five articles mentioned above. Sir Thos. Dale to have only command of the fleet he came forth with, except others be assigned to him by the President and Council. These to be disposed of by the Council after his arrival at Bantam. All shipping whatever to be disposed of by the President and Council, only the commanders of all other fleets to give priority to Sir Thomas, but the directions to be given to such commanders by the President and Council. The President not tied by commission to call Dale to any Council except on a matter in which he is to be chief actor or where his fleet is concerned. In all merchandising causes and employment of shipping, commissions to be given by the President and his Council; Dale himself, if employed in any voyage, to take his directions from the Council, retaining only his authority for government at sea, and not to appoint any chief commander or vice-admiral, such are to be chosen by the President and Council. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 785.]

March 26. 645. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Touching the two French ships [The Hague.] taken by the Hollanders in the East Indies, for which M. de Boisisse demanded "towards a million for recompence," no other satisfaction is given than in general terms, the matter being left with M. du Maurier for further prosecution. [Extract from Holland Coresp.]

April 2-9. 646. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of Pintoe's widow concerning her husband's "brokes." Improvements at Blackwall. The charge of building ships compared with other places.

April 9.—Suit of Greene, the surgeon, about his goods; to be stayed until Sir Thos. Roe's return. Resolution concerning the Muscovy adventurers, who are still behind with their money. John Lamprier. Mr. Pintoe's business. Petition of Stephen Borneman to be relieved of his purchase. Submission of Boddam and Owen accepted; the Judge of the Admiralty to be entreated to remit any further punishment. A third part of the Company's money to be paid for the business of the pirates. Petition of Wm. Eden, John Garret, Wm. Yong, and John Wood, who went forth in Lord Rich's ships and returned in the Bull for a gratuity, refused. [Five pages and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 324-330.]

April 14. 647. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. The Commissioners on both Whitehall. sides at a stand and like to break off, unless the King intervene at their leave-taking, which the Deputies of the East India Company make show to desire, as soon as his Majesty's health shall give them access with convenience. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

April 14. 648. Geo. Cokayne to Geo. Ball, President at Bantam. Sends Succadana. copy of his last by way of Macassar. People here doubt whether all is well with the English at Bantam and Jacatra. Complains that Ball has not fulfilled his faithful promise to have Cokayne released that he might visit the factory. The Queen's prow arrived from Landak with good store of stones; one of 16 carats, two of 8 carats. The Dutch last December had one of 16 carats. Had laid out his money before the stone arrived; the Queen sent it purposely for the English, and will stay until a ship arrive with commodities. Hopes the ship is "half-way here, or else God help

651. Articles against Edw. Monox with an old request which hath been denied Edw. Pettus these twelve months. The charges are stealing the Company's goods; engaging in private trade contrary to the Company's order; and that Edward Connok at Gaytoun "before his death publicly said, Monox hath poisoned me." Desire of Pettus to view the registered articles why he was dismissed the Company's service (see enclosure to Barker's letter of 16 Oct. 1619. Consultation at Shiraz, 4 April.) Also, Monox's answer to the above accusations. For the first, he has cleared himself of "the malicious spite" of the said Pettus in a consultation in Ispahan; the second he absolutely denies; as to the third, the wrong done to him, no satisfaction that Pettus is able to make can satisfy him, yet his respect causes him to forbear that which otherwise he must needs have effected. 652. Minutes of a Court of Commissioners for the East India and Muscovy Companies. Wm. Lamplugh to have the money allowed for maintenance of one year's lights at Dungeness. Rates for garbling indigo. [Half a page. Court Bk. IV., 330.]

April 20.

653. Court Minutes of the East India Company. George Scot allowed to make up his adventure in the new stock to 3,200*l.*; Thos. Brace, his servant, to be admitted a freeman. Request of an executor of Sir Jas. Lancaster to have the benefits of the Company's grant concerning his adventure in the second joint stock. Vinegar mixed with water recommended for a beverage at sea, as was continually used by Sir John Hawkins. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 330-332.]

654. Patrick Copland to Adrian Jacobson. Wishes he had written in the Latin instead of the Dutch tongue. Laments with him the hatred and dissension among Christians; accuses the Dutch of robbing the Chinese and others under English colours and abusing their best friends abroad that have shed so much of their dearest blood in defence of the Dutch and their country at home. "But now you are freed from the Spaniard at home, you fall out with your friends abroad. * * * Do you thus requite us as Lot did Abraham?" Complains of their writing and publishing to the world that the sea is free, "and yet by your encroaching upon it are not you the mothers and nurses of discord?" Was not the last news from the Dutch Commander Coen the beating down of the English house at Jacatra and the defaming of the English nation with the Pengran at Bantam? "Think you this is the way to make peace?" The captain of the Dutch fort at Jacatra has broken faith with Sir Thos. Dale in keeping Peter Waddon prisoner. No sound league of friendship or reconciliation can be made, or being made can continue, till the wrongs which men have done one to another be reprov'd and removed, and satisfaction given by word and deed. Wishes it were possible for him to be the surgeon to cure this wound. "All standeth not in one side; there must be a yielding of both if ever there be a sound peace." April 23.

656. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Committee chosen to reward those who have taken pains in the business betwixt the English and Dutch. Ships to be sent away in October or November to meet and relieve those at the Cape on their return from the Indies. Petition of Nich. Downe for employment; to be conferred with about buying coral in the room of Martyn, who refuses that employment. Gratuity to John Weare, master's mate in the Bull, for plots and maps bought by him. Petition of Wm. Waterworth, employed at Ahmedabad, about his indigo. Petitions of Joan Clever and Martha Beadell for relief; the latter "having exceeded the bounds of modesty and humanity to leave her child at Mr. Governor's house because she was denied a greater part of her husband's wages than the Company have thought fit to allow," sent to Bridewell. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 332-334.]

657. Chamberlain to Carleton. Great feast to "your States and other Commissioners here" at Merchant Taylors' Hall for a farewell; the artillery have also given them a great supper, with a warlike dance or mask of twelve men in complete armour. It seems they are quite broken off about the Moluccas; fears ill may come to pass on both sides in consequence. Saw a proposition made by Carleton in January last "about the defectuosity of these Commissioners' authority and instructions, and about their cunning declining of some other points that were to be cleared, wherein you spake home." 658. Thos. Locke to Carleton. The Commissioners for the East India Company have broken off about the fortifications; the Dutch would not allow ours to have anything to do in the managing of them, though they offered to bear half the charge of maintaining them. [Extract from Dom. Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CVIII., No. 71, Cal., p. 40.]

April 27-30.

659. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Application of Mr. Bassano, one of the Lord Chancellor's gentlemen, on behalf of Win. Waterworth. Purchase of 20,000 East Country pipe staves at 8*l.* 12*s.* per 1,000. The Coromandel indigo to be sold at 2*s.* 8*d.* a pound. Report of Mountney by the Lord Admiral's directions of the number of the Company's ships in the Indies and the ordnance in each, including the Defence and Swan. Gratuity to Geo. Finch. The Governor complains that he and the Committee should be taxed "for sending forth such a fleet of ships as the last, with special persons to command them;" and made known that the King of Denmark has sent over two ambassadors, one about the Queen's death, and the other to entreat that amity and good correspondence may be had between the English and his people in the Indies. The King of Denmark's desire to employ Captain Christien in his service, who seeks the Company's service and especially to regain his reputation and good opinion lost with the Company, to be considered. A great trade between the islands of Mohilla and Prester John's country, and also upon the islands of Madagascar. Swerez, having wronged the States and this country, to be complained of. Concerning Hugh Greete's debts. A "peremptory day" named for the Muscovy adventurers to pay in their money.

April 30.—Oath administered to Robt. Fotherbye, John Lemprier, Nicholas Sadler, Elias Bradshaw, Geo. Marshall, Simon Bowers, Abraham Bennet, and Geo. Robinson, the Company's officers at Deptford and Blackwall. Resolution not to employ Capt. Christien or any other man of his rank at present. Concerning the allowance of Gomersoll the porter at Deptford, J. Collyns confirmed in his place. Sale of sables and oil. [Four pages and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 335-339.]

660. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Barnevelt's execution, with the vacation of the fair, have delayed the [Dutch] East India merchants, from making any report of their treaty in England to the States; they are gone to Amsterdam to speak first to the Company, and return hither in a day or two. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

May 4.

661. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Oaths taken by Robt. Washborne, Thos. Chancye, Walter Mountford, and Edward Withers "for due performance of the trust reposed in them." Account of a riot among the carpenters of the King's yard at Deptford and the Company's yards, 200 or 300 of them violently taking and carrying away certain apprentices out of the Company's yards at Deptford and Blackwall with a drum struck up before them; resolution to punish the ringleaders. Gratuity to James Bag, searcher of

663. Minutes of consultations between 7 May and 25 June 1619, as follows:—

May 7.—At Acheen, present Capt. Robt. Bonner, chief commander, Wm. Nicolls, chief merchant, Richard Fursland, Daniel Wight, and Abraham Bonde. The offer made to the King of Acheen for his pepper declined.

May 27.—At Acheen, present as above. Concerning their repair to Court about purchase of the King's pepper; "if we deal not with him, his subjects dare not deal with us."

June 3.—At Acheen, present as above. The King's refusal to have any more speech about the price of his pepper; resolved to give his price, otherwise their future good hopes of trade at Tiku will be frustrated.

June 5.—At Acheen, present as above. As to the quantity of pepper to be bought at the King's price, who refuses to give credit. To ask whether the King would take iron for his customs and vouchsafe trade at Tiku.

June 25.—At Acheen, present as above. Concerning the disposal of the merchants resident there. Reasons for the departure of Nicolls with the Dragon. Trade denied at Tiku to the Rose, Osiander, and Gift, but procured by extraordinary gifts in three several voyages by the Hollanders for two years, to expire Aug. 1620, no other means left to the English factory than to supply ordinary expenses; and the King's promise to give Nicolls trade for two years at Tiku on his return from England. Nicolls complains of being unjustly accused by the Company; his departure for England in the Dragon concluded on. Fursland to succeed as chief. [Three pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 799.]

665. Viscount Doncaster to Carleton. Heads of the King's instructions to himself, one of which is to make the States understand the discontent of his Majesty at the disagreement of the merchants "and his after so long and painful a treaty of accord;" but now the King's health will permit, he doubts not being able to compound their differences with equity; "and their association being a matter that so nearly and highly concerns the weal of both countries, his Majesty will neither spare any travail to effect it, nor be in anything more partial to either side than if they were both his own subjects." [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

May 14-17. 666. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The "mutinous carpenters" at Blackwall punished. English wheat found to be as good as French wheat for biscuits, tho' the latter was formerly held to be the best. Articles of a treaty concluded between the English and Dutch Commissioners, the point for forts in the Moluccas and Bandas the only one in difference, the Dutch having resolved that England should have a third of all the spices in those parts and all the pepper at Bantam. Having one fort at Pooloroon, the Company conclude that they should demand the right to build others at Ternate, Motir, and Pooloway, believing four forts to be as honourable and safe for themselves as eight, and are satisfied with the proportion of spices and pepper agreed on. As to the charges to be incurred and the number of ships of war, five at Surat and four at Bantam, to procure trade of the Chinese, &c. The King made known the willingness of the States Commissioners to refer themselves to him to overrule the business; the Company of the same mind, after making known their desires to his Majesty.

May 17.—Letter read from the King, dated Greenwich, 15th inst., desiring to have one-half of the goods taken from the Earl of Warwick's ship in the Indies, which belong to his Majesty, delivered to the Marquis of Buckingham for the King's use. Resolved to make it appear to his Majesty that they regard not the goods, or the part, being the moiety, although it were a matter of greater value, or are they desirous to gain by such courses, but intended only the preservation of their trade, to secure his Majesty's subjects and preserve his Majesty's honour there, and are therefore willing to leave the whole to his Majesty's disposal, which being found but a small sum between 900*l.* and 1,000*l.*, they were contented to have it made up an even 1,000*l.*, and so presented to the King. Discussion thereon, but the resolution confirmed. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 345-347.]

668. Walter Balcanquall to Carleton. The States Commissioners received good contentment from the King and Council on Whit-Monday. “We five” dined with the King on the Tuesday, were used very graciously, and much questioned. Visited the Commissioners after, who said how honourable and just the King was in their cause, that they were like to agree with the Council. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

669. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Secretary Calvert on behalf of Cooke, sometime servant to Sir Wm. Craven, deceased, for his freedom. Knowing how such letters are often drawn from such persons, the Deputy Governor is requested to ascertain from Mr. Secretary if it be a thing he desires, it shall be granted for his sake, but if otherwise, then to request to be forborne. Petition read of William the father and Benjamin the brother of Henry Patteson, deceased, concerning his wages and goods. Request of the Countess of Pembroke to have a lease of Crosby House from the Company; some of opinion that my Lord of Northampton is willing to have her ladyship out because he intends to sell it and put the money into the Company’s stock. Committee appointed to confer thereon. Langley’s business concluded. Letter read from Thos. Spurway, from Bantam 7 Sept. last (see ante, No. 424), which was brought by a French ship to St. Malo. The most material points of the letter to be copied and given to his Majesty and most of the Lords and English Commissioners to make appear the insupportable wrongs against the English, and to petition the King (see ante, No. 425, 1.) to take them into his consideration and give relief, “being of opinion, by the carriage of these abuses, that this treaty hath been but a colour to give time to work all these mischiefs against the English, and therefore fit to press it home unto his Majesty.” Letter of thanks to be written for the courtesy of the French at St. Malo. to go for Engano with the Moon, Clove, Globe, Peppercorn, Advice, and the Dragon's Claw, to try and recover the moneys cast away in the Sun; from thence sail for the Coromandel coast, send the Claw to Capt. Pring, who, with the James Royal, Unicorn, New Year's Gift, and Bee, will sail for Pulicat, Masulipatam, and Pettapoli. The Rose to be sent to Priaman and Tiku to meet Capt. Robert Bonner and advise him of proceedings with the Dutch and of the place of meeting in September next. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 801.]

May 21.

671. Minutes of a Court held aboard the Moon. Owen Bodman, for burning the Black Lion, breaking open the chests, mutiny, and breaking the master's head, is sentenced to be hanged at the main yard until he be dead; James Littill, Adam Douglas, and ——— Domingo, Bodman's confederates, also found guilty of burning the Black Lion, to receive ten stripes upon the bare back aboard each of the seven great ships of the fleet; Barnard Wright, for his slanderous speeches, to receive 40 lashes aboard the Clove, and then be turned for a foremast man. Victualling of the fleet, four days in the week, flesh one meal a day, the other three days rice, sugar, candy, and butter. Signed by Sir Thomas Dale, Aug. Spalding, Peter Bowers, John Munden, John Hatch, John Roberts, John Cottwell, Richard Yard, William Crascom, Richard Newall, and William Reckes. [*This is dated 21 May 1618, evidently by mistake. 672. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Opinion that the unkind carriage of the Dutch and their malice against the English, as exhibited in the abstract of the letter from the Indies (see ante, No. 424), should rather persuade the English to an agreement, although upon some unequal terms, seeing it is so generally desired, and that without it there is danger of the overthrow of the whole trade; resolution to submit to his Majesty's wisdom and let the article of forts "rest unperfected" until they hear out of the Indies, as it is hoped hereafter the Dutch may be drawn to yield to forts. Petition of William and Benjamin, father and brother of Henry Patteson, deceased, about his estate. Letter read from Sir Thos. Wilson, from "the office of his Majesty's papers," in behalf of Walter, brother to Richard Cocks, factor in the Indies; Sir Thos. Hewet willing to disburse part of the money to apprentice Walter Cocks, requests the Company to pay the remainder out of the salary set apart by Richard for the relief of his brother. Suit of old Mrs. Waldo about her brokes, she having sold 200*l.* of her adventure in the new joint stock to John Eaglefield. Burrell found very backward in building some of the great ships; supposed that he undertakes more than he can manage. Committee appointed to confer with Browning and Tranckmore as to building ships at Ipswich and Shoreham.

May 28.—David Bourne's debt. Petitions read of John Floyde, surgeon in the Charles, about paying freight for his goods; and of Christopher, Richard, and Henry, the three sons, Jane Lewis and Anne Stephens, widow, the daughters of Henry Wagstaffe, concerning legacies left to them by their deceased father, which Thomas

673. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Seventeen of the (Dutch) East India Company have this day resolved with the States on the points in difference between them and our merchants, in conformity to what was set down by the King, as they say, at their last audience at Greenwich on Whit-Monday (17 May) as an indifferent course betwixt them. Upon the answer of these letters some of these merchants are to go over again to conclude the business. The honour and thanks is by the States ascribed wholly to his Majesty. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

May 28.

674. Sir Clement Edmondes to Carleton. The treaty concerning the East Indian affair is this day made and concluded, and the Commissioners on both sides have shook hands upon it. Hopes it will produce effects to the satisfaction of both parties. Encloses the articles agreed on, which, being the first copy made, Carleton is to be sparing to publish. [Holland Corresp.]

675. Sec. Calvert to Carleton. What passed between the States and Carleton, touching the trade of the East Indies now in question, was to very good purpose; the King particularly observed the manner of his arguing and liked it well. In a manner the treaty was concluded before the receipt of Carleton's despatch; the conditions he will hear from Sec. Naunton. [Extract from Holland Corresp.] Encloses,

676. William Methwold to President Ball at Bantam. Our Bandanese, with their full force, departed presently after Ball to the Bahar, and Cokayne to the Pengran. The Dutch seem to be more busy than the English in bringing the ordnance to the platform and fitting other hostile provisions. "In the meantime (God willing) we will be so careful within doors that their worst attempts (if any such intended) shall little damage us. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 803.]

Meeting with the States Commissioners deferred because the King comes to London this night; their resolution to go to Sir Noel Caron's. Request of Cooke, "my Lady Craven's man," for his freedom. Petitions read of Margaret, widow of Brian Edlyn, deceased, for certain moneys, and of John Fleming, formerly entertained by the Earl of Arundel's means but stayed by sickness, soliciting employment. Letter from Robt. Smith to Nicholas Crispe, recommending William Fortescue as eminently qualified for a commander. Rich. Wats to be conferred with for a purser on the recommendation of Capt. Adams. Samuel, son of Dr. Crooke, "a godly minister," to be admitted a free brother. Difference between Robt. Prettye and Sir Henry Robinson about the purchase of an adventure of 900*l*. 683. Chamberlain to Carleton. Sends the article so long and so much controverted between the English East Indian Commissioners and the States, as also the petition upon it to the King, "but say what they can, things are passed as the other would have it, which makes the world suspect that they have found great friends and made much use of their wicked mammon. Our men shall never have like means and advantage to bring them to reason as they had now, both in regard that we are sought to combine either with the Portugal, French, and Danes, as also, and that specially, that our merchants were generally animated and thoroughly resolved to set up their whole rest upon it, which was never so great, nor perhaps will easily be again, now the opportunity is lost and the heat cooled." [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CIX., No. 75, Cal., p. 51.] Encloses,

683. I. Petition of the East India Company to the King. Protesting against the article "touching the question of forts," framed by the States Commissioners, and which has received his Majesty's approbation, as utterly cutting off the Company from all hope and expectation of their obtaining any parts of the forts at any time hereafter, which in the end would utterly exclude the Company from the whole trade of the Indies; praying the King to take the subject into his gracious consideration. [East Indies, Vol. I., No. 77.]

684. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Gratuity to William Ebert for ending the account of the seventh voyage. Petition of William and Benjamin, father and brother of Henry Patteson, deceased, desiring to have the money for his goods sold at Tecoe. William Fursland entertained purser's mate in the Bull. Elizabeth, wife of Abraham Ringsall, sailor in the Swan, to have two months of her husband's wages. John Davies entertained gunner in the Bull. Petition of Joan, sister of John Jenkins, for a debt. Thos. Baker entertained steward, he having supplied the like place in Sir John Fearn's ship with Sir Walter Raleigh. Letters and commissions for the Bull to be hastened, also 80,000*l.* ryals, 17 tons of lead, and a proportion of 35 shot for each piece to be put aboard. Richard, son of Margaret Owen, to be employed in the Bull. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 361-362.]

689. Sir Thos Edmondes to Carleton. After many disputes and much contestation the treaty with the States about the East India trade has been at length concluded, the article concerning fortifications, the great point in difference, being reserved for accommodation two or three years hence. The States well pleased with this agreement; all honest men here rejoice exceedingly at it, hoping it will be a means to renew the ancient amity between the two countries. 693. Carleton to Chamberlain. The same merchants of the Dutch East India Company who were lately in England are now going over to conclude the treaty for the conjunction of the two Companies. It might have been more advantageous for our men in the point of fortifications, but these are stiff not to quitter prise, and it is better to meet upon these terms than to remain as before, which would not but turn to the ruin of both. 697. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the estate of Anthony Fugars, deceased. Jas. Cartwright, Thos. Cowley, and Rich. Winch referred for employment. Four factors to be appointed, two in the Bull and two with the Dutchmen in their ship; Sam. Bridger to be conferred with. Private committee appointed "to have due consideration thought upon" the Commissioners in the treaty betwixt the English and Dutch, especially those who have taken the most pains, as the Treasurer of the Household, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Clement Edmondes, and some others. Petition of Christopher Greene, surgeon, who went forth with Sir Thos. Roe and returned in the Bull, concerning his goods; to wait until the Ambassador's return, which is expected in two or three months' time. Binyon and Parker referred to the committees of the yards. Proceedings of committees at Blackwall and Deptford. Concerning the suit in chancery between Thos., brother of John Gourney, deceased, and Wm. Finch, about John Gourney's estate.

June 25.—Suit of John Smith for leave to carry his wife with him to the East Indies; “being overcome with importunity did give way for her going, if he could find a convenient cabin in the gunner's room, which was held the most convenient place for privacy.” James Cartwright referred for employment. The Bull to be discharged from Gravesend. Orders given to Mountney to provide two pipes of wine for Capt. Adams, besides four or five pipes to be left at Bantam for relief of men and ships, “having such persons of good worth there, as Sir Thos. Dale and others, who will take it very kindly to be so well remembered with means for relief in their absence.” Imputations against Capt. Adams to be inquired into; how he cleared himself from former accusations and turned the disgrace upon his accusers; yet desiring to hear the uttermost which can be truly objected, young Crispe and other honest men who were with Adams in the ship to be called before a committee privately, to hear what they can truly say of his carriage and behaviour. Refusal of Samuel Bridger to go the voyage; motion to employ Lucas Anthoenis and William Ebert referred. Concerning the meeting of a general court for the election of officers; resolved to take no notice of any petition, which it is reported is intended by some of the generality, “about some things distasted by them, and combining to make an innovation and alteration in the government of the Company to the endangering of the subversion thereof;” the committee “being bound in conscience to prefer and maintain the peace and welfare of the trade and Company in general, they ought to oppose whatsoever may tend to the disturbance or ruin thereof,” and “to be resolute in their courses, without alteration of place or anything else;” though if the assembly be found so great, and more than the Governor's hall can hold, to procure Merchant Taylors' or some other larger place.” Some of opinion that time will cause them to see their errors and let fall their petition and be more temperate in prosecuting innovations.” Conclusion of Peter Langley's business. Satisfaction given to the executors of Edward Langley, deceased, in full of all matters depending between the Company and them. Instructions to be drawn out for Henry Bache; whether he shall go in the Dutch ship or the Bull to be determined. [Six pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 370-376.]

698. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Believes the Dutch East India merchants are still on this side the seas; the winds have been so contrary. June 30— 700. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Agreement
July 3. with Robt. Tanckmore to build a ship at Shoreham.

July 2.—Concerning the disturbances and innovations intended at the Court of Election, it is held an unfit time for any alterations, especially now the Dutch are in England, who expect present conference; and if the Commissioners be changed there must be a new commission procured; the inconveniences. This “disturbance” attributed to “gentlemen who, having been taken into the Company by courtesy, do aim to get all the government into their hands,” which is a business proper only for merchants. Evils that may arise and resolution thereon. Desire of the generality to have auditors chosen from among themselves; resolved to offer four or six, as they please, “as a means to take away all exceptions, and to dash and quell all other plots, because nothing is done by the Company but will justify itself.” Exceptions taken to the interpretation of the Company’s patent, that all business is to be managed by the committees, which the generality intend to have altered; resolution to let it sleep in silence until such a suit be set on foot; and exceptions having also been taken against gratifications to the Governor, deputy, and committees, resolved to suppress all such motions for the present, leaving them to another general court. James Cartwright entertained a factor with a salary of 60*l.*, rising 10*l.* per annum for seven years; and Joseph Cockram at 100*l.* wages the first year, 150*l.* the second, and 200*l.* the third year, and so to rest for seven years.

Minutes of a general Court. Speech of the Governor; as to the desire of many of the generality to have the elections in a different manner than formerly; also as to the dissatisfaction with their accounts; expect men to be chosen to audit them either with or without the other auditors. Sir Thos. Smythe desires the Company to elect a governor fit to do them service, he being old and wishing to retire; whereupon Lord Digby made known that he was commanded to deliver a message from his Majesty “upon complaint of my Lords his Majesty’s Commissioners and the rest of the English Commissioners, that they found too great advantage against them in this treaty with the Dutch; that the King esteems the East India Company a great ornament and strength unto his kingdoms, whom he hath and will maintain, wishing them to proceed comfortably in their trade, which only increaseth when all other trades decay; and doubteth not to procure them in some convenient time their own desires in the Indies, which, if the Dutch should deny, that quarrel should be no longer the Company’s, but of the State; and that if the Dutch hold not good correspondency with his subjects beyond the line, he will not hold any with them here, willing the Lords of his Majesty’s Council to take knowledge of his resolution, and to cause an act of Council to be entered to make it appear to be his act, approving the government of this Company (which he hath taken knowledge of) to have been hitherto very good, and performed with much quietness, not doubting but business have been carried well, with great content unto the general Company, and many of them having had often and free access to him, he knows the 'factes' of some of them well—Sir Thos. Smythe and some others—and will not have any alteration of them." Lord Digby's own opinion. Sir Thos. Smythe, Sir Geo. Bowles, Alderman Halliday, and Alderman Johnson nominated for the governor's place. A ballot-box presented by John Holloway, but the author blamed for interrupting the course intended by so gracious a message from his Majesty; the box taken away, and the elections proceeded with, without any alteration or innovation. Sir Thos. Smythe chosen governor, and Morris Abbott deputy-governor, who, with Christopher Clitherowe and William Towerson, were put in nomination. William Harrison chosen treasurer, Christ. Clitherowe having also been "put into election." Discussion as to the election of committees. Sir Dudley Diggs, Sir John Wolstenholme, Sir Wm. Russell, Sir Wm. Smith, Sir John Suckling, Sir John Merrick, and Sir Edwin Sandys, Knts., and Levinus Muncke chosen; also Thos. Styles, Rich. Fishborne, Anthony Abdy, Wm. Towerson, Rich. Venne, and Hump. Slanye. Necessity of retaining the three committees in commission from his Majesty with the Dutch States Commissioners. Alderman Halliday, Robt. Bell, and Humphrey Handford continued committees accordingly; also Burrell for building ships, and Salmon for rigging and entertainment of mariners. Ralph Freeman desiring to be left out, the following were chosen committees to make up the 24, the number limited by patent:—Sheriff Hamersley, Robt. Offley, Nicholas Leate, Reig. Grene, Robt. Bateman, Thos. Westrowe, Edward James, Wm. Stone, Chr. Clitherowe, Henry Garway, Nich. Crispe, Geo. Kirbye, and Thos. Munne. Auditors chosen from generalty:—Robt. Ducey, Thos. Bonest, Hen. Robinson, Jo. Couchman, Edmund Scot, and Robt. Jefferies; also the following officers:—Mountney, husband; Ellam and Lanman, account keepers; Francis Sadler, secretary; and John Grimston, beadle; all re-elected. Motion to have surgeons of skill provided for the voyage chosen with the approbation of Surgeons' Hall.

July 3.—Alteration in appointments of committee-men for the superintendence of various services. Court days to be altered to Wednesdays and Fridays, as heretofore. [Six pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 376–382.]

July 5. 701. Sec. Calvert to Carleton. The treaty between the English and States Commissioners will be concluded this week. It is in effect but a suspension or prorogation of the treaty to a longer and more fitter time; in the meantime both parties are to trade peaceably, abstaining from all acts of hostility and violence, without prejudice to the right of either. This falls out much contrary to the expectation of those which by this breach should have received advantage. [Holland Corresp.]

703. Sir Peter Manwood to Lord Zouch. The Indian Commissioners on both parts sealed [the treaty] on Wednesday [7th July]; one article is, that either part must stand to the harms received before they be advertised hereof. The English merchants doubt all is not well, because they hear not from thence; and it is confessed some great matter is happened between them. [*Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. 704. George Ball to Thos. Kerridge. The Peppercorn has arrived, one of Sir Thos. Dale's fleet, forced by extremity of weather from the rest, which were riding at Engano in quest of what was lost in the Sun. She brought a letter from the Cape from Thos. Barwick, with news of the death of the Queen of England and Sir Walter Raleigh, and the overthrow of his project; also that the two companies of Holland and England were united, and that he had letters for the two Presidents. The news may be true, but Ball can give no credit to it. He also writes that eight more ships are to follow out of England, and as many out of Holland. If Kerridge has certain news, begs he will send it by express to this factory, that they may the better know how to rule themselves. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 805.]

July 19. 710. Patent conferring on John de Goch, councillor of Zutphen, one of the States Commissioners, the order of knighthood, for his skill, prudence, and courtesy towards the King in the management of the recent treaty between Holland and the East India Company. [Latin. One page. Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CIX., No. 143, Cal., p. 64.]

July 19. 711. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Was heartily glad to be able to give the States and his Excellency (the Prince of Orange) assurance of the King's satisfaction in their proceedings here, as likewise that our two great breaches in the East and in the North are, by his Majesty's dexterous handling of a work so full of difficulty, so well repaired, though but for a time. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

July 21-30. 712. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Upon complaint that no notice is given when Courts are held, "no Courts have been kept this fortnight, by reason of the business with the Dutch." Fras. Sadler is instructed to write to each of the committees the days for set Courts every week. Resolution concerning the general auditors, and how to proceed with the accounts. "Kindnesses" to two Dutchmen who are to sail in the Bull when Joseph Cockram sets forward with letters and commission, as the like may be expected by English factors sent to Amsterdam, to proceed to the Indies. Jas. Cartwright to make himself ready for Amsterdam within fourteen days. 96,000 ryals of eight to be sent in the Bull. Resolved to send 20,000 ryals of eight in the Dutch ship. John King recommended as a factor. Concerning the payment of 50*l.* intended by Richard Cocks, a factor in the Indies, for relief of his brother, Walter Cocks, a poor man; his brother the preacher willing to keep Walter on certain conditions; the money to be delivered to Sir Thos. Hewet and Sir Thos. Wilson for Walter's benefit. Petition of James Demaistres, brewer. Petition of Mary, wife of William Hockeridge, master in the Thomas, to the Moluccas, craving 30*l.*, part of her husband's wages, "to make a final end and conclusion of the troublesome business depending betwixt her husband and the Frenchmen." Letter to Captain Jourdain at Bantam, condemning the negligent carriage of George Ball and the factors for not having given better advice of the state of the business in those parts, and informing him of the union and agreement concluded with the Dutch, commanding peace and love betwixt them hereafter, and directing what to have done concerning the prosecution of trade, and all other matters to be established by a Council of War. The question of prizes to be left wholly to the care of the Council of War there. Plan of the ground at Deptford, which Mr. Salmon desired to have a lease of for building upon, allowed.

July 23.—The lease to Mr. Salmon to be suspended. Orders concerning coral procured at Leghorn; and the auditors appointed by the generalty for the accounts. The adventurers in the fourth voyage to satisfy their debt to the joint stock. Two letters read, to be sent to Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Parker in the Indies, with advertisement of the peace with the Dutch, and directions to Sir Thos. Dale to take the command of the first fleet that shall be jointly set forth by the English and Dutch, of sixteen or twenty good ships of war, to prosecute trade on the coast of Malabar, and endeavour to open and enlarge trade with the Chinese by the advice of a Council of Defence, himself to be one if not employed at sea. No copies of the articles of agreement to be given to any, lest they be made known to the Portugals. The articles to be read to the committees, but not to be left in the counting-house for any of the generalty to see at their pleasures, to take notes to publish them abroad. Desire of his Highness the Prince to adventure 6,000*l.* “very willingly yielded to.” Seeing by the articles of agreement that ships of war are to be maintained in the Indies, which in time will require repairs, especially careening, Richard Furbusher is appointed for this service.

July 30.—Letter read from Capt. Adams from the Downs, for further power and authority to be granted to him to deal with Portugal or other ships not tolerated by the Company; he is to avoid all quarrels. Proceedings at Deptford and Blackwall. Abraham Binyon dismissed all his employments for dishonest practices; Wm. Philipps recommended to succeed him. Abuses of Geo. Hall and some others. Petition of Amos Spurgin, who put his shoulder out of joint by a fall. Brownelow recommended as a factor to proceed with Cartwright in the Dutch ship. The Court reminded by Sir Dudley Diggs to consider of some special person of judgment, discretion, and sufficiency “to moderate such attempts as may be supposed will be enterprised by the Dutch in the Indies.” Mr. Fitz-Herbert, a gentleman of very good worth, Mr. Pennington, Sir Ed. Horwood, Sir John Hambden, and Capt. Thompson, all known to be very worthy men, referred for consideration. Sir Dudley Diggs and Sir Clement Edmondes return their best thanks for the Company’s kindness to them. Concerning a conference with Sir James Cunningham and Sir C. Edmondes as to the revival of the Patent for Scotland to trade in the East Indies, notwithstanding all that has been done to disannul it. The Lords Commissioners and others having been gratified for their great pains in this last treaty with the Dutch, 200*l.* is voted as a gratuity to the Governor, 150*l.* to the Deputy Governor, and 100*l.* each to Alderman Haliday, Mr. Treasurer, Mr. Bell, and Mr. Handford. Wm. Phillipps appointed measurer of timber at Blackwall, in the room of Binyon, displaced. [Seven pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 382–389.]

London.

713. Chamberlain to Carleton. The English Commissioners for the East India business have been well paid for their pains, having had presents from both sides. Lord Digby and Sir Foulke Greville had each a basin and ewer of gold, of the value of 300*l.*, from the States, and a chain of gold, of the like value, from the English East India Company. Knows not how many more had their part au gateau in proportion. The Company have dispatched a good ship, the Bull, with letters to the Indies to give notice to both sides of this agreement, but our men begin to murmur and misdoubt that all is not well there, seeing we cannot hear or see any return thence all this year. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Vol. CIX., Jac. I., No. 161, Cal., p. 68.]

Aug. 1.
Patani.

714. Account of goods given by the Queen [? of Patani] to Jonas Viney and Henry Fosdicke; she sending for them to her court, explained to them by Wm. Webb that these goods being her share of the cloth given the Orankays for the prize, she gave two-thirds to Jonas and one-third to Henry. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 807.]

[The Hague.]

715. Carleton to Viscount Doncaster. The States Commissioners are returned from his Majesty, and two days since made their report to their masters of their whole negotiation, the conclusion whereof did sweeten the distastes of the beginning and whole progress, his Majesty having by his authority set a provisional order for three years betwixt our merchants, as well in Greenland as in the East Indies, and feasted and presented the States Commissioners, which was more than they expected. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 3.
Whitehall.

716. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. He will have understood by this time the result of the Commissioners' negotiations. His particular recommendation made Naunton give respect to M. Goch, whom he [Naunton] takes to have been the honestest man of them; but supposes he was single, as Naunton kept himself, with some ado, out of the business of the treaty, and thus found his poor opinions better accepted by his Majesty when they were at losses. They are said to have made some purchases among our Commissioners, who Naunton doubts not will be no gainers by it in the end. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 4.

717. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The treaty in 31 articles concluded with the Dutch on the 7th of July last, and to be ratified by the two Companies within one month from that date, is now ratified and confirmed, according to his Majesty's ratification, and the committees promise to use their utmost endeavours to cause their people in the Indies to perform the same; ordered that the great seal of the Company be put to the one part and sent over as soon as the like is received under the seal of the Dutch East India Company, which is to be kept by this Company. Sir Noel Caron to be informed that the Company have performed for their part what they promised. The general auditors to have the assistance of the other auditors. Newiman recommended as a factor. Letters read from John Burrell and Jarvis Locket, from Ireland, about supplying timber. Bill of 4*l.* 16*s.* for engrossing the ratification of the treaty to be paid. 100*l.* to be paid to Sir Henry

1619.

Neville for timber. Letters read from Mr. Barwick and Wm. Kirford of the Bear, from Cape de Verd, with account of extraordinary storms, in which they lost company of the Star; two men fell overboard, Lawrence Averey and Jas. Paine; and the good refreshment they found there of beeves, goats, and hens, commending that place as extraordinary good to touch at. Capt. Adams to be advised thereof, but not to go there except in case of necessity. [One page and a half. Court Bk. IV., 390-391.]

Aug. 5.
Jacatra.

718. Abstract of a general letter written from Jacatra. Arrival of General Coen, 4 Feb. 1619, at Amboyna, with four ships, where he found all things in good order. Seizure of the adjoining places, by which means the Netherlands have great reputation in those quarters. Ternate and Tidore at war. How the Dutch fleet should set upon the English. The former made a land journey with 400 men, took the town of Japara by assault, and burnt it the second time. The English fleet in the straits of Sunda. The fort of Jacatra held out against the English and the King of Jacatra. The Dutch induced to surrender the fort 19 Jan. upon conditions. The conditions of the first accord. The Dutch governor taken prisoner by the King of Jacatra. Another Dutch governor appointed. The fort summoned to surrender by Sir Thos. Dale; the English and the King of Jacatra plant batteries of 30 or 35 pieces of ordnance against it. Conditions of the second accord. The Dutch refuse to surrender the fort to the English. Conditions of the third accord for surrendering the fort to the King of Bantam. That King conquers the King of Jacatra, and takes his kingdom from him, 15 Feb. 1619. The English fleet sails from Jacatra to Bantam. Dutch ships surprised by English ships; the former take refuge in Amboyna. The English fleet sail from Bantam, taking with them their merchandise and three boys of China. General Coen arrives at Jacatra 28 May, and lands 1,000 men in the fort; they take the town of Jacatra by assault, notwithstanding there were 3,000 "Banthaners," and burnt it. The fort commands all the country round about. The Dutch prisoners set at liberty by the King of Bantam. He offers to keep friendship with the Dutch as heretofore, but underhand; forbids any man to trade with them. Four Dutch ships sent to Jambi and Patani to look out for the two English ships. Four ships left by General Coen before Bantam, to beset the haven; he resolves to compel Bantam to yield to reason. [Twelve pages. Dutch. Endorsed by Carleton, "Relation of the East Indies, anno 1619." Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 6.

720. Court Minutes of the East India Company. One Newman recommended for employment. A commodity having been offered to this Company of great moment, "which because it is unfit to be publicly spoken of or known," a committee is appointed to see it and consider thereof. Further inquiries to be made of Brownlowe; recommended for employment. Suit of Thos. Gainsford. The Company have "no employment fit for a man of his fashion." Capt. Thompson and Mr. FitzHerbert to be conferred with about their entertainment; also Captains Tucker and Argoll, who have been employed to the Somers Islands and Virginia. Petition of Jas. Barker, of Deptford, for Bustian's place of nailer to the Company. John Cartwright, "a Blackwellhall man, an apprentice sometimes in Shrewsbury," to be conferred with about his going to the Indies; also Michael Croker and Jo. Cooper. Certain orders to be observed concerning the taphouses; to restrain the workmen from going out to their dinners abroad, whereby the loss of much time may be saved. Benefit to the Company by Mr. Burrell managing both the King's and this Company's business. [One page and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 391-393.]

Aug. 7. 721. Hen. Lord Danvers to Carleton. The Spanish Dons not well pleased with the bonfires made upon the conclusion of "that treaty we had to establish the East Indian trade." [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Vol. CX., No. 11, Cal., p. 556. Addenda, Jac. I.*]

Aug. 7. 722. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The States Commissioners and the deputies of the East India merchants returned from England 24 ultimo, the latter going to their several homes without appearing at the Hague. Their report of their negotiations deferred till Saturday last (31st July), when, in presence of the Prince of Orange and Count William, they acquitted themselves well and thankfully towards his Majesty in the relation of his princely usage of them during their abode in England, and his care in preserving the amity between his crown and those provinces, by suppressing the long-nourished disputes and difficulties. Their relation lasted from eight in the morning till two in the afternoon, and tended to express their full satisfaction. The States bethink themselves of the like means of an ambassage to settle their affairs in France, four letters of reprisal being granted against the Dutch merchants because of the taking of two French ships in the East Indies, whereby their voyage was overthrown. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 10. 723. Joseph Cockram to Sir Thos. Smythe. One of the Dutch factors, Christian de Cooper, "taken lunatic," and in such a fierce madness that he will not be kept in his bed, "besides his continual cursing and calling upon the devil to take him hence, which are words very ill-beseeming aboard a ship or elsewhere." He has been put ashore and the magistrates communicated with. The commissions delivered by the States are in the custody of the other factor, John Clante, a very discreet and sober young man. Note of De Cooper's goods left in the town-hall of Weymouth. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 808.]

Aug. $\frac{10}{20}$. 724. The States General of the United Provinces to the King. Complimentary letter, attributing the entire success of the conclusion of the treaty to his Majesty's wisdom, industry, and promptitude, and praying that by his Majesty's authority it may be strictly observed by his subjects, as the States engage that all the articles shall be religiously observed on their part everywhere with the utmost friendship and integrity. [French. Three pages. Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 10.
The Hague.

725. Carleton to Chamberlain. His "serious endeavours" to bring about the treaty, which has succeeded so well and so much to the content of our Company, as is sufficiently witnessed by their liberality to the Commissioners. Complains of the "prime instrument" being forgotten, "as I must tell you I find myself." Wishes him to let Mr. Bell understand that Carleton is not insensible of such neglect, and sooner or later Carleton may have opportunity to make it appear. Sir Noel Caron has no such cause to complain, but Carleton is not the first that has used the motto Sic vos non vobis. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 11-20.

726. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Mr. Bateman, being 56 or more, thought too aged for employment. John Cooper entertained a factor, and to proceed in the Dutch ship with Mr. Cartwright. Rich. Winch refused. John Cartwright to be employed, and Jas. Cartwright to be ready to depart from Amsterdam next week. Michael Croker referred to next Court.

Aug. 13.—Letters approved and ordered to be despatched by the Dutch ship of Amsterdam to Sir Thos. Dale, Capt. Jourdain, Capt. Parker, and others. Advances to Jas. Cartwright and John Cooper, who are to leave for Amsterdam this afternoon. Gratuities to Andrew Ellam, Christopher Lanman, Rich. Mountney, Francis Sadler, and Rich. Atkinson. 50*l.* to be paid to Sir Thos. Hewitt for the relief of Walter Cocks according to former order. Suit of Greene the surgeon, who went forth with Sir Thos. Roe, "abused himself in his service and returned with disgrace," for part of the money for his goods, stayed till the ambassador's return, which is like to be very shortly. Half of John Greene's fine remitted for his freedom. Michael Croker to be entertained as a factor in the next fleet.

Aug. 18.—Gratuity to Richard Atkinson. Petition of William Nealson, who brought the letters overland out of Persia, that the Company would continue the 300*l.* they have of his at 10 per cent. interest. Letters from Capt. Adams and others, of the Bull, from Portland, concerning Christian de Cooper, one of the Dutch merchants aboard the Bull, "who fell lunatic the day after their departure from the Downs, raging so violently and seeking with weapons and knives to spoil all that came near him." Thos. Gainsford refused employment.

Aug. 20.—Nich. Crispe to be again employed as a purser's mate. Offer of an upholsterer to buy all the embroidered velvet carpets at 6*l.* apiece. John Hayward and James Dover referred for employment. [Four pages and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 393-7.]

Aug. 20.
The Hague.

727. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. News of a fight about Bantam in January last between eleven English ships under Sir Thos. Dale and seven Dutch ships, the result of which is not yet known; the 1619.

Hollanders afterwards retired to Amboyna "to fetch more strength" and take their revenge of a ship of theirs, laden with pepper to the value of 30,000*l.*, which Sir Thos. Dale had taken under colour of friendship. It is thought they had another encounter about the end of March last. This Company has resolved to send an extraordinary supply, and to send their secretary Burrell [Boreel] to England to persuade the English Company to do the like, to resist those who may take advantage of their differences. It is conjectured that Sir Thos. Dale has besieged Jacatra; in going to Bantam he lost his admiral by shipwreck, upon the blind island of Engano in the straits of Sunda. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

The Hague.

728. Carleton to the King. The States not thinking that they have sufficiently expressed their contentment in the success of their late embassy, by their express letters now sent to his Majesty have deputed to Carleton a message full of gratitude and acknowledgment of eternal obligation to his Majesty, to whose wisdom and singular insight into affairs of greatest doubt and difficulty they wholly ascribe the good event of this treaty. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 21.
The Hague.

729. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Mons. Gogh acknowledges Sec. Naunton's favour and furtherance in his affairs, and complains that his colleagues have been defective in such acknowledgment, but hopes to remedy it. "There be that have taken more than ordinary pains in this business who may say, Il n'y eut jamais de si bonnes nocces qu'il n'en eut de mal dinés, but it is a merchants' treaty, and they treat like merchants, who seldom look back to the causes or motives, but take the market as it goeth." [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

The Hague.

730. Carleton to Buckingham. The States have made ample acknowledgment by letters delivered by their Ambassador, and message to Carleton, of obligation to the King for the happy success of the late treaty in England; and the Commissioners in their report ascribe most of the good offices done them to his Lordship. News by a ship richly laden from the East Indies that the difference between the English and Dutch in the Moluccas is come to Bantam, and all places where any of their ships meet. It is thought they (the Dutch) would not leave the loss of the Black Lion unrevenge, but lest both should become a prey to the Spaniards through weakness, a secretary is sent to the Company in England to agree between both of some extraordinary supplies. [Draft by Carleton with corrections. One page and a quarter. Holland Corresp.]

1619?

731. "The Hollanders' proposition for restitution of the Black Lion," taken by Sir Thos. Dale in the East Indies the 5-15 Dec. 1618, and afterwards burnt in an action between the Hollanders and English at the siege of the Dutch fortress of Jacatra. [*See ante No. 529. Firando.

732. Wm. Eaton to Capt. Cocks in Osaka, Fushamy, Miako, or elsewhere. Sends goods with Ed. Sayer's secretary by bearer. Concerning the Emperor's "gushen" delivered by Capt. Addames, and sold to the China captain, wonders the Emperor took no exception to her sale as formerly he hath done; has written to the China captain about it. All in good health, and the Dutch quiet enough. [One page, injured by damp. Endorsed, "Received in Fushamy 18 Sept." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 810.]

Aug. 23.
Whitehall.

733. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. Doubts not but he hears of the prize taken from the Hollanders by Sir Thos. Dale, to quit the wrongs done by them to our men. Hears it is worth 100,000*l*. Notice should be given from both States of this last accord, that we may concur honourably as one body, for he hears it assured from all parts that this conjunction of the two East India Companies hath cramped the sweetest intelligences we have either with Spain or France. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Aug. 26.

734. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Jas. Cartwright and John Cooper, English factors for Amsterdam, with news from the Delft, lately returned from the Indies, that the English have taken a Dutch ship, the Black Lion, of 700 tons, laden with 600 tons of pepper, and 100 tons of other goods of great value, in the road of Bantam in December last; a fight between 11 English and 7 Holland ships between Bantam and Jacatra, wherein the Dutch lost 20 men, and afterwards sailed to the Moluccas, "to join more strength to seek revenge;" that the fort of Jacatra was besieged by 7 or 8,000 Indians by land and the English by sea, so that they doubted the taking thereof within a very short time, having in it between 200 and 300 pieces of eight with other things of great value; the loss of the Sun, with the saving of Sir Thos. Dale, John Jourdain, and others; the rest, swimming ashore, were slain by the Indians of that country; together with the discontent of the Dutch at Amsterdam, and doubt of further mischief before the news of peace can come into the Indies. Caleb Buxton referred for employment. Letters read from Thos. Barwicke, master of the Bear, and Henry Bates, merchant from Cape de Verd, of 8 Feb. last, with account of a great storm therè. Supposing the store to be lost at Jacatra, as reported, a good quantity of shot, powder, and cordage to be provided and sent over; also tar, a special preservative for shipping in the Indies. Concerning a supply of men in the Indies; the main want there. The proceedings between the English and Dutch in the Indies being but rumours and reports, no notice to be taken of them in the Company's letters, but the Governor is requested to write a private letter, commending their valour for what is past, but persuading them to observe the articles of the Treaty of Peace now concluded; it is not thought necessary to send them in French, although the originals are in that language. Gratuities the same as last year; to the Governor 800*l*., the Deputy 300*l*., the Treasurer, leaving him to satisfy his servants, 500*l*., to the Committees 1,200*l*., to be distributed at the discretion of the Governor,

Deputy, and Treasurer, and 200*l.* more to be distributed at the discretion of the Governor and Deputy. Grant of 150*l.* more out of the estate of Hugh Greete to pay his debts, the remainder with other remainders of old accounts to be disposed of at the discretion of the Company to build an hospital or almshouse for maimed men, or orphans or widows, whose parents and husbands died in the Company's service. All who shall in future be employed by the Company to pay 4*s.* per month out of their wages for the relief of those who may be maimed in the service, as Sir Wm. Russell gave notice was done by the King's servants at Chatham. [Two pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 397-400.]

Aug. 28.
Madrid.

735. Fras. Cottington to Sir Dudley Carleton. These people are so wise as they show no great dislike of the agreement made between the two East Indian Companies, nor hath it wrought much waywardness in them, for they still proceed to a "Legar Union" against the pirates with the King our master. [Extract from Corresp. Spain.]

Aug. 29.
Amboyna.

736. Sebastianus Danckaerts to ——. Narrow escape from being drowned. Account of his ministerial labours. Death of Dr. Casper Wilters after a long sickness, so as the writer was obliged to undertake his ministry in the Malay language as well as in his own. Increase of the fruits of his preaching. Good government of General Coen. Continues to administer the holy baptism as before; the children not brought to him in such numbers as at first. Baptism of adults after instruction. Edict of the Vice-Governor Vermeer that he would admit Moors or Mahometans into his government if they renounced their religion and embraced Christianity; "some, but in truth very few, could be made sensible hereof;" some are retired to Hitto and other places where the Moors govern, but the greater part have offered to embrace Christianity. His endeavours in the cause and baptism of some of the Moors. Has been unable as yet to administer the holy sacrament, finding more obstacles than were expected. The schools increased; order of General Coen for all scholars in want to have 1 lb. a rice a day, "by which means there is an apparent increase of scholars." Refers to the discourse of the Staet of the Christians of Amboyna for more particulars. Hopes to bring it with him next year. Open war with the English. "Received in the Hague, this 18th of August 1620. Translated out of Nether Dutch." [Two pages and a half. Holland Corresp.]

Sept. 1^r.
Paris.

737. Sir Ed. Herbert to Carleton. Desires particulars of the instructions of the embassy of the Dutch, who are little in the good graces of this nation, of which the writer is not sorry, so as advantage is taken to enter into a stricter league with them, "which God send Sir Thos. Dale hath not spoiled." [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Sept. 1-8.

738. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Jas. Cartwright and John Cooper from Amsterdam, that the

Dutch will carry the Company's money freight free to the East Indies, supposing there is the full sum of 20,000 ryals. Ralph, the brother of Sir Clement Edmondes, to be entertained a factor at his brother's request; also John Holland. Concerning a dividend; adventurers desirous to pay in, so they may have "defalcation" made, but there being no present need of money it was left to a more seasonable time. Robert Young's debt.

Sept. 2.—Letters read from Sir Thos. Roe, Andrew Shilling, master, and James Bag, deputy to the farmers of customs, from Plymouth, with news of the arrival of the Anne from the East Indies; from Sir Thos. Roe a general taste was received of the state of the Company's affairs at Surat, Persia, and Mocha, a place of excellent hopes for trade, and expectation of the return of the Expedition. Letter read from Robert Price about the taking of two Portugal frigates by the Expedition near Persia; the Governor charged the committee to keep it secret, but if published to justify it as they well may. Arrangements for the Ambassador's coming to London.

Sept. 3.—Great store of silk shortly expected from Turkey; resolved, therefore, to have the silk sent overland from Plymouth, out of the ship just arrived from the East Indies. 8,000 bales of silk may be had yearly out of Persia, whereof 2,000 bales are too fine to be of use here. Concerning a dividend on the first joint stock. Debts of John Halsey, Robert and William Angell, Richard Sleigh, Edward Williams, Gilbert Morewood, and Francis Taylor. Nich. Wolley to be entertained as a purser's mate. A hundred tons of cider to be provided at 5*l.* a ton; 200*l.* worth of nails to be taken of Thomas Moore, of Deptford, the King's works not having used 40*l.* worth. Proceedings of committees at Blackwall.

Sept. 8.—Reasons for not taking Moore's nails, "leaving him to give satisfaction to his creditors (by nails) if he will." Thos. Thompson to be entertained. Debtors to the Company. 600 cloths to be purchased, "being informed that the Red Sea will of itself vent 2 or 300 cloths." Petition of Robt. Burston to serve the Company with nails at Deptford, proportionably with Thos. Moore. John Clarke to be employed as a factor. Abraham Cartwright urged to perform his bargain of indigo. Agreement with Francis Oliver to make forty butts of cider at 5*l.* per ton. Wine vinegar, an excellent beverage, as used by John Hawkins, to be put aboard each ship. Adventures now paid in to have an abatement for time. Dividend on the first joint stock to be declared at a general court. [Seven pages and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 400-407.]

Sept. 8.
Firando.

739. Wm. Eaton to Capt. Cocks in Osaka, Fushamy, Miako, or elsewhere. Sale of goods. Knows not when Capt. Addames will go up, in that he is sickly and minded to take physick. Harwood returned from Nangasaki; Nealson, Osterwick, and Burgis with the writer. Desires some liquorice may be bought for him if there be any; if not, a kind of leaf "that they use to put in chaw" which tastes like liquorice. [One page, injured by damp. Endorsed, "Rec. in Fushamy, 24 Sept." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 811.]

Sept. 10. 740. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the dividend on the first joint stock. Petition of Edward Grant, returned purser in the Bull to be again employed; also of George, brother and executor of Ralph Preston, factor, deceased, concerning his brother's property. Henry Short to be employed as a factor. [One page and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 407-408.]

Sept. 11. 741. Chamberlain to Carleton. Sir Thos. Roe come home rich, they say, from the East Indies, and also that our men there have repaid themselves and repaired our honour upon the Hollanders. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CX., No. 54, Cal., p. 75.]

Sept. 15. 742. Samuel Foxcrofte to the East India Company. Sailed from Saldanha Bay 15th May. Journal of the voyage. Spied four Flemish ships, having 94 pieces of ordnance, at anchor, at the straits of Sunda, which suffered them to pass, but afterwards came up to their ship. The master called up all the people, and propounded to them whether they were willing to fight, which all with one voice yielded unto; "whereupon, having drunk together, every man, to our thinking, prepared himself to his quarter for defence;" but the commander, John Hinchley, said half the company were not to be found; the men were unwilling to fight upon such disadvantage. Conference with the Dutch commander, who said they had got the upper hand, having chased away Sir Thos. Dale, Capt. Jourdain, General Pring, with all English ships from these parts, and that they were appointed to wait and take all English ships, therefore commanded the English to surrender. The conditions. James Ferdinando, Samuel Jenkins, and others, taken by the Dutch on their way to Bantam in a skiff. How the English company were dispersed aboard the several Dutch ships, which sailed for Jacatra and set them ashore. His disputes with his commander, John Hinchley, and protest read before Hinchley, Edward Brand, John Rawlins, and Jacob Lane, which he also showed to Timothy Johnson, surgeon, and others. On 3rd Sept. Ferdinando, Jenkins, and others stole away in a prow without victuals or necessaries, whither is not known; the master's perverseness, the cause of their desperate course. Begg the Company to suspend their judgment until they hear further. The Black Lion taken by Sir Thos. Dale, but afterwards by misfortune burnt; he also chased away the Dutch general and all his ships from these parts, and about the middle of April sailed, leaving neither ship nor factory at Jacatra or at Bantam, only Philip Badnedg and three others to keep possession of Bantam House. The Dutch general arrived at Jacatra on 18 May with fifteen sail, and on the 20th took and burnt Jacatra, where they have built a fort; but the country people have all fled, only Dutch and some Chinese remaining. The Dutch keep Bantam blockaded by sea, are at mortal enmity with the people, have 22 sail at Jacatra and about Bantam, and expect five or six more; they are exceedingly strong in these parts, but exceedingly hated and abhorred of the inhabitants. News that they are driven from Masulipatam; but nothing heard of Sir Thos. Dale and the rest of the fleet; only that Jourdain is at Patani. The master and others sent to Sakadanne [Succadana] in a Dutch ship, as they desired. Resolution of the writer and others to go to Patani. Hears a murmuring among the Flemings that Sir Thos. Dale with a fleet is upon the coast of Coromandel, and has joined with the Portugals and taken the Flemish fort at Palacatto [? Pulicat], and beaten them from the other parts upon the coast; cannot resolve upon the truth of this. [Endorsed, "Of the rendering up of the Star." Four pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 812.]

Sept. 15-17. 743. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Employment of Sir John Hampden, recommended by Sir John Leigh, as commander of a ship, although it be under a general that is no knight. Mr. Greenwell taxed by Sir Richard Bingley for some speeches he made in court about the employment of one Manley; the committees desire to have it searched out who did that ill office, that he may be censured, for the example of others. Edward Collins to be employed in the counting-house for the sake of Sir Nicholas Salter. Young Perpoint, "of a dull and heavy disposition" and unfit for the Company's service, to be bound to some trade. Notice of the arrival of the Anne in the Downs, and the landing of the Lord Ambassador, whose expenses with his lady's are to be defrayed to Gravesend, where a committee will assemble to-morrow to conduct them to London; a dozen coaches to be ready at Tower wharf to carry him to his house; John Capper to proceed to Rochester to bespeak a breakfast there, if so resolved on. About procuring ryals from Spain. Letter read from the Earl of Lincoln from Cambridge about payment of his father's adventures. Humphrey FitzHerbert to be conferred with about his going to Bantam. Captain Shilling thought upon for Surat. Christopher Pine, lately returned in the Dragon, to be employed as a purser's mate.

Sept. 17.—The wreck at Yarmouth of one of the Greenland ships appertaining to the account of the united Companies. Arrival of eighty tons of cordage from Muscovy. Care to be taken not to exceed the number of ryals [which] in their patent [the Company are allowed to send out of the kingdom]; as to procuring them from Spain, committees to confer with Sir Thos. Roe about "the business at the Cape" (i.e., supplies being sent there for the company's ships), in which business M. Boreel says the Dutch intend to join with the English. Being informed that Sir Thos. Roe, meeting with the Dutch Admiral, and hearing there were great hopes of a friendly conclusion they both wrote to the English and Dutch severally that in regard of those hopes they should surcease from all hostility until they received further directions, it was commended "for a very wise and worthy course, hoping it would be a means to withhold them there from further hurt and mischief." Proffer by Alderman Halliday of his house for the Lord Ambassador's use; resolved that the Company bear the charges of his entertainment until he has delivered his message to his Majesty; the letters brought by the Ambassador for the Dutch to be delivered to M. Boreel. Edward Grant, desirous of employment, condemned for being of a mutinous disposition, a fosterer of such persons, and very forward in private trade, and therefore held unfit. Mr. Steele, returned with my Lord Ambassador, much condemned for his unworthy carriage abroad, having performed nothing that was intended at his departure, but hath brought home a great private trade, put the Company to an extraordinary charge by a wife and children, and wronged my Lord Ambassador by a false and surmised contestation, and arrogating a higher title and place to himself than ever was intended; held unworthy of the salary first granted. Information that private trade is returned in this ship (the Anne), both of Captain Towerson, Mr. Steele, and many others, in great quantities, all of which the Ambassador has marked with the Company's private mark; all such goods to be brought up to the Governor's house, and kept there until the Company resolve what is to be done with them. The Anne to unlade at Woolwich. [Four pages. Court Bk. IV., 408-412.]

Sept. 18.
The Hague.

744. Carleton to Chamberlain. Hears nothing of Mr. Abbott, of whom he wrote, but is gladder he spake with him than with Mr. Bell, who sounds in such cases very faintly. A secretary of the Dutch East India Company is now in England to set us right again, after these new accidents, if it be possible. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Sept. 22-25.

745. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Grant of 40*l.* upon petition of Richard Dove towards releasing certain English captives from Turkish pirates. Concerning Lord Warwick's men entertained in the Indies by Capt. Pring. Petition of Margery, widow of Peter Bell, accidentally killed on board the Anne; dishonest conduct of the coroner. Names to be given to the new ships now building; the great ship at Deptford to be called the London, that at Blackwall the Exchange, and others the Hart, Eagle, and Roebuck. Mr. FitzHerbert, thought to be a very worthy commander, to be conferred with for the chief place. Sir John Hambden referred for future consideration. Petition of a son of Sir John Watts to be employed in some place of command. Letter read from my Lord of Buckingham on behalf of Capt. Pennington, who was in the action with Sir Walter Raleigh, and is suitor for the chief place. Consideration as to the disposal of the fleet; "the intent of the Dutch being to have both fleets, the English and Dutch spread themselves upon the coasts in India to disperse the Portugals, wheresoever they shall find them, and keep them from drawing to a head." Committee to accompany the Lord Ambassador to attend his Majesty at Whitehall to receive answer of his embassy and presents.

Sept. 23.—This meeting called purposely to consider in what manner to proceed with the sale of the silks, whether publicly or privately; opinion that the sooner it be sold the better, because the town is at present bare and empty, and a great ship expected daily from the Straits with great quantities; to prevent combination, four nobles to be the first price and not under, and to be sold in two equal parts.

Sept. 24.—Consideration about the sale of the Persian silk; the raw silk divided into two parcels of 35 and 36 bales each, and sold respectively to Richard Danes and Sheriff Hamerslye for 26s. 10d. per lb. Two Lahore carpets, 4½ yards wide, sold for 13l. 10s. and 10l. respectively.

Sept. 25.—Sir Thos. Roe having been with his Majesty and given account of his embassy, it was made known that he purposed likewise to give satisfaction to this court of his proceedings and service performed, and will deliver up some journals and accounts he hath in his custody. Survey taken by Sir Thos. Roe of the several dispositions of the Company's factors at Surat and those parts, and those who have most basely and injuriously traduced Sir Thos. in their letters, especially John Browne and Wm. Biddulph, "noted to exceed in the highest measure, putting upon him as much as malice can possibly invent with all the spiteful disgrace that may be." Most of the factors there joined in a confederacy amongst themselves, being jealous that any strange eye should look into their actions. Examinations to be taken, and some severe course put in execution against them. Fursland's letter to be looked out, who writes they keep a commonwealth amongst themselves. The most culpable to be gleaned out and sent for home by degrees until all be weeded thence, and to be careful that they be not permitted to get their estates out of the Company's hands until satisfaction be given for the honest gaining of them. [Four pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 412-416.]

Macassar.

746. Thos. Staverton to the East India Company. Was appointed to this factory in January 1617-8 by George Ball, when he sent the Solomon, Thomas, and Attendance to lade near upon four hundred tons of rice for the Bandas and Moluccas under the command of Cassarian David, but through foul weather the ships were separated, and the Solomon and Attendance taken by four Dutch ships near Pooloroon, "after resistance in continuing fight to their power, and carried into Neira, for which great victory the Hollanders made such triumph for certain days as if they had won the world, and how slavishly they use your servants (their captives) is by some of their own letters worse than Turkish." The Hollanders have twice within twelve months made incursions into this road to see what they could filch, and to make this country afraid, but the people are their deadly enemies. The Company's ships have been these two years intercepted from Banda and surprised by the Hollanders; last year no ships went thither; yet the English hold out at Pooloroon in spite of all Hollanders. This country admits a settled factory to none but the English, and was formerly planted by Capt. Jourdain; the Portugals much frequent here, but are not permitted to settle any residence. The two kings of this island have ever been kind to the Company's servants and willingly embrace trade with them. The King of Tolo is anxiously expecting "the gratification" sent to him by Capt. Pring's fleet, and which has arrived at Bantam. [One page and a half. Endorsed, "Received by the Dutch White Bear, 1 January 1620[-1]." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 813.]

Sept. 25.
Firando.

747. Wm. Eaton to Rich. Cocks at Osaka, Sakaii, Fushamy, Miako, or elsewhere. Capt. Addames has sent Mr. Sayer's "scetore." Arrival of another Dutch ship from Patani, one of those which took the Sampson and the Hound, Capt. Jourdain, the commander, being killed in the fight. The master of the Hound, Wm. Gordone, and Michael Paine, the carpenter, are here in the English house, having been got ashore by Capt. Addames' means. Hears from them that the English are like to be beaten out of the Indies by the Dutch, who came against the English fleet with 18 sail of great ships, the which Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Pring hearing of, and fearing the worst, with some 11 or 12 sail departed from Bantam. Where the English house stood, the Dutch have built two strong castles, and besides are like to have Bantam in their possession. The English ships are to meet at Priaman and join with those come from England this year, and all fight the Dutch. The Dragon and her fleet have been in fight with the Portugals, and, as they think, the Lion, and it is expected are lost or taken by the Portugals or Dutch, for there is no news of them. Death of Wickham at Jacatra of the flux, worth, it is reported, five or six thousand pounds sterling. West likewise dead, having been killed by a Dutchman at Jambi. Ball is captain of the New Year's Gift, Spaldinge captain of the Unicorn and to be President at Bantam, as Capt. Jourdain is dead. Adam Denton is principal at Patani. Totten gone home in the Little James; Osterwick to Nangasaki. Knows not how to make money to pay their way. [One page and a half, much injured and torn. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 814.]

Sept. 28—
Oct. 1.

748. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from John Browne, factor at Ahmedabad, dated 25 January last, making a large relation of their proceedings there, some condemned absolutely untrue by Sir Thos. Roe, who desired the Company to forbear their censures until his writings might be perused, whereby the malice and pride of John Browne should plainly be discovered; Sir Thos. Roe of opinion nevertheless that Browne is a very honest and just man to the Company, and one that will not deceive them. Sir Thos. Roe's papers and accounts to be kept apart in a chest. Mrs. Hudson, a gentlewoman that had leave to accompany Mrs. Towerson to the Indies, to pay freight for her goods brought home.

Oct. 1.—William Baffyn, a master's mate in the Anne, to have a gratuity for his pains and "good art" in drawing out certain "plots" of the coast of Persia and the Red Sea, which are judged to have been very well and artificially performed; some to be drawn out by Adam Bowen for the benefit of such as shall be employed in those parts. Fourpence a month to be deducted from the mariners' wages and reserved for the relief of poor maimed or necessitous men that have served the Company. Consideration as to the victualling and despatch of the fleet, and the suspicion that the Portugals "will attempt this year against the English." Some question of the sincerity of the Dutch, as if it were doubtful whether they would perform truly and justly according to the capitulations made between the English and them; the Governor produced a letter, sent by the States to his Majesty, which fully confirmed the Hollanders' purpose to hold good correspondence with the English, but held to be a business "fit to be kept secret without any public speeches to be used." Mr. Boreel to give the Hollanders to understand that the Company expect they should prepare some shipping in readiness to go with the English shipping to Surat, "whereby their resolution shall be the better known." The cordage from Muscovy, so much commended, unfit for the Company's use, "having in it much stuff of the Russes mingled with tow, which makes it weak, although it showeth fair to the eye, being well layed and well tarred." Suggestions for prevention of private trade. Relief out of the wages of Thos. Jackson and John Sownd granted to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the hamlet of Ratcliffe, for the benefit of their motherless children. John Browne, carpenter in the Anne, a very mutinous person, proud, and a ringleader, to be punished. The letter of John Browne, factor at Ahmedabad, having been heard with patience, was condemned as a most indiscreet, scandalous invective against Sir Thos. Roe, and to be little better than a libel, for which it is intended to send for him home and call him to account, holding him worthy of punishment, and for Sir Thos. Roe's better satisfaction endorsed their opinion upon the letter. Committee to be appointed to confer with Sir Thos. Roe and hear his propositions and answers of what may be needful to be known. Nicholas Crispe to be purser of the London. [Three pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 416-419.]

Oct. 2.
London.

749. Chamberlain to Carleton. Sir Thos. Roe has presented the King with two antelopes, a strange and beautiful kind of red deer, a rich tent, rare carpets, umbrellas, and such like trinkets from the Great Mogul. Hears that Roe has not provided so well for himself as was thought at first, but must rely upon the Company's liberality. Has little acquaintance with any of the Company, but will set Sir Dudley Diggs on work, who is gracious among them and understands their courses, and who Chamberlain knows will be ready to do any good office in whatever may concern Carleton. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CX., No. 94, Cal., p. 82.]

Oct. 6-8.

750. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Thos. Thornborough to be a purser, and Thos. Country purser's mate. Suit of the widow of one Clements, who died at St. Helena, about freight of her late husband's goods. Letter read from Sec. Naunton to the Governor, with complaint preferred by the Spanish agent against this Company for supposed robberies, and surprising certain of their ships in the Indies, whereunto his Majesty required the Company's answer, that accordingly he may frame his to the King of Spain and his agent; their boldness and baseness wondered at. Committee appointed to make a collection of the wrongs and losses sustained by the Company, whereby they are put to a charge of 60,000*l.* a year to defend themselves and maintain their trade, and thereout to frame an answer to Mr. Secretary for his Majesty to see, who, as is conceived, will be pleased with a large answer, although some advised to have it a brief and round answer. Relation by Sir Thos. Roe of his proceedings since his going into the East Indies, the desperate state in which he found the factories at Surat, Ahmedabad, and elsewhere in the Mogul's country, the proclamations out against the English to prohibit them from all trade and to depart the land, and how at his first coming to Court he caused them to be revoked, and procured phirmands to command their acceptance and friendly entertainment, proving against the Prince himself that those things had been done without authority from the King, and by wicked subornation to have overthrown the trade of the English; how by fair and gentle courses their business may be as fairly carried on as can be expected or desired; the profits to be had by trade into the Red Sea, cent. per cent. at the worst; 10,000*l.* worth of commodities from Surat, and 30,000*l.* worth from Dabul and the ports thereabouts, may be sold there; the dangers of those of Surat, without the company of the English, trading to the Red Sea, where there is trade, it is said, for two millions yearly; to supply Mocha and Sinan (Sana) will be the life of the Surat and Persia trade, which Roe hopes the Company will be careful to preserve and continue, notwithstanding the discouragement that may be objected by the factors at Surat, who are very unwilling to have that trade prosper; the extortions which have been exacted and Roe had recovered, and the peaceable course in which he had left all matters, drawing out 21 articles, most of which the King confirmed, as well as sundry phirmands for frigates to be delivered furnished to the English for their defence against the Portugals, "who, as was delivered, were preparing an armada against the English;" how he recovered all debts, leaving only one due from a Bayan who was the King's prisoner, and in case of non-payment had promised to deliver him dead or alive into their hands; and lastly a list was read, prepared by Sir Thomas, of the remainders in the country at his coming away, both in specie, good debts, and commodities, and what is ordered to be provided for the southwards, Persia and Mocha; "this general relation gave very good content and satisfaction." All his notes and writings to be endorsed and kept in their several places, where they may be found upon any occasion.

[Sir Thos. Roe's Journal of his Embassy to "the mighty Emperor of India," containing an account of his voyage to that country, from his Orig. MS., is printed in Churchill's and in Pinkerton's Collections of Voyages.]

Oct. 8.—Special occasion of employment for well-experienced and sufficient merchants. Edward Meade to be entertained, knowing there will be need of sufficient men to make choice of calicoes, and to be placed in the factories at the Moluccas, Calicut, and other places. Note read from Edward Grant for preserving butter divers years, boiled up with pepper, cloves, and some other things.

Sir Thos. Roe's project in all probability the better and sweeter way. Journal of the voyage made by Capt. Shilling presented to the Company. The principal mutinous persons in the Anne, especially John Browne and Alexander Eward, two of the most notorious offenders, to be punished, for example to others. Notice to be given of the launch at Blackwall of the Exchange. Some hard stones brought from Surat by the Anne for ballast, given "for the use of the city to pave without Moorgate." An action to be entered against William Angell for a debt due to the Company, and the Governor to procure leave from the Lord Chamberlain, Angell being one of the King's servants. Debts of Richard Sleight, Francis Taylor, Halsey, and Nethersoll. Suit of Gabriel Towerson, "an old servant of theirs," about paying freight for his goods. Concerning a youth left in India to attend upon Towerson's wife. Petition of Ralph Harrys, surgeon in the Anne, for wages for his servant, "covertly taken (into the ship) in the Downs." Suit of William Carmihell, who has lived 32 years in the East Indies and knows all parts between the Cape and Japan, for employment. Committee appointed to consider about the exportation of calicoes by the Turkish merchants, "so it may be done privately, and not brought to be publicly argued." [Five pages. Court Bk. IV., 420-424.]

Oct. 13. 751. Minutes of a Court of Commissioners for the East India and Muscovy Companies. Explanations of William Angell, the King's fishmonger, concerning his own and his brother Robert's debt. William Carmihell, a Scotchman, recommended by some great persons, to be entertained on certain conditions. Concerning the Spanish Agent's complaint, Secretary Calvert having written another letter on that subject. [Half a page. Court Bk. IV., 425.]

Oct. 15. 752. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Request of Sir Henry, son of Sir Robt. Lee, deceased, and married to the widow of William Quarles, to have the adventures lately belonging to Quarles turned over to his account, and to take up his freedom by patrimony; but being very ill and unable to stir abroad, Mr. Deputy is requested to see the oath administered. The stones brought in the Anne, provided they do not exceed the value of 5*l.*, or 20 nobles, to be given to pave by Moorgate for the use of the city. John Woodhouse, a preacher, offering his services in the East Indies, and commended by Dr. Hill and Mr. Meryall, requested to preach from the 10th verse of the 50th Psalm at Dr. Wood's church. Courts to meet three times a week, "until business be better overpassed and the ships near their departure," and the Governor to entreat the Committees to meet somewhat earlier. Concerning the sale of commodities at the next general court. Agreement with Edward Meade, factor, with a salary of 100*l.* per annum the first two years, and 150*l.* the remaining five years. Salaries of factors in the Indies to be increased according to their work, and referred to the Committees for Commissions, who have already increased those of Aldworthe, Fras. Fetiplace, and many others. Petition of Christopher Greene, who went forth surgeon with Sir Thos. Roe and returned in the Bull, but was discharged from the Company's service in the Indies, for favour, Sir Thos. Roe pleading for him. Petition of Jas. Demaistres, brewer, desiring favour to brew for the Company hereafter. Information from Mr. Towerson that a merchant on the Exchange taxed the Company for choosing an unfit person for a factor; to be inquired into. [Two pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 425-427.]

Oct. 16.
Ispahan.

753. Thos. Barker, Edw. Monox, Wm. Bell, and Thos. Barker, jun., to the East India Company. Unavoidable necessity of Barker's abode at Ispahan. Refer to their advices of 18 May last for their progress in the Persian design. Awaited in Ispahan the arrival of the Sophy, who, in June last, made his secret entry into this city by private and unknown passages. Solicited audience to deliver his Majesty's letters, "but the King, that he might the better divulge and demonstrate the magnificent state of his court, deferred it until he had prepared a princely and sumptuous banquet, whereto he invited all foreign ambassadors resident in his Court, viz., the Spanish, Indian, Turkish, Russian, Tartarian, and Uzebeck ambassadors," to which the writers were also invited and appointed to present his Majesty's letters. This was performed with much ceremony, and the letters were graciously accepted by the Sophy, "glorying no doubt to have it published in an assembly of so many repugnant and discrepant nations, that it hath pleased so potent and yet so far remote and diffident a prince to direct his royal letters to him," which they saw delivered into the custody of one of his attending nobles for translation at a convenient time. "The greatest part of this day being spent in royal entertainments, intermixed with divers extravagant and pleasant discourses, as it pleased his Highness to offer the occasion." The Spanish Ambassador and others left the presence, and the Sophy then had sole conference with the writers. Complained of the injuries and losses they had suffered, for which the Sophy seemed to make an apology for his people, affirming that they were not acquainted with his pleasure, and that the writers should never have the like cause of complaint. He charged Emanguolique "the super-eminent Duke in all the territories of Persia" to see the accomplishment of his princely promise, and that he would not interfere in any way between the Portugals and the English, affirming that his protection extended to neither of them at sea. This was his answer also to a Carmelite friar, the Pope's legate, who seemed to suggest that it was an impeachment of his royal dignity to permit the surprise of his allies in his own ports; but he replied that our disunion was his rejoicing, for that if our forces were united the whole world would be insufficient for us. The Sophy voluntarily and solemnly vowed in this public assembly that he would inviolably preserve every article contracted and concluded either with his Majesty or the King of Spain, but this assurance he limited to the term of his own life, not knowing, as he affirmed, what his successors might do therein. He alleged, though most untruly, that he had kept his compact and not permitted the export of his silks through the Turkish territories, and that he expected corresponding performance on the part of the English; to which they answered that the interception of their advices to England and other parts had been the sole cause of their so tardy performance. Were invited by the Sophy the same night to be spectators of interludes and other pastimes, wherein the most part of the night being spent, the Sophy departed. Great marks of favour shown by the Sophy to them; "sometimes he would secretly whisper unto us that he had a resolution to take Ormuz from the King of Spain and deliver it unto the English nation," and his fair promises, but contrary performances. Death of Nich. Russell at Moghistan. Present given to the Sophy; his promise to send for them the next day and give them a favourable hearing of whatever they had to propound, but many days were spent in vain expectation, and he left on his hunting progress without seeing them. Arrival of Thos. Barker (jun.?) on 6 August with the Company's letters of 8 December 1618, not only revoking the order for Barker's return to England, but increasing his wages and establishing him in the place of Edw. Connok, deceased, whose malicious slanders the Company had discovered. All differences between himself and Edw. Monox long since accorded, since the cause of their disunion is taken away by the shipping hence of Edw. Pettus, who they have dismissed from the Company's service for the reasons expressed in their several consultations. (See April 4, 1619, p. 307.) Will attend to the orders to re-establish a factory at Shiraz. Their demand for 600 great bales of silk to be taken to the port, and promises not to ship any until sufficient money and goods were landed for satisfaction, would not be granted, as the Sophy alleged they had not yet performed any promise made to him. The sorts and quantities of commodities advised to be sent hither, which will sell in far greater quantities if the silks are taken at the King's price. The poverty of the country will not vend one-third of what was advised by Connok, unless the King urges the sale. Arrival of Gyles Hobbs, by way of Russia, with the Company's letters of 27 May 1618, in seventeen months; his imprisonment and detention the sole cause of his tardy coming; the journey may be performed in four or five months at most. Intend sending him back the same way; only detained him in expectation of the arrival of the fleet. The King has granted them the sole trade of silks by his gulf, "and hath signed the same with his royal and imperial seal." Convenience of the port of Jask for shipping, but they must come strong both in number, men, and munition, so as to be able to defend themselves. They will have experience this year of the port of Gombroon, which is eight days nearer Ispahan than Jask. Have sold their goods to merchants and shopkeepers at better prices than Lalabegg, the King's treasurer, would give in barter for silk. The Armenians and others, who have in precedent times exported Persian silks and other commodities by way of Turkey, and thereby purchased great wealth, use all their endeavours to hinder the English in their trade, and have offered the King 150,000*l.* sterling, or a custom equal to 12*d.* sterling on every pound of 16 oz. of silk, "to tolerate their former free commerce by land." The Portugals have "caused a false fame to be bruited about by the friars here resident," that the King of Spain hath set forth a fleet with three millions of crowns to buy the silks of Persia. Prices given by Connok. How the King cunningly required to know what price they would give him for his silk. Offer of the Armenians; more than the writers would give; carpets, &c. denied them, to force them to give the King's price for his silk, but they chose rather to make no return this year "than to make so ill a precedent;" so have only shipped home musters of divers sorts of Persian stuffs. Believe the Armenians "were made a stale" to induce them to offer as much. A profitable trade may be made in Persia without dealing in silks. Privileges granted to them by the King "(God grant performance):" that they shall have the whole trade of his gulf for silks; that they may surprise Portuguese ships; that the ryal of eight shall be current at the mint value, and not as heretofore at a sixth part thereof; that the house they live in be confirmed to them; and that they may freely buy silks of the King's subjects, "but the King's mind was too well known and published, so that none durst make them any lower price than the King had set." The Armenians will not take the silks at the rate they offered, except the King's tyranny force them. It is reported that he sends 100 loads to Venice to have returns in some toys of Christendom which he desires. The two Portugal prizes surprised last year valued at 1,800*l.* sterling. Prices of all goods sold, which include broad cloths, pepper, cotton wool, ginger, tin, steel, morse teeth, cochineal, quicksilver, and sword blades. Proceedings of the Spaniards, and their propositions to the Sophy through Sir Robert Sherley. The King of Spain's letters demanding the surrender of the ports of Gombroon and Bahareene so incensed the Sophy that he rent the letters and swore the King of Spain should no longer possess Ormuz, for he suspected the expected galleons were not to transport his silks, but to make some fortification on an island adjacent to Ormuz. Great preparations by the Portugals at Goa, to expel the English from Surat and Persia, "as they are credibly informed by a Frenchman;" the Viceroy has caused four great ships to be built, and 200 pieces of ordnance to be cast for them, and prepared "two Barkasses, esteemed by them impregnable, and cannon free, each of them carrying only one piece of artillery for battery, which beareth a shot whose diameter is 19½ inches." Cause of the late Wm. Robins' (servant to Arnold Lulls) indebtedness to the Sophy; the Company will be forced to pay; inventory of his goods. Arrival of George Strachan, a Scottish physician, who long lived with Fyant, King of those Arabs who inhabit the desert, from the confines of old Babylon to Aleppo, and was in such favour with the King that he gave him his brother's widow to wife, but hearing that it was the King's intention to force him to be of their diabolical sect he fled to Bagdad, and has done the Company good service, also in setting free Wm. Nealson; have entertained him in the Company's service at 16 ryals per month, not only as a physician, but for the language in which he excels. 753. I. Minutes of Consultations held at Jask, Moghistan, Lar, Shiraz, and Ispahan, between 13 December 1618 and 24 September 1619, as follows:—

1618, Dec. 13.—At Jask; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, and Wm. Bell, merchants. Certain goods in the Expedition, consisting of 14,473 parcels of lead, china, and glass, to be left in charge of the Governor as the King's goods, to whom the English are indebted, to endeavour in the interim to procure his master's licence to carry the goods into the castle. Presents of cotton wool to be made to the Governor and "Callentar" of the castle.

1618, Dec. 23.—At Moghistan; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, Edward Pettus, and Wm. Bell, merchants. A present to be given at once to the Governor of Moghistan, to consist of sugar, ginger, pepper, china dishes and cups, linens, and two Muscovy hides. Concerning the restitution of certain money, belonging to Pettus and Bell, found in the chest of Geo. Pley, after his decease, the President suspended his opinion.

1619, Jan. 1.—At Moghistan; present, as before. The Governor Shehreyarie, notwithstanding the gratuity, would not permit their departure; resolved therefore to procure their freedom by making the best conditions they could to his extortion. Not sufficient money to pay for the hire of camels to transport the goods to Lar. Monox with Pettus appointed to take hence a chest of silver ingots to sell, Pettus to return with a supply of money, and Monox to remain at Lar. Letter from the Sultan to his substitute, Governor Cowrestan, to be procured to free the English from the accustomed duties payable at Lar, and the King of Persia's capitulations and phirmaunds to be produced to effect that object.

Jan. 16.—At Lar; present, Edward Monox and Edward Pettus. Account of the violent outrages they suffered on their arrival at Lar; although they presented the King of Persia's phirmaunds and capitulations, they were threatened to be carried back, bound hand and foot, to Minau, where Barker and Bell await money from them to defray camel hire, and are now utterly destitute and unable to send supplies to Minau. Reports of the imprisonment of Barker and Bell, and the sequestration of all the Company's goods "till the King's order be further known," and the consequent danger of the overthrow of the whole trade, and the failure of any returns this year; resolution to purchase this Governor's favour, though to the Company's loss, so as to procure the Khan's phirmaund for the release of their fellow-servants and the Company's goods "from their accustomed prison of Minau;" if the Sultan's demand for licence to sell their silver ingots be not consented to, and Shehreyarie's plot to keep them without money and thereby make stay of their goods, be not overthrown, it will give the Portugals time to procure from the King the power to compel restitution to be made by the English for goods taken from the Portugals. Letter from Monox and Pettus to the Sultan of Lar, appealing for justice against the violence and wrongs of their gaolers.

March 28.—At Shiraz ; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, and Edward Pettus. Barker having desired to see a bundle of papers which Pettus had brought out of the President's chamber in a very suspicious manner, and hidden in his breeches or cod-piece, they were ordered to be sealed up and given into the custody of John Amy.

April 2.—At Shiraz ; present as before. Reciting a previous consultation at Moghistan of 14 February last, when the President and Bell agreed to give the Shehreyarie five per cent. custom upon all goods ; which now upon their complaint to the Duke was wholly remitted on condition of a gratuity to the Shehreyarie ; reasons for consenting to the exorbitant gratuity demanded. Pettus to take money to assist Bell to carry the Company's goods from Moghistan to Lar, and there sell plate or other commodities to bring them to Shiraz.

April 4.—At Shiraz ; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, and John Amy. Pettus refusing the employment he accepted on the 2nd, and declaring he would rather be dismissed the Company's service, was dismissed accordingly, and John Amy appointed to perform the service in his stead. The endeavours of Pettus to breed confusion in the election of President a chief reason for moving the Council so freely to dismiss him.

April 17.—At Ispahan ; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, Wm. Robbins, Robert Giffard, and Wm. Blundeston. Previous consultations of the 2nd and 4th April, concerning the dismissal of Edward Pettus, ratified. Reasons for awaiting the King's arrival, who is expected within 25 or 30 days, "to solicit him in our present occasions for the negotiations of our masters' business." A Pattimar to be sent to Court with letters to the King and to Lalabegg and Myraballmallye, thanking them for their late received courtesies in procuring two phirmaunds from the King to the Khan of Shiraz for release of their persons and goods. Robbins allowed time to consider whether he would be admitted into the Company's service on the small allowance of 20*l.* a year, which the Lord Ambassador (Roe) has limited him to ; his voluntary offer to clear himself from the objections to his account. Reasons for opening letters directed to Connok, deceased, two being from the Governor of the Company, Sir Thos. Smythe.

May 16.—At Ispahan ; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, and Wm. Robbins. Concerning the sale by Robbins of precious stones to Sir Robt. Sherley, part of which, a pair of earrings and a table diamond set in a ring, were given by Sir Robert to his lady ; money given by Robbins to the Mihmandare by the authority of Rich. Steele's letter from Bagdad of 6 January 1615-6 ; expenses of Robbins in his journey to Shiraz, whither he conducted Lady Sherley, Sir Robert having gone before, and on other occasions. Reasons for admitting Robbins into the Company's service with a higher salary than that named by the Lord Ambassador. Inventories of goods taken at Moghistan and Ispahan, which belonged to Adam

Tanner, who died at Moghistan about the end of July 1618 ; and of all found in the chest of the deceased Francis Tipton, which Edward Monox claims by will.

June 4.—At Ispahan ; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, Wm. Robbins, Robt. Gifford, and Wm. Blundestone. Letter read from Edw. Pettus, begging money to buy bread with, “never any of the Company’s poor servants were brought to such a straight, body and mind undone by your unkindness,” and adding that the King had come to town that evening, and that it will too much dishonor them if Pettus run up and down the streets. His demands set down in writing, to be allowed to eat in the house and readmitted into the Company’s service ; fears of his “renouncing his faith in Christ, and so turning Moor, or revolting from the Protestant profession, and so turning friar, of which we have had too great cause of suspicion.” The resolution to admit him into the Company’s house, allow him diet and lodging, and employ him in some writing business, contrary to all their expectations, refused, but he desired to be furnished with means to go home overland through Turkey, “which we have too much cause to fear would not only be dishonor to God, but likewise disgraceful to our nation.” Resolved to prevent this, to keep him in safe custody within the Company’s house, and to use all possible means to prevent him from working himself any violence, which is not the last thing to be feared. The King having arrived in the city last night, the best method of proceeding for settling a peaceable and quiet commerce and traffic considered :—First, to present two copies of his Majesty’s letter to the Sophy and acquaint him that a third copy is coming by way of Muscovy, the better to express his Majesty’s affection to the Sophy and his desire to continue and increase the same by mutual commerce with both nations ; to obtain an Act to prevent the like molestations for the future in case of reprisals of any of the Portugals’ goods ; to procure the Sophy’s phirmaund to the Khan, to see if the port of Gombroon be fitting for English ships to traffic at ; also a phirmaund for confirmation of their house in Ispahan, and an order for the abatement of the price of silk given to Connok ; concerning an Act having reference to the debts of deceased Englishmen ; the exportation of prohibited commodities, as brimstone, horses, &c., and the value in Persian currency of a ryal of eight. To procure the King’s phirmaund to Lallabeg to deliver three hundred camel-loads of silk and licence to ship them at Gombroon. A declaration added that the price of silk having been agreed on between Lallabeg and Connok, it would too much dishonour the Company, and the King would take it ill to fix a new price, so this will be left out of their requests to the King ; also concerning the exportation of brimstone, against which they are told there is no prohibition, and of horses that they are not fitting to be shipped. Concerning the searching of the port of Gombroon, have already a very ample phirmaund from the Khan of Shiraz, and therefore do not think it fit to trouble the King about.

George Strahan, a Scottish gentleman, lately arrived from Bagdad. Resolved not only to receive him as a guest, but to entertain him in the Company's service; reasons; great wish of the Spanish Ambassador to employ him in the service of the King of Spain, being so ingenious in deciphering; he is also well practised in physic, has lived with the King of the Arabs and in Bagdad, and is very perfect in the Latin, French, Italian, Hebrew, Greek, and Arabic languages; his salary. Relief to a poor sick Venetian to take him to his own country.

July 1.—At Ispahan; present, Thos. Barker, President, Edward Monox, Wm. Robbins, and Wm. Bell, merchants. The present for the King of Persia to be worth 700*l.* sterling; the custom of the country not only for Ambassadors but for every private merchant to give presents to the King, whereby they enjoy better freedom, better sale for their commodities, and less molestation from inferior officers. Reasons for somewhat enlarging their present; they came last year empty-handed, which is they suspect the cause of their business taking no better effect; the King's favour in suffering them peaceably to enjoy what they took from the Portugals; the many things they have to obtain from the King, and phirmaunds for their better usage. Resolution to propose to the King the carrying down of a greater quantity of silk and other Persian commodities to meet next year's fleet than they have now means to satisfy him for; lastly, to procure his phirmaund for keeping their house, which the Spanish Ambassador's malice would dispossess them of. The present for the King of Persia to consist of 15 broad cloths of several colours, 100 Muscovy hides, 300 sword blades, the footman's armour, three of the best swords, two of the best looking-glasses trimmed with crimson and green velvet and gold lace, three of the best pictures, viz., the Prince, Lady Salisbury and Lady Redman's pictures, two embroidered purses or needlework, one embroidered scarf, waistcoat, and comb case or needlework. The china ware includes 35 great basins or chargers, 17 great dishes or platters, 33 of a lesser sort, 25 great porringers or posset bowls, and 1,000 cups of various patterns. A chief reason for making so great a present to the King that it was his custom to give presents to others not much inferior in value.

Sept. 24.—At Ispahan; present, Thos. Barker, Edward Monox, Wm. Bell, and Thos. Barker, junr. Reasons for not making any investment this year; the extraordinary prices demanded by the King, which, if given, is feared would be increased every year; the loss of four months' time by reason of the imprisonment of their persons and the embargo of their goods at Moghistan; inability to make sale of any of their goods to the King, who had left Ispahan on his hunting progress, their agent's time being spent in following the Court, to conclude a bargain with him. Understanding that both Goa and Ormuz have made preparation to intercept this year's English fleet, besides five galleons expected from Spain, resolution to purchase stuffs for musters both for India and England, and to hasten their departure to the port. Money outstanding for goods sold at Ispahan, Lalabegg's account, Wm. Robbins' death, and the President's sickness and lameness, the reasons for his remaining at Ispahan. Monox, Bell, and Barker, junior, to see to the landing and bringing up of the expected cargo. Pettus to be taken down, but his escape prevented at all hazards, except putting him in chains, which would be a public disgrace to the English nation, but to give him into the custody of the commander of the ship, as the Company's prisoner, and take him to Surat, there to be disposed of as the factor thinks fit. The amount of ryals to be taken down, which they have the King's and Khan's phirmaunds for passing at their full value. The money extorted from them by the Governor of Moghistan to be received at Shiraz, besides a debt he oweth. A new agreement to be made with George Strahan, not only able to do the Company service as a physician, but especially as a linguist, in which he will be very necessary since the death of Wm. Robbins. [Thirty-two pages. O.C., Vol. VI., No. 717.]

Oct. 18-27. 754. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of Mr. Needham, bachelor of divinity, formerly the Queen's chaplain and a fellow of Christ Church, Oxford, to proceed as preacher to the Indies. The stones from the Anne to be given to the city for the use of Moregate if they exceed not 8*l.* or 10*l.* in value. Richard Norgrave to be entertained conditionally. Towerson's information concerning the unfitness of George Best; the Company "unwilling to have him published because of disgracing him, but rather to let him slide away without any further question." Committee to confer with Mr. Fitzherbert, as to his appointment of chief commander at Bantam. Demeistres, who brewed the beer, so much of which was cast overboard, to be prosecuted, on the return of the Dragon. Capt. Burrowes, commended by Lord Southampton, to be further considered of for commander of the next fleet. Motion of Sir Thos. Roe "to have an end of matters by degrees betwixt the Company and him, desiring to have it first seen and known what service he hath performed in settling some trades and factories at Mocha, the Red Sea, and in the Mogul's dominions at Surat, Ahmedabad, and other parts. Committee appointed to confer with him thereon. Several of Sir Thos. Roe's consultations read; his care to prevent unnecessary expenses; also how the Persian trade was to be supplied, with other matters of great consequence. Reforms introduced by him in keeping the accounts. Steele's account referred to the auditor. Limited number of horses and servants allowed by Roe to each factor.

Oct. 20.—The stones from the Anne not exceeding the value of 8*l.* or 9*l.* bestowed freely on the city for the use of Moorgate. Some of Roe's consultations in the Indies read; the business of Mocha; instructions to the master of the Lion to make further search into Prester John's country, and to W. Biddulph how to carry himself at the Court and other passages of great consequence, seriously considered; resolved to have them confirmed to their factors, which will add reputation to Sir Thos. Roe as he hath deserved; his gratuity left wholly to this Court. Invention of an old Frenchman to cut asunder the cordage of shipping with cannon shot, who requires for his pains and discovery 1,000*l.* in hand and 100*l.* a year during life; the committee holding it to be but a trick, resolved to have his project underwritten that they do not believe any such instrument can be made, and are therefore unwilling to trouble themselves any further about it. Shepheard, recommended by Sir Thos. Roe, to be a steward's mate. Wages of Nathaniel Harvell claimed by Ant. Carre and one Lock. Richard Chamberlain to be a steward.

Oct. 22.—Capt. Shilling to have 20 marks per month wages for his good service abroad, to be remembered for the taking of the prize with Capt. Pring, and conferred with as to his future employment. Petition of Richard Swaine concerning his goods; he is referred as very sufficient for a master and commander. John Browne, much commended in his last employment, to go master at 6*l.* a month, with a promise of 7*l.* on his return. Swanley, commended for his skill and government, though having so grossly offended by his great private trade, to be thought upon for a fit master for Bantam. Blieth to be conferred with for employment. Offer of 100*l.* a year to John Blount for the first two years, 150*l.* for the next two years, and 200*l.* for the fifth year, who may be very necessary for the Moluccas and those parts, and do good service about the spices, but he requiring 200*l.* and 300*l.* per annum for the last two years, is referred for consideration. The freight of the goods of Tirrye, the preacher, remitted, being so much commended by Sir Thos. Roe for his sober, honest, and civil life there. Gratuity of 100*l.* for the relief of poor ministers. Concerning Mrs. Hudson's goods.

Minutes of a general Court. Sale of commodities with names of purchasers and the prices.

Oct. 25.—Capt. Shilling being willing to accept the Company's offer of 20*l.* a month, the Governor is requested to conclude with him absolutely. Agreement with Edward Withers to go to the East Indies; his salary. Committee appointed to carry some small remembrance to and give the Lord Chief Baron thanks about Mr. Palmer. Sir Thos. Roe's accounts to be audited. Mr. Blieth to be entertained. Concerning the trade of Surat; to persuade the Hollanders to send two ships that way for security of the trade, "who are able to set forth shipping at all times, as is said (especially from Flushing)." A court to be summoned purposely to take these points into consideration. The Governor entreated to use his best means with his Majesty and the Lord Admiral to prevent one come over from the Hollanders from getting licence to transport some ordnance, "which hath been a great mischief to this land and to the welfare of this Company." Petition from Thos. Lawes, complaining that by the Commissioners for the Levels in Essex and Middlesex three several assessments have been awarded upon Blackwall.

Oct. 27.—Final agreement with Capt. Shilling; 20*l.* a month salary and 100 marks to set him forth to sea. No means of employment for Sir John Holmden. A bell to be hung at Blackwall for the watch to toll. Agreement with John Holland to have 50*l.* the first year, increasing 10*l.* for seven years. Jo. Woodhouse, having preached before the committees, entertained at 50*l.* per annum and 20*l.* to set him forth. Petition of the wife of Richard Steele concerning her goods, and complaining that she was forced to go abroad with her infant only 18 days old. Justinian Osley to be employed as an under-factor. Wm. Fortescue, commended for a commander, to be conferred with; as also Mr. Fitzherbert. Explanations of the Governor in consequence of the auditors finding fault that he has 10,000*l.* with the Company at ten per cent., whereas it can at present be had at 8 per cent. [Twelve pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 428-440.]

Oct. 28. 755. Consultation on board the Palsgrave in Tecoe Road, signed by Thos. Brockedon, Thos. Mills, Thos. Barwick, John Rowe, Chas. Clevenger, Edmund Dennys, and John Bardon, Capt. Jourdain, President of the Council of India, having appointed Priaman the rendezvous for the English forces, and sent letters express to the Cape to the English fleet, there to meet the end of September last at farthest, but failing to come, and the Hollanders having intelligence that the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, and Rose lay at Tecoe, came suddenly upon them 1st Oct., being taken at first for the English fleet, and in less than one hour and a half's fight, the Dragon was taken with the loss of 30 men; Capt. Bonner "wounded to death;" the three other English ships yielded without fight. The Star formerly taken in the straits of Sunda. Report of the surprise of the Sampson and Hound, bound with Capt. Jourdain for Patani, Siam, &c. The Hollanders have thirty sail at Bantam and Jacatra, and daily expect more. Hopes of the English, altogether frustrate, to right themselves. Resolved to send the Rose to England, with Thos. Barwick master, and Wm. Hoare factor, to relate all occurrences. Intention of the Hollanders to return to Tecoe, being informed of the arrival of the English fleet of only three ships, the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope. Intended movements of the English fleet. Reports of the preparations of the Portugals and Hollanders against them at Surat. Wm. Nicolls, "a man well experienced in the language and conditions both of prince and people, and in good grace and esteem with the King of Acheen," to be sent thither to excite that King against the Hollanders for the intolerable wrongs proffered within his ports and deprive them of further trade there; Henry Bates, factor, and Richard Blewin, sailor, to accompany him, leaving Peter Waddon and Thos. Gaskin with letters at Tecoe for the fleet, if by chance it arrives after their departure. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 816.]

756. Kerridge, Rastell, and James to Thos. Barker and the factors in Persia. In answer to their letter from Jask of 10 Dec. 1618, directed to Sir Thos. Roe, who left for England 17 Feb. last in the Royal Anne. Particulars of the account of Fras. Tipton, deceased. To observe Sir Thos. Roe's order in re-shipping Wm. Blundstone home. The silk was approved of and sent home on the Royal Anne; not to send any more without their masters' orders. Hear not of any glazier come in the fleet. Concerning Wm. Robbins' demands; if Edw. Connok repaid the money lent by Wm. Tracy the more hath been his wrong. As to the fowling pieces, sword blades, and elephants' teeth sent to Persia; it was hoped the passengers on the Expedition last year would have produced profit, but seeing they also are troubled with them, will forbear henceforth except on better grounds. Sale of commodities out of the two prizes. The Lion, of Capt. Bonner's fleet, went last year for Mocha. Send abstract of commodities in the fleet just arrived. Account of those now sent to Persia. Can give them no encouragement at present to send any from thence. They will do well to solicit the Sophy to fortify the fort of Jask, that English ships may ride there singly, free from danger of the Portugals; recommend some more secure and convenient port further up within the gulf. Three factors sent by the Company to be resident in Persia; Robt. Jefferies to be third factor, Barker and Monox (if living) being first and second factors; John Purifie and John Bentall to succeed in order; if they have settled two factories Monox to be chief of the second. Send copy of the clause for prevention of private trade. Caution them of a design of the Portugals to surprise the English ship expected; "the import of your present supply hath caused us to send the whole fleet unto you;" the Commander limited to a stay of fifteen or twenty days at the utmost. Request to be despatched in ten days if possible. The letters for their masters to be sent overland. [In a postscript dated from aboard the Charles, 6 Nov. 1619, the detention of this letter is stated to have been caused through clearing the goods from the custom-house.] A minister goes by this fleet who is entertained, as himself affirmeth, purposely for Persia; they may detain or send him back "as you shall find occasion." [Nine pages. Endorsed, "Received by the Charles the 3rd of Dec., unto y^e factors of Persia. Received in London y^e 25th Sept. 1620, overland." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 817.]

757. Chamberlain to Carleton. Père Coton, a French Jesuit, gives out that all the Jesuits in China and Japan have been publicly whipped and condemned to perpetual imprisonment upon suggestion of the English and Hollanders that they serve only for spies. Nov. 2-3.

758. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Mr. Sleigh acknowledging the Company's relief in his misery. Request of Capt. Shilling for the Lord Admiral's leave to go to sea. As to the yearly charge of the trade of Surat, and whether it will bear it with profit; the quickstock employed to Surat in five ships (besides the Anne, now returned) calculated to amount to 9,526*l.* (sic), allowing 50,000*l.* as dead stock, "which sum together maketh the whole stock 89,526*l.* (sic) at 4*s.* 6*d.* the dollar, the proceeds of which goods returned and sold in England have made (besides the general charges there of housekeeping, &c., ambassador, custom, presents, wages, and whatsoever charge else answered with advantage) 260,860*l.*, out of which the dead stock deducted, which amounteth to 50,000*l.*, the net proceed will come to 210,860*l.* or thereabouts; notwithstanding that the charges of late have increased extraordinarily in the country, the prices of goods there have risen, and some other things happened that have made it a declining trade from that it was.

Minutes of a general Court. Sale of commodities with names of purchasers and the prices.

Nov. 3.—Court Minutes. Suit of Capt. Thompson for the post of commander. Consideration about employing Mr. Fitzherbert; his terms; resolution not to conclude with him until the arrival of Capt. Burrowes. Letter from Capt. John Pennington desiring employment. William Baffin to be master of the London, on Capt. Shilling's recommendation, Blieth Vice-Admiral, and Swaine and Browne in the same ship. [Four pages. Court Bk. IV., 440-4.]

759. Kerridge, Rastell, and James to the East India Company. Concerning the commodities received from the fleet under Capt. Bonner's command; the tapestry, &c., after long lying in the custom-house, sealed by the Prince's officers and sent to Court; after further delay the Prince chose what he liked, and appointed part of the rest to the King's use, "which being yet unpaid for, we cannot certainly advise the benefit that will arise thereon." The commodities "listed" by Sir Thos. Roe for the Lion's lading nearly prepared. Proceedings of the factors in Agra in providing indigo, carpets, &c. for Persia; their detention by the Vice-King of Burrampoor, at the suit of a Portugal; four months spent in obtaining their release. The despatch of the junk for the Red Sea, the cause of the Guzerats prohibiting the English from buying calicoes, and writing to the Governors of Baroach and Brodera to do the like. In an assembly of merchants, they publicly protested against the English trading into the Red Sea, "vowing never to suffer it," so were compelled to promise not to make any investments until the Prince's pleasure were further known; the solicitations of Wm. Biddulph "given absolute denial" on two occasions. Their dwelling-house, the three years' contracted time expired, taken from them; have been exposed to petty habitations for five months, not permitted to dwell near the river's side, and forbidden by the Prince's express command to buy or build. Letters received from the Bantam Council, of 16 July, then newly arrived in Capt. Pring's fleet, and from Masulipatam of the arrival of Sir Thos. Dale's fleet. Sir Thomas procured nothing at Engano but certain knowledge of the death of his men left there. Arrival on the 2nd current of the Charles, Ruby, and Diamond, under command of John Bitkell; also of five Danish ships, "who though they pretended to be bound for Ceylon to inhabit, it is to be feared they have some more fatal design." The Bantam Council requiring the whole fleet, and the late arrival of these ships, has caused much distraction and backwardness in their business. Long stay of the Lion at Mocha; she has now returned to good account. Indian commodities the life of the Red Sea trade. Deccan merchants ready to buy their coral, but it was prohibited to be landed; have petitioned the Prince about this and sundry other grievances, but have small hope of remedy. Remarks on some of the commodities sent in the ships, and the causes of delay in relading them for England, "the innate accustomed villainy and unavoidable delays of these people . . . ; they will do nothing without bribes, which, howsoever extorted, is made a continual custom, enforced as a duty, and yet they never contented, nor will be made sensible of the necessity of our haste." Though this country be esteemed rich, they find the common inhabitants to be very needy, and unwilling, being subject to the tyranny of every officer, to make provision beforehand; this keeps the prices low, and makes a present dearth and scarcity on the least extraordinary occasion. Are confined to Baroach only for the purchase of calicoes, which will not yield the eighth part of the Company's demands. Brodera a place of great trade, and under the King's jurisdiction, free to all except the English. "The cause of our settling here was for fear of your ships; our being is a burden to these, who have ever repined at and covertly hindered your designs." No hope of good usage and free trade without being enforced. Advise the stopping of the Indian junks to and from the Red Sea, "then the articles of our residence will be confirmed both by King and Prince . . . , and your servants relieved." By this course the Company may also initiate a trade at Dabul, where most English commodities will sell. Further necessity for urging trade in the Red Sea, by recourse of "those new-come Danes and other pirates." Strength of shipping requisite to settle at Dabul. Commodities they have provided for Persia. Have presumed to open the Company's letters to Persia, that they might the better understand their minds. Intend sending the Lion home after her return from Jask, whither she sails with the fleet, but fears she cannot be despatched until about the 5th February. [In a postscript of 5th November, "Have received letters from Masulipatam, both from the Bantam Council and Capt. Pring, the first of which, from the Vice-President Spaldinge, or rather his assistant, Mr. Ball, discovers their self-conceit and passion; so transmit copies, whereby also the Company will learn the death of Sir Thos. Dale, and the present condition of their fleet and affairs, and opinion of the commander." [Eight pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 818.]

760. Nicolls to the East India Company. The Dragon and Expedition, Capt. Robt. Bonner, arrived at Acheen 8th April last with gun, spangles, and dogs, all which were presented to the King, but the gun, "so thin of substance as not to be shot off," he esteemed nothing worth and would not accept. Would not grant them trade at Tecoe, alleging the ruin both to his gentlemen and merchants, who are wont to profit by trading, and "are now become beggars" and opposed to their suit. At his urgent solicitation, two months' trade granted for his sake only. Presents sent to his Majesty by the King of Acheen of 6 baharrs of pepper, with a lance and knife. Sailed from Acheen 7th July; fell in with the Rose from Bantam, with a cargo for Acheen. Reasons for Capt. Bonner detaining her voyage; letter from Spaldinge and Ball "to get me aboard by all means possible," leave Fursland chief, and so home to answer objections against himself. Arrived at Tecoe 28th August, hoping to lade the Dragon. Her surprise on 1st October by five Holland ships with the Star taken by them at Bantam, after little more than an hour's fight, with the loss of 28 men and Capt. Bonner, who died ashore nine days after. The Bear shot not a shot, but being so good was most basely given up. The Dutch being victors, turned 270 men ashore, and gave the English the Rose, under whose rice was steel, which they sold for their relief. The men ready to cut one another's throats, but he kept them in awe. The Hollanders landed all the English goods at Priaman. Fortunately met with the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope, upon which ships the Englishmen were distributed; himself returned to Acheen with Mr. Bates and another, principally, if possible, to rout the Hollanders out of all factories in this island. Trick played by the King of Acheen upon the Hollanders, who cannot abide Nicolls. Is in great favour with the King, who "has given me his crest that no man dares to injure me," by which favour the Company's house and goods are in security. A little money can do much. Many respect their own profit rather than the Company's good, and "are seeming saints at coming home, but devils in earnest." Presents fit to send the King, not a gun, but broadswords, &c. "He is so covetous and careless of others' profits but his own, that better to keep him with a bit than give him the bridle, and so tyrannical as I protest it is great danger to remain in his country without hazard of loss of life." The English endanger themselves and the Company's goods by not observing the orders of the country. Their ships should not be suffered to transport any "Judas villains Guzerats" or goods from Surat to Sumatra. Trash goods bought at Surat. It is generally thought that the English Company and the Hollanders will join stocks together; necessity for doing so, no trade to be had without maintaining twenty stout ships of war. The fleet does not know which way to make a voyage, and the best wits are not able to determine. The Hollanders dog them from place to place, and have pursued Capt. Jourdain, who is suspected to be ruined at Patani, whither he was bound. What the Hollanders took in the Bear. Complaints of Capt. Keeling, and that he did not deliver Nicolls' accounts to the Company. Sends Robt. Carter's will and Jackson's account. Concerning Rich. Harris' account, and the estate of Capt. Bonner. W. Methwold will give account of the estates of Millward, Patteson, Yates, and Pyborne. [Six pages. Endorsed, "Received 19 May 1620 by the Rose." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 819.]

761. Henry Bate to the East India Company. Arrived 21 August in the Bear at Tecoe, where they found the Dragon, Expedition, and Rose, from Bantam. The Star taken by four Flemish ships (named) in the straits of Sunda. "Being but one, accounted folly to resist them." Having read the Company's letters to their factors "of no conditions of peace, but by all means to right your wrongs and weaken your forces . . . , and the fire so much kindled by Sir Thos. Dale," the Flemings not only surprised the Star, but dispeeded six of their greatest ships of force (named) from Bantam, under command of Wm. Johnson, to Tecoe. In less than two hours' fight they took the Dragon, killing at least 25 men, amongst whom was that honest and worthy servant, Capt. Bonner. The Expedition and Rose likewise obliged to yield; the latter the Hollanders returned to transport the remainder of the English, about 300, after taking away all provisions and munitions, but leaving a quantity of steel buried in the rice, which was sold by Nicolls. Happily met with the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope. Nicolls has delivered his books and accounts to Thos. Brockendell. Their hopes to meet with the whole fleet from the Coromandel coast, and so consult about the best course to be taken. The Hollanders have at Bantam thirty-five ships well appointed, but dare not set foot on land, though the people cannot stand out long, because the island affords not maintenance. How Sir Thos. Dale made all the Dutch fly out of the road and go to the Moluccas, and might have prevented this had he kept Bantam and the straits of Sunda instead of going to the bare coast of Coromandel, which has given the Flemings respite, and made them so proud and strong that none is so fit to deal with them as devils. "I say their insolency had been resisted, and their ships taken, coming as they came, one and one." Had Sir Thos. Dale kept the straits of Sunda with his twelve ships, the Dutch could neither have had force to take the Company's ships, nor have despatched three ships to Patani after Jourdain with the Sampson and Hound, which the country people report have been surprised and taken. Concerning the loss of the Bear, with which he may be maliciously taxed, "there was such odds that there was no hope of escaping." The danger of landing her treasure; fears of the factory being robbed three nights before; one John Tucker killed. Nicolls and himself bound for Acheen in a prow, as thought fitting in consultation to solicit the King about the insolency of the Hollanders in his harbours, and taking his presents, sent by his Majesty of England, in the Dragon. Report that the English fleet have taken three Dutch ships on the Coromandel coast. "Copy of my last letter send home from Tecoe by the ship Rose, by Thomas Barwick, A^o. 1619." [Two pages. Endorsed, "Delivered the factors at Jask to be conveyed through Persia overland. This received from Surat by the Lion the 27 September 1620. Read. Of some import." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 820.]

Nov. 8-10. 762. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the appointments of Mr. Fitzherbert and Capt. Burrowes, recommended by the Earl of Southampton, and of Capt. Pennington, recommended by the Lord Admiral. The Hollanders having on the return of their last ship informed the Company of the state of affairs in the Indies, it was held fit to requite them with the like on the return of this ship, the James; a committee appointed to draw out some particulars out of the letters that may be fit for them to know. Motion of the French, who have certain money and goods at Bantam, for the Company to bring them home. Great store of pepper returned in the James. Concerning Wm. Swanley's great private trade, Patteson, the factor, and Methwold, "the other executor who took Patteson's estate into his hands;" Swanley's accounts to be drawn out by Ellam. The Unity, of 280 tons, ready sheathed, with all her furniture, and 20 pieces of ordnance, to be bought for 1,600*l*. The Bear to carry men and provisions to the Cape, for relief of shipping touching there. Interest payable to Sir Thos. Roe on his adventure in the first joint stock. Concerning Mr. Steele, his wife's goods, and his services; to be further considered.

Nov. 9.—Consideration of Mr. Mun's calculation relating to the trade of Surat; "no place proveth so good, so sure, nor any trade so profitable;" also of Alderman Hamersley's calculation of the charge and profit of the trade. Employment of the three ships ready to be sent off. Objections to prevent the danger of the Portugals at Jask; landing and carrying goods overland thence; and the security of trade with the Persian. 50,000*l*. sent to Persia last year; probability of the trade thither yielding 70, 80, or 90 per cent. profit one year with another; if the voyage may be effected in sixteen months, as Sir Thos. Roe confidently affirms, 50 per cent. may be gained yearly with safety. Resolution to send 250,000 ryals of eight for Persia only, and to send a messenger overland to let them know in Persia such stock is coming. Committee appointed to consider what stocks are already in the country; what may be fit to send for Persia, Surat, Bantam, and other places. There being a necessity for employing more money than their patent will bear, the consideration is left to the Governor, Deputy, and Treasurer. Gratuity to Mr. Bag, of Plymouth, for assistance to Sir Thos. Roe. Sir Dudley Digges' business.

Nov. 10.—Report of the committee appointed to cast up Sir Thos. Roe's accounts, that his charges both ordinary and extraordinary for housekeeping, travelling with the King, &c., amounts, one year with another, during his residence in the country, to about 600*l*. a year, and, the Company adjudged he had been very frugal, and purposed some other time to make a final conclusion of his business. Touching the will of Golding, the preacher, who had two wives in England, and left the most part of his estate to his second wife. Swanley and his private trade. Bargains between factors and mariners to be prevented. Committee to consider Steele's demands. [Five pages and three quarters. Court Bk. IV., 444-449.]

Nov. 10. 763. Chas. Clevenger, Thos. Brockedon, and Thos. Mill to the East India Company. Arrived in the road of Tecoe 23rd Oct., where they had intelligence of the surprise of the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, and Rose by six Holland ships, the Dragon riding alone and "so pestered with taking in of pepper" that only two ships, in less than one and a half hour's fight, took her, the rest riding in as great security as if no enemy had been expected, yet had advice by the Rose of our mortal wars with the Dutch. Barwick's report that all was peace a principal cause of the Dragon's security. The Bear, though well prepared, and the rest yielded without fight, to the shame and infamy of themselves and our nation. Barwick might easily have saved the Bear's money by sending it ashore to the factors. The Hollanders with the goods taken in the Expedition and the money out of the Bear have purchased store of pepper at Tecoe and Priaman, which for want of means they could not formerly do. Jo. Rowe sent aboard the Holland ships by Capt. Bonner, but was imprisoned and all our men put in irons against the law of nations. Endeavours of the Hollanders to fire the Dragon, being at first out of hope so easily to have taken her. The Star formerly taken in the straits of Sunda by five men-of-war; the letters found in her the cause of our men's ill usage. Had not Barwick told Sir Thos. Roe at the Cape that peace was concluded in England, he would have taken four Holland ships. Wonders at the fleet being dispersed, and Capt. Jourdain going with the Sampson and Hound for Patani and Siam, and appointing Priaman for a rendezvous, from whence the Hollanders have advice of their strength; they have sent four great ships with 800 men after Jourdain, and it is reported have taken and burnt his ships. The Hollanders possess Jacatra and make mortal war at Bantam; the Pengran gives fifty ryals for the head of a Hollander; Diego Fernandez, taken to be one, had his head cut off. Thirty sail of Hollanders at Bantam and Jacatra. The Pengran, relying on Capt. Jourdain's promise of return, holds out obstinately, but will be constrained to compound with them. Some important cause must have enforced the fleet's stay six weeks longer than the time appointed. Sent away the Rose to give notice of these incredible losses before the Hollanders return, who intend sending home four or five ships this year. Reasons for sending her home empty. Hope to meet the fleet, otherwise must sail for Surat. The Hollanders report that the English have taken two rich ships of theirs, equal in value to those taken at Tecoe. Sir Thos. Dale left Bantam in extremity of sickness, and is thought to be dead. Preparations of the Portugals and Hollanders against the English at Surat. Have taken 1,000 ryals belonging to Capt. Bonner, deceased, for the Company's use. Nicolls sent to Acheen with 2,000 ryals, to excite the King against the Hollanders and to procure trade for the English; concerning his accounts. Damage to their trade by transporting Guzerats with their goods from Surat to the southwards; it is also suspected they carry intelligence to the Hollanders. Great want of provisions for their ships; have aboard the three ships 700 men, seven ships' companies. Peter Waddon and Thos. Gasken left at Tecoe with letters for the fleet, if they chance to come after their departure. Bad quality of their victuals. [Four pages and a quarter. Endorsed, "Received ye [19] of May 1620 by the Rose." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 821.]

764. Wm. Kirfford, late purser in the Bear, to the East India Company. Unfortunate success of their ships through the carelessness and cowardice of their commanders. Sir Thos. Roe would have taken two Holland ships at the Cape but for Barwick's false information that the English and Flemings were agreed; this was also the prime cause of the loss of the four English ships; otherwise they might have kept company and gone to Bantam. Reasons for the Bear putting into Priaman; the Hollanders there told them of all the consultations of their (English) fleet. The English ships taken 1st Oct. Barwick entreated by two of his mates to make preparations to escape, but would not "get his sails to yard," and yielded his ship, "contrary to our expectation," without one stroke. His feasting of the Flemings at the Cape and Tecoe laid all the ships' strength open to them; a proof of it. How he seemed to be rather friend than foe to the Hollanders. Swears Barwick has a great deal more now than ever he brought out of England; he might very well have saved all the Company's money by sending it ashore. Banqueting and feasting among the English merchants, Rowe and the Flemish merchants, with music, within a short time of the taking of the English ships, as if they had been great friends. The Flemings had fourteen chests of money in the Bear; Barwick might very well have saved all the Company's money by sending it ashore. [Endorsed, "Received by the Rose, [19] May 1620." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 822.]

Nov. 12. 765. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Saltpetre to be procured from the East Country. John Dent referred for employment. William Moore entertained as a factor. The Hart launched. Richard Brag having lost two of his fingers and the use of his hand, three of his ribs and his arms broken, and a wound in his breast 8 inches deep, in fight with the Hollanders in the Moon, to be employed at home. Information received that Capt. Shilling has, contrary to Mr. Burrell's opinion, had four extra port-holes cut in the London, though she has 32; the Flemings, finding their error, purpose to leave off using such great shipping and to abridge their number of ordnance; ordered in future that no alterations be made aboard, after the ships be finished, without the consent of this Court. Letter read from Richard Carmarden for satisfaction concerning Capt. Pepwell's estate. Letter received from Capt. Jourdain from Bantam concerning Richard Brag; allowance to be made him at the rate of 8s. per ryal for 200 ryals of eight. Sir Thos. Roe's accounts perused and ended, and all his expenses both ordinary and extraordinary cast up. The Company find great good husbandry in his expense of housekeeping, which cometh to about 250*l.* or 260*l.* a year. "And having duly weighed his carriage and behaviour from the beginning till this present, they esteemed him a very worthy gent, that hath husbanded things exceedingly well, and very moderate in his expenses, and one that by his modesty, honesty, and integrity hath given good satisfaction." Gratuity to him of 1,500*l.* for his service performed, wherein they had no regard to the future, hearing of his readiness to give assistance at any meeting hereafter. Sir Thos. presenting himself, the Governor made known the Company's mind, acknowledging his honesty and frugality, and commending his care, desired him to accept of the 1,500*l.*, which they held too little compared with his deserts, but their small returns pleaded partly their excuse. Sir Thos. Roe made known that he took in good part whatsoever is given, in the meantime purposed to think thereof, and at next Court purposeth to come and give his thanks. Allowance to Sir Thos. for some things of his own for presents. Great defect of drugs and surgery stuff at Bantam for the comfort and cure of men, store to be provided for Bantam, usual for four great ships; also two surgeons extraordinary, one to remain at Bantam, the other at Surat, with convenient drugs and surgery for each factory. 766. Chamberlain to Carleton. Has been told by Sir Dudley Diggs that there was no manner of mention of Chamberlain during all the treaty, but once by Mons. Basse. Sir Dudley has cast out speeches of their [the East India Company] neglect towards Carleton, but found all very cold, yet he will deal further with Sir Thos. Smythe, who is the primum mobile in all these businesses. Hears of another East Indian ship, the Little James, having come upon the coast, but no great brag of what she brings. 767. John Rowe, late master of the Expedition, to Sir Thos. Smythe. Arrived at Acehen 4 April 1619, where they found Nicolls, and had fair trade; at Tecoe 7 July, where they procured trade for two months by means of great presents. Were informed there that Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Pring with their fleets had gone for Masulipatam, and Capt. Jourdain with the Sampson and Hound to Jambi, Siam, and Patani, all promising to meet at Priaman by end of September. No news yet received of them. News by the Bear a few days after their arrival that the English and Dutch companies were joined. Thinking themselves secure from the malice of the Hollanders, the Dragon was three-fourths laden with pepper when six Holland ships, thought to be the English fleet, "layed the Dragon aboard, not speaking other words but 'amayne English dogs,' with a resolution either to sink, burn, or take the other ships riding about a mile and a half from the Dragon." A "most cruel conflict" ensued for about an hour and a half, when the English were forced to yield with the loss of 28 men slain and many wounded, of which number Capt. Bonner was one, "who received a shot in the body, which cut one of his ribs and backbone asunder, living ten days;" he died 11 Oct. Two of the Holland ships of great force, one with 38 and one 32 pieces of ordnance. The Bear, Expedition, and Rose yielded without any fight at all; the Expedition had but ten men, the Rose fourteen, all the rest fighting in the Dragon. Barwicke, either "out of cowardliness or sincerity of religion," yielded his ship Bear without firing a shot, though better able to maintain fight than the Dragon. He might have saved the fourteen chests of money by sending them ashore. The Flemings turned them all ashore, about 270 men, among the infidels, and were taken aboard by the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope on the 23rd Oct. Was himself previously sent aboard the Flemings to parley with them, but clapt fast in irons, where he remained all the time of the fight. The Hollanders boast of this action to the country people, with further opprobrious speech of our King and country. Report of the taking of Capt. Jourdain and two ships at Patani by the Hollanders.

Reasons for sending the Rose home. The three ships intended for Surat. Twelve sail of Flemings daily expected at Tecoe. Purpose going for Acheen. In want of provisions. Thirty sail of Hollanders at Bantam, and fifteen or sixteen in other parts. [Three pages and a quarter. Endorsed, "Received by the Rose, 19 May 1620." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 823.]

Nov. 15.

768. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning Capt. Pepwell's estate, and Halsey's debts to the Company. Letter read from Sir Thos. Roe of thanks for the gratification bestowed upon him and offers of service for the good of the Company, with note of certain moneys in his possession in the Indies, and the sums paid to his servants more than he received; also for presents to the King, Prince, and Lords, his refusal of gifts to the prejudice of the Company, and debts he has recovered for the Company to the value of 3,000*l*. "His fair carriage" commended and compared with others who have made use of their time by private trade, and "supposing his experience and means here have enabled him to do the Company good service, either at Court upon occasion, or by his advice in drawing their letters and commissions, and that there is a kind of necessity to use his help about the new trades, it was thought fit to have him accepted as a committee amongst the rest, and so to reward him accordingly by giving him a present yearly allowance to bind his presence and advice amongst them, which will be an honour and reputation unto him, and right to the Company." Remembering also that some about the King having lately pressed to ruin that business of my Lord of Warwick's, and that Roe took it wholly upon himself and told the Lords it was his own act and he was ready to justify it, "which gave a taste what further use there may be of his courage and service," it was resolved to give Roe for this year ensuing until the election (in July) 200*l*. The presents made by Sir Thos. Roe in the Indies allowed, and the 100*l*. which was laid out in plate for him at his going bestowed upon him, "that his money disbursed for those gifts may not return barely to him again." [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 451-453.]

Nov. 17.

769. Sir Wm. Cokayne, Lord Mayor of London, Sir Thos. Smythe, Governor of the East India Company, and Sir Thos. Lowe, Governor of the Levant Company, to the Privy Council. The merchants of the several companies are ready with their proportions of money allotted to them, for the expedition against pirates, except the Muscovy Company, who allege great losses, and therefore will attend the Council. It is desired that the merchants may be authorized to hire such merchant ships and mariners as this enterprise shall require, and that they be not enjoined to hasten this expedition until the King's ships be also appointed to be sent forth to strengthen them; and they also desire authority to collect such moneys on exports and imports as they agree on to defray the charges. Nov. 17.

770. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Because of the desperate and bold attempt lately made by certain mariners in the river, who carried away a Flemish pink from Erith, the London and any ships that may ride there to be furnished with muskets, powder, and shot. Swanley to be employed in the Exchange or Anne. Complaint against the sailmakers for bad work; some recommended steel hemp for twine, as that which the shoemakers altogether use. John Dent entertained a factor. Supposing Capt. Burrowes will hardly get permission to leave the Low Countries, he being a man so well esteemed of, it was resolved to conclude with Mr. Fitzherbert. The son of Nicholas Seyliard refused employment. As to the sufficiency of the Unity. [One page. Court Bk. IV., 453-454.]

771. Sir Thos. Edmondes to [Carleton]. Has not been unmindful to cause Sir Thos. Smythe to be mannerly remembered of the error which the East India Company have committed in having forgotten Carleton's extraordinary care and pains in the business of the late treaty with the States. Sir Thos. Smythe acknowledged the Company's obligation to be very great to Carleton, and he promised that due respect should be had of it, according to the quality of Carleton's special merit. Has since dealt privately with Maurice [Morris] Abbott and Mr. Bell, who assure Edmondes that it is really intended to give Carleton very honourable contentment, as soon as Sir Thos. Smythe's indisposition will permit. [Extract from Domestic Correspondence, Jac. I., Vol. CXI., No. 30, Cal., p. 96.]

Nov. 19.

772. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Two barges to be made for Bantam and Surat, on Sir Thos. Roe's advice. Concerning the Unity, and fitting her for sea. The Bear to be made ready to carry provisions to Bantam, including 100 tons of tar. Touching the employment of Fitzherbert as principal of the fleet to Bantam, on certain conditions; Sir Thos. Roe desired to undertake the place and charge, but he acknowledging the Company's favour and liberality, desired a breathing time, though ready to perform any service for them both by word and deed. Debt of Sir Wm. Russell to the United Companies. Mr. Burrell informing that all the ships will be launched next week, resolved to have two new ones built, between 600 and 700 tons, and no more to be built above 700 tons, as big enough and of power sufficient against any force whatsoever. Letter read from his Majesty to the Governor and Company, requiring satisfaction from the Company to my Lord of Warwick for the loss of his two ships in the Indies and the overthrow of his voyage, yet the King acknowledged the Company had done no more than what in justice was lawful, "notwithstanding he set this action apart by itself, expecting the Company should be as respective as his Majesty had been, who was pleased to remit and forgive all his part, but in any the like actions hereafter the Company should find his gracious favour to prosecute them with all extremity." Opinion to stand upon their innocency as they had formerly done, when his Majesty and the Lords had seemed well pleased, but Sir Thomas Roe and Sir Dudley Diggs, from speeches they had heard at Court, agreed it was not fit for the Company to recall what they had done, but to justify themselves upon his Majesty's letters patent, as Sir Thos. Roe hath satisfied many of the Lords. Committee appointed to answer the messenger, and that it should be known from my Lord of Warwick what he esteems the value of the King's moiety which hath been bestowed upon him, and to make a final conclusion with him. Sir Thos. Roe to be allowed to adventure 800*l.* in the second joint stock. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 454-456.]

773. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Naunton. Eight ships of war designed for the East Indies have long been in preparation at Cadiz, and stayed only for mariners, which they will not want now the fleets are come home, for they take them by force and keep them in prison ashore till they are ready to set sail. [Extract from Corresp. Spain.]

Nov. 22.

774. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Necessity for building a barge for Surat confirmed. Sir Dudley Diggs and Sir Thos. Roe's report of their interview with my Lord of Warwick, who promised to set his claim down in writing. Agreement with Mr. Fitzherbert. Steele's accounts. Demands of Tracy, agent in Gloucestershire, in reference to the estate of his son, Wm. Tracy, a factor in Persia, who died in the voyage. Suit of Mrs. Hudson about freight of her goods. The fleet to be supplied with fifteen tons of white wine, to be drunk at the Line and the Cape, which is used by the Dutch to preserve men from the scurvy, and "will refresh the men and scour their maws, and open and cool as well as lemon water." 775. Aug. Spaldinge to the East India Company. Departure of the Sampson and Hound on 13th April last "to new establish both with men and means the almost decayed factories of Jambi, Patani, Siam, Succadana, &c." Adam Denton, Geo. Muschampe, Mr. Wildinge, and others going to assist. Arrest of three China junks for the Company's debts. Evil government of the English sailors "in drinking of their China wine and robbing of the goods," though every man has received a month's wages gratis out of the China silks. Letters received from Capt. Bonner and Mr. Fursland, who had gone for Acheen with the Dragon and Expedition to procure lading on their way to Surat; they were at Calicut to recover the Company's debts, but were deluded by that King and came away without anything. Bodman, the chief actor in burning the Black Lion, hanged at the Moon's yard-arm off Sumatra. Value of the China silks. Sudden death of Richard Harris. Thinks worser thieves live not in Newgate than most of the men in this fleet; Sir Thos. Dale's favour in allowing them to pillage at pleasure has made them worse. The Rose despatched for Acheen to Capt. Bonner and Fursland, with information of their present state with the Dutch and Bantam, and the time and place appointed for their meeting; value of the cargo. Set sail on 28 April. Sir Thos. Dale with the Moon, Clove, Globe, Peppercorn, Advice, and Dragon's Claw went to Engano to see what they could recover from the Sun, but got nothing but a little of his own plate; he found not one Englishman alive, but some 16 or 18 of their skulls lying in a heap together. Sir Thomas killed two of their people, burnt and cut down part of their houses and trees, and so left the place, but the diseases our people took there and aboard the China junks left not them until many ended this life. Between Engano and this place eighty died in Sir Thos. Dale's fleet, whereof of note Peter Bowers, Vice-Admiral, Nich. Ufflete, Tanfield Evans, Joseph Ralfe, and Samuel Hazard, merchants, also Martine and Kitchinge, masters; Sir Thomas himself very sick, and shortly after his arrival, on 19 July, "he departed this life in peace." Capt. Pring left Sir Thomas with the James Royal, Gift, Unicorn, and Bee, bound for Masulipatam; so many died that they were obliged to hire some 120 blacks for the ships. The Advice unable "to swim any farther." Harris' death caused by the upsetting of a boat, when four others were also drowned, himself and six men escaping; Harris' loss very great, he keeping the accounts. Beaumont, Holman, and Jourdain, jun., the only merchants left in this fleet. Ball pretends his time of service to be expired. Leave to build a slight house at the Bar to land their China porcelain. Inconvenience of expecting so long the good news of an agreement with the Dutch. Understood from some Dutch that there is no accord, and that the Star fought six hours with three Dutch ships, and after great loss yielded upon composition to depart in a boat for Priaman. Three of his best ships sent by General Peterson Coen after the President (Jourdain); is sure his fleet will not be able to perform any great fights for want of men and good munition. The Dutch aim to be sole masters of the whole Indies, and it would seem by the small strength the English Company have sent out for Bantam this year, in comparison of the Dutch, that they will be, unless there be some agreement of peace made at home. Hopes the Little James has arrived home in safety. Unless the Company has taken order for preventing future mischiefs of the Dutch, they may judge what will become of their East India trade, having no place in the Indies to retire to for succour. The whole fleet committed to the command of Capt. Pring. This place the worst ever he came to, for keeping dishonest men in order; they are grown rather worse than better. Daily complaints of the officers of the ships of want of provisions and a hundred necessaries. No hopes of amendment; private trade never more common; it cannot be helped in these troublesome times. Account of cargo shipped from hence this year. [Written December 9th.] Have now been plentifully replenished with fresh victuals and provisions for the sea. Great deal of foul weather hindered their shipping the necessary provisions and their departure. Bantam cargo, formerly provided for Surat, and in request here, landed with that in the lesser James from Siam and Patani. [*Nine pages. Endorsed, "Received 1 Jan. 1620-1 by the Dutch White Bear." birth and position, being heir to 300*l.* a year in land ; have no means of employment but only for merchants and mariners, and so dissuaded him, but offered their best assistance if he would go to the straits, where he may gain honour and experience. Letter from Sir Jas. Cunningham, claiming certain moneys for dismissing his voyage to Greenland. Mr. Stamere to be admitted a free brother. Debt of Robt. Angell. Submission of Nicholas Withington. Capt. Shilling found fault with for his harsh speeches and answers to some of the committees.

Nov. 26.—Concerning the supply of Coniak (Cognac) wine for the fleet ; Capt. Shilling and his alterations in the London ; and the supply of bread. Capt. Watts to be entertained. Complaint of the weight of the ordnance supplied to the shipping, “ which is only for the gunfounders’ profit and gain.” Eustace Man, having lately buried his wife, to be entertained for a master. Petition of Richard Steele, claiming allowance for eight months’ service in the Indies more than was allowed him by the committees. Request of John Woodhouse, the preacher, to proceed in the London with Capt. Shilling granted.

Nov. 29.—Letters from Mr. Quoitmore and Mr. Bennet from aboard the Little James, in Scilly road, for provisions and extra anchors, ropes, &c., the weather being most violent. Distaste against Mr. Robinson, a general auditor. Because many things of great moment and secrecy are already in their books and argued and spoken of in courts, which are not fit to be made known abroad, but to be kept private and secret, whereunto all the committees are sworn, resolved that the general auditors and general committees also take the oath of secrecy. Suit of Mr. Giles, who has been in all the great actions at sea since ’88, for employment. The Bear to be sheathed, Sir Thos. Roe informing that the King of Acheen will give any reasonable sum for such a ship. [Five pages. Court Bk. IV., 458–462.]

777. Carleton to Chamberlain. Begs him to let Sir Dudley Diggs know how much Carleton is beholden to him, but does not desire he should insist any more upon that matter, “ for it is not a fit thing to be prest, neither is it likely he can now make them (the committee of the East India Company) apprehensive of the pains and toil it cost me here during the distractions of this state, first to procure a resolution of sending commissioners, and next to make a sufficient commission be despatched after them, in which point I can call to mind that you lighted upon some part of my endeavours.” Some of the chief of the Privy Council have acknowledged the good and seasonable office he did in this business, by which means that of the Indies had a despatch apart ; if it had been entangled with the rest, as some back friends to the cause endeavoured, God knows when we should have seen an issue thereof ; but it seems they can be well content to reap the fruits of other men’s labours without searching much who did their help or hurt them.” Writes not this by way of remonstrances, but to let Sir Dudley Diggs and himself know what reason Carleton had to look to be remembered. Thanks Lady Smith for her token, though he does not yet see it; but as it falls out the provision he has of the same kind from friends makes him able the better to excuse the stay of it. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

778. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the purchase of the Bear, and the demands of Steele. Letter read from my Lord of Buckingham from Newmarket, informing the Company that his Majesty, having formerly granted to Buckingham that part of the goods which belonged to him out of the forfeiture incurred by the Earl of Warwick, and his Majesty having since written in Lord Warwick's behalf, therefore his Majesty willingly remitted to Warwick "all his interest and pretence which he had by his Majesty's said grant." A study to be made in the great cabin (of the London) at Capt. Shilling's suit. 20*l.* given to Capt. Shilling for his part in the prize taken in the Indies. John Berrye recommended by Sir Clement Edmondes for employment. Raph, brother to Sir Clement Edmondes, having formerly been entertained, desires the Company's resolution as to his future employment. Swanley's accounts. Offer of Halsey of ten shillings in the pound to be paid by instalments, he owing a matter of 21,000*l.*; it was held fit not to deal hardly with him, but to be charitable, the Company's debt coming by goods bought, wherein he says he sustained great loss, which was by his own folly; these things to be kept private according to his desire. Concerning the employment of Captains Giles and Towerson, the latter having been long in the Company's service and lived long at Bantam; objections as to his wife answered by his brother, William Towerson; referred for consideration. Exceptions against Capt. Giles for having married a Spaniard and suspected for his religion; his offer to receive the sacrament to give them satisfaction, and says he has been in all general services at sea as captain of a ship, since the Portugals' action, both in the West Indies with Sir Fras. Drake, Lord Essex at Cadiz, where he was rewarded in entering the town; referred for consideration. Petition of divers creditors of Jerard Read concerning his adventures, which had been passed over to Wm. Bremwell. An extent from the King to make stay of 300*l.* belonging to Mr. Higgons in the Company's hands. Petition of Nicholas Withington, for satisfaction for goods brought home by him. Letter received from the Directors of the East India Company of the Low Countries of 20 Nov. last, "which being in French, was appointed to be translated against the next court."

Dec. 3.—Letters read from Quoitmore, Bennet, Hawkeridge, and Totten from aboard the Little James and Supply in the road of Scilly, with accounts of the extremity of weather, and the narrow escape of the James from shipwreck. Gratuity of 20*l.* to Jonathan Grudge, kinsman to Mr. Godolphin, captain of the castle of Scilly, for having brought up the Company's letters overland. 50*l.* lent to Christopher Cole on his bond. Sundry letters read, written from the Cape by the factors and others of the last fleet, brought from thence by the James; one from Robt. Jeffries, with his opinion of fortifying there; another from Sir Thos. Dale and the rest of the commanders and merchants, to be made known to all ships that proceed to the Indies; that the rendezvous is appointed at Priaman, to be enabled to proceed the more forcibly against the Dutch, their enemies; from Carnabye, who proceeded master of the Supply; from John Purefey, factor from the Cape; from Mathew Duke, factor from Masulipatam, with information of a fight between the Bee and two Portugal galleons, wherein she played her part exceedingly well; description of Cochin, and his opinion of the factories in Masulipatam; and a letter from Surat from Thos. Keridge and Thos. Rastell. Petition of William Neelson for employment under Mr. Ellan, and his offer to carry letters to Persia. Opinion of Sir Thos. Roe of his fitness to go with a caravan to Surat. No place suitable for him at this time. Mr. Langton to be admitted a free brother. The Bear to be called the White Bear. Another ship besides the Lioness to be hired. The Frenchman demanding 300*l.* per ann., and said to have been one of small employment, the Company are "unwilling to hinder his other fortunes." The wages of Mr. Friday, the preacher, to be put into the joint stock, on the motion of Alderman Hamerslye. Mr. Giles about the seizure of whale fins brought into the land contrary to his Majesty's proclamation. [Four pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 462-466.]

London.

779. Chamberlain to Carleton. Our East Indian ship that touched at the Scillies hath been driven aground there by foul weather, but the men and goods saved, though no doubt with great loss. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXI., No. 62, Cal., p. 101.]

Dec. 4.
Masulipatam.

780. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. His last of 2 December 1618, by way of Surat, acquainted them with the putting out of their moneys of the factory of Pettapoli; the accounts there have been safely managed by himself. The Clove arrived at Pettapoli 1st October 1619, and was dispeeded on 14th of same with store of victuals for the ships. [One page. Endorsed, "Received by the Dutch White Bear, 1 January 1620-1." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 824.]

Dec. 6.

781. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Libbye Chapman, consul at Aleppo, of 25 August last, informing of the despatch of certain letters from Persia by the factors, by a French ship, and copy of one from Barker, Monox, and Robins, of 31 August last, from Adye, in Persia, discoursing of sundry troubles raised against them by the malicious attempts of the Portugals, and how the English were delivered to their adversaries' infamy; the great hopes of a good issue of a very hopeful and profitable trade to be had there, and that from letters concerning trade in the Indies he suspected the decay of the Turkey trade. Concerning the employment of Raph Edmondes in the Indies, at the solicitation of his brother, Sir Clement, who promised to procure him to be one of the four of the Council of Defence, but is unwilling to accept an inferior place; all the Council of Defence already appointed, but the Company

willing to employ him as a factor; Raph's desire for a son of his, aged 18, to be employed in the Indies, and his other son, who has been there two years, to have wages. Two bills of Jerard Read's, whose adventures were passed over to Mr. Greenwell, renewed to Christmas. Letter received from the Low Countries concerning the propositions formerly in question about fortifying at the Cape, as also sending forces to scour the coasts of Surat, India, and Malabar; resolved to have the next court sit wholly apart for this business, at which Sir Thos. Roe, Sir John Wolstenholme, and Sir Wm. Russell are entreated to be present. Eustace Man, who is sorry for what is past, to be employed as master, if he will accept 8*l.* per month. Raph Gilliver recommended by Sir John Suckling for employment. Edwyn Guy, purser's mate, to be removed from the Anne to the London, Christopher Pine having long supplied the place of mate. Nicholas Wolley to be disposed of in some other ship. Lord Warwick's demand, altogether impertinent and differing from that which he hath been required to set down according to the true purport of his Majesty's letter, to be read, but the Governor gave it in charge to all upon their oath to conceal the same, lest the rumour of so great a matter might be by some apprehended to be more dangerous than there is cause to fear; "making his demand for his two ships, the Francis and Lion, with their furniture, provisions, and the like, and captains', merchants', and mariners' wages, the sum 19,466*l.*, besides the demands he maketh of what he pretendeth the Company have been benefited by the said goods taken from him;" the further consideration to be left to the committee appointed for that business. Gratifications and gifts to be offered at Christmas to "some lords and other officers of whose countenance and favour the Company stand in need; 1,000*l.* the most that hath been formerly given, although the general opinion for 4,000*l.* or 5,000*l.*;" committee to consider thereon. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 466-468.]

Dec. 7.
Aboard the Unicorn,
Masulipatam
Road.

782. Wm. Methwold to the East India Company. Has followed his instructions since his voyage from Bantam. Refers to his previous letter (ante, No. 403). Ships arrived and expected. The four commanded by Capt. Pring landed letters at a place called Narapoli, took 10,000 ryals on board, and when arrived at Masulipatam found Sir Thos. Dale's fleet at anchor in the road. Sir Thos. advised his extremity of sickness, and desired to have some place fitted for him on shore; he was brought to the Company's house, where after twenty days of languishing sickness and many testimonies of good christianity, contempt of death, and singular zeal and affection towards the Company's service, he died, and his body was "enclosed and housed in form of a tomb, which is almost finished." The ships provisioned; dissatisfaction of some. Seizure of a China junk for non-payment of debts; "they have stolen without proportion, sold without consideration, and spent without discretion, and in all these behaved themselves so like barbarous outlaws that I fear our nation, formerly well reputed of, will suffer a perpetual scandal." Riotous conduct and drunkenness of many of the fleet; runaway troops by assistance of the country have been recovered. Is ignorant of the cause of all this; cannot sufficiently commend the present commander, Capt. Pring. Private trade practised publicly from commanders to mariners; confesses himself not exempt in this general usurped liberty. Hopes to furnish good quantity of Bengala silk. Accounts their first debt and later adventure at Pegu desperate; case of a junk which arrived there in April last. Quicksilver and vermilion worth more in England than here; their debts all good; no factory in India hath been so fortunate and thrifty. Goods received from Spalding. [Four pages. Endorsed, "Received ye 1 January 1620-1, by the Dutch White Bear." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 825.]

Dec. 8-10. 783. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Mr. Portage to be treated with concerning the recovery of the money lost. Fresh agreement with the master of the Lioness to bring pepper at 20 shillings the ton of 1,500 lbs. Cater's debt. Discussion concerning the proposals from the Low Countries for discovery of the Cape, and scouring the coast towards Surat; the Council (of Defence) in the Indies to direct the ships of war. Complaint that the business of these courts is published, as appears by the particulars of Lord Warwick's business, which the Governor gave in charge to be concealed; these things to be examined. Negligencies in the accounts discovered by the general auditors, "but no main errors of fraud;" committee appointed to consider thereon. Higgons' creditors. Report on Lord Warwick's business, that by a certificate under the hands of his chief men the goods and money amounted in all to 1,278*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*; copy to be showed to his Lordship, and one-half tendered upon his receipt for his Majesty's part; committee to see Lord Warwick with this answer, and to be ready to hear any reasonable demand from him.

Dec. 10.—Concerning the carelessness of Richard Mountney in his accounts. Henry Short, Edward Meade, John Blount, and Edward Withers to attend to the business of Scilly. Answer to the letters from the Low Countries approved. Robinson's request to take some of the Company's books to his house denied. Complaints against Poulstead for having certain notes out of the Company's books in a paper, "which are thought to be very prejudicial to have them divulged, and much wrong done by those." Account of the first and second joint stocks. Instructions to the committee about Lord Warwick's business. All manner of stores and provisions to be sent to the Indies. [Four pages. Court Bk. IV., 468-472.]

Madrid.

784. Fras. Cottington to Sec. Naunton. Sir Robt. Sherley still at Madrid with title of the Persian's Ambassador, and entertained by this King with 1,000 ducats every month, besides his house and a coach. But for his business touching the settling of a trade from thence into these parts, making the Armenians the merchants in Portuguese ships, finds not that he concludes anything at all. Sir Anthony Sherley is also here, but a very poor man and much neglected, "yet the King gives him 3,000 ducats every year by quarterly payments, but he hath so pawned and spent it, as he is sometimes like to starve for want of bread ; the poor man comes sometimes to my house, and is as full of vanity as ever he was, making himself believe that he shall one day be a great prince, when for the present he wants shoes to wear ; the two brothers are much fallen out, and both by word and writing do all the harm they can in defaming each other, but I must needs confess that the ambassador is the discreeter of the two.”

[Extract from Corresp. Spain.]

Dec. 13–15. 785. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The Unity to be despatched with men and provisions for the Cape. Letter read from John Totten, master of the Supply, from St. Mary's in Scilly, concerning the state of his ship and the James, weather-bound there ; other letters from Coytmore and Abrah. Jennyns on the same subject. Letter read from Nicholas Ufflete from Jacatra, of 11 March 1619, wishing that if there be but 50,000*l.* difference between the Company and the Dutch, they should rather give it than want the peaceable and profitable trade which by their unity might be gained, whereas the division benefits the heathens and ruins themselves, which letter gave some hopes that there hath been speech there of some treaty of peace here, which they in those parts take knowledge of. Mun's apology in justifying his proceedings touching what he had made known to Poulstead and “supposed to be so great an offence.” Report of the committee appointed to confer with Lord Warwick ; further committees named to conclude the business. “Some making question how far his Majesty's part may extend by law upon a prize taken in the Indies, wished to have some civil lawyer's opinion, “but was held unfit to make any such question until it was found how his Lordship will press the business. Sir Thos. Roe, Sir John Wolstenholme, Sir Wm. Russell, and Levinus Muncke sworn not to divulge anything that is handled in court. Steele charged with many misdemeanours. Gratuity to Jo. George, a Dutchman, who went forth with Sir Robt. Sherley.

Dec. 15.—Concerning the general auditors and the Muscovy business, and Lady Suffolk and Sir Thos. Edmondes' adventures ; referred to more serious consideration, “some conceiving that there is stock sufficient at Bantam and Surat to return lading for these two years in their shipping without supplying any more from hence, affirming that all the trades in India cannot employ 100,000*l.* a year profitably (setting Persia aside), but that being followed and prospering, there will be means sufficient for their greatest stock they can send.” Mrs. Hudson and her indigo. John Johnson, brother of one of the Lord Chancellor's gentlemen, referred to Sir Thos. Roe for employment. Request of Robert Delean to pass over his adventure in the first joint stock to his daughter refused ; the reasons. Henry Robinson allowed to take home two books of his own drawing out. Anthony Sanford, late quartermaster in the Clove, who lost his leg in fight against the Flemings, to be employed at the yards. Consideration about founding an almshouse for poor persons maimed in the Company's service ; some 500*l.* or 600*l.* left by will by Greete, and 400*l.* promised by Sir Thos. Roe to further the object, so it may be speedily put in execution. Petition of Richard Swanne, master of the Roebuck, concerning his goods. John Richards recommended by Mr. Solicitor for employment. Lord Warwick's business referred to next court. [Four pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 472-477.]

Dec. 15.

Agra.

786. Fras. Fetiplace, Robert Hughes, and John Parker to the East India Company. Arrival of the Charles, Ruby, and Diamond long since at Surat. Glad to hear of the safe arrival home of the Bull. Answer to complaints of the quality and packing of goods sent home. The store they will provide next year, which include spikenard, the best and best cheap to be bought in Agra, carpets, and indigo. Will send Bengala silk next year. Goods which they think will sell in Agra; and those sent to Surat by John Banggam, as also to Persia,—all arrested on the way to Burrampocr by an Armenian, servant to Francisco Swares, a Portugal, for a debt of 20,000 rupees he laid claim to from Nich. Banggam for goods delivered in Burrampoor. Giles James unable to clear these goods until after three or four months' trouble and procuring two phirmaunds from the Prince. Second cargo sent towards Surat in company of John Young. Particular of all goods bought and sent down from Agra for England. Return of the King to Agra, after a five or six years' progress. Wm. Biddulph arrived in Agra, and gone with the President and Council at Surat to the Court with the presents brought in Capt. Bonner's fleet. Tapestry bought by the Prince and shared with his father and mother; cent. per cent. gained by the sale of it, and fifty per cent. on cloth of gold and silver; velvets and satins sold at little profit. Prices realized by other goods and those which should in future be sent from England. The King again gone in progress towards Lahore, thence to Cashmere, followed a month after by Wm. Biddulph, John Willoughby, and Thos. Hawkridge, the attendant, to solicit the Prince about their complaints from Surat and getting in their debts. The Prince denies them trade into the Red Sea, "alleging that thereby the merchants of Surat would be impoverished;" a ship's lading might yearly be despatched for Mocha from Agra. John Parker, hearing of his father's death, is desirous to return to England. Ufflete's account; his departure for Ajmere. [Ten pages. Endorsed, "Received by the Lion, 27 September 1620." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 827.]

Dec. 17.

Masulipatam.

787. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. Has delivered to Spaldinge a journal and ledger of the Company's business in the factory of Pettapoli. Arrival of Capt. Pring with the Royal James, Gift, Unicorn, and Bee on this coast 30th June past. Shortly after the Peppercorn went to Acheen, met with a Dutch ship, and were told that the English and Dutch were united, and that the States of Holland were in England concluding peace; news since received that the Star is taken at Bantam, "so that it is to be feared all was but tricked to save themselves" (the Dutch ship from being made prize by the Peppercorn). Arrival of Sir Thos. Dale with his fleet at Masulipatam on 19 July; he died 9th August, and Capt. Pring succeeded him. The Clove came to Pettapoli 1st Oct. Went with

Futter on 13th for Masulipatam, where he delivered his accounts to Methwold. Capt. Pring sailed with nine ships on 10th present for Tecoe, "the place appointed for rendezvous," where it is to be hoped he will meet with the President (Jourdain), who went to Siam and Patani to resettle the factories which have been defeated by the Portugals; he took with him the Sampson and Hound, with Adam Denton, &c. The Hollanders sent three good ships after him. Only two Holland ships have been here since the coming in of the fleet, stayed but a few hours and sailed for Pulicat. Four Danish ships came to the Island of Seland at the mouth of the Gulf of Bengala with great store of men, women, and children, purposing, it appears, to inhabit there, but one ship was taken by the Portugal frigates; knows not what has become of the rest. [Two pages and three quarters. Endorsed, "Received by the Lion the 27th Sept. 1620."] [O.C., Vol. VII., No. 828.]

[Dec. 17.] 788. Articles delivered to Robt. Jeffreys by Edward Pettus Jask. against Edward Monnox, with his answers; requiring them to be sent to the East India Company. [Duplicate of No. 649, but differently endorsed, and with this addition, "Both wanted date, and the said articles were presented and answered the 17th of Dec. 1619." Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 829.]

Dec. 17-24. 789. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Libby Chapman, Consul of Aleppo, of 25 Aug. last, enclosing packet of letters from the factors in Persia; the committees for the Persia business to despatch answers by the next fleet. Question as to the privilege of any brother of the Company to peruse journals or letters. Suit of Raph Edmondes concerning his son's wages. The remainders and lag ends of the broken voyages, amounting to 221*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*, to be devoted for those charitable uses before mentioned (with a marginal note, "A chargeable action intended"). Petition of Jas. Demaistres, brewer, touching beer supplied to the Company; also of Robert Marston, haberdasher, one of the Company, prisoner in the King's Bench, for charitable relief, his debt. not exceeding five pieces. Mountney's remarks on his instructions to have his books audited once a month; Edward Seager, — Walker, Walter Mountford, and Richard Brag appointed to assist Mountney. Report of the conference of the committees with Lord Warwick; his desire to have his business submitted to arbitration.

Dec. 20.—Concerning Demaistres, the brewer, and the sixty tons of bad beer thrown overboard, besides the death of the Company's people occasioned thereby, which all his wealth and life cannot satisfy; complaint to be made to the Lords of the Council. A master to be appointed for the Exchange. Great private trade of Swanley; committee named to conclude his business. The Privy Council to have the amounts of the Dutchmen's adventures.

Dec. 22.—Mrs. Hudson's "troublesome suit" concerning her goods, ended. Submission of Swanley; his suit for employment; to be appointed master of the Exchange. Request of Lord Warwick to have his business put off until after Christmas.

Dec. 24.—Petition read from Anne Clinton and Sarah Meggood, craving to have their legacies of 100*l.* each out of Capt. Pepwell's estate paid to them. Unjust aspersions upon the committees. Agreement with Henry Dorrell, to have 80*l.* the first three years, 100*l.* the fourth, with annual increase of 30*l.* to the seventh year. Letters read from Richard Frobusher, carpenter, from Saldanha Bay, of 15 July last, complaining of sundry defects in the shipping; and from Jas. Erwyn, of 3 July, condemning the badness of some of the masts of the fleet, commending the goodness of the provisions, and the good government of Bickley and the rest of the masters. Thos. Tayler recommended for employment. Petitions of Wm. Nethersall concerning his debt for diamonds bought of the Company; of Thos. Gidwyn, one of Lord Warwick's company, for increase of the wages allowed him; and of Richard Maunsell, schoolmaster, desiring the Company's charitable benevolence, like other companies, towards the repairing of his great losses by a sudden and violent fire that consumed house and goods and the books and means of many other scholars to the value of about 1,400*l.*; 10*l.* given. Gratuity to Nicholas Crispe, purser of the London. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 477-482.]

Dec. 25.
Senend, in the King's Lascar,
200 coss from Agra and 100
coss short of Lahore.

790. Wm. Biddulphe and John Willoughby to the East India Company. Theirs of 15 Feb. 1618-9 received at Agra 1 Nov. last. Arrival of the fleet in Surat 3 Oct. The wrongs and abuses in Surat more likely to increase than diminish, so long as the Prince Sultan Corrone has his present place. Complaint of Sir Thos. Roe for never procuring any redress and getting clear of the country, seeing he could do nothing with these people, and left all the merchants in the country in the briars to shift as they might. The carpets of Agra; Lahore the chief place for that commodity; also concerning other commodities, including indigo, ingots of silver, furs, window glass, swords, knives, and hot waters, none of which should be sent. Fortifying any place here with soldiers will never be granted, nor was ever likely. Departure of Capt. Towerson, Mrs. Hudson, Rich. Steele, and his wife last year; only Capt. Towerson's lady or wife of that Company remains at Agra; her and her mother sent to borrow 200 ryals until her husband's return. Steele was never entertained in the King's service, but was only in his train to perform some of his projects which were never effected. Goods that will sell to most profit in Agra. No quantity of silk to be had there; cochineal cheaper in Persia. The great pearl of 20 carats now sent likely to sell well; is advised to send it privately to Court. Goods bought by Fetiplace and Robt. Young and sent by the Bull. Robt. Hughes a fit man for that employment. Could not send spikenard this year from Agra. Acceptance of augmentation of wages. Biddulphe's desire to return home. Complaints against Sir Thos. Roe; notwithstanding his phirmaunds and presents, the goods were detained in the Custom House at Surat too late to send to Court, but afterwards brought to Agra by way of Burrampoor by John Willoughby, John Parker, John Yonge, Thos. Hawkridge, and Biddulphe. Account of proceedings caused by the detention of 200

camels laden with goods for Persia by the Governor of Burrampoor through Francisco Swaryes, a Portugal, for a pretended debt of 20,000 rupees of china ware delivered to Banggam. Conduct of Sprage, sent away to Surat. The camel men detained 20 days about this suit. Roe left order before his departure that the merchants in Surat should content Swaryes for his china; this the cause of the extraordinary expense and all the toil and trouble to the Company's servants. The goods at length released by a second phirmaund of the King; those taken last year restored to Giles James. Doubts that the Portugal may renew his action on his return from Deccan. The surety for the debt of 30,000 rupees delivered into the English factors' hands, who keep him in irons lest he should escape. Hope to recover all the debt. Most of the fine wares sold, also remainder of the cloth. Concerning tapestry and gold and silver lace. Great pearls from 20 to 40 carats, oriental and fair, most in request at present. Departure of the King from Agra on his journey to Cashmere 7 Oct. last. Willoughby, Hawkrige, and Biddulphe attend the Court. Unsuccessful endeavours to free their trade to the Red Sea. The Guzerats think the English do not dare to meddle with their shipping without express order from England. The abuses they suffer due to the Prince, who is King of Surat; hope he will not long continue in authority; he denies the English trade to Mocha, where coral is the chief commodity. Charge Roe with promising the Governor of Surat not to trade into the Red Sea; he had much ado last year to ship the goods for Mocha. Remarks on that trade. Recommend the seizure of the Guzerat junks. Complain of the few presents sent this and last year; great necessity for them, "for they respect more the gifts than the person;" their wonder that his Majesty's letters should be delivered without presents, "which caused their reception accordingly." Allowance to Hawkrige for his apparel; recommend his wages to be increased. Uncertain at present where the King will settle. Beg the Company to consider Biddulphe's great pains and travail. [Eight pages and a half. Endorsed, "Received 27 Sept. 1620." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 831.]

Dec. 29-31. 791. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letters read from the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney-General concerning 11,000*l.* of Robt. Delean's in the Company's hands, which is to be extended to the King towards satisfaction of his fine, which the Governor is commanded "in regard of his Majesty's occasions" to take order to have presently levied. Whether some of the brethren may be drawn to trade to Greenland, or any private men will undertake the action. As to disuniting and severing the East India and Muscovy Companies. The true nature of the loss to be shown and how it happened, by the fishing of Greenland and loss sustained by the Dutch firing their house in Muscovy and the like, which together have drawn the loss for the two years past to 33,000*l.*, besides 12,000*l.* owing by the Emperor; some hope of silk by procuring the 22,000*l.* that the Dutch owe, which is held a fit business to be prosecuted and recommended to the care of the Commissioners of the Treaty. Motion to admit Isaac Van Paine to the freedom for a fine of 50*l.*, being English born, though of Dutch parents : to be careful not to regard their freedoms so lightly as to accept of men on too mean terms ; a former resolution to accept such as are born within the land for 100*l.*, and mere strangers at 200 marks, confirmed. Gratuity to George Charles, hurt in the yard at Blackwall, and who died shortly after. Concerning Capt. Pepwell's accounts.

Minutes of a general Court. Concerning the disjoining of the East India and Muscovy Companies, and the auditing of the accounts by the general auditors. Lanman and Robinson's methods of keeping the accounts ; accusations and counter accusations. Motion to have the letters received from India read in court objected to by the Governor, and rejected on his undertaking to show the reasons to any brother who will apply to him privately. Motion for a quarterly general court referred for consideration. Safety of the ships at Scilly.

Dec. 31.—Report of the Deputy Governor and Treasurer's interview with the Attorney-General, "who is very worthy and kind, as formerly he has showed himself, and careful of the good of the Company." Concerning Delean's adventures. Capt. Pepwell's accounts ; Mr. Fothersbye to bring in his notes. 900*l.* adventure in the second joint stock paid in by Lords Suffolk and Walden to be returned to them. Letter read from Mrs. Joseph concerning the money paid by her husband, Capt. Joseph, to the Company at his going forth four years ago. Petition of Wm. Hastiffe, a Frenchman, for his services at Bantam, dismissed. The Unity to be despatched. Robert Ambrose, because of a mutiny on the London, to be removed to another ship. Concerning the accounts, as to the way they have been kept, and the opprobrious speeches of Robinson against Lanman, [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 482-487.]

792. [Sir Thos. Wilson] to the King. About a year or two since he showed his Majesty letters from an old acquaintance of Wilson's [Rich. Cocks] residing at Yedo, the court of the Emperor of Japan (see ante, No. 315) ; they contained many strange things of the Emperor's palace, capable of 200,000 men, wherein 100 kings with their queens and families continually resident, and many of them as much revenue as his Majesty hath in all his kingdoms ; temples with 3 or 4,000 golden idols in each ; battles wherein 300,000 were slain at a time, and a great number of other wonders, which caused the King to tell Wilson they were the loudest lies that he had ever heard. Has now received other letters, which he is told to send the King herewith, the writer [Cocks] being the factor of our merchants in those parts, and though not lettered, yet a man of honesty, years, and judgment. [One page. Endorsed by Wilson, "My letter to the King not sent." Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXI., No. 123, Cal., p. 108.]

1619?

793. Petition of Sir Jas. Cunningham to the Privy Council. By virtue of a patent granted by the King and the Privy Council of Scotland to the petitioner a new East India Company was erected, and provision made for a voyage to Greenland for whale fishing, but at the suit of the Muscovy Company his Majesty last year dismissed the petitioner and his company on condition of the old Company defraying all the losses and charges, which they have not yet done. Prays for redress. [See ante, Nos. 378, 397. Domestic Jac. I., Vol. CXI., No. 125, Cal., Addenda, p. 556.*]

1619? 794. Extract of the consultations held jointly by the officers of both the East India Companies when the articles of the treaty were received in India by the Bull. [French. Endorsed by Carleton, "Coen's declaration touching the execution of the treaty." Holland Corresp.]

1619? 795. Warrant for payment to Robert Bell of 909*l.* 0*s.* 0½*d.* out of the imposts on the first goods brought into the port of London by the East India Company, which sum is due to him for wines sold to Prince Charles in 1615 and 1616. [Sign Manual, Jac. I., Vol XI., No. 48, Cal., p. 108.]

1620.

Jan. 1. 796. Carleton to Chamberlain. Sends his answer to Sir Dudley Diggs, which contains thanks only for his good will, without desiring to have the matter pressed any further (see ante No. 777.), "though the saying what I did was by the King's commandment should be no more applied to me than it might have been to the Commissioners; and Sir Noel Caron's example cannot be cast in my way, unless affairs in England had been as much embroiled when our Commissioners came hither as theirs were here when there was question of sending." Had Carleton not then added his private solicitations to his public offices, it may be things had not gone as they did, "but I am far from repenting myself of anything I have done, and my affection to the business is such that I believe whensoever further occasion is presented it is not ingratitude that can make me slack my best endeavours, wherefore the chief of our company may be commended for the choice they have made where to save charges without peril, though otherwise I cannot brag of their bounty, and yet I should have esteemed of a small toy by way of remembrance as much as of a greater matter." [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Jan. 3. 797. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Concerning the Muscovy business and the Greenland fishery. Committee appointed to speak with parties making an offer. The goods in the country which cost 3,683*l.*, now valued at 2,382*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.* Estimate of the cost of setting forth a ship of 700 or 800 tons; supposed to amount to 5,600*l.*, and the taking of whales, oil, &c., to produce 7,000*l.*

Jan. 4.—Conference with Strowd and Edge on the Greenland business.

Jan. 5.—Employment of Watts; thought fit to be commander of a fort in the Indies. His desire to command a ship for Bantam, but not knowing the state of their affairs in the country, the Company must leave him to the council of war; "he departed discontented with a froward kind of behaviour and gesture." Letters read from Sir Thos. Roe from Ahmedabad; Thos. Keridge and Thos. Rastell from Surat; and Capt. Jourdain from Bantam, commending Thos. Batten, who went forth in Capt. Pring's fleet to train men and inure them to arms; his desire about his child. John Dent and John Cartwright to go factors in the Unity; their salaries. Letters for Persia to be sent by the Dutch ships now going, if possible. Proceedings of Robinson considered neither fair nor proper to his place as an auditor; his endeavours to make an absolute rent and division in the whole action, to the overthrow and confusion thereof. Demands of Thos. Taylor to proceed as a master. Robt. Delean's adventures. Quicksilver bought of Alderman Hamerslye at 2*s.* 10*d.* per lb. Letter read from Sir Henry Hubbard [Hobart], Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, on behalf of Peter Bell, a kinsman of his wife's, for employment. Gratuity out of the poor box to Nathaniel Curtys, a poor man maimed in the Company's service.

Jan. 7.—Motion of Sir Thomas Haward to repay him 750*l.* Whether to petition his Majesty for the continuance of his favour, or the trade for Persia will not be followed, but thought fit to forbear for a time as the Company expect to hear from thence within six months. Instructions to the deputy and treasurer, sent for before the King's attorney, deemed to be about Delean's matter. Report that the Company had lent 10,000*l.* to the King contradicted by the Governor, who stated it was lent by particular men out of their own purses, to free the Company of the demands made to them for it. Concerning Robinson, and a meeting of the six new auditors with the auditors of the committees.

Jan. 10.—Request of John Delabarr to transport his adventure to Freeman. Valuation of Robt. Delean's adventures. The Unity to be dispatched with four chests of ryals, and her letters and commissions. Shephard, appointed steward, on the recommendation of Sir Thos. Roe, dismissed as a weak old man, and unfit for the Company's service. Complaint that landsmen had greater wages than seamen, the wages of landmen, with one exception, "Morley, a lusty young fellow," being 18s. a month, the usual wages of seamen 23s. and 24s. a month. Renewed request of Sir Thomas Haward concerning his adventure. Motion of Clitherow, that Nath. Courthorpe, one of the Company's servants in the Indies, having kept possession of Pooloroon for the Company very valiantly against the Flemings, and endured much misery, might receive some preferment from the Company, both for place and salary. Ordered that he have 100*l.* per annum, and be recommended to the president and council at Bantam for preferment. On the recommendation of Towerson, John Amye, employed in Persia, is granted a salary of 20*l.* a year, with an annual increase of 10*l.* for seven years. Edmondes and John Goodwyn, factors at Surat, the former well reported of by Sir Thomas Roe, to have the like wages. John Gunning, a factor, to have 100 marks the first year, and 100*l.* afterwards for seven years. Wages of John Clarke and Justinian Offley, factors. Six paces and a quarter. [Court Bk., IV., 487-493.]

Jan. 12. 799. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Thos. Tompson, a factor skilful in silk ordered for Persia, to have 30*l.* a year, with an annual rise of 10*l.* The Company questioned for exportation of silver; reasons delivered for their justification. The King graciously pleased to signify his royal favour and good opinion towards the Company. Robert Delean's adventures and his creditors. Leave not yet obtained from the Lord Admiral for Capt Shilling to proceed in the Company's service for Surat, upon suggestions that he was one of the best able men this kingdom had to do his Majesty's service, if need should require. Committee to see Lord Nottingham, and present him with half a score pieces of calico, and then move him to write to the Lord Admiral for leave for Capt. Shilling to undertake this employment for the Company, in regard he is dismissed from his place in the King's Navy. Letter read from John Ham, of Bristol, for a brother-in-law of his to go factor to the Indies; his suit too late.

Jan. 14.—Feoffees for the lease from Burrell of the plot of ground at Blackwall. Wages of William Moore, a factor. Increase of wages granted to a kinsman of Sir Clement Edmondes, a factor at Surat, at Sir Clement's request. Report of Alderman Hamerslye of the proceedings of the auditors of the committees with the general auditors; proposals of Robinson exhibited in seven articles. An order of the King in Council read on the Company's petition to his Majesty to have those complaints and suggestions lately exhibited against them for exportation of silver examined, and if found untruths that the Company might still be retained in his Majesty's good opinion, and live in quiet under his royal protection. The King, in his princely regard to the Company, having referred the examination to a committee of his Privy Council, a committee, with the Governor at the head, is appointed to attend the Lord Chancellor, for the hearing and examining thereof. Order of the Privy Council concerning the mint read. The pound weight of silver to be cut into 66s.; any merchant bringing silver or bullion to receive the same weight in money on paying 2s. per lb. for coinage; the ounce of silver to be 5s. 4d., and the ryal of eight 4s. 8d.; and because neither merchant nor goldsmith shall overbuy the King's mint, the said order provides that the East India Company and the Goldsmiths should by several acts in their courts bind themselves not to do so, for which purpose a committee is appointed to contrive an act for the Company accordingly. Joshewagh (Joshua) Bannister conceived unfit for employment. John Stoddard to proceed a good fellow at 19s. per month. John Harris, having been master in the Angel, to be conferred with to proceed master in the Anne. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 493-496.]

Jan. 15.
Minau.

800. Consultation held in Minau, present, Edw. Monox, William Bell, John Amye, John Purefey, and John Benthall, concerning a present to be given to Nereary, the governor. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 833.]

Jan. 17.

801. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Delft from Richard Fowler, an Englishman who had long lived in those parts, certifying his skill to make salt water fresh, with other inventions, and offering his service to the Company, "which was thought idle, and rejected." Suit of — Dupper for a factor's place. The account of Wm. Hemsall, deceased, to be made out on the motion of Sir Thos. Roe. Letter read from Thos. Alisbury to Thos. Stiles to be quit of his adventure in the second joint stock, and have the money repaid to him; Stiles requested to reply, that on Alisbury's request to the Company, "and his readiness to befriend them in procuring Capt. Shilling's liberty to serve them in this present voyage to the Indies, they would grant it him." Sir John Wolstenholme, Sir Thos. Roe, and Mr. Leate requested to go to Sir Robt. Mansell, to procure liberty for Capt. Shilling to go upon the Company's voyage. Edward Percy entertained Master in the White Bear; Thos. Tailor, Master's mate in the Anne. Letter read from the King of 4th January, signifying his pleasure that the whole controversy between the Earl of Warwick and the Company should be submitted to two arbitrators, and if they could not end it his Majesty would appoint an umpire, and that his Majesty's mind was that the Earl should be no loser by the voyage. A petition to be drawn to his Majesty, stating how far the Company had proceeded with the Earl.

Jan. 19.—Complaint that Jas. Motham and Thos. Jones had hired away divers men from the London to serve the King of Denmark in the East Indies. Complaint to be made to the Judge of the Admiralty and afterwards to the Privy Council. Debate as to whether they should make an act binding themselves not to give a higher price for silver than the King had allowed, or whether they should petition his Majesty for liberty to buy the Spanish ryal at 4s. 8d. by the piece, and not by the ounce. Committee appointed to attend the Privy Council also concerning the transportation of silver. Remarks of the Earl of Warwick to Sir Thos. Roe on the King's letter to the Company. Their answer that they would take it into consideration as soon as they conveniently could, their business then hindering them from doing so.

Jan. 20.—Offer of Strowde concerning the Greenland voyage discussed, and motion of Governor Wyeth referred to a Committee.

Jan. 21.—The Surat fleet very backward. Committee to go to Court, to obtain leave from the Lord Admiral for Capt. Shilling to proceed on the voyage, and take with them the Company's petition in answer to the King's second letter concerning Lord Warwick's business, lest any imputation of neglect should be urged against the Company. Discussion on the act of Court for restraining the Company from overbuying the King's mint, whether it should limit them in foreign parts. Touching Robinson's desire to see the treasurer's general cash book. Eustace Man to proceed master in the Anne Royal. Capt. Towerson's business to be considered. Request of John Gunning to go for Surat.

Jan. 24.—Letters read from Walter Bennet and Joshua Bainbridge from Bantam, "giving notice of the passage of sundry their affairs in the East Indies." Committee to attend the Council table concerning the Company's petition to the King for examining the justness of all complaints against them, and about the money stopped and provisions transported. Letter prepared by Sir Thos. Roe from the King to the Great Mogul, of compliment, to acknowledge the kind usage of his Majesty's people in his dominions, and the tokens received from him, approved and appointed to be fairly limned and engrossed in parchment after Sir Thos. had shown it to Secretary Calvert. Four chests of ryals to be put on board the Unity. Boxes and cases belonging to George Ball and other private traders to be brought up to the Governor's house, and disposed of hereafter. Captain Towerson entertained as a principal factor at the Moluccas. His desire to go commander of one of the Company's ships seconded by William Towerson; no means to accommodate him in that nature, but with some other factors to go in the great cabin of the Anne, of which Swanley is appointed commander. Eustace Man to go master in the Exchange, with Capt. Fitzherbert. Gratification to Swanley. Meeting of committees appointed about the Greenland business. Information from Mr. Geere at Hamburgh, of a report that the Muscovy Company intend to dissolve their Greenland trade. Imputations upon the Muscovy Company for drawing the East India Company to such an apparent and great loss as hath befallen by joining with them more than was at first intended, and that the Muscovy Company hath not brought in the proportionable part of charge with the East India Company. Strowde's offer of 900*l.* for the implements, &c. in Greenland. Advice not to sell away the action to the Hollanders; referred to a committee to determine with some contractors upon the best terms they may, whereby his Majesty and the State shall be satisfied, seeing the action still managed by Englishmen. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 496-502.]

Jan. 26
James Royal.

802. Consultation held aboard the James Royal after the meeting of the two fleets in Tecoe Road; one from Masulipatam of nine sail under Capt. Pring, the other lately come from England of three sail under Capt. Chas. Clevenger. Both fleets to be under the command of Capt. Pring. Reasons against following the Dutch fleet; they have gathered all their forces together at Jacatra, which far exceed the English in number, and their wealth is secure in the castle there, whereas the English have almost the whole estate of the Company on board the ships. Resolution to sail for Acheen, thence to Japan, for careening and trimming the ships, some of which must be sheathed this year. Good hopes to meet with the Surat fleet, which has had express orders to bring supplies to Acheen. Probability of meeting with Holland ships with supplies in the Straits of Malacca, also at Patani, where they intend to touch, to see if Capt. Jourdain be there, and on the coasts of China, where the Hollanders surprise the Chinese junks, and will little expect to meet the English. In the meantime it is not doubted but that the Company will come to some good agreement with the Hollanders, or else send such forces to their assistance as may in time force them to some honourable composition, which were much to be desired, "that Christians against Christians might no longer contend as heretofore they have done, to the scorn of religion before the heathen." Signed by Martin Pring, Aug. Spaldinge, Chas. Clevenger, Thos. Brockedon, Edmund Lynnis, John Munday, John Hatch, and John Leman. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 834.]

Jan. 26.

803. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Letter read from Nathaniel Martyn from Scilly, endeavouring to excuse himself for the casting away of the Sun, and to lay the imputation upon Sir Thos. Dale, in leaving his ship, and making the Clove Admiral. Mr. Lamplugh, the patentee for maintaining the lights of Dungeness, with whom an agreement was made by the Company in January 1618 to pay 20 nobles a year, making a new demand of 1*d.* a ton for all their shipping outward and homeward, to be spoken to, and the Lord Chancellor applied to, if necessary. Wages of Henry Short, a factor. Suit of Thos. Johnson, appointed steward's mate, to proceed to Metolopotama (Masulipatam?) as factor. Saltpetre to be provided from the East Country.

Minutes of committees about the Greenland business. Strowd's offer of 900*l.* for the implements in Greenland considered; 1,000*l.* demanded. Raph Freeman's offer of 1,100*l.* for implements and merchandize, &c. in Greenland accepted; his promise to send forth 600 tons of shipping yearly at least for three years together, and the like authority to be granted to him as the Muscovy Company have under the broad seal of England. Concerning the rest of the goods in Muscovy as well as in England.

Jan. 28.—To petition the Lord Chancellor to call Lamplugh before him, touching Dungeness light, and force him to keep his contract; Lord Arundel, who persuaded the Company to undertake it, to be informed thereof.

Jan. 28.—About the price of ryals. Complaint of Lord Warwick for not acquainting him that a warrant had been procured against Mootham and Jones. Report of Edward Lee of debts due to the Company. Mr. Wolhouse, the preacher, to have an attendant on the voyage. Request of John, son of Samuel Hare, deceased, touching the payment of his late father's adventures. Petition of Edward Russell, shipwright, for part of the wages of his two servants, Thos. Fletcher and Abraham Earle, that went forth in the Swan, and are now prisoners with the Dutch in the Moluccas. Order concerning the payment of servants employed in the East Indies to their masters at home. [Four pages. Court Bk. IV., 502-506.]

Jan. 28. 804. Sir Dudley Diggs to Sir Dudley Carleton. Though far short of what the writer wishes and knows fit, the (East India) Company have at last resolved to present Carleton with a small remembrance, which Diggs beseeches him to take kindly. The factions and dissensions in the Company have almost torn it in pieces. The services of the writer's family in the Low Countries, his father, uncle, cousins, brother, &c. Desires the privilege of raising a company in the State's pay; has 500*l.* ready for Carleton to dispose of towards effecting that object. [Two pages. Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 29. 805. Carleton to Chamberlain. Prays him to show Sir Dudley
The Hague. Diggs the writer's Virginia papers, then return them to Carleton, letting him know when there is a passage thither, for he has compassion of poor Porie being hunger-starved for news. Arrival in the Texel of a small ship of 200 tons out of the East Indies, well laden, and with the Hollanders' last general (? Coen), who, as yet, says nothing of any new accident betwixt our men. Jacatra unbesieged, and in the Hollanders' hands. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 31. 806. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Report of the committee appointed to wait on the King concerning Lord Warwick's business; his Majesty's gracious favour, wishing them not to be discouraged by any means, but to proceed in the business cheerfully. Subsequent conference with the Marquis of Buckingham, who gave way for Capt. Shilling to proceed on the voyage, of which his Lordship's secretary, Packer, took note. The business to be carried fairly through with Lord Warwick, and so ended. Capt. Towerson to have 10*l.* per month wages, the same as when he proceeded commander of the Hector. Concerning the appointment of some one to live at Amsterdam, to give intelligence of occurrences from time to time from hence. Thos. Jones, a servant of Lord Warwick, arrested by the Company for hiring away their men, but being now employed to go to Virginia with cattle by his Lordship, who desires his release, order is given to set him at liberty, Lord Warwick engaging to answer for what shall be objected against him. The Francis, Lioness, and Supply ready to be unladen. Request of Mr. Armitage concerning Higgon's adventure. Information of Quoitmore, that in the storehouse at Bantam great disorders and spoil have been committed through the carelessness of the Company's officers there; a sufficient man to be appointed to take charge of all stores. Letter read from the Lord Chancellor on behalf of Capt. Gifford, and informing that Hansom, the executor, hath got Capt. Pepwell's estate into his hands, and is careless to give any satisfaction of the overplus, according to his Lordship's former order.

Feb. 4.—Petition of Tristram Shephard for satisfaction for his great losses sustained through the burning of the Black Lion, &c. Gratuity to Blieth. Letter read from Capt. Jourdain about Jas. Slade and Emanuel Butler, refraining from private trade. Morris Browne, living at Amsterdam, and having the Dutch and French tongues, recommended for "intelligencer" from thence. Concerning the amount of adventure to be paid in for this next year. Business of the Muscovy Company to be considered. Concerning the disposal of the pepper now come home, besides the indigo that cannot yet be sold, which will raise a sixth dividend of itself; resolution to propose half a capital for all men.

Minutes of a general court. Discussion on the disposal of certain goods sent home from Scilly, and the taking out of half a capital. Pepper said to be the fundamental and staple commodity of the trade of Surat. Robinson's objections and remarks; he asserts that there be debts to the amount of 50,000*l.* due to the Company. Sir Dudley Diggs' opinion that the business of the Company is carried fairly and upon very good terms, and that his Majesty is very gracious to the Company, and satisfied with their upright and plain dealing, and yet the action fallen, which he can ascribe to nothing but the jealousy conceived at home, and sundry faults imputed and bruited, without just ground. Mr. Mellyn, of a contrary opinion, affirming that the action is fallen by reason of an error of 100,000*l.* in the first joint stock, which caused many to sell themselves out of the adventure in other men's names. Sir John Wolstenholme seconds Sir Dudley Diggs, having never observed otherwise at the meeting of the committees than fair carriage; his opinion of Mellyn's seditious and scandalous conduct. The Governor's opinion. Cotton has heard the government of the company much condemned. The deputy desires to have the truth and uttermost of their actions tried, and that Robinson should hasten to complete the accounts. Robinson's remarks and arrogance. Couchman's answer. Resolution to have only a single payment made of an eighth part, as was the first year, "which may hereafter be altered upon occasion."

Feb. 7.—All the ships for Surat at Gravesend this day; the men to be mustered, the Committee to go down; the commissions and letters to be perfected. Touching the customs of a box of 59 diamonds now brought home. Petition of Domingo Gonsalvez, a Portugal, who was taken by the Dutch, and kept as a slave in the Indies, but ran away to the English at Bantam, for a gratuity. Complaint of Wiech against Mellyn for scandalous speeches of himself and his son at a General Court. Wages of John Mootham, deceased. Pepper brought home by the mariners to be granted without freight, "yet first they should come to Mr. Governor or the Court, and be chidden for their faults." Motion of Sir Thos. Roe on behalf of John George, a Dutchman, who hath the Indian, Persian, Spanish, and Dutch languages, hath lived ten years in the Mogores country, and is willing to serve the Company and remain at Surat at 20 shillings a month; referred to Offley to be concluded with. Thos. Thompson having been appointed an under factor at Coromandel, Henry Sill to be steward's mate in the Exchange. Robinson questioned as to his charges against the Company at the last General Court. Message from Lord Warwick; the Company remembering the King's gracious speeches, that he held it neither fit they should be tied to make good his Lordship's losses, nor themselves to be losers by his action nor discouraged, returned answer that they were resolved to treat only upon those terms formerly submitted to him.

Feb. 9.—Concerning the sale of a chest of musk containing twenty boxes, consigned to Burrell by (Geo.) Ball, from Bantam. John Dent, appointed chief factor in the Unity, "having shown such ignorance and simplicity by a letter of his written without either good English or sense," resolved "for the present of his discharge." Cartwright to be appointed in his place. Mr. Wiech desires redress for Mellyn's speeches against himself and his son. Sir John Wolstenholme of opinion that Mellyn is of a mutinous disposition, and unworthy to be admitted into any civil company. The Governor's charges against him. Sir John Merrick testified to the fair carriage of Wiech's son in Muscovy. His complaint of Woodall, the surgeon. Some punishment to be inflicted answerable to the quality of Mellyn's offence. Committee to attend the Privy Council in reference to any act granting liberty to the Company to contract with either of their members to bring over ryals and to buy abroad. Suit of Thos. Gourney to have the business concerning his brother John's estate concluded. John Holland, a factor, entertained for this voyage, of a drunken disposition, and suspected of other ill courses, dismissed. Petition of Lanman, for some allowance for his two servants, Fras. Fetiplace and John Hayward, employed in the country house. John Clarke, a factor appointed for Bantam, to go to Surat. Robert Salmon accepted as security in the matter of Nathaniel Salmon's estate. Suit of the brother of Robert Savage, a factor drowned at the Cape in the Sun, for satisfaction for his goods; but the Company having lost all, both ship and goods, found no cause to charge themselves with another man's loss, seeing all suffered alike.

Feb. 11.—Two letters read from the directors of the Dutch East India Company, with news of the arrival of one of their ships, the Unicorn, in the Texel, which left Jacatra the previous August, approving the intention of this Company "in discovering at the Cape with a pinnace," and wishing to know a certain time that the English ships would wait for theirs at the Cape, that they might go together in consortship to Surat; with intelligence of other occurrences in the Indies ; the taking of the King of Jacatra by the Dutch, and besieging the King of Bantam ; desiring the like correspondence of kindness from this Company. Resolution concerning the Company's ships' stay at the Cape for the Dutch. The Governor and sundry merchants to appear before the Privy Council about the Mint business, the Pirates, now again renewed, and Greenland, the merchants to which place are "charged to proceed quietly and peaceably against the Hollanders, as the States have given in charge to their people." It was now answered, "That the English will not offend, but if they shall be wronged they hope it will be held just for them to defend themselves." Robt. Barlowe chosen to live at Amsterdam, to send home intelligence. Offer of Ralph Freeman for certain implements in London belonging to the united Companies. Woodall's counter charges against Mellyn, referred. Petition of John Holland to have his offence passed over and be re-admitted ; refused. Hide, master of the Lioness, to be concluded with. Petition of Philip Bradshawe, appointed surgeon for the factory at Bantam for a gratuity. Sundry petitions referred to a committee.

Feb. 14.—John Dent to be employed at 20*l.* a year. Enquiry into Mellyn's imputation of Woodall, the surgeon. Anchors and cables to be borrowed of the King's ships at Portsmouth. Suit of Hockeridge. John Gourney's accounts audited ; 553*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* paid to his brother, Thomas. Richard Mathews appointed master of the coaster, to fetch timber from Ireland. Petition of John Holland to have his offence remitted ; judged unfit to alter their determination, either for favour or affection. Consultation concerning the destination of the fleet about to sail ; opinions of the committees for commissions, Capt. Shilling and Sir Thos. Roe ; resolved to have the fleet divided, two to sail direct to Jask, and two to Surat. Motion of Sir Thos. Roe on behalf of John Goodwyn for increase of wages. All the surgeons' chests viewed by the Master and Wardens of the Surgeons and the Master and Wardens of the Apothecaries. Touching Lady Dale's suit to have 500 weight of silk sent home by her husband Sir Thos. free of freight. Request of Wm. and Robt. Angell to have their proportionable part of Scot's adventure. Robt. Barlowe entertained "(to live at Amsterdam), and gather what light and knowledge he can," at a salary of 200*l.* pr. ann. Gratuity to Thos. Thompson, a factor, for his pains in the counting house.

Minutes of a meeting of committees for Greenland. Desire of Ralph Freeman to buy the implements. Committee appointed to sell them. The Governor reports an offer for the goods and trade in Muscovy of 14,000*l.*, which were not long since rated at 25,000*l.* ; consultation thereon. Concerning an adventure in the Muscovy Company bought by Alderman Hamerslye, from Bourne.

Feb. 16.—The surgeons' chests to be more carefully looked to hereafter. Woodall and an apothecary appointed to provide the surgery ; the "physical things" to be sent and seen by Dr. Atkins, one of the Company, a very honest and sufficient gentleman and great adventurer ; the chests at Gravesend to be examined by Woodall. Request of Alexander Stafford concerning a debt due to him from Richard

Griffyn, deceased, a factor in the Suu. Petition of Robt. Delean to have the benefit of the remainder of his adventure which his Majesty hath seized upon. Another accountant to be appointed, in regard of the multiplicity of business: Edward Blackerby and Bartholomew Waight recommended. One experienced in Latin, French, and Dutch, skilful in inditing in another phrase and style than is used by merchants, and experienced in the civil law, to be provided to answer letters between the English and the Dutch. Letter from Barlowe found to be ill written and of no good phrase, whereby he is held not so fit for the Company's service, he is therefore referred to be further considered of again. Dagger knives and swords to be bought for Surat. Petition of John Thorpe, sailor, in prison, to be set at liberty. [Seventeen pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 506-523.]

Feb. 17.
The Hague.

807. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The King of Denmark found a difficulty in purchasing a ship of about 1,000 tons in North Holland, for which he pays 50,000 florins, unless he would give caution to the value of 100,000 florins that the ship should not be employed in the East Indies. This was represented to the States as an unreasonable condition, and unfit for a friendly Prince, and is laid aside. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Feb. 18.

808. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Things provided by Woodall for the surgeons' chests to be shown to Drs. Torye and Raven, and if approved, to be sent down to Gravesend. Wages allowed to Richard Swanley, prisoner with Mr. Davies in the Moluccas, in consideration of his long and tedious imprisonment. Letter read from Mathew Moreton, master of the Unity, about the ship's furniture. Suit of Ferris, Poole, and others, on behalf of John Holland, a factor, formerly entertained but dismissed. Gratuity to John Holland, purser of the Anne, for his service in the country house. Motion of the Governor in behalf of Jeremy Sambrooke, who has long served the Company as an accountant. Concerning Barlowe, formerly entertained to proceed as the Company's agent to the Low Countries; some more eminent man to be thought on. The salary of Thos. Rastell, who is to succeed Browne as chief at Surat, to be increased to 200*l.* pr. ann. A sufficient man to be sent to Bantam to keep their stores there. Advice of Sir Thos. Roe to write to Surat to put (give up) the house at Sarqueis, of which there is now little or no use. Petition of John Woodfall on behalf of John Peirson, who went out with Raph Presson, and hath served six years for a salary. [One page and a quarter. Court Bk. IV., 523-525.]

Feb. 20.
Lisbon.

809. John Stone to Sec. [Naunton?] Four carracks provided to go hence this spring to the East Indies; a general press of men to serve in them. Dissolution of the fleet that had been so many years preparing for China. The Admiral and Vice Admiral cast away by foul weather near Cadiz. [Extract from Portugal Corresp.]

1620.
Feb. 21.

810. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Committee to go to Gravesend, to dispeed away the Surat fleet. Letter read from Barlowe, concerning the Company's purpose to choose some more eminent man skilful in the civil law, to proceed as their agent to the Low Countries; discussion thereon. "Long debate" on the contents of a letter from the King of 17 February, requiring the Company to satisfy Lord Warwick's charges for his voyage, which charges to be agreed on by arbitrators indifferently chosen, and if they cannot conclude the King then to nominate a person of quality to be umpire between them. Information of Alderman Halliday of what took place when he and the rest attended the King, therefore the letter seemed to be obtained upon undue suggestions. Committee appointed to attend his Lordship at his house in Holborn, and insist on their former resolution, in which case "the Company would be no gainer by my Lord, and that they had always understood the King's pleasure to be that they should be no losers." Motion of Mr. Fitzherbert on behalf of a minister of the west country who hath a living of 200*l.* a year, and yet desires to proceed on the voyage.

Minutes of a meeting for the United Companies. Debate on the propositions argued at the last court concerning the stock of the United Companies in Muscovy; committee appointed to receive any offer, &c.

Feb. 25.—Gratuity to Raph Harries, surgeon of the Hart, for his assistance to Woodall. Henry Short, factor, to sail in the Anne, and Edw. Meade, factor, in the Exchange.

Feb. 28.—Capt. Shilling's wages. Edward Withers to carry his Majesty's letters to the Great Mogul overland. The good offices of James Bag, of Plymouth, to be retained. The white wine, which cost 16*l.* per ton, judged weak and dear.

March 3.—The Unity, at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, to proceed on her voyage, and not wait to sail with the Surat fleet. Request of Fras. Taylor concerning his debt; also of Richard Poulson. Motion of Rowland Reynolds touching his suretyship with Wm. and Robt. Angell. Debts of Roger Dye, John Shipton, and Raph King. Gratuity to John Goning employed in the country house. Petition of Nicholas Rawlidge on behalf of Raph Robinson, his apprentice, prisoner in St. Katherine's, for having neglected his duty abroad. Letter read from Lord Warwick on behalf of John Garret, a sailor, for a gratuity, Garret affirming that he and one other only were mariners and knew their labour at sea. Motion on behalf of Thos. Jones, factor at Patani, about his further entertainment. Petition of Jeremy Sambrooke, who has served eleven years (in the country house), for increase of wages; 60*l.* a year allowed. Petition of John Alkin for allowance for four or five years' service on shore in the company's service; finding he ran away at Surat from Sir Henry Middleton, and was with Sir Robt. Sherley during the time he pretends to have been in their service on shore, and that no wages are due, but rather punishment. Mr. Totten concerning his goods. Wages of Quoitmore, wounded in fights with the Hollanders. Letter read from the Lord Chancellor on behalf of one Spring, for employment. Letter to be written to M. Boreel, that if the Dutch think fit to hasten their fleet they may be in time to sail in consortship with the English fleet. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 525-530.]

March 3.
Ispahan.

811. Edw. Monnox, Robt. Jefferies, and Thos. Barker to [Thos. Kerridge and the factors in Surat]. Their last was by the Charles from Jask of 17th December last. Cannot perform what they intended for want of time, the messengers, Sr Vincentio Mattsso and Sr Antonio Doro, having three days since departed this city in company with Zenalbeagg, this King's ambassador, now sent unto Shaserim; neither can they rely upon reports for the price of any commodity vendible here. No Indian commodities have arrived of late, so they hope to improve the prices of those last sent, and could wish the quantity had been greater. "As we increase so doth Ormuz decrease; for the very report of the arrival of five English ships in Jask did strike such terror and amazement into these hen-hearted inhabitants, that even their own houses and churches escaped not the fury of their mattocks and pickaxes, fearing lest the English in landing should possess themselves of the said churches and houses, and therein lay siege and battery into their invincible fort." Have removed all their goods from Jask to prevent the danger of their being carried away by the rebels of Macrone. Account of their journey. Wm. Bell and John Amy sent to Gombroon to procure camels to carry their goods to Lar, because of the demands of the "grating" governor of Moghistan. Heard at Moghistan the unhappy tidings of the decease of Thos. Barker the last of November. Result of their consultations thereon. Agreements made with the Governor of Minau for carriage of their goods, which they left with Bell, Purifie, and Benthall, leaving Minau with Cardrowe the preacher, John Amie, and Laurence, one of the coachmen, meeting at Shiraz Jefferies and Barker, and all arriving at Ispahan 23rd of the past month; the way in some places impassable through the rains, snow, and ice. The imperfect state in which they found Barker's books very inconvenient to the Company's affairs. Inventories of goods, &c. taken. He died without a will, and his estate is yet unknown. Lalabegg's promises of good offices with the King. "He is the heifer that we must plough withall if we will do any good in this country." He told them how much the King rejoiced at the safe arrival of their ships, and that he had sent his royal mandate to the Khan of Shiraz, and to his substitute governors, to prevent any impediments in the transport of their goods. The King has promised to grant their request, which consists of six several articles. Hope to send 1,000 bales of silk by this fleet, which in their last they jestingly promised. Beg a fitting supply of India commodities may be sent to them with the 14,000 ryals the Surat factors borrowed from their this year's cash. It will be seen by the 4th and 5th article of their petition to the King that they resolve to make Jask their port; their reasons. Description of the qualities and quantities of Indian commodities with which they wish to be furnished. Hope it will be no news to them to hear of the happy agreement made with the Hollanders of the uniting of the two companies, with an article equally to divide the profits accruing by the whole trade of the Indies; only from the Moluccas the Hollanders, in consideration of the great charges of fortifications, are to have two-thirds of the profits. Doubt not they have had a more ample relation by way of Masulipatam. Hope they will send a ship with spices and other commodities from those parts, to add more vigour to this our infant trade. In their next letters for England they shall be no whit doubtful to advise the sending of 2,000 broad cloths and 500 Devonshire and northern kersies, for all of which they are already assured to find vent; as also for a good quantity of copper. If they have such mines in India, to send some by the next fleet. Remarks on the trade. The Sophy "now in quiet," and hath no wars, but sometime of his own people he cutteth off head, hands, and feet of some, and of others he openeth their bellies to see if they have any evil disease in their hearts. This some doth term tyranny, but without this the crown would not stand long upon his own head, whose life we have just cause to pray for, as if he should die before his subjects had experience of the honest intents of the English they would much fear woeful times. This very morning the King well approved every article of their petition, and they do not doubt but in due time to get an abatement of the prices of his silks. [Eight pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 835.]

[March 3.] 812. An "apology" of Robert Jefferies against an act of Edward Monox in frustrating a bargain made by Jefferies and others for camel hire in Persia. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 836.]

March 5. 813. Carleton to Chamberlain. Many thanks for the courtesy intended him by the East India Company. Sends his letter to Mr. Bell unsealed. "And though we say a man must not take a pig in a poke, yet Sir Dudley Diggs advising me to accept it, howsoever (though neither he nor Mr. Bell tells me what it is) I will not so much as deliberate on the matter; yet because it may be such a lean pig that it were a shame to see it, I put you to this trouble, because I will not put the matter to other men's censure, nor myself to the hazard of going less in my credit with these men when they may have knowledge how slightly I may be valued at home. This jealousy of mine proceeds of your niceness amongst you to name the child, for in three letters which tell me of such a thing none tells me what it is." Sends answer to Sir Dudley Diggs. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

March 5. 814. Samuel Foxcroft to the East India Company. Arrived at Jacatra. Jambi 27 Sept. last, and set sail for Patani, but met with Henry Johnson, commander then of five ships, the Sampson and Hound among them, which they had taken at Patani with three ships, and in the fight had slain the president, Capt. Jourdain, with divers others, and many hurt and maimed; the particulars Geo. Muschamp the bearer can relate, who was present aboard the Sampson, and lost a leg in the fight. Returned to Jacatra in December, where they have continued since, and are now ready to go aboard the Nassau for Succadana. About the beginning of October they (the Hollanders) surprised and took at Tecoe, with six ships, the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, and Rose, and gave our people the Rose, with some small provision, to carry them away wherever they pleased to go. Sir Thos. Dale died upon the Coromandel coast, and now Mr. Pring is chief, with some nine or ten ships, but knows not whether they be come on the coast of Sumatra. The Dutch have at present in India some 34 or 36 ships, 14 or 16 being about Bantam and this place. Knows only of the said 9 or 10 English ships with Capt. Pring, and those that were to come after, the Charles, Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and the rest of that fleet. [One page. Endorsed: "Re. 19 Sept, 1621, by the Royal James." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 837.]

March 6.
The Hague.

815. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The Black Bear, of 300 tons, arrived in the Texel from the East Indies, but hears not what lading she brings. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

March 6.

816. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Mr. Barkeley's accounts and the money due to his widow. A committee appointed to supply Mr. Treasurer's place during his sickness. Grievances concerning Leadenhall. The oldest ships in the Indies to remain there for men-of-war, as recommended by the president and council of war, with advice of the carpenters. Concerning the payment of wages to the servants of master carpenters, and their proceeding on the voyage if stayed by Richard Furbusher. Price of cloves. Conclusion with Mr. Totten about his goods. Motion on behalf of Nedham, who went forth servant to Capt. Keeling, for wages for his (pretended) service in nature of a factor.

March 8.—Letters from Capt. Shilling, commander, and Nicholas Crispe, purser of the London from the Downs, complaining of the badness of her chains. Complaint that the proper punishment to runaway sailors is not inflicted, through Mr. Clifton compounding with the offenders. Nedham's business. Gratuity to the masters of the vessels who brought the coral, "the rather for that at Zante they carefully saved the custom, by translating the coral in the night from one ship to another, which otherwise must have paid custom if notice had been taken thereof." Richard Dikes' debt. Loan of the Company to the fourth voyage. Petition of Christopher, brother and administrator of John Gettins, late carpenter's mate in the Defence, who died at Bantam, for the rest of his brother's goods. Mrs. Barkeley and her late husband's goods. Coral to be bought of John Brooke at 10s. per lb. No gratuity to be given to Capt. Tower-son to set him forth to sea. The Supply to carry 50 men, and to be victualled for 12 months. [Three pages. Court Bk. IV., 530-3.]

March 10.
Nangasaki.

817. Wm. Eaton to the East India Company. Refers to his last, of 20 Dec. 1617 (see ante No. 221.) Account of his voyage to Siam in the Sea Adventure; sailed in January 1618, but through stormy weather and damages to the junks did not arrive at the city of 1620.

Judea, where the English factory is settled, before the end of the following December. Found Edward Longe, chief, George Savage, second, Wm. Barrett, Rich. Pitt, and some other Englishmen there. Forced to buy a new junk. Sold the Sea Adventure; her lading for Japan. Left Siam 9 June 1619, and arrived at Firando 8 of August following. A Dutch ship, the Angel, came in Sept. last from Patani, out of which ship three Englishmen escaped, one Wm. G[ordone], master of the Hound, by whom they were informed of the fight in Patani road, in which Capt. Jourdain was slain, and the taking of the Sampson and Hound by the Dutch. A junk of 50 tons sent with provisions to Bantam with 14 Englishmen, there being so many in the factory, and 10 Japanners. But small store of goods sold this year; in want of broad cloths. The Emperor has bought all the lead that came from Siam. Goods brought this year from Cochin China by Sayers, and yellow silk by Wm. Addames. Refers the Company to Capt. Cocks' letter for an account of the injuries the English have received in this country at the hands of the Dutch. [Three pages. Endorsed, "Received 19 Sept. 1621 by the Royal James." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 838.]

March 10.
Nangasaki.

818. Rich. Cocks to [the Clothworkers Company?] Since his arrival in Japan, nearly seven years ago, he has written by a Dutch surgeon named Abraham Blancard. The English much molested in these parts of the world with the unruly Hollanders, who have proclaimed open wars against them both by sea and land, to take their ships and goods, and kill their persons, as mortal enemies. They have brought two English ships this year into Japan, the Swan and the Attendance; they also took the Sampson and the Hound in the road of Patani, when "hurly burly Capt. John Jourdain, our president of the Indies, lost his life, with many others." The Dutch in great dudgeon at the escape of some of the English from the ships, demanding the return of their captives as they called them. They then demanded of the Tono or King of Firando that "their English slaves" might be returned, but the King said he took no Englishmen to be slaves to the Dutch, and referred them to the Emperor. Their attempts to enter the English house, and cut all their throats, which had been successful, the Dutch being 100 to 1, but that the Japanese took part with the English. Their general or chief commander, Adam Westarwood, offered 50 ryals of 8 to any one who would kill Cocks, and 30 ryals for the life of any other English merchant, "with many other stratagems they used against us, too long to be repeated." Thought good to advertise them of all this, knowing many of them are members of the East India Company. [Two pages. Endorsed, "Received 19 Sept. 1621 by the Royal James." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 839.]

819. Rich. Cocks to Thos. Wilson, one of H.M. secretaries at his house at Britain Burse. Almost three years since he wrote, caused by the unlooked for and unruly proceedings of the Hollanders. They have seven ships in the port of Firando, and with sound of trumpet have proclaimed there open war against the English as their mortal enemies, through their Admiral, Adam Westarwood. Their endeavours to murder all the English prevented by the Japanese. Richard, son of Capt. King of Plymouth, carried prisoner by them to their own house. The King of Firando does not execute justice against them. Two of the ships the Dutch brought into Firando were taken from the English in the Indies; two others were taken in Patani road, and Capt. Jourdain killed. Escape of some of the English mariners to the English house. Demand of the Dutch to the Tono or King of Firando to have their English slaves (as it pleased them to call them) delivered up to them, but were told to go to the Emperor. This the chief cause of their picking quarrels with the English. "Noble parentage" of their Lord Commander Westarwood: his father a close-stool maker, and the best of their captains either shoemakers', carpenters', or beer brewers' sons. "God bless such an honorable worshipful generation; I mean God bless me from them." Was this year at the Emperor's court at Miako, to complain of abuses contrary to their privileges, and had very good words, and promise that they should have justice, and the King or Tono of Firando commanded to see it performed, "but as yet nothing done, although I have many times earnestly sued for it." Account of his visit to the Emperor's palace, where were Portugals and Spaniards, "to do their duties to the Emperor as they do every year when shipping cometh." When a Hollander who had lived at Japan almost twenty years, and speaks the language well, in Cocks' hearing, extolled the King of Holland as the greatest king in Christendom, and one that held all the others under, Cocks was not behind hand to tell him he needed not to laugh so loud, for that they had no King at all in Holland, but were governed by a court, or rather they governed him, and that but for his Majesty of England they had never bragged of their States, "at which speeches both Spaniards, Portugals, and others did laugh apace, and so the Hollander's mouth was stopped, &c." This Emperor, a great enemy to the name of Christians, especially Japans; all that are found put to death. Saw 55 martyred at Miako at one time, because they would not forsake their Christian faith, and among them little children of five or six years old burned in their mothers' arms, crying out, "Jesus receive their souls." In Nangasaki 16 more were martyred; five burned and the rest beheaded, cut in pieces, and cast into the sea 30 fathoms deep, yet the Christians got them up again, and keep them secretly for relics. Many more in prison, who look hourly when they shall die, for very few turn Pagans. The Emperor has displaced one of the greatest princes of Japan, called Fushma Tay. It was thought there would have been much trouble about it, for all his subjects were in arms, having fortified the city of Fushma, but the Tay himself and his son being in the Emperor's court commanded them to lay down their arms, and submit themselves to the Emperor's pleasure or else forthwith to cut their bellies, so life was sweet, and all submitted to the Emperor, and were pardoned. The Emperor has given the Tay's dominions to two of his own kinsmen, and pulled down this year his castle at Fushamy, which was far bigger than the city of Rochester, and "a very beautiful gallant thing." All the stones carried to Osaka, and that old ruined castle, which Taico Same built and Ogusho Same pulled down, must now be built again three times bigger than before, so that all the tonos or kings have each one his task set him to do at his own proper charge, not without much grudging, and obliged to go to the Emperor's court, which angereth them not a little, but go they must, on pain of belly cutting. Secret muttering that Fidaia Same, the son of Taico Same, is alive, and in the Dairo's house at Miako, but thinks "it is but tales," for previous reports of the same kind have proved untrue. Fear of the Emperor burning Miako, if it be true, it may turn the Emperor's estate upside down, for he is no martial man, but a great politician. "Howsoever it be, it cannot be worse for us than it is." Advice in his last of the pulling down of all the churches in Japan, yet there were some remnants standing in Nangasaki till this year, but they are all now, with the monastery of Misericordia, and churchyards and burial places, pulled down by the Emperor's orders, and all graves and sepulchres opened, and dead men's bones taken out, and carried into the fields by their parents and kindred, to be buried elsewhere. Streets have been made in the place of churches and churchyards, except where pagodas have been commanded to be erected, and heathen priests sent to live in them, the Emperor thinking utterly to root out the memory of Christianity in Japan. In Nangasaki, in Ogusho Same's time, divers fathers and other Christians were martyred, and in certain places, a little without the city, their parents and friends had planted green trees, where hundreds went every day to pray; but now, by the Emperor's command, all said trees and altars are quite cut down and the ground made even. "Such is his desire to root out the remembrance of all such matters." Account of the appearance of two comets in November and December 1618. The wizards in these parts prognosticate great matters thereof, but hitherto nothing of moment has happened, but the deposing of Fushma Tay. Is ashamed to write of a report by the Spaniards and Portugals of "a bloody cross seen in the air in England, against which an English preacher, speaking in the pulpit, was struck dumb, which miracle, as they term it, caused our King's Majesty to send to the Pope, to have some cardinals and learned men to come into England, so that he meant all England should turn Roman Catholics. I pray you pardon me for writing such fopperies, which I do to the intent to have you laugh a little." Hopes by the next shipping to come towards England. [Five pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 840.]

820. Rich. Cocks to the East India Company. Through the indirect dealings and unlooked for proceedings of the Hollanders, this is the third year since they have had any shipping either from England or Bantam to Japan. The Hollanders have, by sound of trumpet in the harbour of Firando, "proclaimed open war against our English nation, both by sea and land, with fire and sword, to take our ships and goods, and destroy our persons to the uttermost of their power, as to their mortal enemies." His life "set at sale" for 50 ryals of eight, and 30 ryals for each other Englishman they could kill. All this came to pass through the Spaniards sinking the

Holland admiral's ship at the Manillas, burning two others, and committing other outrages. Arrival of the Attendance, but not an Englishman in her. The Hollanders sent her from the Moluccas, "to our greater disgrace." Complaint to the "Emperor, but answer made that for facts committed in other places the Emperor would not meddle, but for anything done in his own dominions he would see us have right." The Attendance and another sailed to the Manillas to meet another Holland fleet, in search of six Spanish galleons which had been there cast away. Seven sail of Hollanders arrived since last Christmas, including the Attendance, out of which John Moore, John Zoones, and Edward Curwin escaped ashore, and came to the English house, and said they had been used more like dogs than men. Their demand of the Tono or King of Firando, "that their English kengos, which in Japan is slaves," should be sent back to them, referred to the Emperor. Arrival of the Fox pinnace from the Moluccas, with news of the fight between the English and Hollanders at Jacatra, and that these ships (the Hollanders) should make haste thither, with powder, shot, victuals, and other provision; also of the Angel, the (Dutch) admiral, of three ships sent purposely to take the Sampson and Hound in Patani road; escape of Wm. Gordone, master of the Hound, of Michael Payne, carpenter of the Sampson, and of Hugh Williams to the English house. Violent endeavours of the Hollanders to get back these escaped Englishmen. Their assaults on the English house, five or six hundred against five or six English, wounding John Coker and another. Interference of the Tono. Seizure by the Hollanders of Richard King, who had returned with Edmund Sayer from a voyage from Cochin China. Capt. Jacob Speke, principal of the Hollanders, taken and kept prisoner by the Tono until Rich. King was set free. Further proceedings of the Hollanders against them on the arrival of W. Eaton from Siam. His repair to the Court to demand justice of the Emperor of Japan. Order given to the Tono or King of Firando to hear both parties, and see justice performed, "yet from that time 'till now there is nothing done, although I have divers times very instantly desired it of the King." Quarrel picked in the street by the servants of a gentleman called Semidono against Sayer, Eaton, and Osterwick; Sayer knocked down and wounded very sore, the others "shroddly" beaten, and had they not got into a house they had all been killed. Two of Semidono's men banished by the Tono, and Ed. Sayer sent to Nangasaki on pain of being killed; Cocks' fruitless appeals to the Tono. So many Englishmen living idle in the factory, and wishing to seek out the fleet at Java, Sumatra, or elsewhere, at their own earnest request shipped on board the junk Godspeed, of 50 tons, well armed; besides Ed. Sayer, Jas. Burges, Thos. Harod, William Gordone, Robt. Hawley, John Porter, Mich. Payne, John Coaker, John Moore, John Jones, Ed. Curwin, John Yonge, Hugh Williams, and Peter Griffin, went nine Japan mariners. Account of the voyage of the Sea Adventure to Siam, Eaton chief commander; refers to letter from Denton, out of four voyages made for that place they lost two and the others proved unprofitable, all the benefit falling to the Japan mariners, who are so unruly that when a ship is wholly manned with them there is no dealing with them. May say as much for their trade with Cochin China; nothing to be got there but words and danger of life, the King himself or his son and nobles being the greatest thieves of all. Is every day more out of hope of any good to be done in Japan except trade be procured into China. Merchandize received from Siam, Cochin China, and Tonquin; cannot make sale of anything. A company of rich usurers the chief cause of spoiling the Japan trade; by their means the English lost the privileges they had from Ogusho Same. By this Emperor Shongo Same they are penned up in Firando and Nangasaki only. Junks set out by them for Siam, Cochin China, Tonquin, Camboja, or any other place, to furnish Japan with all sorts of commodities. Great store of silk and silk wares brought every year by Portugals from Amacon (? Macao) in China. No great quantity of broad cloth will be vented in Japan; they use it not for garments, except some few as an outward cloak; chiefly used for cases for armour, &c. Colours that sell the best; yellow, straw colour, and bays will not sell at any rate. Coney skins, lamb skins, and other furs not worth anything here. Value of other commodities. If the Company determine to set foot in the Moluccas, Japan must be their storehouse, as it is for the Hollanders; these last provide in abundance brass and iron ordnance, powder and shot, &c.; beef, pork, meal, biscuits, and pilchards in great quantity either pickled or otherwise. Commendatory of Jas. Burgess, Robt. Hawley, John Coaker, Wm. Gordone, and the others. Concerning Thos. Harod and John Portis; the misery and imprisonment of the former in the Inquisition House at Goa. His accounts, forwarded to Bantam, detained there. George Ball not a good friend to Cocks; "he never gave me roast meat, but he did beat me with the spit." His own accounts. The best accountant may sometimes err, but he which is false is a thief. "I shall, as I came a poor man out of England, return a beggar home." Neilson and Osterwick extremely sick; doubts much of their recovery. Permission given by Shongo Same for English shipping to go to Nangasaki as well as Firando. The harbour at Nangasaki the best in all Japan; 1,000 sail may ride, land locked, and the greatest ships in the world go in and out at pleasure, and ride before the town, within a cable's length of the shore, in 7 or 8 fathoms water at the least. It is a great city, and many rich merchants dwell in it; whereas Firando is a fisher town, and a very small and bad harbour, wherein not above eight or ten ships can ride at a time; with other inconveniences. No king or nobleman at Nangasaki, but the Emperor's Bongo or Governor, so that presents need only be given to one at a ship's entering. At Firando, the King, his brothers, uncles, and many other noblemen, all look for presents, and they are always borrowing and buying, but seldom or never paying, except it be the King himself. The Hollanders give other men's goods, which they never pay for. Wishes their housing at Firando stood at Nangasaki. Heretofore a papist Portugal bishop lived in the town, and there were ten or twelve parish churches besides monasteries, but all are now pulled down, and streets made where they stood. Wishes all

Japan were Christians, yet in that bishop's time there were so many priests and jesuits that one could not pass the streets without being called Lutranos and Herejos, now no one dare open his mouth to speak such a word. Encloses,

820. I. Adam Denton to Rich. Cocks. Has come to Patani with the Sampson and Hound, which were taken when at anchor by three Fleming ships, and the worthy President, John Jourdain, slain. Intreats he may hear from Cocks vid Siam, whither send no more goods till further advice. Burges is here, and demands a debt from Eaton. [Together sixteen pages. Indorsed, "Rec. by y^e Royall James 19 Sept. 1621." O.C. Vol. VII., No. 841.]

March 10. 821. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Wm. Stone to perform the duties of treasurer during Harrison's sickness. No more adventures to be accepted upon discount. Report of the master and wardens of the surgeons on the state of the surgeons' chests now prepared [by Woodall] for the Indies. Letter read from Nicholas Crispe, purser of the London, from Sandwich, with notice of ryals and coral taken aboard, and intent of the commander to set on shore some of the most insufficient men, but it was distasted, that he should discharge any at his pleasure; also, letters from Capt. Shilling to the same effect; from Edward Withers and John Hayward, purser of the Eagle, that pursers be admitted of the Council, "which motion was so much distasted, that such young youths should entertain such thoughts before they can tell how to govern themselves, as that it was held a great note of arrogance and pride, and no way to be hearkened unto;" lastly, from Richard Swanne, master of the Roebuck, and John Woolhouse, preacher. Disposal of 180,000 ryals aboard the ships in the Downs. Gratuities to Jesson and Eggesfield, for their care and the hazard they ran at Zante in putting the coral aboard the ships in the night, whereby they saved 100%. in custom at least. Clifton's account to be audited.

Minutes of a meeting of committees appointed to confer with A. B. about putting off the trade in Muscovy. Sir William Russell's offer; his purpose to be at the charge of sending an ambassador, without which no good can be done; debate thereon.

March 11.—As to the disposal of goods belonging to the Muscovy Company. Henry Short to go in the Unity as chief factor, with John Gonning in the Exchange. Gratuity to Henry Short. To provide a ship to supply the loss of the Anne. Peter Kenton, having one of 350 tons with three decks, fore and aft, to be spoken with. Committee to go to Gravesend and dispatch the Exchange.

March 13.—Complaints against the negligence of Moreton, master of the Unity; Robt. Symons discharged by him to return to his ship in the Downs. Ingots of silver to be sold. Letter from Richard Blieth, master of the Hart, complaining of the ironwork of his ship. Motion of William, on behalf of his brother Gabriel Towerson, to proceed in the Exchange, and have part of Fitzherbert's cabin. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 533-8.]

822. Richard Woyes to Sir Thos. Smythe. Remains with Capt. Ball, who was deposed from the place of President and Chief Commander of the Indies by Capt. Jourdain's suggestion. The English and Hollanders at war, "with whom we made two fights, the one being performed by Sir Thos. Dale, of Jacatra, the other by Capt. Pring in the straits of Sunda." The Sun cast away upon Engano, with the loss of 60 men; not a pennyworth of goods saved. John Neve, purser's mate of the Moon, leaving. Prays for his health, his lady's, and his two sons. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 842.]

March 15.

823. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of Lord Warwick on behalf of Anthony Morebeck, a sailor, for consideration for his services. No more ships to be bought at present. Letters read from Capt. Shilling, with receipt of stores for the London, the Hart, the Roebuck, and the Eagle; and from Edward Wythers, with receipt of 2,100 ryals aboard the London, from John Harris, servant to Lawrence Greene. Petition of Wm. Ellis, surgeon's mate of the Unity, complaining of Moreton turning him ashore to entertain another; referred to Captains Fitzherbert and Shilling, to report upon, and displace Moreton. Hall, the anchor smith, to be punished for the bad quality of the stores supplied by him. John Taylor thought fit to be mate of the Unity. Request of Lord Warwick to have a meeting with the Company; is willing to make a peaceable end, and not urge them to go to the King any more; the Company resolved to hold themselves to their first offer. Committee appointed to meet him. [Two pages. Court Bk. IV., 538-540.]

March 16.

824. Consultation on board the Royal James. Concerning the sending home of the Bee; deferred because of the importunity and obstinacy of so many suitors to go home, and of so many principal men who have been long in the Indies, and can by no means be possibly spared, nor yet in any reason well denied, having been so often promised licence to return by the next ship. Signed by— Martin Pring, Aug. Spaldinge, Chas Clevenger, Thos. Brockedon, Edmund Lennes, John Munden, John Hatch, and John Lemon. [One page and a quarter. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 843.]

March 17.

825. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Examination of Swanley, and letter read from the committees at Gravesend concerning the Anne, and that Capt. Fitzherbert desires a copy of the articles of agreement between the English and Dutch, that he may the better understand the state of that business upon occasion. Concerning the sale of 800 tons of oil belonging to the United Companies, supposed to be worth 13*l.* per ton. Cater's debt. Gratuity to Edward Meade, factor, employed since October last. Diego Fernandez, entertained a factor, conditionally, to carry himself honestly, civilly, and carefully, dismissed for his ill and deboist (debauched?) behaviour, and that at his going forth he demeaned himself like a beast in drunkenness. Report of Sir Thos. Roe of his conference with Lord Warwick. Resolved to proceed fairly in their former resolution. Proposition for the ships to proceed singly, as each shall be ready.

March 18.—Minutes of a meeting about the Muscovy trade, &c. Reasons why Sir William Russell is quite fallen off from his offer of 14,000*l.*; the course to be followed taken into consideration. Resolution to put off about 800 tons of oil at 13*l.* per ton for a sixth dividend upon the first joint stock.

March 20.—Committee to go down to Gravesend, to be eye-witness of what may be done for recovery of the Anne. Consideration about the treasurer's office, Mr. Treasurer (Wm. Harrison) lately deceased, "held to be very honest, just, painful, and careful in his place;" yet he thought the business too great and weighty to be managed hereafter by one particular person. Wm. Stone held very fit and sufficient for the new stock, resolved to have the old stock managed by commissioners until the next general court. Letters read from Capt. Shilling and Blieth, master of the Hart, complaining of the want of sufficient master's mates, and of the badness of all their ironwork. Two letters read from Capt. Fitzherbert concerning his salary, and to be furnished with an honest and sufficient preacher. Philip Bradshawe recommended by Woodall for the chief surgeon's place at Bantam; referred to the President and Council there. Concerning the drunken carriage of John Smith, formerly steward of the house at Jacatra; referred to the President of Bantam. Gratuity to W. Moore, a factor. [Four pages and a half. Court Bk. IV., 540-5.]

March 20.
London.

826. Chamberlain to Carleton. A ship [the Anne? from the East Indies] worth more than 16,000*l.* cast away between London and Gravesend, a thing never heard of in a ship of eight or nine hundred tons. They [the East India Company] have had 1,000 men about her these eight or ten days at least, and are at the charge of 100*l.* a day to recover her; but hears they have little other hope but to cut her in pieces, and save what they can by morsels. These mishaps, both outward and homeward, and factions and jars among themselves, have much impaired the reputation of that company. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXIII., No. 32, Cal., p. 131.]

828. George Strachan to the East India Company. Certifies to his having been retained in the Company's service last year by the deceased Thos. Barker and the rest of the factors, much against his inclination, as he was passing through Persia to the court of the Great Mogul. Wishes to know what he can hope for yearly. Laying aside physic, which is the principal cause of his entertainment, not only can he serve the Company by his language in this place, but also by the friendship which he has with the Arabian and Venetian merchants in Babylon and Aleppo, and his facility for conveying letters to the consul at Aleppo. Saved Wm. Nealson two years ago from burning, together with his letters. Can also choose in the buying of all drugs which the country affords. Demands and hopes to obtain 100*l.* a year. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 846.]

March 27.

829. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Desire of the Company to free the Anne from her disaster, and to have her buoyed up. Arrival in the Downs of ryals from Amsterdam to the value of 6,000*l.*, to be sent away by the next shipping. Dismissal of Thos. Clay, carpenter, and Rich. Rayner, sailor. Letters read from Henry Short, factor, from the Downes, touching the long stay of the Unity at Cowes; also from Capt. Fitzherbert, signifying his arrival in the Downs, and readiness to take advantage of the first fair wind. Request of Lord Warwick to know the Company's resolution concerning the three propositions set down in writing; referred. 30*l.* lent by the Dutch to John Davis to be repaid.

March 28.—Letter read from Mooreton, master of the Unity, from the Downs, complaining of the scandalous accusations of the surgeon. Norgrave's accounts. Letters read from Capts. Fitzherbert and Shilling, from Henry Darrell and Thos. Thompson, factors, of the 25th inst.; their readiness to sail that day. Resolution to put to arbitration the differences with Lord Warwick.

Minutes of a general court. The price of the hard and rich indigo to be six shillings per lb. to transport as before. Debate on the business betwixt the two Companies of Muscovy and East India, for putting off those goods." The East India Company to write for a sixth capital in oil. Death of the late treasurer, and appointment of one or more treasurers in his stead; William Stone and Robt. Bateman chosen, the former for the new stock, the latter for the old stock. The Governor's complaint of Mellyn's arrogance.

March 29.—Auditors of both the Muscovy and East India Companies to review all that is passed for the satisfaction of the court. Touching the account of the new stock, the old oweth a matter of 35,000*l.*, but the new oweth much more. Gratuity to Nathaniel Curtis, labourer at Blackwall. Request of Martha, administratrix of Ralph Wilson, deceased, master of the Tomazin when cast away, touching her husband's estate.

March 31.—Concerning a bill of Sir Thos. Roe's for 100*l.* found amongst Mr. Treasurer's writings. Petition of Mary, wife of Randall Jesson, master's mate in the Great James, touching her husband's goods. About removing the Anne to Northfleet. Jarvis Hocket to be discharged from the Company's service. Sir Wm. Harvy and Sir Ferdinando Gorges, chosen arbitrators by Lord Warwick; Sir Dudley Diggs and Alderman Halliday by the Company; Lord Chief Justice Hubbard [Hobart] proposed umpire. Henry Garway chosen auditor in the room of Bateman appointed treasurer; Kirby to audit Mountney's accounts. Increase in the price of ordnance. Letter read from the commissioners for the East India Company in the Low Countries from Amsterdam, of 25 inst., stating the cause of the backwardness of their ships' departure, and desiring that our ships may stay at the Cape till 20 July, and order for restitution, expecting the like from the English; with news of the Royal James and the Unicorn on the coast of Coromandel. [Eight pages. Court Bk. IV., 545-553.]

April 1. 830. Instructions to John Banggam going to Agra from Surat. Surat. To be assistant in the factory at Agra or Lahore, Walter Harvey, intended for those parts, not being able to undertake the journey. To go by way of Ahmedabad with certain cloths to be delivered to Robt. Yong, and if necessary intreat Mr. Browne's assistance in procuring camels. Directions as to money to be delivered to Fetiplace at Agra, if he go with the Prince's convoy, to give out that it is quicksilver, "under colour whereof it hath proceeded thither, being made up alike." Martin advised touching his visit to Baroach. Signed by Thos. Kerridge, Thos. Rastell, Giles James, and Edward Heynes. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 848.]

April 1. 831. Instructions to John Banggam from Ed. Heynes for sale and purchase of goods on the latter's own private account. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 849.]

April 3. 832. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Gratuity to Anthony Morbeck, a Dutchman, one of Lord Rich's company who returned in the Bull. Opinion of Sir Thos. Roe touching Christopher Farewell; resolution to let matters rest until the return of Browne or Keridge, who are expected shortly. 50*l.*, a fourth part of the gratuity voted to Sir Thos. Roe for this present year, to be paid to him.

April 4.—Request of Lady Lee, lately Mrs. Tomazin Quarles, to have her adventure of 1000*l.* in the new stock, in her name of Quarles, 835. Thos Brokedon and Aug. Spaldinge to the factory at Jambi. On their arrival on 8th April with eleven sail, in the Straits of Sunda, met the Bull sent from England purposely to give notice of the happy union and peace. Heard also of the loss of the Sampson and Hound, death of Jourdain, and divers others slain in fight. Have received letter from John Smelt, factor, dated in Aniar, 12 Feb. last, directed to Phil. Badnedge, concerning the factory of Jambi; remarks thereon; also concerning the sailors who came there with Welden from Patani, and their agreement with the President and Council of the Holland Company concerning the pepper. Require them to live in love and amity with the Hollanders. The Company have made choice of him, Brokedon, to succeed the late Jourdain as President until Rich. Fursland arrives from Acheen. Surat.

836. Joseph Hopkinson to John Banggam at Ahmedabad. Departure of Martin from Baroach, and sale of some of his goods. Glad to hear that himself and Heynes go to Brodera within a month. Were all at "the Dutches" (Hollanders) on Sunday night, where they had such extraordinary cheer as he has seldom seen. Yesterday, Good Friday, they had a sermon, and to-morrow night feast the Dutch. The goods for Burrampoor in state of forwardness. A man has had his head cut off, and was afterwards hanged upon a stake, and there he hangeth, for robbing a Doobee. Remembrances to John and Robt. Young and his brother Jos. Walker. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 852.]

 April 20. 837. John Banggam to Thos. Kerridge at Surat. Death of John Browne, who changed this life (no doubt for a better) yesterday morning (19 April). He made his will the night before, copy of which Mr. Bickford sends herewith (wanting), and was buried yesterday afternoon. Doubts not but he heard of his safe arrival with his charge at Baroach. On arriving at Agra will be diligent in his service. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 853.]
- April 21 838. "Extracts taken out of the several joint consultations of to the English and the Dutch in the Indies, after the arrival of the May 30. ship the Bull, and before the arrival of the ship Vrode, proving both publication and execution of the treaty." [Holland Corresp.]
- April 29. 839. Chamberlain to Carleton. Here is speech that the King London. of Denmark hath discovered the North-west passage by means of an English pilot. [Extract from Domestic., Jas. I., Vol. 113., No. 92. Cal. p. 140.]
- April 30. 840. Penal Orders to be observed of all men aboard the Royal Exchange, signed by Humfry Fitzherbert. Endorsed. Capt. Fitzherbert's orders for his fleet. [Five pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 855.]
- May 1. 841. Thos. Batten, "Land Captain," to Fras. Sadler (Sec. of E.
 (Jacatra.) I. Co.) at Sir Thos. Smythe's house in Philpot Lane. Found Bantam beleaguered by sea by the Hollanders; but the assault on shore by the cold spirits of the English deferred, when 700 English and 1,000 men, the Flemings, were able to land, would have surprised the town beaten down the battlements, and dismounted the ordnance of the Javas, but these delays have so much encouraged them that they have of late put upwards of 30 Dutch to the sword, taken possession of and fortified the English house, and practise the use of their pike and musket. "And he that shall call to mind what strange effects such sudden and resolute enterprizes have brought to pass both in India amongst these naked cowardly heathens, yea even in Christendom itself, will never conclude that either the Portugal or Fleming hath attained their footing in these parts with manners or shallie shallie, as the world doth truly take notice." Cares not to spend his time at the coast of Coromandel, in the fort which he supposes will be there raised for the English at Pulicat. Brockedon now deputy president. Knows he will be informed of the death of their brave commander, Sir Thos. Dale, at Masulipatam, also of Capt. Bowers, Mr. Hunt, Mr. Martin, and divers seamen and merchants; as also of the too much resolution of Capt. Jourdain, that opinion of security of Capt. Bonner, and that base and cowardly like carriage of Barrett in the Bear, most far from the condition of an Englishman. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 858.]
- May 2. 842. Capt. Robert Adames to the East India Company. Arrived Aboard the Bull at the Cape of Good Hope 28 Nov. last without the loss of a single

Dutch ships. No small grief to him to hear of the loss of the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, and Rose taken at Tecoe 1st Oct 1619; the Sampson and Hound taken at Patani 17 July 1619; the Star taken in the Straits of Sunda Aug. 1619; Capt. Jourdain slain in the Sampson, and Sir Thos. Dale died of the flux, on the coast of Coromandel. Death of John Garterson and John Griffin. Anchored in Jacatra Road, 17 March; sent for ashore by the Dutch General, who bid him very welcome, and all seemed very glad of their good news. Wars between the Dutch and Javas at Bantam; the Dutch make slaves of all their prisoners; they have at least 200 at Jacatra, and are building there a very strong castle. Left Jacatra 2 April with a Dutch ship, to look for the English fleet. Arrived at Bantam 4 April. The Pengran so incredulous would not allow any to speak with them, taking them to be either Dutch or under their command. Left Bantam on the 7th, and met with the English fleet the next day, eleven sail, the James Royal, Palsgrave, Elizabeth, Unity, Gift, Unicorn, Clove, Globe, Hopewell, Peppercorn, and Bee, which were bound to fight with the Dutch fleet at Bantam or Jacatra, sixteen sail, wherever they could find them. "If they had met there had never been such a day amongst Christians." Is thankful it was his good fortune "to stop that bloody business." On 11 April met with the Dutch fleet without Bantam road. The Pengran much grieved the English were friends with the Dutch, and would not afford them anything. By credible report, the Pengran has four or five thousand tons of pepper in his keeping. Movements of the joint fleets. Left Bantam road 26th, the James Royal and Unicorn for Japan to trim, the rest for Jacatra. Wants of the fleet. After passing the Cape outward, he shaped his course to the southward in 40 degrees of latitude, and kept between that and 36 degrees until he was 1,000 leagues eastward of the Cape; and so made a very good voyage. Encloses list of the names of the prisoners with the Dutch, which at his request the Dutch General delivered to him, so that when he met the English fleet there were 153 men in the Bull. [Three pages. Received, "1 January 1620(-1) by the Dutch White Bear."] [O.C., Vol. VII., No. 859.] Encloses,

842. 1. The names of such men as were released by the Dutch General, and received aboard the Bull. Total 51, among whom are George Muschampe, Thos. Hackwell, Master of the Sampson, Marmaduke Steventon, Arnold Browne, Peter Eliot, Barth Churchman, Robt. Hackwell, Wm. Piborne, Edward Gillman, Edward Channer, John Owen, surgeon, Wm. Rewney, surgeon, Joseph Prat. [One page. March 31. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 847.]

843. Charles Clevenger to Sir Thos. Smythe. Sailed 23 Jan. from the road of Priaman, despairing of meeting with the fleet, which they had waited for three months, but came up with them three days after. The fleet in great want of supplies, without which there are divers good ships in India that will hardly see England. Met with the Bull, and were told she had been three weeks at Bantam or Jacatra, and had letters of peace from both companies.

The James and Unicorn sent to Japan to be careened, masted and yarded. Were fourteen days in Bantam road with the Flemings, but the Pengran will come to no composition with them. Now at Jacatra. Five English and five Dutch ships to sail within 20 days for Patani, and so run along the coast of China for Japan, there to victual, from thence to the Philippines, and so for the Moluccas. 844. Edmund Lenmyes to the East India Company. Refers to his previous letters from the Cape of Good Hope and Tecoe. Arrival of Capt. Pring on 26 Jan. 1620 before Tecoe with nine sail, the Royal James, Gift, Moon, Unicorn, Clove, Globe, Peppercorn, Bee, and Claw, pitifully distressed in their provisions and stores. Resolution to go for Bantam, "and that in the happiest time; had it been sooner we had surely had as hot a fight as time can record to have been among Christians." Met the Bull and the Hart of Holland with letters of peace in the straits of Sunda. Anchored in Bantam road 11 April; sent ashore to advertise the Pengran of the union with the Dutch; he replied, the English were welcome, and might have trade; but his anger towards the Dutch was implacable; "wherefore, as yet, we let him alone, and attend other businesses." The Bee sent to Acheen for the newly elected President; the Peppercorn to Japara for provisions; a long boat to Jambi for the Sampson's men; the Royal James and Unicorn for Japan; the Clove keepeth Bantam Road; the rest anchor before Jacatra. It is agreed between them and the Dutch to dispatch ten of their best ships for Japan, and thence as order shall direct. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 861.]

845. John Rowe to Sir Thos. Smythe. His last was by the Rose (see ante No. 767), since which he has lost 18 men, 14 killed by savages, and four poisoned through eating the liver of a fish. The people's "barbarousness" not more to be condemned than their own negligence, "for security is the greatest cause of the overthrow of the English in India." At Tecoe and Priaman a month; the fleet arrived at Tecoe 25 Jan., just four months after their appointed time, altogether unprovided. Departed hence 3rd March, intending to make for Acheen. Arrived off the coast of Sumatra 25 March, and sent a shallop to Bantam for news. Information of the taking of the Sampson and Hound, and Capt. Jourdain "slain basely, being in parley with the Dutch." Resolved, with their eleven sail, to try their fortune against the Dutch with 17 sail; but on the 7 April met with the Bull in the straits of Sunda with news of peace, which prevented the spilling of much Christian blood, "for surely if we had met before this news of peace had come, it would have been a bloody proceeding on both sides." Could not be persuaded until Capt. Adames himself had been spoken with, knowing the Flemings policy to be such that where power cannot prevail fair speeches shall not be wanting. Much joy shown on both sides for so happy a union, "before any more Christian blood was spilt, and heathens to stand laughing at us, and make benefit of our dissensions." Disposal of the fleet. These old ships require all manner of stores and provisions. [Two pages and a quarter. Indorsed, "Received by the Dutch White Bear, 3 January 1620—(1.) O.C. Vol. VII., No. 862.]

846. George Muschamp to the East India Company. In his last, by the Lesser James, he advised them of the state of Banda, with their miserable sufferings on the island of Pooloroon, where he continued 20 months, assisting Courthopp, and doing the Company service by attaining the language, &c. Left there on 10 Aug. 1618 in a prow with 40 Bandanese, "at the request of Mr. Courthopp and the rest of our poor men there," to advise the President of the taking of the Solomon and Attendance, and of their great want of all necessary provisions, which were supplied from Macassar and Bantam. The country people much relieved this year past by supplies of sago from an island called Seran (? Ceram), 20 leagues from Pooloroon. The occasion of the President's (Capt. Jourdain) separation from the fleet, differences betwixt him and Sir Thos. Dale; both sincerely bent on the advancement of the Company's affairs. On 24 April proceeded on their unfortunate voyage; left cargo of goods and money at Jambi, under the charge of Robt. Johnson, chief factor. Sailed on 21 May for Patani; took a small Portugal vessel bound to the Manillas from Malacca, and arrived at Patani 2d June, where they found a disordered factory, by the base and idle carriage of Edward Gillman, left there, after the untimely death of W. Paulhill and John Browne, until the coming of Savage from Camboja or other supply from Bantam, which he has riotously consumed; his disgraceful conduct, and treatment of Thos. Doughty for "opposing his wasteful disposition;" intention of the President to send him home prisoner. Goods landed in Patani under the charge of Adam Denton, chief factor; also on board the Portugal prize bound for Siam. Fight with the Fleming ships; account of the killed and wounded on board the Sampson and Hound; the President, while talking to Henrick Jonson, the Dutch commander, received his death wound, with a musket, under the heart. Villany of one Domingo, a Portugal, the chief actor in the burning of the Black Lion. How the Dutch commander performed the terms of the parley, pillaging them even to the clothes off their back, and leaving them in a miserable case, for want of means to cure their wounds, which the surgeons Rich. Wood and Francis Geckle "to their power supplied." Denton gave the Queen and nobility half the goods laden aboard the prize, to secure the other half. Thinks this had been better undone. Remained in Patani till the 9 October, when Rich. Welden and himself, with the rest of their men, in all 72, left in three prows to advise the fleet of the President's death and the loss of their ships. Touched at Jambi; left Welden with 40 men there; at request of Robert Jonson, for the security of their goods, being fearful of the Dutch forces, and proceeded with the rest to Bantam, hoping to meet the English fleet, but were surprised by the Dutch fleet, and he remained a prisoner at Jacatra until the coming of the Bull with happy tidings of peace, which seemed lovingly embraced by the Dutch, but the publication was deferred until the coming of their adviser from Holland. Hopes the Company will duly consider his irrecoverable loss. It has pleased God to take away most of those who were best able to do the Company service, and as in the cases of Pett at Siam and Gillman at Patani their factories have fallen into the hands of lewd and idle fellows. Has made a brief calculation of the money and merchandise lost in the Sampson and Hound, which amounts to 24,724 ryals as they cost per invoice, besides the goods taken in the Portugal prize. 848. Wm. Bell to Edw. Monox at Ispahan. Has sent part of the goods to him under convoy of John Purefey and John Benthall, which could not be effected before by reason of the Khan's departure, whose great train took up all the carriage that was to be had near the city. Has reserved 22,000 ryals and dollars to be coined here within ten days only, to make a precedent. Has tried the money, and found it very good. Delivered three parts ryals and quarter dollars, which are mingled together in the mint, for the dollars are not so fine money as the ryals. "Thus I pass them both at one price." Has sent him the rest of the money, in all 30 chests, and ryals and dollars 116,000. Arrival of their good friend, Sir Alvisé Parente, from Ormuz, with letter from the consul at Aleppo. Sent the coach and dogs the day after his departure to Ispahan. The bearer, Strachan, has had a violent burning fever and fifteen fits already, which have much weakened him, and he much fears if he stay here it will cost him his life, for he has been very grievously handled. 849. Consultations held in Ispahan, present Edw. Monox, Robt. Jefferies, Thos. Barker, John Amye, and Gyles Hobbes, concerning the agent's (Monox) repair to the court, to treat and conclude an agreement with the King for silk.

May 15.—Consultation as above. Conduct of Robert Gyfford, and the words that passed between him and Monox at the Council table. Also touching a "grievous infirmity" of Gyfford, which will prevent him accompanying Monox in his journey to the King. [Six pages. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 865.]

- May 16. Lagor [Ligor] Siam. 851. William Webb to [Edward Longe]. Could not give credit to the bad reports from the Dutch, that he is drunk every day in their company. Agreed to send Denton to Ligor to see if he could procure trade from the Chinamen there. Arrival of a small prow with Rich. Welden and 12 English from Jambi, he having been left there with 25 Englishmen to secure the house from the insolency of the Dutch, who threatened to take it. He brought very bad news with him, if true, that the Dutch have taken one of the other prows, in which were Musten, Steventon, Gilman, Edward Channer, and Browne; also that they have taken three or four English on the coast of Sumatra; that the Great James has gone for England with Cpts. Pring and Ball; Sir Thos. Dale dead at the coast, as also Methwold. His arrival at Ligor. Proceedings of Adam Denton to prevent his being surprised by the Dutch; his going to Patani, and arrival of the Sampson with news of the peace from Jacatra, brought by the Bull. "The Queen of England, they say, is dead." [Two pages. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 868.]
- May 22. Westminster. 852. Rowland Woodward to [Fras. Windebank.] Arrival of a ship from the East Indies with report that the Hollanders have picked up five English ships of great value, and this before knowledge came of the agreement between the Hollanders and the English, so that if restitution should not be made it will go near to make the honourable Company give a crack. - May 27. 853. Wm. Bell to Edward Monox, at Ispahan. Has bought pepper of Gyles Gonsalves according to his order. Their servant Morratt arrived with goods from Lar. Deficiencies in the chests of money, which he found out in delivering them to the mint master; supposes the money was lost upon the way. Goods sold to divers shopkeepers here. Has agreed for the hire of 120 camels which came from Lar with Jews' goods for Ispahan, with which he purposes to depart within four or five days. Can procure camels or asses at the same rate. notice of the treaty was had on both sides. His Majesty requires Carleton to press the States to a speedy and just reparation both of his own honor and his subjects' losses. This insolence has revived the remembrance of the last year's provocation. Sir Noel Caron has promised to contribute his best offices for a full and timely restitution, and seems to make no doubt that the offenders will be exemplarily punished, "the omission or delay whereof will be like to breed ill blood." 855. II. Sir Thos. Roe to the President of the English in the East Indies. Meeting with Frederick Hoffman, admiral of a fleet of 11 ships of Holland, bound for Bantam; had conference with him about the bad humours begun betwixt them in India. The admiral professes peace, and avows the reception of the States Commissioners in England to treat for an accord. They have mutually agreed to send advices, that it is probable an union [of the two Companies] will be effected, and so to prevent, if possible, any further "occasions [of broils?] which will not be so easily quenched." Roe has added, that he gave this writing to Hoffman, to be delivered to the President of the English. 1619, May 11. [Half a page. Holland Corresp.]

855. III. Fred. Hoffman to the President of the Dutch in India. Arrived in Saldanha Bay, $\frac{6}{16}$ May, where he found three English ships, one from Surat with his Majesty's ambassador on board. Certifies that the States Commissioners and others from the Company are arrived in England to treat for an accord. Has conferred with the English ambassador, and from his order entreats there may be no further occasions of broils given, until their masters have further declared their wills. 1619. 856. Will. Hoare to the East India Company. Journal of his voyage in the Dragon and Expedition from Surat to Acheen, from Acheen to Bantam, and from Bantam in the Rose to Tecoe. Account of the surprising of the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, &c. The Dragon anchored before Dabul, 21 Feb. 1618-9. The people of Dabul much contented with the arrival of a junk, having long desired commerce with the English. A fair inlaid musket given to Noghoda, captain of the Dabul junk, who earnestly desired an English Bible, which he said he would carefully keep till some English were there resident, and then with their help would have it translated into Arabic, for his own use. The Lion dispeeded for the Red Sea. Thomas Sprage sent from Burrampoor to Gullcandawe (Golconda?). Anchored at Battellah 1st March; the price of pepper there; upwards of 150 tons; worse than that of Tecoe; no intent to sell, but to keep it for the Portugal, with whom there is continual trade. A junk belonging to the Samorin detained by Capt. Bonner, the sooner to procure satisfaction for goods and debts left by Peter Nedham. Cunning dealing of the Samorin. His dissimulation with Capt. Bonner, who threatened to take his junks, that the English might pay themselves. A pinnace ordered to Tecoe; arrived 6 April (1619), and left for Bantam 11th following. Met with the English fleet 29th, and Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Pring. Pinnace sent for Bantam, to get provisions for the ships, also to learn if any Flemish ships were at Jacatra. The ten ships were the Moon, Clove, Globe, Peppercorn, James Royal, Gift, Unicorn, Advice, Rose, and Bee. Capt. Jourdain some fourteen days before his coming (i.e. about 9 April) gone with the Sampson and Hound for Jambi, Patani, Siam, and other places. Four China junks taken for debts owing by the Chinese. Owen Bodman executed at the yard arm of the Moon, 24 May 1619. The fleet set sail from the straits of Sunda the next day; some with Sir Thos. Dale to Engano, to recover, if possible, the money lost in the Sun, and relieve the men left there, "if any were alive;" the others, with Capt. Pring for the coast, to join strength at Priaman, there to meet with the ships from England and Capt. Bonner's, and all go to Bantam. Rich. Crawe miraculously saved in a storm; Price Hawke struck dumb and lame by lightning, "lying in most lamentable plight for many days." Capt. Bonner, with the Dragon and Expedition, to meet the Rose at Tecoe. Two months' trade granted there; price of pepper; to pay 14 per cent. custom. Fire and treachery more usual than in any other part of India. Capt. Bonner's resolution, to keep the Dragon "clear and prithie" for a man-of-war altered on arrival of Henry Bate, merchant, from the Bear. Murder of John Tucker. Nicolls charged "the cowalls (or wayters)" to be actors or authors, and required to have them all sent for, and one after another to touch the corpse, whereto the King gave order, and when each one had taken him by the hand, and no cause to suspect any appeared, on the demand of Nicolls, the King commanded that one who was sick, and kept his bed, should be sent for, whose very looks and demeanour condemned him in the opinion of all to be the villain sought for. He took the dead man by the hand with extreme quaking and many distracted gestures and answers, but would not hold it any time. Nicolls urged this to be the man, and required justice. The King caused him to be bound, and professed in his conscience that was the man, but that he must be tried by their law also. Capt. Bonner sent for to see the event. A fire was made, and an iron pan with a gallon of oil set to boil till it came to such a degree of heat that a green leaf dipped therein was sodden and shrivelled. The prisoner was then, in testimony of his innocence, to take a small ball of brass little bigger than a musket-shot out of the oil with his naked hand, and if any burning or scald appeared thereon he was contented to die. Stripping up his sleeve above the elbow, and taking a kind of protestation, desiring that as he was clear so he might prosper in this act, he dipped his hand to the wrist in the burning oil, took out the ball, held it fast, and crying Olla Basar (or great is the Lord), tossed it up, caught it again, and then cast it on the ground, showing his hand, which had no more sign of hurt than if he had experimented the same in cold water. “(The devil as seems being loth at that time to lose his credit).” The fellow was instantly released, and within an hour after returned in his holiday apparel, and none so lusty as he, though so weak before as to be brought upon men’s shoulders to his tryal. This was all the justice we could have for our murdered man. Account of the arrival of the Dutch fleet. Fight, and capture of the Dragon, also of the Expedition, Bear, and Rose; Capt. Bonner mortally wounded. If the infidels had not been more merciful than the Hollanders, 300 men had perished; cruelties practised by the latter. Death of Capt. Bonner on 9 Oct., aggravated by cruel treatment; he was buried upon the little island at Tecoe, as near his brother Thomas as could be guessed. The heathen favored their people (the English); the King visited Capt. Bonner daily during his sickness. Names of the Holland ships departing from Tecoe to Priaman and Bantam, where they had 35 sail besieging Bantam, the Pengran and they vying for dead men’s heads. Diego Fernandez beheaded in mistake for a Hollander. The Rose left in Tecoe road for the English. Report of the taking of Capt. Jourdain at Jambi. Happy arrival of Capt. Chas. Clifingham [Clevenger] with the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope on 23 October. Nicolls and Bates sent to Acheen, to complain to the King of the Hollanders. All the ships sail from Tecoe 10 Nov. The Rose ordered for England; arrives at the Cape 28 Jan. 1619–20. Letters found at Saldanha from Capt. Adames and others. Tragical accident to eight Englishmen going to fish there; all slain by the savages, who are thought to have been provoked thereto by wrongs done by the Dutch. Left Saldanha, 2 Feb.; passed the equinoctial 5 March, and arrived in England 19 May 1620. [Nineteen pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 856.]

859. Carleton to Chamberlain. Is heartily sorry for the blow our men have received in the East Indies, and wishes it lay any way in his power to repair it; "for howsoever the committees of the Company have used me first by neglect and since by mocking both myself and my friends who sought to have me remembered, yet their discourtesy cannot make me forgetful of the honor of our nation in general, nor insensible of the Company's loss in particular, and as I have always done, so shall I continue to further their affairs as if I had an adventure amongst them." Believes more blows will be heard of before news of the accord can be with them in the East Indies, for our men will assuredly seek revenge, though they be much weakened by their loss. Has received his Majesty's orders to complain and require restitution. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

860. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Has acquainted the Prince of Orange with the outrages of the Hollanders upon his Majesty's subjects in the East Indies, the men they had slain, the ships and goods taken by open hostility, and their scornful speeches and actions in contempt of his Majesty, of all which he was very sensible, but doubted whether they could have received news of the accord betwixt the two Companies; however, he concluded that restitution must be duly made. Hopes to find the States no less well inclined, intending next week when M. Goch is to be President to demand audience of them in their assembly. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

861. Jefferies, Purifie, and Amye, to Edward Monox (at Court). Arrival of Morat, their servant, with the caffila of 150 asses; send him to Monox according to his order. Commodities sold and their value; the English factory has been much abused. Their present of dogs is almost come to nothing, Twig, Swan, and one of the beagles grew mad, whereof they died, albeit Fras. Mason hath taken great pains with them. "The coach is brought again into his pride," and will he believes prove an acceptable present. The pictures dried and spoiled. "We took out the horse, which was in best condition, and washed him in white wine, and have put him up again." Remembrances to Hobbes. [Three pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 873.]

June 13. 863. Rough draft of the preceding. [O. C., Vol. VII., No. 866.]

June 15. 864. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Incloses a proposition he presented to the States General complaining, in his Majesty's name, of the late outrage committed upon his subjects in the East Indies, and demanding restitution. The President's answer; he could not conceive the accord between the two Companies was known there at the time. Carleton referred to Sir Thos. Roe and the Dutch admiral's letters in the Bear, one of the ships taken by their men. Complaint of Sir Thos. Dale's first attempt upon their men in those peaceable parts by Bantam. Assurances that the article of mutual restitution should be faithfully performed, and those who had so much forgot themselves towards his Majesty by their insolent words and demeanour severely punished. The pinnacles of advice only left England the end of August last, and Holland the beginning of October. Incloses,

June 26. 867. Sec. Naunton to Carleton. To deal freely with him as his Majesty's secret minister, believes firmly that the foul and base abuses offered by the vile speeches their men have needlessly and impertinently used towards his Majesty's person with a boorish insolency, when they so treacherously and savagely abused his Majesty's subjects both in Greenland and in the East Indies, and their delays of restitution, notwithstanding their promises to have made all good within three months after June last, and their universal undermining our men's trade in all places, "I say all these continued provocations accumulated I fear have already bred that disdain in his Majesty's generous heart, that he is apt to expect better and more sincere dealing from the Spaniard than from them, and will find it more kindly for him to join with a monarch that seeks his friendship than with them that bear themselves as natural enemies to all monarchies. I pray God this impression be not too deeply struck already. Sure I am there want not prompters at his ear to make it their advantage for their private ends, go the public of either church or common wealth on as they may. And I pray God that these misunderstandings prove not an occasion to prejudice the common profession of religion, which I know our master loves in his heart, and hates nothing more than that men should make a pretext and a bridge of it to pass over to their own designs, which they are ashamed to profess." Has thus delivered our master's answer to Carleton's proposition with his own true conceit, which he knows Carleton will keep secret and make the best use of he can for rectifying all misunderstandings. 870. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Has found in the States an exceeding detestation of the words whereof their men were accused in the East Indies, notwithstanding they believe some part to be increased in the report; "the word of disdain specified in our merchants' accusation is a refrain in our language, and not in theirs, for in the translation of that complaint I must say, as the truth is, all the Dutch we have (and I have those about me very perfect in the language) could not make it run either in rhyme or reason, and such is his Majesty's wisdom that the faults of particular men shall never distaste him of a whole nation." 872. Robt. Jefferies, Wm. Bell, John Amye, John Purefey, and John Benthall to Edward Monox, Thos. Barker, &c., at the Persian Court. Occurrences of their troublesome journey; the thief that saluted Barker and Hobbes, to the hazard of their apparel, "will ever remember that gripe proved a dear pennyworth." The dear and small quantity of silk likely to accompany the next fleet will fall far short of the promises made. It seems strange that the King, knowing the important affairs they have in his country, and the great quantity of silk that will notwithstanding lye upon his hands, could not be induced to give them some credit. Touching the

10,000 tomauns Monox is to pay the King for his silk. Lalabegg told them the King had sent to Shiraz for the mint master who paid so much for their moneys there, to take off his head, "for said he, the King commanded he should not exceed the said value of 13 sha. 1 cost., and who dares give more for them," by means whereof the Company will sustain much prejudice. Report that the King is upon his departure to repair to this city; if he demand the coach before Monox return, Monox must not take the delivery of it offensively, "You know this Prince is of condition that all things must give way to his command." As to giving presents: the coach is in its pride; wants nothing but horses, without which it will be a dead present. The King's indisposition. Concerning the sale of the Company's goods. Explanations in reference to the proceedings of Jefferies, "be more charitable in your constructions . . . and let us banish discord and the devil, and embrace God and peace." John Amye with Mr. Strahan, according to Monox's appointment, are to repair to him; think Strahan proper for that appointment in regard of his judgment in drugs, silks, or other occasions as the business may require. Have sent tin, to see what good may be done with that commodity in Kasbin: their business will not be perfect till they have more factories than this one in Ispahan. Four of the long expected galleons have arrived at Ormuz with 2,500 men, "fightable till they fly." What their project may be is yet mystical to the English, and therefore necessary for their expected fleet to keep each other's company. Sales to Lalabegg, the King's treasurer, since their last; "Lalabegg ruleth all, for not a merchant dareth come to our house, or make any offer for our goods, without his consent." Reports "fathered upon late arrived Banians" that the English fleet met with the Prince's junks off Surat, and that their factories were dissolved there and at all other places in the Mogul's country. Believes "the pedling Portugals" have blazoned this forgery, fathered by some friar, who to scandalize the English and their trade give out that they rob in the Indian seas, when they get moneys to supply their trade. Since the arrival of the galleons at Ormuz, the Portugals are grown great men, and begin to look big. Resolved in consultation to give a present to Lalabegg, "who promised to deserve it;" he will be here on Monday next. Hope to put off their cloth and tin. Have already told Lalabegg, in conference, that unfriendly usage will drive them from this trade, which they will again freely make him know, and that unless they can have merchants to take their commodities, and at prices of some encouragement as are necessary, their trade in this country cannot long continue. Barker is arrived, but weak. [Endorsed, "Received by Mr. Taverner the 27 January by the way of Aleppo." Five pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 877.]

873. Chamberlain to Carleton. On Tuesday [4th] Sir Thos. Smythe, without any contradiction, was re-established Governor of the East India Company, by reason of a letter from the King wishing them not to alter their officers and committees. Mr. Bell also continues his place, though otherwise he sinks very much in sound, and it is thought would not have been heard or seen here long if this had not fallen out; understands he had procured himself to be the Company's agent at Amsterdam with 400*l.* a year, though he stood upon 500*l.* [Extract from Dom. Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXVI., No. 13, Cal., p. 162.]

Agreed that on either part letters and accounts shall or may be interchangeably received and delivered for their speediest and safest conveyance both out and home. [*One page. July 10. 875. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. One of the Dutch East India Company's ships the Devil, of Delft, fought with seven pirates of Algiers; it sunk two and beat off the rest, but having lost 100 men in the fight, is not sufficiently manned, and returns. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

[July 10.] 876. Petition of the East India Company to the Privy Council. Set forth the Bear and the Star to the East Indies in December 1618. Thos. Barwicke, who was appointed commander of the Bear, betrayed and surrendered that ship and others to the Hollanders, without resistance, to the petitioner's great loss. Pray for exemplary punishment to terrify others from the like treacherous and cowardly actions. [Enclose,

876. I. "Reasons to induce that Thos. Barwicke betrayed the ship the Bear, Dragon, and some other ships in the Indies." Barwicke met Sir Thos. Roe off the Cape, to whom he made known that Dutch commissioners in England were treating of a peace between the English and Hollanders in the East Indies, and receiving letters both from Sir Thos. Roe to the English factors and from Houltman, commander of the Dutch fleet, to their people in Bantam, persuading a cessation of hostility in expectation of the peace. Barwicke wilfully fell into the hands of the Dutch, by whom several English vessels were taken, and concealing these letters, great loss befell the Company's men and goods. Reasons for suspecting Barwicke of treachery and of secret intelligence with the Dutch. [Dom. Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXVI., Nos. 19, 19 i., Cal. p. 163.]

July 12. 877. Marmaduke Steventon to George Ball at Masulipatam. Jacatra. Fight in the Hound with three great Holland ships. Gourden, as valiant a proper fellow as ever put foot in a ship, notwithstanding his misfortune, when after five glasses fight, their noble president was slain in parley with Henry Johnson, the Dutch commander. In the Sampson, Boulten, merchant, was killed with ten others; Muschamp had his right leg shot and after dismembered, with some 30 more wounded. The Hound fired through the wilfulness or negligence of Domingo the Portugal, "but the truth was never known," and sixteen killed and wounded. "So that on 17 July 1619 was my forced loss both of estate, accounts, friends, and every thing which might provide any hope of good; these merciless Flemings left him but two shillings (?) in all the world; as for his books, he begged for them almost upon his knees; was put in irons, and carried from ship to ship, until his liberty was obtained by the Duke of Sernara, who commanded his release, in spite of the Dutch commander's denial. Two months after ten of them arrived at Jambi, where Welden was left with 44 men, by the earnest urging of Mr. Johnson, to secure the Company's goods against the Dutch. Left Jambi with Muschamp and Browne for Bantam, but were again taken by the Tiger and her consort, two men-of-war, where they remained four months until the arrival of the Bull with the welcome news of peace. Certifies to the malicious state in which they live at Jacatra; and the many and vile aspersions upon Ball's name and reputation, as that he is sent for home in irons, all of which reports he believes fabulous. 878. Thos. Brockedon and Aug. Spalding to George Ball at Masulipatam. Arrived in Tecoe road 22 Oct. with the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and Hope, where they "were encountered with the lamentable news" of the surprisal of the Dragon, Bear, Expedition, and Rose, taken by six sail of Hollanders, with the death of Capt. Bonner and divers others in the fight. The Rose returned to them meanly provided to take their own course; resolution to dispeed her home. Barwick's false information of peace at home the cause of Capt. Bonner unadvisedly neglecting the orders received by the Rose. "The base coward Barwick entertained them (the Dutch) with a flag of truce, to the disgrace of our nation;" hopes he will receive the true guerdon of his baseness. Determination to try their fortunes with their supposed enemies in Bantam road, but met with the Bull on 8 April in the Straits of Sunda with the articles of peace, "to the unspeakable joy of us all." Of the 20 ships of defence or men-of-war appointed to be employed for the Manillas and the coast of Malabar, 10 already disposed to ply along the coast of China to Japan, and then with the monsoon for the Manillas. At Jacatra, the place of residence for the Council of Defence, they are to preside monthly, the English the first month, the Hollanders the next, all which articles have been hitherto well observed; but the restitution of ships and goods mentioned in the treaty of peace not yet urged by the English, in respect of the want of men and uncertainty of the goods surprised in their ships. Capt. Pring gone for Japan with the Royal James and Unicorn, to careen there; expect them here in December. The Pengran obstinately stands out with the Hollanders, unless they will surrender the fort of Jacatra; "and we are to proceed jointly in this business, so forced at present with bad accommodation to remain here at an excessive charge, and live liable to their laws, alleging they have conquered the country with their swords, and as absolute here as King James in England, which at present is burthensome to us, in respect of the disorder of our people, being forced to keep at least 40 men under the title of soldiers to defend us from the Javas that lieth in the woods." Request him to repair hither with the first shipping with his accounts. The last and worst news is the loss of the Sampson and Hound, and the death of Capt. Jourdain, surprised by Henrick Johnson, who went to revenge the loss of the Lion, "which he could not have done if the President would have given way to weigh anchor, and fought under sail, before they birthed themselves * * * Howsoever, his resolution pretended the credit of our nation in the presence of the country people, and deserves a favourable censure." The place of President devolves upon him, Thos. Brockedon, until the arrival of Rich Fursland from Acheen, expected very shortly in the Claw. [Two pages. Endorsed: "Received 4 Sept. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 880."]

879. Richard Fursland to the East India Company. His last of 4 July 1619, with copy of inventory, journal, and accounts, was sent by the Dragon, since surprised by the Dutch, "to your great loss and the disgrace of our nation." Sends copies of all perfected. The Charles, Ruby, Diamond, and pinnace Roebuck arrived at Acheen from Surat, 24 April past. Private trade repressed since his coming, and all pepper taken from private hands for the Company's use. A good beginning for sale of their goods stopped by the arrival of a Guzerat ship laden with all sorts of cloth, but hopes hereafter to prevent them and others, and then this trade will be worth following. Nicolls unable to obtain trade for Tecoe. A month since the Bee and a Holland ship arrived at Acheen with "those joyful tidings of peace * * * so seasonable, as prevented the shedding of much blood more." Regrets the death of his good friend Capt. Jourdain, and promises "to discharge that great charge" of the Presidency to which he succeeds. Has appointed Daniel Wight chief here; Edward How, second; George Robinson, third; and Rich. Allen, as before, steward; and wishes all their factories were as well furnished with honest men. Has left in this factory the prescribed instructions for living and trading friendly and lovingly with the Hollanders. The Company have as usual lost many men in this place, Sylvanus Man, master of the Ruby, his brother Wm. Fursland, whose wages the writer requests may be paid to his mother, Mary Fursland. Death of Edw. How, since writing the above. The King requires gold for his pepper, and half a peck of gold spangles of the size in the margin, with a hole to hang them by. Thinks a fair table diamond of 100*l.* price, set in some fair jewel garnished with emeralds, would procure from the King trade at Tecoe, but to have it granted before parting with the jewel.

Oct. 15.
in Jacatra.

After a tedious passage of 12 weeks, has arrived in Bantam road, where were the Star and Peppercorn with two Holland ships. By Muschampe he perceives they must now live in subjection to the Hollanders, and expects no other but they will use the English as means to help to possess them in all places of what they desire, and then make the English pay what taxes they like, but hopes

these mischiefs will be remedied. Wishes the Company had sufficient men here (at Jacatra) able to equal the Dutch, both in authority, policy, and affairs of state, "and such a one you must have (or more than one), or else your business cannot be brought to perfection in these parts, for they are much too hard for us both in Council, by their experience, and in force, which will make them insult us, and we have no remedy here to help us, but to endure with patience all abuses and disgraces they shall offer us, which for my part I am resolved to bear, rather than again to kindle a fire to consume ourselves withall." Have sent ashore to the Pengran to know the utmost of his intents towards them, whether he will accept of trade or no, and would come to a treaty of peace with them, and that they (the English) would be a means to persuade the Hollanders to the like; but he would not admit them to any speech, so seeing nothing but delays sailed for Jacatra. 881. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Incloses answer to Carleton's proposition to the States General of the 14th inst., finally framed betwixt the States and the merchants, and which consists partly, as was to be expected, of recriminations, partly of a desire and promise on their part of mutual restitution, and concludes with detestation of those insolencies which are said to be used by their men in words and actions to his Majesty's dishonour. Told the States deputies who brought Carleton the writing that he had nothing to do with the two first points; it concerned the merchants to dispute their own cause; but that which concerned his Majesty's honor he desired them to show their dislike of their men's barbarous behaviour appear by exemplary punishment, wherein they were as ready to offer as Carleton to ask that kind of satisfaction. Must recal what he wrote concerning a fight between a ship of Delft going to the East Indies and the pirates, as it is neither confirmed nor believed. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

883. Thos. Brockedon, Aug. Spalding, and George Muschamp to the East India Company. Refer to their previous letter by the Bee which sailed 3 May last. On 11th May Capt. Robt. Adames was elected chief commander of the fleet bound for the Manillas, to remove into the Moon; Munden to go into the Bull; Capt. Pring could not be persuaded to take the chief command. The Hope ordered to touch at Patani, to take in rack and other provisions; the rest to ply to and fro to surprise the Portugals until 25 July next, then all five to go for Japan to meet the rest of the Manilla fleet. Joseph Cockram, Erasmus Baynham, and Henry Bach, the factors sent, one in each ship, "to take notice of what may be taken from the enemy." On 24th the Vrede arrived from Holland, and on 30th the publication of peace was celebrated ashore at Jacatra and aboard the ships with great solemnity, the ships and fort shooting off all their ordnance and a general feast made. The Dutch general refused to publish the peace until the Vrede arrived. The Moon, Palsgrave, and the rest of the Manilla fleet departed for Japan. Their pepper at Jambi sold to the Dutch. News that George Cokayne was long since most inhumanely murdered by Chinese (in margin, about May 1619). Letters sent to the English factors in Surat by the Wapen of Zealand. The Clove sailed on 16 June with supplies for Jambi and Patani. Desire of Adam Denton and Robt. Johnson, chief factors of those places, to return to England, alleging their time to be expired. Thos. Myll sent as chief to Jambi, if Johnson could not be persuaded to remain longer. John Jourdain, factor, to remain chief in Patani, "being a place of small importance," intending on Denton's return, if it be found unworthy the continuance, to dissolve the same. The Hollanders engross the sawyers, carpenters, and all other workmen at Jacatra for their fort and houses. The Globe remains in Jacatra road as a warehouse for their goods, having no place on shore. News by the English Star that the fort of Pooloroon holds out still; the pinnace Françoise there. Richard Fursland daily expected at Acheen, also the Peppercorn from Japara with provisions, which they stand greatly in need of, as all things are extreme dear in Jacatra. Jas. Cartwright, factor, sent in the New Zealand for the coast of Coromandel, to remain second in Masulipatam, and look into Methwold's accounts. Have sent for George Ball. Because of Capt. Jourdain's death, and the loss of his books and accounts, they remain ignorant of all business past. Have also sent for Thos. Jones, now second to Methwold, but in their judgments unfit for that place, who says his time is expired, and he will not serve the Company any longer. Have deferred sending people to Pulicat till they are better furnished with factors. Present state of that place. Conference with the Dutch as to restitution of ships and goods; they refuse to restore the victuals taken. Are in doubt whether to receive their ships again, worn out and without victuals; the Hollanders have made use of them. They refuse to make restitution of goods taken from the English ships, and will not be accountable for what their people pillaged. "Saying, their own safeties enforced them to give such liberty to their sailors, to encourage them to fight." Have demanded restitution of the 100,000 ryals taken in the Bear and Star, but "they were not ashamed impudently to equalize their losses with ours, and refused to make demand thereof until we likewise brought in what our demands were on our part, till when they utterly refuse to restore any goods or money whatsoever." Are ignorant of what was laden in the Swan, Defence, Salmon, and Attendance, Ball having the accounts; neither can they tell their losses in the Dragon and Expedition until Fursland's arrival; those in the Sampson and Hound, Denton can best certify, who is likewise sent for from Patani. The Hollanders have taken in all 11 sail of shipping, whereof most laden, besides burning the English house at Jacatra; whereas the English only took the Black Lion, worth by invoice 71,000 ryals, and about 100 tons of rice. Particulars of the frivolous demands of the Hollanders. They are so impudent and shameless that no reason can be expected from them, yet our people intend to live peaceably with them, and refer their differences to be decided at home. Concerning the equal division of all the pepper growing upon Java, according to the sixth article. Excessive charges of building the fort of Jacatra, which, notwithstanding the abundance of people daily working upon it, will not, by all men's judgments, be finished in ten years. Unless the English Company will contribute to the charge both of the fort of Jacatra and the siege of Bantam, they refuse to allow half the pepper in Java and half the trade with the Chinese, who they force to trade at Jacatra. The Pengran of Bantam refuses to come to any agreement, unless the Hollanders demolish their fort at Jacatra, and surrender that country to him, "which may not be granted, having no power of themselves to give over the same." The Netherlanders claim the royalty of Jacatra and all other places they have fortified, and force them to live under their intolerable laws. They are content to accommodate the English in Pulicat and the Moluccas with what conveniency of place they can spare, on paying the moiety of the charges; "but what their performance will be we may partly judge by their usage of us here in Jacatra." Are restrained by the Dutch from building either houses or shipping in Jacatra, as explained in the eighth article, and cannot expect better treatment in any other place of their government. "For the rest of the articles, they offer their conformity, but what they will perform time and experience must manifest." Account of the Dutch forts and factories, seventeen in number, in the Moluccas; their charges there and in the Bandas estimated at 60,000*l.* sterling a year, chiefly caused by maintaining wars against the Portugals in the Moluccas, "from whence comes least or no spices." From Ternate and Tidore, places of great charge, come no cloves at all, the Dutch not daring to look over the walls of their forts at Tidore, yet keep the same to prevent the Spaniard from fortifying there. In time of peace the Ternatans are so beset with the Spanish forces and "Tidoresees," their mortal enemies, that the cloves rot in the ground for want of people to gather them. Motir yields a very small quantity. Machian

only two hundred baharrs per annum; Bachian, for want of people, not above forty baharrs yearly, but Amboyna and the factories adjoining Ceram yield upwards of 1,000 baharrs, and are places of the least charge, and greatest benefit in putting off our goods. The fort in Amboyna, the seat of the Dutch governor of the Moluccas and Banda, who is the second man in place in all India. Advantages of driving the Spaniard from these places. Trade of the Netherlands at Banda. Those of Lantar formerly proffered trade to the English nation, and surrendered one of their towns, as the inhabitants of Rossingham [Rosingyn] did their island, "but how they will now stand affected unto us, being in friendship with the Hollanders, we may well doubt." The islanders report that Lantar yields yearly 400 tons of spices, Pooloroon thirty tons, Neira 40 tons, Rosingyn 40 tons, and Pooloway eighty or ninety tons. The Bandanese, generally a people no way to be trusted. Certify to the grievances and wrongs already received from the Hollanders; like to be worse, unless prevented at home. No man dare work for us for fear of the Netherlands. The Chinese, seeing this, use us at their pleasure, and make us pay treble, to the scandal of our nation. Particulars in which these wrongs "more plainly appear." Wm. Clarke, steward of the English house, whipped on the naked back by the Dutch in the market place, "cruelly cutting his flesh, and then washed him with salt and vinegar, and laid him again in irons," until he had paid a fine. Such affronts not received under any heathen. General Coen's remarks on our complaints. The Dutch bailiff makes his benefit by these disorders. Promise of the Dutch to restore Captain Jourdain's papers, but have only received certain old accounts of no importance; the rest they say are sent to Holland. Arrival of the Dutch ship Good Fortune at Jacatra on 17 July; she was fifteen months under way, and lost 101 men. English ships which the Dutch intend to return: the Dragon and Star, at Jacatra; the Bear and Attendance daily expected; the rest in the Moluccas and Japan in the Manilla fleet, two of which are to be set on fire, if occasion require. Insolent carriage of our people on shore; in daily mutiny for their victuals, and never contented. Exceeding want of all kinds of provisions. No place on the island of Java yields pepper but Bantam. All nations restrained from having trade with Bantam while the war lasts. Beseech the Company that some order may be taken to abate the Hollanders' insolence, and conditions sent how far their power may stretch, "for as long as they domineer over us we cannot perform our business, nor will the people of these parts respect us." 885. Viscount Doncaster to Carleton. The Spanish faction earnestly labour to alienate "our great master's" affection from the Dutch, by suggesting how incapable they have made themselves of the favour and protection of all monarchs, and their violent proceedings against his Majesty's subjects in the East Indies. Hopes time will make Englishmen more capable, and free to judge impartially of their friends and foes. [Extract from Domestic Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CXVI., No. 41., Cal. p. 167.]

886. Extract of letter from the Dutch General and the Council of India, brought from Jacatra by the Vrede on her return voyage. Of the subdued English ships, the Dutch have offered to deliver three, the Dragon, Star, and Attendance, with all their munition of war and ship furniture, but with no folk to man them. The English are willing the Dutch should keep them at Jacatra. [Rough draft. Mutilated by damp. One page. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 866.]

888. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Arrival of a pinnace which left Bantam in January last, with news of two ships left at St. Helena richly laden, and that there had been another fight between three Dutch and two English ships, in which the latter were taken, and many English slain, Jourdain, a man of note, among them, and 50 wounded; only 10 Dutch being killed, but many hurt. Sir Thos. Dale dead of sickness. These men say no news of the accord had then arrived. A pinnace of the King of Denmark's fleet taken by the Portugals; the other three Danish ships, with that they took from the French, said to be arrived at Ceylon. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

The Hague. 896. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. As to the States' desire of conjunction of his Majesty's fleet and theirs against the pirates, Carleton informed the States that his Majesty having undertaken the enterprise with the King of Spain, it was not res integra to join with the States, as before, and that they might easily imagine, if they considered the usage his Majesty's subjects had received from the Dutch of late in the East Indies, that he had reason sooner to join with any than with them; nevertheless, if their fleet came thither his Majesty, for his part, would not refuse their help in so good a cause. Answer of the States; and for what had happened in the

Indies it was the fortune of war, and they are sorry for it, as both are weakened thereby, their merchants being by contract to make restitution, as they expect the like from the English Company. The benefit of their conjunction, and their acknowledgments to his Majesty, which, if he had not effected, the Spaniard would have chased both Companies out of the Indies. Carleton's reply; and concerning the proceedings in the East Indies, that his Majesty complained of their prosecuting a war against his subjects when a treaty of accommodation was on foot, and that the States showed that they justified their merchants' doings, and espoused their quarrel, rather than disavow it, for which and many other reasons his Majesty remained very ill satisfied. State for what has happened in the East Indies received this answer, that they are fruits of the seeds sown in the corrupt and confused time of this State, for which the distance of place hath been an impediment to all other remedy than that which is expected and promised of restitution. Oct. 13. 908. Eustace Man to the East India Company. Left the coast Jacatra road (ship Unity?) of England 27 of March. The Bear wilfully lost their company. Mutiny by some "of the baser sort" on board the Unity, on removal of Mourtin to the Exchange. On 24 June their two ships met the Surat fleet in the road of Saldanha, where they found nine Dutch ships bound for Bantam, and the Lion bound for London. On notice that some did purpose to erect a plantation in Saldanha Bay, and that (the English) should be frustrated of watering but by license, it was concluded, on consultation, to entitle his Majesty King, Supreme Head, and Governor of that continent, not as yet inhabited by any Christian Prince. The same was performed 3rd July, with all solemnity, by the English and Dutch, and a mount of stones raised, and called King James' mount, and a small flag deliverd to the natives, which they carefully kept. Arrival of the Bear, 10 July. Capt. Shilling with the Surat fleet sailed 25 July, the Bantam fleet the next day. Anchored in Bantam 30 Sept., "where we found small friendship"; in Jacatra road 2 Oct., where we found the Gift, Globe, Star, and Peppercorn, "who make many exclamations against the Dutch." Capt. Jourdain slain in the Sampson in Patani road by the Dutch. Found Brockedon President, but expects Fursland's coming every day with the Charles, the Ruby, and the Diamond from Acheen. Mourton's factious contention. Five English and five Dutch ships gone to the Manillas; two to Japan; their names. The Dutch overtax them exceedingly in India; they have laid the foundation of a stately, commodious, and, being finished, will be an extraordinary strong castle in Jacatra; the convenience and delightfulness of it is fitting for a Prince. "The dissension and crossings between Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Jourdain hath caused this calamity with the English in India, through their striving for superiority." No store of French cloth sent in the Unity. Their sails splitting in foul weather, were obliged to mend them with your Ipswich canvas, which is very trash. [*One and a half pages. 909. Henry Short and John Cartwright to Sir Thos. Smythe. Left the Cape 26 July, and arrived at Bantam 30 Sept., where they expected to have seen the President, with the rest of the English, but they had left for Jacatra; arrived there 3 Oct. The President has appointed Short for Macassar and Cartwright for Banjermassin; they are to depart within three days. [Half a page. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 898.]

910. Thos. Batten to Francis Sadler, Sec. to the East India Company. His services against the Dutch before "the supposed happy uniting of the two companies." The Dutch have beleaguered Bantam by sea these 16 months; during which time neither they nor the English have had one corn of pepper. The Pengran sticks to his old terms of rendering Jacatra to him, or he will have no trade with them but the sword. "He hath at least ten ships' load of pepper ready, and this opportunity have we lost by joining with the Dutch, with whom he will in no wise have to do." If we fall to blows with the Javas, we have scarce a soldier in India that knows on which shoulder to hang his bandaliers. "The Dutch have glory of all conquests, and keep our necks still under their girdles, who know better how to tyrannise over us than the Moors, which already our experience findeth, and many English, which during the quarrel did but a little envy their pride here, do since the peace hate them most deadly, and would fight with them, they care not on what odds." Capt. Pring gone to Japan; expected here about Christmas. Concerning "that business of my poor untutored son." Wishes he could have written somewhat merrily, "to prevent the extremity of your fits of the gout." Begs him to send to Batten's friend Mr. Blomaley, who is sure to be heard of at his sister's, the wife of Chas. Gregory, next house to the Mermaid in Carter Lane; to Thos. Tottnam and Thos. Howe at the Saracen's Head in Gracious St., from whom he has expected letters, but never received any; also to give Sir Thos. Roe thanks for his favours on the writer's behalf. Commendations to his bedfellow, Mr. Marshall, Atkinson, Capper, Whitehead and his wife, Geynsford, &c. [Two pages. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 899.]

911. Edward Meade, John Goninge, Wm. Moore, and Thos. Johnson to the East India Company. The letters left by Jefferies at the Cape could not be found, the stone having been defaced or removed; but now Capts. FitzHerbert and Shilling together have made choice of some other place, without acquainting the factors therewith, for what reason they know not. Account of their voyage (in the Sampson); made the land of Java 17 Sept. The Unity appointed to speak with the Dutch, who declared they continued at war with the Pengran of Bantam. Removal of the English factory to Jacatra, where the Exchange and Unity arrived 2 Oct. present; the Bear and Bee arrived 10 Oct. Henry Covert, servant to Mr. Sheres, the cause of much contention; Fitzherbert loses the love of the men in giving way to Covert's insolencies. Complaints of provisions and ships' stores. The Company's Bantam ships ill provided with necessaries. The surgeons' mates in the fleet, and the master surgeon in the Bear, good for nothing; neither understand anything belonging to surgery. Woodall wrongs the Company by entertaining insufficient men, never trained up in that faculty, who affirm they are bound to give him two thirds of their wages. [*Two pages and a quarter. 914. "Brief contents of the President and Council's letter from Jacatra [to the East India Company]. Murder of Geo. Cokayne coming from Succadana and of eleven men in Cheribon. Our people refuse to accept the Dragon, because the Dutch had lamed her by misuse; the Bear burnt in satisfaction of their galley. The Attendance demanded, but it was answered she was employed in the joint service at Bantam, and could not be recalled. Account of the Hollanders' abuses and misuse of the English. Their boats and people searched by the Dutch officers, and fined and imprisoned for every trifle. All strangers in fear of trading with the English until the Dutch be served. Our own people disorderly, and will not be conformable, without absolute authority be given to the Company's President. Complaint of the want of factors, ships' provisions, &c. [One page. O.C. Vol. VII., No. 901.]

915. John Bickell to Sir Thos. Smythe. Arrived at Acheen from Surat 24 April, left Acheen 23 July, and arrived at Bantam 14 Oct., leaving on the 16th for Jacatra. Sends this by a Holland ship which he met with half-way. Great mortality at Acheen; death of Man, his vice-admiral; Hugh Goulde, his chief mate; and his chief merchant, Edward Howe; and divers others. The Peppercorn and Star at Bantam; the Royal James gone to Japan; Capt. Adames with a fleet to the Manilla; and Capt. Fitzherbert at Jacatra, where Bickell hopes to be very shortly. [*One page. O.C. 916. Rich. Cocks to Edm. Sayer in Nangasaki, by our friend John Hawley. Complains of the prices of goods sent to him. Capt. Adames sends empty cask in this bark with a cooper. Robt. Hawley goes with him, but is to return. The James, Moon, Bull, and all the fleet ready to take in their provisions. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 903.]

Patani.

917. John Farye to Edward Longe at Judea in Siam. Commendations to John Doode, Wallis, and Edward Barrett. The Unicorn cast away on the coast of China; the men saved, and, through the favour of the Chinese, allowed to buy some small junks in which they were shipped. It is reported a place where the Company may settle a factory to their great profit. One of the junks has arrived in Patani with 50 Englishmen, and the other is thought to have been taken by the Portugals. The Unicorn cast away in the most wild hurricane ever felt, and all the sailors blown away. God knows what has become of the Great James. The galley, with 20 Englishmen in her, and Thos. Addyson, all perished in the sea. The Clove has left. The Englishmen who arrived entertained by Jourdain in the house at Patani. Wolman sent for Jambi with 13 or 14 Englishmen in her; his slanderers of Longe, "according to his old accustomed use." [*One page. Indorsed, "Received per the Fox of the Dutch, 11 January 1620(-1.)" 923. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. His Majesty's letters presented to the States General by Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott, and both from the Prince of Orange and the States they will have express letters to the Directors of the Dutch East India Company, with special recommendation of expedition. To this Carleton moved them in regard of the preparations now making in Portugal for a voyage to the East Indies in January next, and that the English deputies might be back with the Company by that time so that their preparations might go on accordingly. 924. Petition of Thos. Barwicke, prisoner in the Marshalsea, to the Privy Council. By unjust and untrue informations his worthy masters the East India Company were drawn to have the petitioner committed to Newgate, and then to the Marshalsea, where he hath remained upwards of three months, to the utter undoing of himself, his wife and children, having lost all his estate by the Flemings in the Indies. His answers to all things objected against him show the petitioner does not deserve the heinous aspersions that his enemies have cast upon him. Prays for his release. [*Domestic Corresp. Jac. - Dec. 2.
Surat. 926. Joseph Hopkinson to John Banggam at Agra or elsewhere. His from Lahore of 26 Aug. received 20 Nov. Four English ships have arrived for this place and Persia, the London, Hart, Roebuck, and Eagle, Capt Shilling commander; and Darrell, Tomson, Offley, and Clarke factors. They came from the Cape in company with the Exchange, Bear, and Unity, Capt. Fitzherbert commander, now gone for Bantam, and to be chief at sea. Capt. Pring going home. Capt. Fitzherbert proclaimed our king, King of Saldanha; raised a great mount there, and named it King James his mount. The Hart and Eagle dispersed for Persia, whither they were expressly consigned by the Company. Sir Thos. Roe, it seemed, made the Company believe all the Portugals in India were dead. Has certain advice of four galleons, men-of-war, riding about Ormuz, waiting for our ships at Jask. Has heard of the 2,000*l.* gratuity, and 200*l.* a year. pension granted to Sir Thos. Roe by the Company. Thinks if some of their returning officers were made committees their business would be better ordered. Mr. Treasurer Harrison died of a short sickness a little before this fleet came away; who succeeds him is not known. The Anne was cast away a little beyond Gravesend in the Thames, to the endangering of the river and her own ruin; hears nothing in her can be saved. She was to have gone for Bantam with Capt. Towerson, commander. The little Rose, in her passage home, had eight or nine men slain at the Cape by the savages. The lesser James was forced into Scilly. News from Persia of the death of Barker the elder; no silk had then been provided, but they doubted not to make good returns this year. The Palsgrave and his wife are crowned King and Queen of Bohemia, and have besieged the Emperor's forts in his chief city of Bohemia. His salary. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 907.]
- Dec. 6.
[Firando.] 927. Capt. Robt. Adames to the East India Company. Journal of his voyage in the Bull from the Cape to Bantam. Anchored 14 March last under one of the salt islands, where he found the Dutch fleet of 12 ships; on the 17th, in Jacatra road; and 4 April in Bantam road, to see if he could get any news from the English, but could speak to none of them; fell in with the English fleet of 11 ships the day after leaving Bantam, on the 8 April. Arrived at Jacatra road 19 May. Was removed by the President and Council of Defence from the Bull to the Moon, "although unworthy and unwilling to take so great a business upon me." Departure of English and Dutch ships for Japan 21 May; also of the Moon and Palsgrave with two Dutch ships, 4 June, from Jacatra. Capture of a Portugal frigate; her best goods 36 bales of raw silk. Arrival at Firando. Clevenger and Cockram embarked on 31 August for Miako. Particulars concerning the English fleet, repairs, &c. A China junk taken belonging to

Macao, let go with a pass, but neglecting to show it was by the next ships pillaged and set on fire by mischance, when 30 Chinese, 8 English men from the Bull, and one or two Dutchmen, were burnt. On showing their pass all their things were restored to them. It is feared the Hope sent to Patani, and which should have returned to Firando, is lost. "This port of Firando is a second 'Sodomy'; there is never a house in the town but the basest fellow in the fleet may have wine and a 'hoore;' if they have it not in the house to fit their turn they will send for it out of doors. We have so much favor with the King that they shall not trust our men further than their money reacheth unto, yet they will let them have drink and 'hoores' so long as they think their clothes are worth it, and then the Japans will strip them naked, and turn them out of doors. More, when the women have children here, if they will keep them alive they may, if they will kill them they may." They are to set sail from hence 1 January. Have been at very great charges; he knows not how they should have done if Capt. Cocks' credit had not been good. Have sold no commodities; their factories unprovided of all things. The Dutch had all things in store, and they are much beholden to them. [Two pages and a half. Indorsed, "Received 19 Sept. 1621 by the James Royal." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 908.]

928. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Names of the States' ambassadors to France, and of the six ambassadors to his Majesty, viz.: Benthussen, of the nobility of Holland; Camerleng, secretary of Delft; Brunings, secretary of Enchusen; Zonck, burgomaster of Horne; Scot, burgomaster of Middelburg; and Vervon, deputy in the States General for Friesland. The increase in the number proceeds from the multitude and rarity of affairs. Scot of Zealand the soul of this great body, a man of most quickness and ability and of good reputation for sincerity. Their instructions not yet framed, but they expect to be in France and England about Christmas. Incloses translation of Sir Dudley Diggs and Mr. Abbott's letters from the States; they have entered into their business, but the several chambers of these East India merchants are not assembled. Incloses, 928. 1. The States General to the seventeen Directors of the East India Company at Amsterdam. By Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott, two qualified persons deputed by the English East India Company, they will understand how seriously his Majesty requires and recommends the accommodation of the differences between the two Companies concerning the restoring of certain goods taken in the Indies from the English, and brought to Amsterdam. Earnestly request that they will friendly entertain the English deputies, and so treat with them that the differences may be composed, and his Majesty see with what good affection his counsel and recommendations are embraced, which will also be very agreeable to the States General, and on which they rely. The Hague, 1620 Nov. $\frac{19}{9}$. [One page and a half. Translated out of the Nether Dutch, and indorsed by Bradshaw. Holland Corresp.]

Firando.

929. W. Eaton to the East India Company. His last was of the 10 March last by the Godspeed for Bantam by Edm. Sayer. The James Royal, Capt. Pring, arrived at Firando 23 July, from whom they heard of the peace with the Hollanders, "which was welcome news unto us that live here." Capt. Adames arrived in the Moon 25 July, and Edmund Lennis in the Elizabeth; Capt. Charles Clevenger in the Palsgrave on 5 Aug., and John Munden in the Bull on the 7th, but with never a mast standing. Goods received from the several ships, including cloths, pepper, lead, silk, and six chests of ryals. The Unicorn and a small pinnace it is feared are cast away, as also the Hope, laden with provisions. Names of ships sent to the Manillas. A frigate taken by the Elizabeth belonging to Spaniards and Japonners; doubtful whether the Emperor will permit it to be lawful prize, part belonging to his subjects. Her cargo sequestered by the King of Firando until the Emperor's pleasure be known. Chas. Clevenger and Joseph Cockram and two Dutch gone to the Emperor about it. Account of goods sold, and the prices, and those which should be supplied. [Three pages. Indorsed, "Received 19 Sept. 1621 by the Royal James." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 910.]

930. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. His last was from Nangasaki of 10 March last by the Godspeed, to seek out the English fleet at Bantam or elsewhere, but was forced to return through stormy weather. Ships arrived in Japan this year. The Royal James the first with news of the peace, "God be praised for it, and God grant the Dutch may as firmly follow the orders prescribed as I make no doubt the English will do, and then there will no occasion of discontent be offered hereafter." The Moon came next, Capt. Robt. Adames, commander and admiral.; the Palsgrave, Chas. Clevenger capt.; the Elizabeth, Edmond Lennis capt.; the Bull, John Munden, capt. Knows not what has become of the Unicorn and Hope, except they be returned to Patani or Jacatra. List of Dutch ships arrived. Also the Swan, Howdane capt.; and the Expedition cast away in this port at anchor in a great storm, and not to be recovered. How all this shipping was disposed of. Commodities received from the ships, and what have been sold. Might have sold much more broad cloth, but most part of the store was burnt in the city of Miako last year, when 5,000 or 6,000 houses were also burnt. Verily thinks it will cost the Company ten thousand pounds sterling, to set forth the five ships above named. No man dare buy the lead but the Emperor, and his Council set the price from time to time as they please. Capt. Clevenger and Joseph Cockram, with two Dutchmen, sent to the Emperor's court with presents; understands they are friendly entertained, but stay longer for their dispatch than they thought of, because of the taking of a frigate wherein were Portugals, Spaniards, and Japons, and two seminary priests or Jesuits, people defended from coming into Japan. Knows not whether the Emperor will let them have it for good prize till their men return from Yedo. Hoped to have returned for England this year. Has served the Company ten years, and wishes to return to his own country. Hopes to do so next year, and to be the bearer of his own books of accounts. Death of Nealson in March last, "being wasted away with a consumption;" also of our good friend Capt. Wm. Addames, 16 May last, who left Eaton and Cocks his overseers, giving half of his estate to his wife and child in England, and the other half to a son and daughter he has in Japan. Copy of his will sent to his wife and daughter by Capt. Pring; "it was not his mind his wife should have all, in regard she might marry another husband, and carry all from his child, but rather that it should be equally parted betwixt them." No order yet come out of China to let them have trade, for that the Hollanders have shut up their trade that few dare look out. John Young, carpenter, formerly a prisoner of the Dutch in the Moluccas, fell overboard on the coast of China and was drowned, 1 April last.

Unruliness of the mariners; six of them run away to the Spaniards and Portugals at Nangasaki, but upon complaint to the justice of the place three of them were recovered. Encounter between Thos. Harod, Thos. Hely, and White, a master's mate, and some fifty Portuguese, when endeavouring to take the escaped English mariners. Harod severely wounded in 15 or 16 places. Cannot but be sorrowful for the loss of such a man as Wm. Addames, who was in such favour with two Emperors of Japan as never was any Christian in these parts of the world, and might freely have entered and had speech with the Emperors, when many Japan kings stood without and could not be permitted. And this Emperor hath confirmed the lordship to his son which the other Emperor gave to the father. Has received two letters this year from Siam; one from Henry Wolman from Bankok, then bound for Patani, the other from Edward Longe from Judea, both advising of letters received from the Company for Cocks, but which have never come to his hands. Death of Geo. Savage on 13 July last, and of Wm. Barret on 31 Aug., both at Judea. Good quantity of gold consigned to Capt. Denton. All the Dabul merchants have left Siam, and mean never to have any more trade to that place, which he says will be a great help to our trade. Strange to see the prices of merchandize so altered since their first arrival in Japan; less than half; the reason. The Emperor has forbidden any more lead to come into Japan till the great quantity brought by them and the Hollanders be spent. Thinks broad cloths, kersies, and perpetuanos will prove the best commodity for Japan. Most part of their baize and yellow broad cloth remaining in the factory delivered to the pursers of the ships, to make apparel for their naked mariners in this cold country, where we have frost and snow already. Quarrel between a nobleman's men and Edmund Sayer; both banished by the King of Firando; yet now all is revoked by the King's order, and Sayer cleared and the others recalled. [*Six pages and a half. Emperor's Court, who have dispatched their business to content. Price the lead is fixed at; the prize frigate referred to the report of the King of Firando whether it shall be found prize or no. So far as Cocks can undertake, our nation is esteemed before the Hollanders, but time will try whether it be so or no. [*Half page. Endorsed. "Received y^e 19 Sept. 1621 by y^e Royal James." 932. Rich. Fursland, Thos. Brockedon, Aug. Spaldinge, and Geo. Muschamp to Wm. Nicolls. Have appointed him chief agent of all the factories (seven in number) in the Moluccas. Desire his especial care and diligence in managing them so that he be not any way circumvented by the Hollanders, who will use all their cunning, and yet keep friendship, as we must likewise. John Gunninge is appointed chief of the factory next to Nicolls, Michael Hollman principal of the third, John Cooper, Anthony Wallis, Phillipp Harryson and Thomas Johnson, prime men of the other four factories. Pery to remain with Nicolls as his second. John Dent, Richard Crofte, Giles Cole, Ralph Cartwright, Andrew Weekes, and Robt. Mould to be assistants. To take in provisions at Macassar. All speed to be used to get to Amboyna before or as soon as the Hollanders. Have also appointed Rich. Welden to go in the Ruby, because his acquaintance with the King may much further the Company's affairs, to be next to Staverton at Macassar, and second to Courthopp at Banda; and he may go into the Star on her arrival. Have laden in this ship (the Ruby) a cargo in money and commodities. He will receive further advice and directions by the Royal Exchange and Star, until the arrival of which he shall remain at Macassar. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 914.]

933. Henry Bate to the East India Company. At the departure of the Rose he was appointed by Brockedon and the rest to go for Acheen with Wm. Nicolls. Found on his arrival there Richard Fursland, President of India, and with him Daniel White, who succeeded him at Acheen, also Abraham Bond, who died three months since at Tecoe. Informed the King of the Hollanders' insolency in surprising your ships in his roads, to which he answered, Silence. Endeavours to purchase trade at Tecoe and Priaman; 80*l.* bestowed in presents, but the more given the worse he is. "He is so tyrannical and proud, thinks himself the only monarch, and says he will grant no trade to any nation whatsoever, and that if the Hollanders and English take distaste thereat, and intend wars, he will be ready to meet them with his forces, and God to give the victory." No hopes of doing anything by fair means, but easy to be done by force; to have a castle or fort. Cruelties practised by the king of Acheen on his subjects. His forces at sea might be surprised without shedding of blood. Arrival of four English ships at Acheen from Surat 21 April last, also one month after came the Bee from Bantam with news of the peace, the death of Capt. Jourdain, and relation of the Company's heavy losses at Patani, and to fetch Fursland to succeed as president. These five vessels arrived at Jacatra 25 Oct. Complaints of the treatment he has received, and that he has not been allowed to come home to answer scandalous tongues. Has twice been taken prisoner by the Dutch. Arrival of a French ship, the Vice Admiral of St. Malo, poorly manned with 28 persons, and most of them sick; the English and Dutch have agreed to spare them ten men each. It is reported that the Pengran of Bantam destroyeth some of his pepper trees in order to sow rice. Three ships appointed to settle factories to the eastward where the Dutch are. The Exchange for Amboyna, &c., Ruby for the Moluccas, and the Star for Banda. Ships in Jacatra road, the Charles, the unserviceable Gift, Peppercorn, and Bee. [Two pages. Endorsed, "by the Dutch." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 915.]

934. "A relation journalwise which the master and merchant of the White Bear, belonging to the Hollanders, brought home, and delivered for the English Company, 1620." From $\frac{1}{2}$ March, the day the Bull arrived in the East Indies with news of the peace; meeting of General Pring with General Coen, "and there they feasted each other that day; then all the prisoners of each side were set at liberty, and taken again aboard their own ships." Peace proclaimed aboard every ship at the mainmast, with great joy and content to every man on both sides. Movements of the combined fleets. Agreements as to delivering up ships and prisoners. Box of letters brought over, directed to Sir Thos. Smythe and the English Company. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 916.]

Dec. 24. 938. Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott to Carleton. While proceeding hopefully with their business, having despatched one half, concerning the future reglement of the trade of the two Companies, the unlucky news arrived of the arrest of one of the Dutch Company's ships at Plymouth. The strangeness of it is the more, as they have had no advertisement of it. Have laboured to justify their own integrity, and to give assurance that the English Company will give good testimony of being free from suspicion, by procuring the discharge of the ship. Are much ashamed that such an act should have been committed while they were in treaty; it may make their new friends suspect their sincerity, and give the common enemy just occasion to laugh at their conjunction. Have sent an express to the Lord Admiral. The peace is published in the Indies, and it is said that the English and the Dutch have already lovingly given the Portugals a great blow. [Endorsed by Carleton, "Recd. the 26; answered the same day."] Inclose,

938. 1. Sir D. Diggs and M. Abbott to the East India Company. Are much amazed that one of the Dutch East India Company's ships, the White Bear, has been arrested at Plymouth by an old warrant of 30th Sept. Have assured the Dutch Deputies and their own hearts that the English Company had certainly no hand in it, and cannot think the Company would resolve on so unworthy a proceeding to the disgrace of two men that have laboured to deserve well of them, and to the ruin of their own reputation of faith and sincerity. Can think of nothing else till they are relieved of this perplexity, for which cause they have sent an express. [Holland Corresp.]

939. Launcelot Fenwicke, purser's mate of the Exchange, to the East India Company. Movements of Capt. Shilling's fleet, the Hart, Roebuck, and Eagle, and Capt. Fitzherbert's, the Royal Exchange, Unity, and White Bear; on the advice of the Flemings they sailed a more southerly course than any Englishman had gone before, which proved very healthful for the men. The King of Bantam at war with both English and Dutch. Understood from the latter that they had taken some half score of the Company's ships, "which was lamentable news for us to hear." The Dragon and Attendance then at anchor in Bantam Road. Anchored in Jacatra Road on 3rd Oct. Brockedon President there. Arrival of Capt. Bickell with the Charles, Ruby, and Diamond, 18 Oct., and Fursland, who is now President. Capt. Adames with five English ships gone for the Manillas, as also five Dutch ships. Capt. Pring gone for Japara with the James Royal and Unicorn, to be careened. News that the Unicorn has been cast away on the coast of China. Six English ships now in Jacatra Road; three ready to sail for the Moluccas, the Exchange, Ruby, and Star. The Clove expected every day from Jambi with pepper. [*Two pages. 940. Minutes of Consultations by the Council of the Fleet of Defence at Firando and off the Manillas.

Dec. 28.—At Firando. Edmond Lennis to have the chain of gold taken from him on 26th for 100 ryals of eight.

January 2.—At Firando. Touching the course to be taken by the fleet, and the rendezvous in case of being separated by stormy weather.

January 17.—In sight of the coast of Leconia [Lucon or Luzon]. Resolved to go in for the bay of Manilla with the whole fleet to

January 26.—Aboard the Moon. Information from a China junk taken prize, of the strength of the enemy's ships. Resolutions concerning the seizure of Chinese junks in future.

January 30.—Aboard the Palsgrave. Election of two persons to make up the twelve members of the Council for the Fleet, according to instructions from the Council of Defence. Arnold Browne, master of the Palsgrave, chosen on behalf of the English Company. Goods taken by either the English or Dutch ships to be equally divided. The Swan to sail to the northwards by the Bull, and follow the instructions given her.

February 9.—Aboard the Moon. Concerning the possibility of firing the enemy's ships without danger, whosoever would undertake the same to be royally rewarded, "but there was no man found would undertake it." Reasons for not putting their men in danger because it seems a thing impossible to be done. Resolved, having nothing to do here, to set sail for Marevelles.

February 21.—Aboard the Moon, at anchor, under Marevelles. The fleet having been sufficiently wooded and watered, resolved, finding the enemy not to be of so great strength, and that the English are sufficient to keep them in, to guard the bay of Manilla until the last of March, in expectation of falling in with the Spanish ships from the Moluccas and Chinese junks. Half the Chinamen taken in the junk to be set ashore.

March 16.—Aboard the Moon, at anchor, under Marevelles. Resolved to leave the bay, which they have kept seven weeks, and set sail on the 18th, and ply to the northward, to intercept the junks that are likely to go there, the Spaniards keeping a strong watch along the coast to give notice to the junks in that direction.

March 24.—Aboard the Moon. Directions for the disposition of the fleet and the signals to be given in case of meeting with any of the enemy's ships, or with Chinese junks. Touching the firing of a Spanish ship, building in the bay of Pangasenan.

April 3.—Aboard the Bantam, near the bay of Pangasinan. The whole fleet to water in Hartes Bay before leaving the coast of Leconia (Luzon).

April 28.—Aboard the Moon. Resolutions concerning the disposition of the fleet; to lie off and on off Hartes Island and Marevelles as long as wind and weather will permit.

May 17.—Aboard the Moon. Resolution for the whole fleet to go in for the bay of Manilla, having been from thence already two months, and not knowing what forces may have left or arrived.

May 21.—Aboard the Moon, riding at anchor, under Marevelles. The enemy found to be neither stronger nor weaker; resolved that the whole fleet lie off at sea in sight of Marevelles. In regard it would be displeasing to the Emperor to take any Chinese into Japan, and that they are, or may be, the cause of loathsomeness and sickness in breeding diseases, resolved that they be set ashore on Marevelles, and also all others that shall be hereafter taken.

June 17.—Aboard the Moon. Reasons for the resolution “by the plurality of voices” to return to Japan. [Twelve pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 913.]

941. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. Intention of the States concerning the embassies to England and France; to go with expedition, and labour to reconcile differences betwixt the two crowns and this state. Finds in the States and in the merchants themselves a good resolution to give all reasonable contentment in the point of restitution, and to govern themselves in the reglement of trade and mutual defence, according to the agreement between the two companies. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Dec. 29.

942. Brief contents of the President and Council’s letter from Jacatra [to the East India Company]. The Dutch have set tolls upon all commodities in and out of Jacatra, and make the English pay their share, “whereunto our people would not yield.” They deny us the benefit of the labour of the inhabitants of the Moluccas, and are perfidious in all their dealings. Seventeen factories to be settled in the Moluccas. Five ships of each side agreed to be employed there. Construction put by the Dutch on articles of the late treaty; their refusal to let the English participate in trade to the Moluccas, &c.; except on certain conditions which are particularized. “Our people hope you will not put up with such wrongs.” They bring in account of their losses, and demand restitution; the Dutch answer they will do the same, but have referred that business home, thinking there would be no agreement. They demand restitution of the Sampson, but the Dutch say they will keep her for their Black Lion. How and where all the English ships are employed. A principal man to be sent, and to have absolute authority, without which no good is to be done. Want of all kinds of victuals and furniture for factories and ships. Defects found. Both stocks mixed together. Our sea commanders wilful; our common sort insolent—no punishment will reform them but confiscation of wages; the pursers ignorant; are without paper, pen, and ink. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 901.]

943. Capt. Humph. Fitzherbert to the East India Company. What has passed since his arrival belongeth more especially to the President and the rest to relate, having kept his quarter only as a water-bailiff at anchor, to do the Company servile service. The sending him to the Moluccas doth a little trouble him, but shall never discourage him, although others have the better employment. Would write something touching the state of their business in this place, but, alas, being kept in ignorance, he is not able. Concerning the relative positions of the English and Dutch, the advantages acquired here daily by the latter can have no remedy but by the Company’s means at home. A Jesuit in matters of state and such importance will be always too hard for a mere merchant. The Claw left for Japara, Macassar, &c., 24 October; the Diamond and White Bear for Jambi, 6 November; and the Unity for Acheen on 15 November. 945. Carleton to the Marquis of Buckingham. Is desired to write to his Majesty touching the release of a ship newly returned from the East Indies, arrested at Plymouth. Believes there is either some error in the information, or else that order for the arrest might have been given when the complaints of the English merchants were hot and their hopes cold for due restitution. Such an answer Carleton made to the Prince of Orange when he spake upon the first views of this accident. Can assure him there is a settled resolution both in the States, in his Excellency, and in the merchants themselves, punctually to observe the accord of the conjunction of the two companies. Sir Dudley Diggs and M. Abbott interrupted in their treaty until news of the release of the ship is heard. Requests to know the King's resolution therein. [One page and a half. Holland Corresp.]

946. Carleton to Sec. Naunton. The delay in the final dispatch of the Dutch embassy hath not proceeded out of artifice or design, but of natural causes; conceives it will be 10 or 12 days before they set forward. Concerning the complaint of the arrest of the Dutch East Indian ship at Plymouth; the sincerity of his Majesty's intention suspected, and the accord interrupted, which is ascribed here to his Majesty with so much thankfulness as his own work. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

947. Thos. Batten to Francis Sadler, at Sir Thos. Smythe's house in Philpot Lane. Fletcher's account. Has importuned the President for a guard of 550 soldiers to defend the merchants and Company's goods here, but cannot prevail, so must be content with some 30. His wages. The Unicorn, which left the Royal James in a cruel storm, cast away upon the coast of China. Capt. Fitzherbert sailed in the Exchange this day for Amboyna and the Moluccas with the Star and Roebuck, the Ruby having sailed eight days before for Macassar, there to wait for the rest. The Dutch general bound forthwith for the Moluccas with some eight or nine ships and many soldiers. Our building here is pretty well finished. The Pengran of Bantam stands out, and scorns to be treated with. A Portugal frigate lately stolen in full of men, notwithstanding the Hollanders have lately taken a galleon wherein are 30 pieces of brass ordnance. Two French ships in Jacatra Road, and the third at Tecoe; thinks they will make but a cold voyage of it. Wonders he has had no letters, especially from Mr. Bromley, Thos. Howe, of Sudbury, and Thos. Tottnam, of Halstead. Remembrances to Marshall, Atkinson, and Cappar. [One page and a half. Endorsed, "Received in the Company's packet out of Holland, 23 July 1621." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 922.]

1620.

948. Narrative by Bartholomew Churchman of the injuries received by the English Company from the Dutch in Java and adjacent seas. Has been full sixteen years servant to the Company. In 1618 was surprised by the Hollanders, and by them kept prisoner two years and six days, till 1620, during which time he noticed divers of their proceedings, which on his life and oath he will always vouch to be true. First, Sir Thos. Dale's best ship was cast away on Engano, when he was not aboard, and most of his men perished. News received on Dale's arriving at Bantam with the residue of his fleet about the latter end of 1618, where he found Capt. Pring, of the taking of four English ships at the Moluccas by the Hollanders, with the battering of the English houses at Jacatra and other places. Arrival, soon afterwards, at Bantam, of the Dutch Black Lion from Patani; resolved, for the redress of their wrongs, to surprise her upon any reasonable terms without fighting, which was done without abusing or taking a penny from any man. Dale sailed after this to Jacatra to meet the Dutch general and either compound their differences or fight; "and fight they did; the Dutch finding themselves too weak in fight, but stronger in legs, fled away to the Moluccas." Rendezvous of the Dutch fleet at Gressic on the coast of Java, where they stayed until 10 May, when they were 18 ships. Their arrival at Japara 13 May, where the Dutch general landed with all his forces, burnt the town and the English house, taking down the English colours, "which they abused in such base fashion, as is not fit here to be expressed." Went to Jacatra 18 May; secretly landed his men in the night, getting them into the Dutch castle; from whence, on the 20th, they sallied out, beat the Javas from their ordnance, fired the town, and became masters of it. They then sailed for Bantam with the full determination to fight with the English there and redeem their 70 men in the hands of the Pengran, but found the English ships gone and all the Englishmen, except four or five poor men, only left to keep the house there. The Pengran struck with such terror that had the Dutch landed they had clearly carried the town. The prisoners and goods sent aboard the Dutch fleet, which were then employed to cut wood, fetch stones, make lime kilns and lime for the strong building of their castle at Jacatra. Hearing that Capt. Jourdain had left with the Sampson and Hound, the Dutch general, with four well-appointed ships, went in search, and finding them at Patani, fought with them 17 July (1619), slew Capt. Jourdain and a great many men, turned the residue of the poor, sick, and wounded naked ashore, reserving the masters and their mates, the carpenters, and other chief men, some to employ in their works, others for their triumph and glory. About the latter end of July, hearing two English ships, the Bear and the Star, were at the Cape, bound for Bantam, with a strong force of seven ships, the Dutch general surprised the Star, and on 1st October following, with another fleet of six ships, fought with the Dragon and other ships at Tiku, took them, slew Capt. Robert Bonner, and turned the men ashore naked and wounded among the infidels. The Dutch general's demands of the Pengran refused, who said it was not the English he feared, but those who came like thieves and pirates to rob him and take his country from him, and that he would keep his town seven years for the English, hoping in that time they would master the Dutch; so about 4 January (1620) he departed, having once more disposed of his fleet. Thus they (the Dutch) continued without beleaguering Bantam until 14 March (1620), when Capt. Adams arrived in the Bull with the orders of peace. Would speak of the charges the Dutch were at after the peace for maintaining prowess for beleaguering Bantam. Declares the English had never a penny profit of any Java prow. Encouragements held out by the Dutch to their men; for every living Java twenty ryals of eight; for the head of every one slain in fight ten ryals of eight. No reason why any satisfaction should be allowed the Dutch for their prowess, they having much goods from the Javas by them, and the English none, "all which I speak upon woeful experience during my time of captivity with them." The Dutch seek the utter destruction of the English, their shipping, and whole trade in the Indies, intending wholly to engross it into their own hands. Has related briefly what to his certain knowledge he could speak of, being himself present from 1618 to the latter end of 1620, and is ready to confirm this writing by oath. [*Three pages. 951. Dutch translation of the French informations touching the differences betwixt our men and the Hollanders in the East Indies. [Endorsed by Carleton. One page and a quarter. Holland Corresp.]

1620? 952. Particulars of what Thos. Vaughan learned from the examination of upwards of forty persons on board the ship which Sir Thos. Roe came home in, relating to the taking of a Portugal prize of 200 tons, laden at Mozambique with gold, ambergris, elephants' teeth, &c., valued at 30,000*l.* [Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CXVIII., No. 136, Cal., p. 210.]

1620? 953. Articles of agreement drawn up by the Council of Defence at Jacatra for trade in the Moluccas, Amboyna, and Banda. Signed by Rich. Fursland, Thos. Brockedon, Aug. Spaldinge, and George Muschamp for the English, and by J. P. Coen, Fred. Houtman, Carpentier, and Dedell for the Hollanders. [Four pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 945.]

Hague.

954. Sir Dudley Carleton to [John Chamberlain]. We are here very glad to hear that the accord betwixt the two East India Companies is so well received in the East Indies, the news whereof came very opportunely for Sir Dudley Diggs and Mr. Abbot's despatch, which would have been seen by good effects if it had not been accompanied with the stay of the ship at Plymouth, of the release of which he would be glad to hear for many good respects more than that of trade only, which, notwithstanding now the agreement is made, may be of great use to both nations. Has written to my Lord Admiral and Secretary Naunton at the request of the States and this Company touching this ship. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Amsterdam.

955. Sir Dudley Diggs to Sir Dudley Carleton. They are assured by letters from the Company, from Sir Thos. Smythe and many particular friends, that this arrest went without their knowledge (see ante, No. 938), which the copy of [Sir James] Bagg, of Plymouth, his letter, who executed the warrant, plainly shows to be true; besides the last of their letters shows that that day the Company had petitioned for her discharge. They have already remonstrated, and might have passed over this business in a shuffling manner, but he came on purpose hither to settle firm friendship, and take away the jealousy or advantage of this suspicious cunning people. Has again written; these men's grounds are but inferences and conjectures, or advertisements, nothing so direct as ours. The truth is they have written plainly to my Lord Admiral. Is advised secretly that Levinus Muncke gave counsel for this proceeding to the end that the Company might know nothing, and so be suitors for discharge of the ship, to oblige these here to believe in their friendship and sincerity, and to show them and this state the advantage the King hath of their returning single weak ships. The folly of such a proceeding, especially with a crafty jealous nation. Will omit no good office to settle the friendship of these Companies by accommodating the performance of the treaty sincerely, or go away satisfied that these men mean not well. The accord was received with great content of the two nations in the East Indies, by the happy arrival of our Bull, which prevented a bloody encounter between 11 of our best ships and 17 of the Dutch. The malice of them of Bantam to the Dutch hath made them since the union of the Companies deny trade to the English, though they admit them on land, who labour in vain for the peace of the Dutch. They have chosen the Council of War, and sent five apiece of the greatest ships to the Manillas; our Palsgrave was Admiral. Both nations glad of peace; were almost ruined by war. Doubts not many errors will be mended when the restitution is once accommodated here. Is no merchant, but want of other business has made him spend much time in this East India affair. [Extracts from Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 4.

956. Notes by [Secretary Calvert]. The States Commissioners to attend the Lords on Jan. [?Feb.] 5, at two o'clock, to receive their proposition, and report to the King, who will thereupon appoint commissioners to treat with them. The date is most probably a mistake for February 4th. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CXIX., No. 7, Cal., p. 212.]

Jan. 6.
Amsterdam.

957. Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott to Sir Dudley Carleton. Have laboured all they can to clear these men's jealousies about their ship, staying the pressing of restitution, as they have told them, till their ship might be out of doubt. Delay in the point of restitution; the Dutch purpose to break up on the 17th, and, with some colourable slight deputation, linger them on in an idle treaty. Request his help with a letter from the States to will those men to enter into the treaty about the restitution, and if they think fit to depute some to treat with us. Diggs finds there is no good meaning in them in performance of the treaty, and they have proposed some new things dangerous to the English and contrary to the very treaty. Beg him to help them to prevent a trick and much loss of time. [Holland Correspondence.]

958. Rich. Marshe to Edward Nicholas. Account of the election of Sir Edwyn Sandys for Sandwich; "the East Indies Company was a pernicious matter to them and the whole kingdom, and he is against that (as he said)." [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CXIX., No. 11, Cal., p. 212.]

Jan. 9.
Amsterdam.

959. Sir Dudley Diggs to Sir Dudley Carleton. After their letter of the 6th they were invited to that feast, which was intended for these men's parting feast, as they know by some of the 17 themselves, but their taking it ill altered their (the Hollanders') purpose, for on Monday they were assured that though some went away, yet new should return, and the power continue to treat, but at this instant Mr. Secretary comes to tell him that their appointed meeting cannot be held, because he is sent for to the Hague about our conference, "so that which should have been our spur is our hinderance." Told him a truth that out of England our masters wonder they have done nothing in the restitution. Begg him say nothing of their discontent unless there be cause. [Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 10.
Amsterdam.

960. Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott to Sir Dudley Carleton. They have also received notice from England that the Dutch General in the Indies hath proceeded very falsely in the execution of the treaty to the great discontent of our people, that think he durst not contradict the accord without encouragement and underhand directions from hence. Know the mayors here have kept these things from them, and shall now be forced roundly to remonstrate with them, and if they do not give speedy satisfaction must appeal to the States. Await the return of the (Dutch) Secretary; if Carleton think fit, they will wait for him at the Hague. "Let this ill proceeding in the Indies be urged home to Boreel, the secretary, which you may take on you to receive from England, for we have yet said nothing of it to these men." [Holland Correspondence.]

Jan. 13.
Amsterdam.

961. Sir Dudley Digges to Sir Dudley Carleton. Difficulties in treating "with a people full of cunning delays, and such as make no conscience of denying truths and speaking falsehoods for their advantage." Excuses for not sending larger information of their Indian news; it came after young Boreel the advocate had departed. He has untruly informed Carleton "that we have had from them more than we looked for;" have nothing but some provisional articles by way of project yet unsigned, for better regulating the East India trade for the good of the two Companies, which at the entreaty of the Dutch they have first proceeded in. Since they make so ill use of our sincerity in treating with them, are resolved to let them know we value this project as little as they can. Concerning the restitution, "a word of great and dangerous extent," the articles only in general terms. The truth is, "and the crafty young Armenian knew it," that by our Indian letters, which the Dutch captain would have denied (he had), General Coen very plainly refused to restore our ships and goods, and to publish the treaty anywhere save when it served for his advantage and to our hindrance; the reasons he gave, "which our men discreetly obeyed," that those sent by the English Bull were copies. How Coen is excused here; "it was Coen's error, for want of the hands of all the Chambers," so that "you see in what case we stand for all his smooth tale." Is confident they will not have reason until they come to the Hague before the States or some deputies who with Carleton shall hear and consider their arguments. As directed from England, have remonstrated against their servants' faults, which they confess they knew before. Have demanded that the damage the English shall sustain, by want of performance of the treaty in the Indies, these men will satisfy, yet they oppugn it with much wrangling, "but we have given it in writing and expect their resolute answer on Monday." They talk much of the arrest which my Lord Admiral sends word was made by the King's direction, and so discharged upon Caron's assurance of the peace in the Indies, and the Company purpose here to give us satisfaction. Sends his love to the honest Sir Thos. Gates. [Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 18.
Hague.

962. Sir Dudley Carleton to 'John Chamberlain. The business of the East Indies is removed from Amsterdam, where merchants cannot agree about Meum and Tuum, to this place, where Sir Dudley Digges is already, and he hath sent for his colleague. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Jan. 20.
Firando.

963. Rich. Cocks to the East India Company. Sends copy of his letter by the James Royal, which left Firando for Bantam 17th Dec. last; the rest of the fleet, English and Dutch, departed towards the Manillas 3rd of this present. The Emperor's officers will not take the lead at what it was priced by the Emperor's Council at Yedo. Has been obliged to take up 1,150 taies Japan plate, at two per cent. interest per month, but doubts it will suffice, for they can make no money either of their lead or silk. No orders yet received from the Emperor to the King of Firando about allowing the frigate for prize, although a man has been kept at his court ever since Capt. Clevenger and Cockram returned from thence. Is informed by a messenger they sent to China, that the old Emperor hath resigned the government to one of his sons, and that the new Emperor hath granted the English nation trade into China for two ships a year, the place appointed near to Fuckchew (? Fou-chow), and there wanted but the "fermes" (? firmans) of two Viceroy's of two provinces to confirm it, and that the goshon or passport will be sent the English next monsoon. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 924.]

Jan. 23.
Hague.

964. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Our two deputies for the East India Company, Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott, have two points to handle (one concerning the reglement of trade, the other restitution); for the first they are at good agreement with these men, but for the latter they find that the question of Meum and Tuum is impossible to be decided with merchants at Amsterdam, wherefore they desired him to procure the cause to be removed hither before the States, which he has accordingly done, and here they are more like to make a good end in their business, notwithstanding that the arrest of the ship at Plymouth is a shrewd rub in their way, for these men are of a repugnant nature; they may be led, not driven. Understands the ship is released, but withal that there is one of these East Indian ships cast away about Guernsey or Jersey, and if it should happen to be that which was arrested, it would fall out most unlucky to the business, wherein these deputies have (according to the order they brought him from the King) his best assistance. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Jan. 30.

965. "Points whereupon his Majesty doth declare himself touching the East India business;" also touching Greenland and the fishing in general. Those concerning the East Indies are comprised in nine articles. Liberty is given to both English and Dutch Companies to erect forts in all places in the Indies, provided they are not within ten leagues one of another, saving in the Moluccas, Banda, and Amboyna; to the English merchants to build a residence for the Council of Defence; the States to demolish any forts in the Moluccas, Banda, and Amboyna built since the treaty; the employment of the ten ships; the punishment of offenders; the pretences of sovereignty; the payment and victualling of the garrisons; the insolence of the Dutch governors and ministers; the choice of discreet persons to carry on the trade in the Indies. [Three pages. East Indies, Vol. I., No. 83.]

967. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. Has been to Nangasaki to take up more money at interest to clear the accounts of provisions in setting out the fleet, and taken up 14,500 taies at two per cent. per month. Cannot yet get the Emperor's governor at Nangasaki to take their lead as the Emperor's Council ordained, neither have they yet an answer whether the frigate their ship took coming from the Manillas will be granted for good prize or no ; "no trusting to the promises of these barbarous people, be they never so fair or the personages which promise never so great, for they will promise to-day and deny it to-morrow, as I myself have found by experience." If God permit them free trade into China, they may in time frustrate the designs of the Spaniards and Portugals, "who want not to cross our proceeding in all they may, both with great bribes and treacherous plots ; . . . only their angling with golden hooks maketh matters as yet to stand at a stay, and our givings the greater than otherwise it would be, for here is nothing to be had but for what will you give me." Sends copy of the value or taxation of the Swan made by the Hollanders. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 925.]

Jan. 31.
Patani.

968. John Jourdain to Edward Long in Siam. Much marvels that there should be so many complaints of him, as he understands not only from the Company's servants, but from the blacks where they live, "which is a great shame for our nation." Wishes him to carry himself in better fashion towards the people, and to agree better with his second and third man. To send in future copies of letters he receives from any factories, that their president at Jacatra may be advertised. Complaints of John Dodde (his second) ; remarks thereon. Is told he has paid less than he writes for freight ; "if it should be so, you will reap unto yourself great disgrace." Demands of the Dutch. [Two pages. Endorsed, "Rec. 20 Feby. 1620-1." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 926.]

Feb. 5.
Hague.

969. Sir Dudley Carleton to [Sec. Sir Geo. Calvert]. His Majesty will understand what is here passed in the business of the East Indies by the report of Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott, who return with this full satisfaction, that for the generality of the accord it will be here both by the States and the merchants religiously observed, as he firmly believes. In particular disputes, which could not be avoided, and which, with much diligence and dexterity, they have gone through, they have had his best assistance in company of three deputies of the States General. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Feb. 5.
Hague.

970. Sir Dudley Carleton to the East India Company. Has yielded his best furtherance to their deputies, Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott, in presenting them to the States General and the Prince of Orange, and assisting them at their meetings with three deputies of the States. Refers to their report for "what is resolved for the present," and must give true testimony of their endeavours that they have omitted nothing which might tend to the Company's advantage. Makes this judgment that there is here both in the States themselves, and likewise in the Company, a true intention and settled resolution to perform the treaty. Makes no doubt but the fruits which they will mutually reap will sweeten the distastes of all former contention and turn to both your assured benefit. [Holland Correspondence.]

Feb. 10.
Firando.

971. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. Arrival of Conrok Dono, governor of Nangasaki and Bongo, for the Emperor of Japan in these parts, who has orders to set the price of their lead "as it thinketh him good, . . . lead being a commodity that none can buy but the Emperor only." Has done what he could to have the price set at five taies the pecul, as the Emperor's Council "consented it should be," and is of opinion "it might have been ended now had not one Hollander prevented me." To send some red cloth for the Emperor; "they stand not upon the fineness nor goodness of the broadcloth so it be red, neither of the colour, whether it be Venice red or stammel." The price of broadcloths risen by reason of the burning of the great city of Miako." [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 927.]

Feb. 10.

972. Certificate signed by William Baffin, master of the London, John Woolhouse, and Bartholomew Symonds, surgeon, that Edward Monox did, on the 22 Dec. last, publicly pronounce aboard the London in Jask Road, that Jeffries should not leave the ship, for that he did commit him there prisoner for the King. With mem. by Jeffries: That he could have had forty witnesses more, but excused them, for Monox spake it first in the great cabin and afterwards upon the half-deck, working Jeffries' disesteem among strangers to publish his disgrace so much as possibly he could. "God pardon him; his practices have been foolish and infernal, from whom the Lord will deliver." [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 928.]

Feb. 14.
Patani.

973. John Jourdain and William Webb to Edward Longe at Siam. They "part in halves" with the Dutch, and hope he will likewise, although he has no money at present; they have but little, but hope to be better supplied this year. They are not "earnest for their money" in Patani. Within two or three months some shipping will arrive with money to supply the factories. Those Netherlanders are everywhere in their factories. Beg him see to the Dutch that they part not the better half unto themselves, for they will overreach him if possible; hope they will be caught in their own knaveries. [One page. Endorsed, "Received 4 March 1621." O.C., Vol. VII., No. 929.]

Feb. 15.

974. Sir Dudley Digges and Morris Abbott to Sir Dudley Carleton. With much haste and an ill journey they got in good time to London to the happiest day they ever saw in Parliament, the confirmation of two subsidies to his Majesty as a free gift. Complain that clean contrary to the fair show of good meaning that was made before him and the States deputies on Sunday before their departure, and to the promise given to write good letters into the Indies and to sweeten the English Company with good answers to the complaints sent out of the Indies, young Boreel, in the name of the Company, brought a sealed letter and a copy in Dutch, as also several papers of answers to their complaints, with a provisional project of liquidation contrary to that signed by them, so strange when they came to be examined as gave infinite and just cause of discontent to the Company and much disgraced themselves, that had laboured to do good offices and to assure our men that they meant well; "such base usage we deserved not of them." Were commanded to relate to his Majesty their service, which they did in the bedchamber, Lord of Arundel, Lord Digby, Lord Kelby, Sec. Calvert, and the Marquis being present. The King was much offended, and particularly with Carleton, for writing all was well. Explained that he had done as much as wit and diligence could, that he only wrote in general terms and gave the writers good content; and that their (the Hollanders') ill meaning was discovered in a subsequent act after their departure and the signing of Carleton's despatch, "which pacified him, we hope." Are commanded to relate things to the Council on Sunday next. The Company hath gratified him with 200 pieces, which they pray him to accept at present, and they have delivered to John Chamberlain to his use; the Company presume they shall have other cause to use his help, for which he will find them further thankful. [Holland Correspondence.]

Feb. 15. 975. William Webb to Edward Longe. Knavery of the Jurebassa who came with the rice. News that China junks are expected at Siam, the Manillas, Jacatra, Jambi, and Sangora. Wishes Longe had men in the factory to equal the Dutch. Begs he will, if possible, send him some black wrought velvet. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 930.]

Feb. 23.
Hague. 977. Sir Dudley Carleton to John Chamberlain. Wrote to him by Sir Dudley Diggs and his colleague that they passed some compliment with him of the Company's good meaning; but it seems they will have some more service into the reckoning. Their speech was, they forbear doing what was ordained, because the Company did not know how much it was beholden to Carleton, and they desired him to authorize Chamberlain to be his receiver, which Carleton does by virtue of these hastily scribbled lines. [Extract from Holland Correspondence.]

Feb. 23.
The Clove. 979. John Byrd to the East India Company. December 23, 1618, being in fight with the Hollanders near Jacatra, there was very bad service performed by many commanders of their ships, in the Gift, which was the cause of others' faults in the same fight, for none performed any service but the Moon and Clove, which was the cause of much detriment and loss to the Company. The Hollanders report that had the fight been followed by the rest of the ships but one hour they must have yielded, as many men gone home in the Royal James can too well testify. Of all the ships lost none performed any fight worth speaking of but the Sampson and Hound. Three rich China junks taken in April 1619, "but your worships' factors were too unreasonable sharers in the purchase," for he heard it reported by Jeremy Shouker (Saker), purser of the Masulipatam factory, that Augustine Spaldinge and George Ball sold abundance of stuffs, silks, porcelain, and other goods upon their own accounts and little or none for the Company; John Neate, purser of the Moon, can certify of more. More haste of feasting one ship after another than any resolution to fight to redress their wrongs. That worthy preacher Copland often reproved the commanders in his sermons, [see ante, No. 654,] and all poor men exclaimed on them, but they cared not how many dogs barked at them, they knew they durst not bite them. The Claw had good trade at Cotatinge [Sumatra]. Surgeon Wiley told Byrd that Robt. Farrer, purser of the Claw, told him he had received 3,000 ryals for Capt. Pring; Saker will tell the Company what was done to avoid suspicion; heard him say Spaldinge landed so many bales of his own in Jacatra that he was ashamed to set his own mark upon them, but used the marks of John Beamond and Andrew Cogwin. Feb. 26.

Aboard the
Charles, Jacatra
Road.

980. John Bickell to the East India Company. How all business hath passed in their fleet since his departure from Surat, 16 March 1620. Seizure of a junk of Goa and a junk of Dabul. Anchored in Dabul Road; the governor demanded cloth and sword-blades, which if good will sell well there, and he persuaded them to settle a factory there, which Bickell wrote to Keridge about. The governor very thankful because they released the junk they had seized, and sent them word they should be as welcome to him as his own people, with a present of 20 bullocks, hens, rice, goats, and other provisions. Knows no such place on all that coast as Dabul for kind usage or refreshing sick men. Arrived at Acheen Road 25 April; found the Claw there. Awaited the coming of Capt. Pring till 5 June, when an English and a Dutch ship brought tidings of the peace, the death of Capt. Jourdain, Capt. Bonner, and the taking of divers of their ships. Left Acheen Road 23 July and arrived in Jacatra Road 18 Oct. in company of the Ruby and Diamond, and Richard Fursland to take the place of Capt. Jourdain here at Jacatra. Met Capt. Fitzherbert with his three ships, also the Globe, Peppercorn, and Star, which are at present dispersed to certain factories, but he remains at the disposal of the President, being appointed one of the ships of defence; did hope to be better employed than to lie here to be eaten up with worms as the Gift is. Bad state of the Charles. The seamen that have been long in the Indies are worse than the heathens themselves. The Dutch deal kindly with them at Jacatra. Will leave to the relation of the president and assistants, who have the greatest cause to complain, the treatment of the Dutch, which he hopes the Company will very shortly reform, "in regard it is to the honour of our nation to be free men." They have to pay for the wood they burn, if they do not first ask leave, though the wood grows where it does no man good. [Two pages. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 933.]

981. Extracts from letters of the President and Council of India. The Globe sailed on 6 February for Bantam, there to ply to and fro with the Holland ship, to wait the coming of the China junk. The Clove and Diamond and the Fortune and South Holland arrived from Bantam 17th May in company with "other Frenchmen." On 19th and 20th May were sent back to Bantam the Diamond and Fortune. On 18 Sept. the English and Dutch sent a ship for Bantam and a letter to the Pengran. [One page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 934.]

982. "[Intolerable] grievances of the merchants against the Hollanders [sent in letters dated at Jacatra 26 Feb. 1620-1]," received by the Royal James. They exact tolls of 10 per cent. for all goods bought and sold by us at Jacatra and levy fines for non-payment. They compel our boats to be searched before leaving Jacatra. They exact seven ryals a month for brewing rack or usquebaugh. They take the most convenient grounds from us and allot what they please. They won't allow us to weigh our own goods, and impose a tax of one per cent. for weighing them themselves. No merchants dare trade with us at Jacatra until the Dutch are first served. Their inferior officers imprison us for trivial causes. They compel us to pay their proportion of the charges of the Dutch garrisons in Amboyna, the Moluccas, and Bandas, but will not receive commodities which they pay themselves. They debar us from all trade in Syngora, although the King has granted us free trade there. They falsify their promises, break their contracts, and refuse to make us restitution of money or goods they have taken from us. Their General Coen has said he "will have a benefit above us" for his fort of Jacatra, which he accounts to be the chief means of procuring anything from Bantam. The English factors advise some course to be taken to prevent all this, as they conceive the articles already agreed upon will not serve their turns. [*Four pages. Endorsed as above. 985. Richard Fursland to the East India Company. Refers to his public letter. Is not fit to discharge his duty by reason of an infirmity (the hemorrhoids) got by sitting long on the wet ground before the King of Acheen; begs leave to return home. Wishes that such monies of his as Rich. Guy shall pay into their hands, with his yearly wages, may supply what is wanting of his full adventure. Has not received any wages since his coming out, and hopes he shall not need any. "By discords amongst men here I perceive there was much abuse offered you by divers commanders in that fleet at the coast; yea, so far were they given to their pleasures and profits, that it was the ruin of your shipping in other places by their failing of coming at their appointed time." What he says comes but by the relation of others, "therefore I will accuse no man." It is grown a practice for pursers and others to keep the stocks of dead men in their hands two and three years and make profit thereof in trade. Deficiency in Brockedon's account; hopes it will prove some error. Wholly refers the charge of accounts to him; Richard Haslewood is cashier. [*Two pages. Begs him to deliver "that you have for me to Mr. Locke without letting him know where or how you had it, reserving as much as you think fit to bestow upon the bringer." He will go to Chamberlain for it, Carleton having use of more money for his lease of the college of Eton, which he is to borrow of Burlamachi. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

988. Sir Ed. Herbert to Sir Dudley Carleton. The extraordinary ambassadors from the States have yet effected nothing in their negotiation here touching maritime affairs; and for the renewing the truce between them and the Spaniard there hath not so much as one word yet passed on either side. Hears there are great preparations for war in Spain, notwithstanding he is also told here for certain that there is a Dominican friar sent from that King with commission to treat or give overtures of renewing the so truce (sic). Cannot omit to say how desirous the French are (or at least would seem so) of establishing a company of adventurers to the Indies, holding councils and publishing orders for that purpose according to certain edicts of this King, which he thinks they do with much ostentation, hoping to amuse the States extraordinary ambassadors here with the noise and opinion of their greatness by sea. 989. Consultation by George Muschamp and Henry Short. Upon advice from Banda, by the Hollanders, of Nathaniel Courthopp and some distaste of Rich. 990. Capt. Hump. Fitzherbert to the East India Company. Refers to a previous letter (see ante, No. 943) in which he omitted to write of the departure of the Ruby from Jacatra for Macassar. Movements of the English and Dutch fleets, some to Japara and Macassar, others to Jacatra and Banda. It seems to him that the expedition of the Hollanders savoureth of a kind of prevention both in matter of fortification and also of merchandise, and cannot well be for the mutual good of both Companies or without the breach of the 27th article. Instances of this on the part of the Dutch General. The Bandanese favourable to the English, and content that they should keep the fort at Pooloroon, and take the whole benefit of the fruit of all the island, delivering to the Dutch their parts, so as the Dutch come not there to buy it themselves, "for with them they will not meddle." Were well received at Japara by the governor and Mr. Benet, the Company's chief factor; the place abounds with all manner of victuals, and is not altogether to be rejected. Fruitless attempts of the Dutch "by a solemn embassy" to have commerce there. Found the Ruby at Macassar; both her and the Royal Exchange took in rice, the former 400 tons. Sent the Star to the straits of Desalon to wait for Portugals going from Macassar. Present of guns and ammunition to the King of Tallo (?Tolo) accepted thankfully. The Roebuck found so unserviceable that she was unrigged and her provisions put aboard the Royal Exchange and Ruby, and the hull left with Staverton. Arrived at Amboyna 18 Feb. General Coen appointed this place the rendezvous both for the English and Dutch, and went away five days before for Banda. Speedy order taken for disposing the merchants to their several factories in and near Amboyna. Publication of the peace on 19 Feb. with great solemnity, in the castle of Amboyna and aboard the ship. Geo. Muschamp remains chief at Amboyna, with Samuel Colston, Henry Woolman, and others, with servants and blacks. In Hitto, Edward Meade, John Powell, with their assistants and blacks. In Loua [?Lugho], John Beamond, John Witherall, with an assistant and

blacks. In Cambello, Samuel Foxcrofte and George Spence, with a boy and a black. In Luricca, Henry Short and George Sherricke, with a boy and a black. Found the Star at Amboyna, which sailed for Banda 22 Feb., the sooner to give notice of the publication of the agreement between the English and the Dutch at Amboyna, and to see the proceedings of the Dutch at Lantar together with their carriage towards the English at Pooloroon, and to get in what spice remained unsold. News that the Dutch had taken Lantar, that Courthoppe was slain by the Hollanders, that there was fighting (? torn away) between the English and Dutch touching Pooloroon (?), that the whole island had brought in their arms and submitted themselves to the Hollanders, that the Dutch General had Pooloroon, alleging that although the English had the fort, yet they had not the command of the people, who would be a great charge to maintain. It is thought fit for Fitzherbert to go with the Royal Exchange to Pooloroon to see what course be taken therein, and to speak with the general, "lest in the height of all his glory he should use some violence to your people there." Holds it fit neither to give it over nor to yield it to the Dutch at present; his reasons, "it would be a disgrace to our nation, both here and at home, to forego a thing so slightly, that was so long kept by Mr. Courthope as obstinately." The Dutch General much desires his coming to moderate this business. Insufficiency of the men employed in the shipping in these parts; generally they are given to drunkenness and thieving, nor is there anything that is either too heavy or too hot for them to make away with. Bad quality of the powder, as much dirt as powder in it. [Six pages. Injured by damp. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 938.]

March 11. 991. Sir Dudley Digges to Sir Dudley Carleton. Since his last, the clamour of our merchants and some ill offices of some great ones hath forced them again to be before the King, and from him to the Lords of the Council, but they have so constantly carried themselves that though the merchants cannot justly charge them with any boldness in their affairs, yet the King is grown more patient, and the Lords hopeful of reason from the States, for which they have fallen upon this resolution of having the cause finally heard and determined by the King and the States here, of which he makes account Carleton will speedily hear. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

March 14. 992. Robt. Jefferies to the East India Company. In his last letters of 20 and 25 July from Ispahan by way of Bagdad, delivered by an Italian messenger to Libby Chapman in Aleppo, he certified at large the general passages of their Persian proceedings. For endeavouring a reformation of weak, diseased, and unmerchantly carriage, and his discovering the unreasonable, unconscionable corruption of Edward Monox in certain parcels of iniquity, there hath been (with the dispensation of the devil) a triple treachery begotten against him by their critical agent Ed. Monox, their carnal minister Cardo, and Strachan, their infernal physician; the world, the flesh, and the devil, whose conspiracy hath caused these lines to take their being.

"Intimates cursorily" the cause of his persecution to better their apprehension of his undeserved banishment from their Persian employment. Account of a fight between the English and Portugal fleets some three leagues from Jask; the latter "departed with dishonour" with the loss of two captains and many others, in number uncertain, and much damage to their shipping; the English fleet lost but one man aboard the Roebuck. The fight renewed; Capt. And. Shilling received an unfortunate shot on the left shoulder, which proved mortal nine days after. The enemy left in the night "with a second dishonour;" being unable to chase them prevented their utter destruction; no news of them since, but believes that in a subsequent storm some of them were sunk. The English lost six men killed, besides others mortally wounded. "In both fights we bestowed on the enemy 4,021 great shot." When all this fury was overpast "our persecuting agent" convoked a consultation aboard the London; opinion of "the succeeding commander," Capt. Rich. Blyth, Rich. Swan, and the rest of the masters of the fleet, Henry Darrell and John Purefey, touching "the treason put to his account." Has satisfied Keridge of the wrongs he has endured by their unjust proceedings against him and of his being retained prisoner. Arrived at the port of Swally 2 Feb., "happy in his deliverance from such sufferings." Met, as he came from Lar, 150 camels and 200 mules laden with silk for Ispahan. Made sale with Bell, Purefey, and Benthall of their cloths and other goods to about 12,000*l.*, which supplied their defects and enabled Bell to repair to the Court and make an addition of 120 bales, in all 520 bales. The silk taken in sacks to Moghistan, but after notice of the arrival of the English fleet, agent Monox's deputy, John Amye, carelessly brought away the silk, so that it was much fretted and lay in rain and dirt against all weathers, and each bale lost some part of its beauty, and many were much damnified, which he fears 2,000*l.* will hardly repair. Found wanting on examination, by Keridge's appointment, 4,241 lbs. of silk which came without number or contents, with one general weight. [Four pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 939.]

March 17. 993. George Muschamp to W. Nicolls. To inform himself by advice of Welden and Hayes of the quantity of rice needful to be left at Banda, from whence he is to hasten his return, as he is to spend some time in delivering rice at the factories on his way to the Moluccas. [Half a page. O.C., Vol. VII., No. 940.]

March 23. 994. Sir Dudley Digges to Sir Dudley Carleton. This day, with Sir Thos. Edmondes, Secretary Calvert, Mr. Chancellor, Master of the Rolls and of the Wards, Digges waited on the States ambassadors, who, as they had told the King on Wednesday, said they (Digges and Abbott) were despatched with reasonable contentment from the Hague, and that all might have been finished but that Digges and Abbott made promise to come back to finish things, they going to the Parliament, to which Abbott, before the King, gave an answer, in his absence, of denial, much blaming young Boreel. He showed the States this day that they were sent over to demand restitution of their goods brought into Holland, which after three months' dispute was at length, the Saturday before their departure, accommodated by the three deputed States before their lordships according to the signed demand and answer. Full account of what was said on this occasion. "We stayed long enough to have brought our good answer before the Parliament, and when we could not get a better, we took what they offered, paper payment in a provisional promise of satisfaction, which we little thought they would have broken so soon. To all which though they made such cavilling answers as showed they had as much instruction as Amsterdam could give them, yet when they came to be urged home they pretended want of instruction and commission." The King desired their stay for a full power to finish all, but all they yield to is to promise to get the States to send over speedily about it. Confesses that these men's base carriage hath made him a cold friend, though his religion shall keep him no enemy. [Holland Corresp.]

995. Sec. Sir Geo. Calvert to Sir Dudley Carleton. The States ambassadors here are now ready to depart, with such answers as they have received to their propositions. One proposition has been made to them for the righting of his Majesty's subjects for those wrongs they have sustained in the Indies from their people since the last treaty, as likewise at Greenland, for which they allege they have no commission to treat. His Majesty has pressed them earnestly to stay, either all or some of them, and if not all, then to procure a commission presently to those that stay and to such others as the States shall think fit to send over and to join with them for a treaty, which our merchants allege they have broken in three articles by building their fort, beside the want of the restitution of their goods. His Majesty's pleasure that Carleton shall move the States presently and with all speed to command their stay or some of them, and to send over sufficient commission and authority for such a treaty as is aforementioned. 996. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. March 27.
Aboard the Royal Exchange, before the castle of Neira.

997. Capt. Humphrey Fitzherbert to the East India Company. The Royal Exchange set sail from Amboyna 10 March 1621, and arrived at Pooloroon the 14th, where they found the Star and a Dutch ship, the Hart, at anchor. Haies, the chief factor there, related how the Dutch had taken Lantar and put the merchant and the rest of the English into prison, and seized all the Company's goods; also, how three days before the Dutch General had sent about 500 men to Pooloroon to surprise the island, that the blacks asked Haies whether he would defend them, for if he would, they would fight it out to the last man, but Haies answered "he was not able nor could not." Meanwhile the Dutch landed, asked the blacks how they durst deliver their island to the English, and what amends they would make the King of Holland and their General, and made them deliver up their arms in general. "This miserable people being thus disarmed, the Dutch went to their towns, which was (sic) walled round about, and forced them with their own hands to throw down the said wall, so that before night there was not one stone left upon another; and ranging the whole island, caused all the walls, little and great, to be made even with the ground, not so much as sparing the monuments of the dead." In fine they were compelled to give the island to the Dutch by presenting them with a nutmeg tree in a basin, as the custom of these parts is in like cases. They put up the Dutch colours on one of the pieces of ordnance in the English fort, and with the spoil of the whole island departed for Neira, "to the great grief of the inhabitants and the terror of the English." Had Fitzherbert not come with the Exchange, Haies had left Pooloroon altogether. He assembled the chiefs of the island on board, encouraged Haies to maintain the place in time of peace, which did maintain itself against them all in time of war, and wished him to persuade the country people not to fly from the English, but to keep the island until his return, which they faithfully promised to do. "But Haies never meant any such matter, as the sequel will show." He also took down the Dutch colours, and keeps them aboard to this day. Three Flemings who had served the Company about two years and a half in Pooloroon, and were much threatened by the Dutch General, sent aboard the Exchange by Haies, at whose importunity Fitzherbert was content to let them remain. On 15th set sail for Neira, where he found the Dutch General with fourteen great ships, in which and on shore were about two thousand six hundred trained soldiers, besides some 80 Java prows. Interview with the Dutch General; he demanded of Fitzherbert when the peace should be proclaimed, who answered he thought it not fit to proclaim peace when they knew not whether it were peace or war, and therefore required that the Dutch General should first set at liberty the merchants and others of the Company's servants at Lantar and restore the Company's goods, wherewith he was so much offended that he would scarce speak that day. In the end, with many high words on both sides, the English prisoners were released and sent aboard the Exchange, and peace was proclaimed with great solemnity on the 19th March in Neira Castle. Relation by Randall, chief merchant at Lantar, of the usage he received from the Dutch; they went to the English house, seized the English and Chinese there, who they bound hand and foot and threw over the wall, being made fast by two and two; they sent a Japanese, who with two blows struck off the heads of the Chinese, then lifting up his sword to have struck Randall, Gov. Houtman stayed his hand, whether by chance or of purpose he knows not; after which they were all three put into the bilboes aboard the Dutch General's ship, where Fitzherbert found them. Randall was "bound to a stake, and with a halter made fast to his neck, did trice up his head that the Japanese might despatch him the easier, which did much terrify the poor man, as may well appear by his looks." Welden and Bate, on going ashore to provide house room for themselves and magazines for their goods, were detained and told plainly they must there remain until Fitzherbert delivered to the General the Dutchmen who ran away from their garrison; the Dutch also sent 40 soldiers and took the master of the Star and his men in the long boat prisoners and carried them to the castle. The Dutch General also sent men aboard the English ships with charge to stay there until he sent for them, "forbidding us to water and forbidding all prowls to bring us any refreshing or to come near the ship." After much correspondence Fitzherbert thought good to send the said Dutchmen presently away, "considering what a disgrace it would have been to our nation and to myself if I should have delivered the Company's servants to the slaughter, and how much discontent it would have given your worships every way; besides, while these broils did last the common business was at a stay and your ships in danger, for although they should not according to the articles of agreement practise any matter of fact or hostility against us, and the world would think they should not dare, notwithstanding by these proceedings we may easily see they dare do anything in these parts." Proceedings of the Dutch at Pooloroon; refusal of Haies to take part "with the poor miserable people of the island." They forced the country people to dismount the ordnance from the two English forts on the great island, and threw them down on the rocks; four were broken, the rest remain on the sands altogether unserviceable. They took the English colours off the island and some of the chieftest men prisoners, among whom was the priest of Pooloway, a man of great authority and a deadly enemy to the Hollanders. "Thus was Pooloroon lost, which in Mr. Courthopp's time by his good resolution with a few men maintained itself to their disgrace, and now by the fearfulness of Mr. Haies and his irresolution is fearfully lost in the time of peace." There is only in the hands of the English the castle on the little island. Pooloway is worth all the islands of Banda, to which the English have as much right as to Pooloroon, "and therefore there is great expectation by the country people, whose hearts are wholly yours, as also by the English, your servants in this place." The Dutch took at Lantar at least 200 brass pieces, together with a great quantity of spice and other luggage. But further, to the great disgrace of our nation and the better to beguile our friends, the Dutch carried the English flag on two of their ships, the Dragon and another ship of their own, "by which means your people's throats had been like to have been cut by the blacks, thinking they had practised with the Dutch to betray them, before they could persuade them to the contrary." Welden's interview with the Dutch General, who gave him leave to go aboard the Admiral, with a commander for his guardian, to whom he gave directions to treat with Fitzherbert about all differences, so as he would promise to return to the castle again. Sent "our guardian" Capt. Tisan to tell the Dutch General that if he would not take his men out of our ships Fitzherbert would put them out by force; answer returned

that they were discharged, and that the merchants and men in the castle should be set at liberty, and that they might fetch water for their ships when they pleased; "and thus as the General had brewed did he brew also." Excuses himself for letting the Dutchmen come aboard at first. What other exploit the Dutch General has in hand at present is not well known; some think he will go for Tidore others to Macassar; verily believes he will go where he may do the English most disgrace, one of the principal ends of all their designs. At Lantar 1,000 men yet stand out against the Hollanders, and if it were lawful to aid them but with 100 shot and some rice they would yet beat the Hollanders off the island. The Dutch desired to get him into their hands, but knows not what their intent was. Believes they will never have good usage from them in any place but where their forces may equal theirs, as he has well seen by experience. English sailors are come to that pass that they will fight but when it pleaseth them, alleging they came to merchandise and not for men of war. Hopes hereafter a remedy will be considered and provided. There are five several factories, Pooloway, Neira, Lantar, Rosingyn, and Selaman, and Pooloroon should make the sixth; the Dutch say all shall be brought to Neira. The Star is to remain here to deliver the several cargoes to the factories and to take in such fruit (spices) as the place will afford this easterly monsoon; she is to go to Jacatra about the beginning of October. Has also left the Claw to go from factory to factory with goods, and then to go to Amboyna and the Moluccas to the Exchange. [Seven pages. Mutilated by damp. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 948.]

998. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Has received his letter of 23rd present, about which this morning he had audience in the States Assembly. Was desired to commit to writing what he had said about the two businesses of the East Indies and Greenland, to the end the States might acquaint their East India Company therewith. He accordingly presented his proposition, and warned them against consuming too much time over it. To all this they answered but in general terms that they would use their best endeavours to give his Majesty content. Encloses,

999. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Observes a difference betwixt the order he had from Calvert in his of the 23rd of the last, and that which his Majesty had then consented to, touching the business of the East Indies, to which he has thought best to accommodate himself, without insisting upon an answer to his proposition. Has let some of the chief of the States understand that they need not proceed further until either they see their ambassadors or hear again from them, but has wished the States provisionally to send his proposition to them, and to procure a resolution in conformity with his Majesty's desire. Hopes so much will be effected by this means, that if the Company doth not give an answer at the first agreeable to his Majesty's desire, yet they will be held together until the return of the States ambassadors, and upon their report more may be effected than upon Carleton's proposition. In regard of the lateness of the season, there is some distrust they shall not recover Mocha, in which case they have only Masulipatam to winter in, whence the Hart and Roebuck are to proceed for England, and the London with a prize pinnace to return for Surat to prosecute the Council's further directions. If they recover the Red Sea, then doth their whole fleet return to Surat, and the homeward-bound ships proceed thence in October on their voyage for England. In favour of Thos. Calvert's letter, and the respite he afterwards gave them until Whitsuntide. Must needs say this was yielded unto after directions were sent to him, for that they would not yield to any promise for procuring a shorter time. The ambassadors with whom Sec. 1004. Sec. Calvert to Sir Dudley Carleton. Thinks by this time the States ambassadors have rendered an account to their superiors of their employment here, and of his Majesty's desire to have some commissioners sent over hither before Whitsuntide. The merchants fear that those ambassadors will not fully represent their true grievances, and so the States not give sufficient authority to their deputies for all the points in question. They have, therefore, had recourse to his Majesty for his assistance, who has commanded Carleton to let the States know his Majesty expecteth that their deputies come authorized with a plenary power to treat not only for restitution of losses, but especially in the point of their pretended sovereignty to the town and country of Jacatra, as well as it hath regard to the Indians, who are rather like to undergo any distress to the burning and destroying of their own fruit trees of their country, than to submit themselves unto the government of others, and consequently overthrow all expectation of returns, which is the life of our merchants' trade. His Majesty's subjects in those parts much overburdened and discouraged by living in such terms of disparity under them, having had so fearful an example of late by their punishing of a butler and steward. 1005. Notes [by Sir Robt. Heath]. The necessity of carefully preserving and advancing the honour, safety, and profit of the kingdom. It is argued that the reasons why the country suffers in profit are that native commodities are abased in value, and merchants discouraged, the East India Company especially, by which the whole kingdom will suffer, and a remedy is suggested in the encouragement of the cloth trade of the East India Company, and in enforcing restitution of wrongs from the Hollanders. 1006. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Visit of two deputies of the States General to him, who, understanding his Majesty's desire to have the businesses of the East Indies and Greenland treated on in England, and deputies to be sent thither by Whitsuntide, said the time was so short it could not be effected, and argued that it might be better ended here than in England; Carleton's reply, upon which they recalled their letter and wrote to the mayors of the East India Company at Amsterdam to come presently to this town, and now he understands they write to Sir Noel Caron to desire his Majesty to excuse them if they send not to him as soon as he expects. 1007. John Jourdain and William Webb to Edward Longe, at Siam. The Exchange just arrived, Capt. Fitzherbert commander. Five ships gone to Surat, Capt. And. Shilling chief commander. Hope some order will come from Jacatra to furnish their factories abroad, or else to leave them; for what more discontent can there be to our Company's factors than the Netherlanders having sufficient means in all their factories abroad, and we none, and as yet our chief does not seek the means? Hope within short time all things will be for the best for our honourable employers, although with patience we must endure for a while, the Dutch at present having great store of moneys and goods in their factories everywhere, where they have some of our Company's men (?), which it is hoped they will pay dearly for; "but let them run on in their pride, and think themselves the better men, but they will much deceive themselves." 1009. Sir Dudley Carleton to Morris Abbott. Has deferred answering his letter of 31st March, accompanied with notes drawn out of Borel's papers of complaint of his ill-dealing, and has now received another letter from Abbott and some of the directors of the Company of the 3rd present, which has come seasonably to his hands at the very instant he is treating by his Majesty's command with the States touching the sending of deputies into England expressly to resolve of all differences. Is armed with many arguments to persuade a speedy sending, but cannot as yet possibly bring them to any settled resolution. The Bewinthebbers complain much of Abbott and Digges' report, as if it had been other than it should be, and say their letters are misinterpreted. They allege further the example of France, where the judgment of a difference touching the East Indies is remitted hither to be determined. Carleton's reply. Shall continue his best endeavours to have a resolution taken according to their minds, but Abbott is too well acquainted with the difficulties and delays of this country to think it may be so soon as Whitsuntide. 1010. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Advertised him on the 10th present, how he governed himself with the States General to press their sending into England, which they were then willing to excuse, and appointed certain deputies to deliberate upon the matter. This they have done, but in conclusion, two of the States deputies have this day come to him again with a message from the States General, little differing from the former, to excuse their resolution of sending, by reason of the shortness of time, and begging Carleton to write to his Majesty in conformity with a letter they had composed to Sir Noel Caron, to the effect that complaint having been made of the reports made by the two English deputies, they must have more time to examine the truth of the matter, with purpose speedily to resolve to his Majesty's best contentment. His long discourse with them; explained that the substance of the treaty was in question in two points—that of restitution, and touching jurisdiction in Jacatra and other places, “where we must know how we may live together without being exposed to the violence of their pretended sovereignty,” and urged reasons to induce them to take the matter into new deliberation before they wrote to Sir Noel Caron. Must not conceal that he finds not only the Dutch Company but most of the States are alienate from sending, and therefore cannot say what they will resolve, but will use his best endeavours to have the deputies sent with ample commissions. 1011. Sir Dudley Carleton to Secretary Calvert. The irresolution about sending to his Majesty expressly and speedily touching the business of the East Indies and Greenland, proceeds only of those of Holland, who are now here assembled at the Hague; and when no arguments would serve which were alleged by this East India Company (whose advocate with some of the directors are here expressly), to hinder the sending, they have wrought a delay out of expectation of some ship coming with letters out of the East Indies which may bring news more agreeable than the former to the English, and against protracting of time there is no striving with these men, but hopes they will take a better resolution before long, and the rather because all the rest of the States and the Prince of Orange are well affected to the sending. present at the "Picharra," which continued six days, every Orankay confirming by oath their former contract made with the Dutch, whereby they are bound to acknowledge the Prince of Holland for their supreme head and absolute king, and not to enter in confederacy with any nation whatsoever, or entertain any other nation within their limits, without the consent of the governor here resident. They are to assist the governor with men and "Curre Curries" upon any service whatsoever when required, whereto they willingly submitted, only Chimalada, governor for the King of Ternate, and the Orankays of Loocho and Cambello, answered by deputies, fearing to appear in person, having last year instigated those of the Leasers and of the coast of Ceram to renounce their former contract with the Hollanders, and to depend upon the King of Ternate. The garrison here near upon 350 men in pay, double the number formerly kept; little profit to be expected from most of these places. Here is no opposition of anything the Dutch propound. Touching the Exchange going to Japan for the strengthening of the Manilla fleet. Goods required for the supply of this place, but no great quantity of cloth or the price will be debased. The Claw arrived 9th June with Haies. The Star expected within ten days. Intends sending the Claw to the factories for cloves, and then to send both ships for Jacatra. The Claw so leaky she cannot endure the Moluccas voyage; knows the necessity of such vessels to carry advice to private factories. The clove harvest this year likely to prove better than he advised. Death of Edw. Mead on 10 June 1621; the Company hath lost a sufficient and faithful servant; hopes he shall prevail with Haies to supply his place. Is subject to sickness. Henry Short also sick; he requests to be removed from these parts, as it is hopeless for him to recover his health here; "his service will deserve good employment." Encloses the "plott" of Amboyna, with the names and situations of all places under the jurisdiction of the Hollanders; also the true platform of the castle, with the length, breadth, and number of munition, according to the order given to him [both wanting]. committee. (See Commons Journal, I. 510-1). In Sept. 1622 the King appointed a commission to inquire into the causes of the decay of trade, and to consider by what means it might be made profitable without exhausting the treasure of the kingdom. 1024. Statement concerning the silver imported from the West Indies into Spain, and its diffusion over Asia, with proposition to divert the trade of silk and other Indian commodities from Turkey direct to the East by the Cape of Good Hope, the only means to accomplish this being a union between the English and Hollanders; this will diminish the great Turk's revenue at least 300,000*l.* yearly in customs. [Two pages. Endorsed, "Sir John Wolstenholme." East Indies, Vol. I., No. 88.]

1025. Reasons against dissolving the East India Joint Stock and deserting that trade, showing the loss the King and kingdom would sustain in doing so. The King will lose at least 20,000*l.* per annum in his customs and imports. The kingdom will lose 100,000*l.* per annum through having to buy spices from the Hollanders, and above 100,000*l.* per annum for other commodities which are now brought direct from the East Indies. If the Company were well settled, and the trade judiciously followed, goods to the yearly value of near 300,000*l.* would be imported from the East Indies. The trade if once deserted will fall into the hands of the Hollanders; and it will be a thing of very great difficulty to raise a new joint stock. [In 1615 the customs paid by the East India Company amounted to 14,000*l.*, in 1614 to 13,000*l.* Two pages. East Indies, Vol. I., No. 89.]

1036. Sir Noel de Caron to the States General. Was amazed when he understood that notwithstanding they had used all possible endeavours with those of the East India Company, they yet found it not good to send their deputies hither for accommodating differences; so that he fears his Majesty will be abused in his expectation of their coming, which God forbid. Knows the English will have letters of mart for reprisal of all Dutch ships that go or come from the East Indies; this his Majesty hath said, yea, sworn that his subjects will not give him rest until he hath granted them the same. "If we shall think his Majesty will not do it for a certainty we deceive ourselves." Truly at such time as England shall separate from us we shall sigh, for upon all occasions we have need of his Majesty's friendship; "but as it seems to me that is here little respected and considered." Remarks touching the friendship of England with Spain. His Majesty's subjects very inveterate through the East India business. Was refused an audience and told that his Majesty would not speak

India Company would come suddenly over; it was replied that news had been received from Holland that they were resolved not to come over; the Archbishop of Canterbury supposed some mistake might be of either part; the Lords said that his Majesty was doubtful of their purpose to come, because Sir Dudley Carleton had not advertised him thereof, but their Lordships pressed Sir Noel Caron, and he had undertaken to hasten them over so as to be here before the progress. 1041. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. What has passed since the parting of the States of Holland in the business of the East Indies. Sir Noel Caron's relation of his Majesty's pleasure at the Council table has been a chief subject of deliberation amongst the States General. All the provinces now resolved to give his Majesty content in sending into England, Amsterdam only excepted, which has some of the directors of the East India Company for magistrates, and those now in government persisted in the wonted difficulties and delays. The States solicited against the sending; the reasons represented for their consideration. The arguments on the two points in dispute, restitution of ships and goods, and jurisdiction in the Indies. Yesterday a few days' further delay were won by presenting letters to the States General from the several chambers of the East Indies that on the $\frac{1}{20}$ present the 17 directors with deputies from every chamber were to meet expressly at Amsterdam about this business, and to desire the States in the meantime to suspend their resolution; they write to Sir Noel Caron to acquaint his Majesty therewith. All must be done by inducement, nothing by authority; every province, every town, and every particular college being a state within a state, and any one serving to hinder or delay resolutions. His reasons for hoping that the sending (to England) will be resolved upon and put in execution by the end of the progress. How the (Dutch) Company seek to put up his Excellency and the States with the wind of their pretended sovereignty in the East Indies may appear by a printed letter wherein they make two, who they style East Indian kings, write themselves his Excellency's subjects, upon occasion of five Indian boys brought in the last ship out of the East Indies, and now put to school at Leyden. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

1042. Sir Dudley Carleton to Morris Abbott. His letter concerning the failing of the restitution of the English ships and goods by the Dutch in the East Indies, and the excess of authority they use over our men in those parts, came very opportunely to show how small credit is to be given to these men's reports, who upon their last letters received by the Walkaron set a fair show upon the matter as if all went well in the Indies as well as here, and that therefore the sending into England upon that occasion is not so necessary, especially since matters are accommodable between the two Companies without troubling his Majesty and the States. Memorials presented by Boreel to the States and arguments used by him to this effect. The business now only rests upon the Company, of which the 17 directors with certain deputies of every chamber meet at Amsterdam on Monday next. Believes a resolution of sending will be taken and put in execution, but with what commission or instruction he cannot yet promise. The States now write to Sir Noel Caron to excuse themselves upon the Company to his Majesty for these long delays, and to desire his Majesty to have patience for these few days. Is sure he will not think it amiss to have the States warmed again by some new remembrance in case they should be cooled by any new practice of the Company, and thereof prays him to put Sir Thos. Smythe in mind, to whom he will not fail write to as soon as he understands what is resolved at this meeting at Amsterdam. [Holland Corresp.]

1043. Sir Dudley Carleton to John Chamberlain. Nothing has been omitted here from first to last to advance his Majesty's desire of having a new envoy into England, which in the end will be effected, “but to make this Company dance as soon as ours pipe is not in my power.” This is a State where all goes by inducement, nothing by authority. Deputies like to be sent into England about the end of the progress. God send them better luck than here is imagined, where most men suspect this earnest pressing of a sending into England doth proceed from some disaffected persons to the conjunction of the two Companies. The charge of the journey (valued at no small rate by example of the last) and question who should bear it (the generality or the Company) hath held the business back all this while; and so would still have done, and these men have continued restive if they had not been suffered to bite on the bridle, and then rather be led than driven as they now have been by the Prince of Orange and such of the States as prefer his Majesty's satisfaction before the interest of this Company, of which some of the chiefs remain still obstinate, but in the end they will be overruled. Owes Sir Dudley Digges much more service than such an advertisement comes to, and though Carleton finds himself bitten in this business, he cannot suspect him of so much indignity, and therefore must impute it to some (God knows who) who neither know him, the nature of the business, nor the men he has to deal with. July 13.

1046. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Officers to be re-elected and sworn 1 August next. Wheatley's stock to be legally passed over for security for 18 barrels of indigo sold to him. The King graciously inclined towards the Company to right them of the Dutch, "but as they have ever feared, so it fell out that their Lordships (of the Privy Council) propounded the continuance of a rateable charge from the Company as they now pay." Mountney's re-election suspended until his accounts are perfected. Fotherby's account books shown in court. Suit of Mr. Swanton to be master of the Trial, referred. Committees appointed for the purchase of provisions, also to execute the office of husband until his accounts be perfected. Burrell's salary to be paid according to contract; legal contract to be made with him for building two ships. Account of ordnance in store; fifty new pieces to be provided. Project of Browne, an ironfounder, to make ordnance of iron that shall be as light as brass, and of as good effect; the court had no liking to make trial of his skill therein. Woodall the surgeon's account to be audited; his desire to answer any complaints against him in open court. [Five pages and a half. Court Bk. V. 6-12.)]

1050. Wm. Nicolls to Capt. Cocks and the rest of the English merchants in Japan. Arrived in the Moluccas 31 May with the Exchange, Capt. Fitzherbert, and the Ruby, John Alexander master. According to agreement one-third of the returns was expected for their Company, as they had been liable to one-third of the charge from the publication in Amboyna 1st March last. Fraudulent dealings of the Dutch by their alteration of accounts. Like to have nothing but the charges monthly until the harvest from October to the latter part of February. The Dutch purpose to delude them with pretence of more old debts; they gain both better respect and profit and the English discommodity by the base Machiavelian tricks of the Dutch, of all of which he has advised at large to Jacatra. The new Dutch governor here is called Houlتمان; he has begun with such violence, as claiming the "joustisinge," the people of Batchian, Machian, Motir, &c., that considering they have lately at Banda hanged 40 of the principal of those people and carried 800 persons along with General Coen to inhabit Jacatra, "breeds such fear and doubt in these people, as they remain in ecstasy;" many of them fled, and no doubt many more daily will follow from all parts where the Dutch have any pre-eminence, all which the Dutch have devised to weary the English Company. Requests some silk stockings, cups, also candlesticks and such things fit for a house furnishing. [One page. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 971.]

1051. William Webb to Edward Long, chief, and John Dodde, second in the factory of Siam. Has had an extraordinary fit of sickness. Begs to be acquainted with what news he hears from the President, for they cannot expect any ship this year for anything they can perceive by their letters from Jacatra. Are at present in worse state than they are in at Siam, for they owe a great deal more than they have [money] in the house to pay for, and cannot expect any relief. [*One page. 1052. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The poor box delivered up by Sir Thos. Smythe; 40s. to be paid to one of the women that complained of the Company to the Parliament House. Motions of Burrell touching the ships about building; masts borrowed of his Majesty to be repaid. Message from the Privy Council touching the recovery of the ancient sovereignty of the narrow seas; the protection of his Majesty's subjects from the insolencies to which they are subjected, and the Company contributing thereto. Letter read from Sir Dudley Carleton that it is cunningly insinuated on his side that the matters in difference may be ended in Holland without troubling his Majesty or the States, but letters since received by Sir Noel Caron that deputies will be sent over before the progress, further that they will do somewhat in the point of restitution, but for the other difference they will devise as much as is possible to make good their claims. Letter from Swanley from Plymouth that the Trial will be ready to put to sea within ten days; application of Swanton to be master. Eyres, Keightley, and Robinson to execute the office of husband till Michaelmas. Barrett's salary. Newport to be master of the Trial. Suitors for the porter's place at Crosby House; rent demanded by my Lord of Northampton for the same; the Company find themselves ill dealt withal by the steward of the Countess of Pembroke, with whom they treated wholly for the lease; Westrowe and Bell to take care of this business, and "to compel the steward to reason." Complaint against the Custom House officers for not entering the Coaster until she has contributed to Dungeness light and to the fleet employed against the pirates. Petition of Thos. Foster and Anne his wife, administrators of Alex. Edmundes, who was employed six years ago to Macassar and has never since been heard of, for his wages.

July 19.—Fotherby's house at Blackwall to be let. Old ordinance to be sold, the iron at 5s. the cwt. The house on Bridge House land to be repaired and the lease to be looked into. Concerning the ships building by Burrell and the stores for same. Proceedings of committees at Blackwall. [Ten pages. Court Bk. V. 12-21.]

1053. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. The directors of this East India Company assembled at Amsterdam have at length returned a good answer touching the sending into England, and as concerning the differences betwixt the two Companies they submit themselves to their (the States General) pleasure; whereupon the resolution of sending was immediately taken by the States. They are not resolved what their instructions or commission shall be; remarks thereon. Two ships lately arrived from the East Indies, their cargo valued at 20 tons of gold [upwards of two millions sterling]; two more expected. Report that only one English ship is on the way, and that the English have lost two by the Portugals taken about Goa. A French ship arrived out in great misery, having lost 80 men and but 14 alive, the Dutch report they relieved and suffered to lade at Bantam as a place of free trade. The Denmark ships settling in Ceylon, where these men judge they will come to ruin. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

1054. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sir Dudley Digges. Touching the sending deputies into England, and ships arrived from the East Indies. Shall be glad to know whether it be true that these men give out, of our loss of two ships by the Portuguese taken about Goa. All means used for the advancement of the West Indian Company; no man can yet see where the money will be raised; where they have been so many years settled, General Coen complains of want of money. 1057. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Barrett's business touching his salary. Newport named for master of the Trial. The two new auditors to begin with Harrison's accounts. Some man to be trusted at Middleburg to receive the Company's letters on the arrival of the Dutch ships [from the East Indies] and despatch them hence. Committee appointed to ship carpenters and settle their wages. The lease of the stone wharf at Blackwall held of the Bridge House to be viewed; to be let. Iron and brass ordnance at Deptford to be sold. Committee appointed touching the ship now building at Deptford; also for a ship to be built at Blackwall.

July 23.—Letters read from the Indies, received out of the Dutch ships returned this July, from Fursland, Brockedon, and Spaldinge from Jacatra, of 29 Dec. 1620 (see ante, No. 942), from Capt. Fitzherbert from Jacatra, of same date (see ante, No. 943), and from Capt. Batten to Sadler, late the Company's secretary, (see ante, No. 947), together with a declaration of how the Dutch employ the Company's ships, "whereby is gathered that their intent is to supplant the English and to gain the trade wholly to themselves." Committee for the letters to be sent by the Trial; to inquire whether Newport intends to go master. [Three pages. Court Bk. V. 21-24.] commissioners to his Majesty about the East India business, and that it remained only to nominate the persons to be employed. Cannot tell what account they make to give his Majesty satisfaction, but assures Carleton that this usage and neglect, if they do not look to it, will shake the amity betwixt this Crown and those provinces in such sort as Calvert believes the latter will be the first that will repent it. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

July 25-27. 1060. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The contract with Burrell for building the ship at Deptford to be examined and sealed. Boate's account to be audited and paid; his request to have the contract for building the ship at Blackwall, discussion thereon; the committee previously appointed for this service confirmed. Bartholomew Waytes and Valentine Markham, formerly elected auditors, sworn. Suit of the wife of Powell de Cooke touching her husband a mariner and inmate of St. Thomas' Hospital; also of Rich. Mathews, master of the coaster, returned out of Ireland with a freight of knee timber; payments to him.

July 27.—Burr to receive the Company's letters at Middleburg out of the Dutch ships from the Indies. Request of Sir Ferdinando Gorges for the loan of certain stores for a ship he is building of a new fashion, such as the Company might make use of, and that he hoped to find a way to outsail the Dutch. 1061. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. Nothing has passed at the Council Table to Carleton's disadvantage. Sir Noel Caron having assured the King that commissioners or deputies for the East India affairs should be in London before Midsummer Day, and they not having yet arrived, the King took it very ill to be so delayed and deluded, and Sir Noel was expostulated with. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Vol. CXXII., No. 46, Cal., p. 279.]

July 28.

1062. Sir Dudley Digges to Carleton. Thanks for letting him know that the writer stands so upright in the States opinion for the complimentary part of his speech before the Privy Council. If the States send not over sufficient power to conclude the matter in difference upon the plain letter of the treaty, Digges verily believes it will break all, and perhaps prove of pernicious consequence to both States. It is strongly pursued in court, and the merchants, finding that the Dutch in the Indies have no money, nor can hope for any possibility of means to make returns answerable to their infinite charge, are desirous to shake off the amity or at least the conjunction in traffic, the rather for that the Dutch by their fort at Jacatra have discontented the Javas and left the King of Bantam and the pepper trade, which is of more worth than all their Moluccas. Shall do his best to hold up the treaty; if these companies were free from jealousies, with the charge of 100,000*l.* they would get yearly 7 or 800,000*l.* Has received advertisement, as he is writing, from his colleague Mr. Abbott, that "our affairs" are worse in the Indies than ever they were; Cera ? [Coen] has used "our men" extraordinarily ill, and openly breaks the treaty in many points wherein he may hurt the English, so that our men are mad. The State will no longer endure the complaint of the merchants from all parts; order is given to manifest the King's power and strength in the Narrow Seas. Fears some blow will speedily be given if the deputies Carleton speaks of come not away, and resolved to deal plainly and honestly and call home Caron, which Digges knows is not to be expected if none but merchants come. Conjures him, as he loves the peace of the two Companies and consequently of the States, to be a means that some impartial men of the States body may come to see the truth and the proceedings of Caron. Without Mr. Gogh the treaty had never been concluded, nor will be again without some such honest umpire. [Extract from Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CXXII., No. 47, Cal., p. 279.]

July 28.

1063. William Hallidaie, Governor, Morris Abbott, and others of the East India Company to Sir Dudley Carleton. Thanks for his watchful care over their business. The breach of the articles in the points of restitution and sovereignty will take up the greatest part of the question. The business of merchandise will be so mixed up with matters of state that the commissioners should also be mixed, and deputies from the States be joined with deputies from directors of the Company. Desire that the deputies be instructed in all the articles of the treaty; conceive there has been a breach in most of them. Acknowledge their obligation to him. [*One page. 1064. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. It is resolved that three deputies of the States General and three of the directors of the East India Company shall go into England, but neither the persons nor the time are yet determined, save only the instruction and commission is being prepared, and that it is intended they shall be in England against the end of the progress. Sends translation of a letter from Sir Noel de Caron to the States General, which has been going from hand to hand and is published in print. Wishes him more discretion in writing or his masters in suffering things of such nature to be divulged, at which most of them are displeased. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Wickham touching the estate of her son, deceased, in the Indies, who had left a will and named Sir Thos. Smythe and Capt. Pring executors. Arguments touching the election of officers whose places are to be void yearly on 24 June and to be re-elected this day; whether by the balloting box or otherwise; the balloting box to be used "in all ambiguous and weighty affairs and in all gratuities above 10%." The first so elected. Robt. Bacon, secretary, Andrew Ellam and Christopher Lanman, bookkeepers, Jeremy Sambrooke and Adam Bowen, clerks in the counting-house, and John Capper, remembrancer; their salaries and gratuities. Richard Atkinson re-elected; his salary reduced from 150*l.* to 100*l.* per annum. Rich. Mountney's election suspended until he deliver in his account; also John Lamprier and Walter Mountfort's. Elias Bradshawe and Giles Marshall re-elected, but at the reduced wages of 10*s.* per week. The porter at Blackwall to have 20*l.* per annum. Motion of Mr. Misselden to have a letter written by him in French to one Mr. Scott, concerning the English and Dutch Companies returned to him, utterly refused; Misselden to be called hence, "for that there are some particulars therein that the court thinks will not be avowed." Gnoffiquia Machian.

1067. John Goninge and Michael Holman to the East India Company. The factories of this island Machian now settled; there are three places of residence, Taffasolo, the principal, where John Goninge remains supervisor of the other factories; Gnoffiquia, the more profitable, where Holman remains; and Tabelolo, the third, where John resides, all yielding cloves. The charges of the first three months for the garrisons in said factories and forts amount to 2,300 ryals of eight. Motir, within three leagues of this island, a place of great charge and small profit. The Dutch have left 75 persons, merchants and soldiers, in Taffasolo, in Gnoffiquia 50, and 40 in Tabelolo. The abuses of the Dutch have been referred to Jacatra to be decided; their interpretation of the 12th article of accord and of certain articles of instructions of the Council of Defence, touching the "custom, tax, and imposition" for payment of soldiers, fortifications, and other charges. The Dutch will not suffer them to have to do with the payment of the soldiers, mardykers (hired blacks to labour in the forts, &c.), but compel them to pay one-third in ready money upon their (the Dutch) accounts and pay the wages themselves in commodities which they force the soldiers to take to the great profit of the Dutch. Think they ought to pay in the same way as the Dutch, or else that both should pay in ready money. Intend to deny payments until they may have the managing of the business as well as the Dutch. Desire the Company to take order expressly for these things, and send their interpretation of the aforesaid articles at large. Houtman is now governor in the Moluccas, and in what they are wronged is by his orders. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 975.]

Fotherbye confirmed in his place and salary. Geo. Marshall discharged. Swanley and Hockett continued in their places and wages. Edward Seagar and John Waulker employed in the Company's storehouses, the former, "a pretty clerk and no exception to him," re-elected, the latter suspended. Robt. Washborne employed, in the Company's storehouse at the Exchange, to hold his place until Michaelmas only. Thos. Chauncey, John Blunt, Edward Withers, and Edward Lee, employed in gathering in the Company's debts, continued ; as also John Grimstone Hall, the Company's solicitor, to be employed only and paid as the Company shall need him. Boatswain Francis' wages reduced from 50*l.* to 30*l.* per annum. Sir Thos. Roe informs the Company that he had entered into communication with the Turkey Company for employment as ambassador to Constantinople ; that some of the Company had reported grudgingly of the 1,500*l.* given to him on his return, which he presumed he had deserved, if in nothing else, yet in the frugality of keeping their house ; also there was given him (as he understood) 200*l.* per annum pension, "but it seems the Company meant it not so," which was the occasion he could not pay in his adventure ; has paid in 800*l.* and is 300*l.* behind, which will be paid by Sir Henry Roe at Christmas. The Company ceasing the 200*l.* pension "the only thing that made him look another way ;" his offer of his adventure in the old joint stock refused ; through his intended employment and the increase of his family he will be driven to larger lodgings, desires to buy velvet hangings and Persian carpets ; these the Company bestowed upon him as a token of their good wishes, regretting they were so unhappy "as to lose the employment of so well a deserving gentleman, yet their loves should follow him." Aug. 23.—Consideration of the state of affairs between the East India and Muscovy Company, their debts, &c. Account of the Greenland voyage to be made up. Thos. Edge to bear his proportion. Letter read from Misselden. [Thirteen pages. Court Bk. V. 48-61.]

1080. Memorial to the Privy Council. Information touching the Muscovy Company and the state of their trade. Demand of the Emperor of Russia about three years since, being then at war with the Poles, for a loan of 100,000 roubles from his Majesty. The East India Company commanded by the King to join with the Muscovy Company in furnishing that sum, and Sir Dudley Diggs sent ambassador with 20,000*l.* to capitulate with the Emperor upon the conditions and privileges. About 10,000*l.* with the King's letter sent to Moscow by Mr. Finch, Digg's secretary, Sir Dudley bringing back the rest. Finch commanded by the Emperor to deliver up the money without further capitulation, and licensed to depart with letters to his Majesty. His provisions cast away. Finch stays at Archangel, and the Company know not how they stand with the Emperor. The losses of the Muscovy Company, specially by the fire at their warehouses at Archangel last year. Resolution of the East India Company, at a general court, not to adventure further in that trade, and like resolution of the Muscovy Company, whereby the trade is wholly deserted. The inconveniences that must necessarily follow, and the proposed remedies. [*Sir Dudley Diggs went ambassador to Muscovy in April 1618, and returned in October of the same year. Masulipatam.

1083. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. The Globe, after some few days' stay at Pulicat and landing her merchants there, arrived in Masulipatam Road 15th June, without staying at Pettapoli. Narrow escape of the loss of his vessel in going from Pettapoli to Masulipatam. The Globe sailed immediately after his departure, and yesterday, the 26th, before he got on shore was quite out of sight; hopes she will have a speedy voyage to Jacatra. Methwold has thought good to dissolve the factory of Pettapoli; if he might have persuaded, it should have remained another year, till better experience had been had of Pulicat. Account of sales and the state of the factory when he left Pettapoli; the porcelain unsold which with some lead was left in charge of Richard Smith, but not to sell unless for ready money. Has been four years tied to tedious accounts, and although he has earnestly requested to be freed therefrom, is by Methwold again appointed accountant and cashier in Masulipatam; complains of the uneven moneys which breed intolerable fractions not fitting merchants' accounts. Would rather serve otherwise without wages than with double wages be tied to these intricate accounts. Encloses, Sept. 10 1095. Consultations of the joint Council of Defence. In behalf of to the Netherlanders Company the Bantam, Admiral, Trowe, Hope, March 11, Harlem, and Moyen, and in behalf of the English Company the 1622. Moon, Vice-Admiral, Palsgrave, Elizabeth, Bull, and Peppercorn, to sail from Firando to the Manillas, ^{21 Nov.}_{1 Dec.}; the ships Moyen and Peppercorn to sail within twenty days, the better to surprise the China junks sailing to Manilla. All Chinese taken this voyage, seeing how unfit it would be to bring them together in their ships, for divers reasons expressed in former resolutions, to be set ashore in Manilla or some other place thereabouts. In the Dutch Lodge at Firando, 1621, Sept. 10.

The Council assembled by Wm. Johnson, admiral, to resolve what was best to be done for the good of both Companies with the fleet, and what ships shall be appointed to unlade the China junk taken by the Bull; also, whether to go with the rest of the ships to Cavita to view the enemy's forces. By the departure of Wm. Johnson, master of the Harlem, and Lebe Jacobson, master of the Swan, also of two men from the Moyen and Peppercorn, four members of the Council are wanting, whose places are to be supplied by Wynant Balke, merchant of the Harlem; John Vandmen, master of the Hope; Mathew Morton, master of the Peppercorn; and John Johnson, master of the Moyen. Aboard the Bantam, 1621, Dec. 11.

The Council assembled by Wm. Johnson to resolve what ships should unlade a China junk taken by the Elizabeth, and the force fitting to go for Cavita; four ships employed in unlading the two captured Chinese junks; resolved that the remaining six ships go to Cavita to discover the enemy's force. Aboard the Bantam, under the island Maravilla, 1621, Dec. 17.

The enemy's force found to consist of six great and two small ships, two galleons, and one frigate; resolved to guard the bay with four ships for preventing any of the enemy's vessels going for the Moluccas, also to intercept any vessels or junks that might come in for the bay. Also concerning the fleet taking in wood and water.
Aboard the Bantam in the bay of Manilla, 1621, Dec. 23.

Whether to use the Chinese junk taken by the Bull as an instrument to fire the enemy's ships in Cavita, or to send her to the southward, or to burn her; it is thought impossible to fire the enemy's ships without great danger and the loss of many men; the junk therefore ordered to the southward. The bay to be guarded with nine ships. Instructions in case of the discovery of a sail or more, under a penalty of 100 ryals of eight, to be paid to Robert Adames, vice-admiral, at their arrival at Firando, or to Wm. Johnson, admiral.

Information having been obtained that divers blacks and slaves had run away from the Spaniards, and were keeping themselves in the woods, in hope of getting to the English ships, and also that if the fleet were nearer the town of Manilla or fort of Cavita many more would come, being very hardly used, and rice exceeding dear, resolution to anchor so near the town and Cavita as shall be fitting, for the better getting aboard of such as might run away, and also to see if the English and Dutch prisoners can be released for other Spaniards; also to send a white flag to speak with the Spaniards concerning the English and Dutch prisoners. Ships appointed to intercept the expected China junks. Aboard the Bantam, at anchor before the castle of Cavita, 1621-2, January 30.

The Bull to take the place of the Peppercorn before the bay of Pangasinan, to remain twenty days, and then return to the fleet to Maravilla with all expedition. Aboard the Bull, at anchor on the north side of Maravilla, 1621-2, March 3.

The Moyen not having returned at her appointed time on the 6th March, and the Bull having been despatched to the bay of Pangasinan on the 4th for her relief, resolved to send the Harlem in search, and in the event of not meeting with the Moyen but with the Bull only, then to cast lots which ship shall remain at the bay of Pangasinan, and which shall cross betwixt Witters Island and the bay of Manilla. Aboard the Trowe, at anchor on the north side of Maravilla, 1621-2, March 11. [Together six pages. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 988.]

Sept. 12-14. 1096. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Report by the Governor of his interview with Lord Cranfield and the Lord Admiral, whom he told that the Company would "in no sort meddle with the furnishing or borrowing of the King's ships, but are much disheartened in that they do not see the State constant to right them, as it hath been first propounded to the Company; and that if they had not countenance from the State the trade must fall to the ground, which perhaps it will not be so easy to set afoot again;" no hope to draw this Company into further charge. Lord Cranfield forward to further the Company; satisfaction to my Lord Admiral, and the "honourable comfort" given by him to the Governor, by whom he sent this message to the Company, "that they should have their desire, and that he would presently move his Majesty for them." Declaration of the Governor that the Company is extraordinarily beholden to Lord Cranfield, in whom he found a real willingness to procure them satisfaction. Summons from the Lords to all the commissioners for the business of pirates, to attend their Lordships to understand the King's pleasure, that the proportions of his own and of merchants' ships shall be continued upon the Narrow Seas, as it had been formerly against pirates. Noted by some of the committee that this manner of arming to the Narrow Seas had proceeded from the State, and was never pressed by the Company, who had only made their general complaint to the State of the losses and injuries they had sustained. Mr. Deputy's opinion touching the effect of the staying of a Dutch ship : " then shall we also have restitution, and in conclusion we shall either find an honest trade with them, or else fall fairly from them, and find a better trade when we shall be severed than we can have by joining with them." Edward Lee's offer for part of goods in Russia. Hugh Catlyn, a prisoner in the hole at St. Katherine's 11 weeks, to be released on giving security to pay back imprest taken of the Company, and not going the voyage. No preacher to be sent into the Indies until the Company shall have treated with the Dutch. Request of the mother of Richard Wickham, deceased, in the Indies, touching her right to the goods of her son, whose executors are Sir Thos. Smythe and Capt. Pring. Freeman's offer for the Muscovy goods; also Mrs. Harrison's, to pay what is due from her to the Company. Letters received from Plymouth from the Tryal, that she sailed 4th present with 143 men aboard. The time being at hand when the Dutch commissioners are expected, it were very necessary that all things for the treaty should be prepared and put in readiness; report of the Governor's proceedings with the Lord Admiral concerning the differences depending, together with his Lordship's favourable answer and good respect towards the Company, promising to perform all good offices on their behalf. Two things considerable to be observed in the course intended by the King and State to right the Company; the charge of the ships to be employed for six months in the narrow seas computed about 24,000*l.* or 26,000*l.* for the King's ships, and 8,000*l.* for the merchant; the consequence twofold—either public if it should beget a quarrel between the two States, or private if the Company take the Dutch ships as they take theirs. Opinion of Mr. Deputy concerning the course intended to right the Company; wished them to proceed without wavering, because, if these abuses be not redressed, the sea being full of Dutch ships, theirs shall not be suffered to go forth. Consideration how to begin with the treaty; to insist first upon restitution, then damages, and in the last place sovereignty. The treaty would consist of two parts, form and matter; "for the form it was held fit that matter of several natures should be reduced to certain heads, wherein all possible brevity was to be used; * * * * for the matter itself it was wished that only substantial matter, and not trivial, may be insisted upon." All the Company's demands to be set down, wherein it be remembered their ships detained by the Dutch, which ought to be valued as they valued the Black Lion; and all the Company's complaints to the King and State to be made good. Ellam and Lanman ordered to look up all notes, papers, writings, petitions, instructions, and commissions, letters from the Indies, or what else may be useful for the treaty.

Sept. 14.—Report of the good condition of the Tryal when she put to sea. [Ralph] Freeman concerning goods bought of the Muscovy and India Companies for 12,000*l.* Sir W. Russell's debt. Direction to Capper, the Company's remembrancer, to put them in mind that at the going out of the fleet now making ready for the Narrow Seas they procure letters from the Lord Admiral for the safe keeping together, and not embezzling or breaking bulk of any goods

1097. Minutes of a court of committees to prepare for the treaty. Motion by the Governor that commissioners for the treaty might be thought on; his opinion of what is fit to be insisted on, and in what manner; to avoid all trivial circumstances, and come roundly to the point. Demands to be made of the Dutch, conceived by Lanman; for instance, taken in the Sampson and Hound, 100,000 dollars, which would have produced 15,000*l.*; the like computation for the other ships, wherein were taken by the Dutch 290,000 dollars, and would have returned 400,000*l.* sterling, sic (? 40,000*l.*). Form propounded by Mr. Deputy for the demands. The invoices procured from the Dutch by Sir Dudley Diggs and Mr. Deputy, held to be of good consequence, to be made use of in the approaching treaty; difference in the estimates of the Dragon's cargo of pepper; also in that of the Sampson and Hound; the restitution of goods brought into Holland; the valuation of the ordnance, of goods, provisions, and stores; also of the ryals taken in specie. The Governor's opinion concerning the valuations of the above. Sir D. Diggs, Levinus Muncke, Sir H. Marten, with the other commissioners, to meet and inform themselves of the state of the business, that they may be prepared for the same. Some of opinion to take no notice of the Dutch commissioners on their arrival, but held fit to use them with such humanity and courtesy as is usual upon the like occasions. [Four pages. Court Bk. V. 89-93.]

1098. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. The difficulty in removing Langrac out of France, without much displeasure in that court, hath overthrowen the whole cabal, and the election is fallen upon Aerssens himself and Bas of Amsterdam, in place of Gogh and Muys, who were recommended by his Excellency and desired by the East Indian Company. The procrastinations and delays do not spring out of design or artifice, but out of the natural constitution or rather imperfection of this State. Aerssens, Lord of Somersdike, son of the greffier, made excuses, but they would not be admitted, and in regard of his rank and abilities there is no exception against the choice. Bas played a trick of legerdemain with Muys, by whom he was employed for the gaining of voices, but used his credit secretly for himself, and had only one more vote than Muys. The States General no whit approve those of Holland for the choice of this man, who being the chief director of this East India Company, and more obnoxious than any other to ours, is too much interested in the cause to be an indifferent arbitrator; it is alleged in his favour that he having most power with this East India Company can go most amply instructed and best authorized. money is in copper; that is a small matter, as if he cannot put it off to the blacks Jourdain will make it good. As to Newrode's knavery and his saying that Longe's second, Dodde, deserved death, hopes it is not so. The bearer, Signor Colline, is sent Visitador here and to other factories, to place and displace whom he shall think fitting. Drifte, chief here, is to go for Jacatra, and his second, Phillippe, to remain in his place, and not to keep above three Netherlanders besides himself. Newrode to come from Siam and John Van Hassall to remain in his place at Siam, a subtle fellow, and Van Hassall's second, Daniell, remains in his place at Sangora. The President writes Jourdain he will if possible send a ship hither before the monsoon, but as yet she is not arrived. 1105. Richard Watts to the East India Company. Sends according to their order the dead men's accounts of the ship Bull and their wills. Thinks it needless to write about their voyage to the Manillas, as others who were the principals in the action will do so. There is such striving for greatness among their servants here, that nothing else almost is regarded. So much discontent amongst them here, that their ruin is to be doubted, and the Hollander stands as a spectator ready to take advantage of their weakness. The common sailor is grown so careless that if he could find opportunity he had rather serve the Spaniard than live under the whip or other strange punishment now in use; fears they will rather turn to the enemy than stand to their own defence. Writes not fables, but what he has seen and heard. It would make any honest heart lament the times that we live in this sinful Sodom of Japan. This house of the Company's is more like a "Pinteree" than a merchant's factory, every man for the most part affected to his own pleasure or his own private profit rather than the Company's business, as by their accounts will one day appear to their great expense and little gain. Instructions for Jacob Dedell, admiral, H. FitzHerbert, vice-admiral, and the council of eleven ships in behalf of the Dutch and English Companies ordered to sail for the coasts of Malabar and Goa. Fort of Batavia, 1621, Oct. $\frac{1}{11}$. Signed also as above.

Commission of the United Dutch and English Council of Defence appointing Jacob Dedell, admiral, and Humphrey FitzHerbert, vice-admiral of the fleet of nine stout ships and two pinnaces, about to sail for the coasts of Malabar, India, and the Gulf of Persia. In the Fort, Batavia, 1621, Oct. $\frac{1}{11}$. Signed as above.

Resolutions of the United Dutch and English Council of Defence. That the charges of one Company more than the other, in setting forth the fleet before mentioned, shall be borne in equal halves, as also the profit and loss, conditionally that the charges be referred to the decision of their masters in Europe; the prizes taken to be equally divided; trade to be attempted along the coast of Malabar if it may be without hindrance or prejudice of the exploit; the Dutch to be allowed to send ships out of this fleet, to procure blacks and slaves to people the islands of Banda, Batavia, and other places; one or two ships of the fleet may also hereafter be sent towards

The English Bear, arrived from the coast of Coromandel, not accepted for any of these services for reasons formerly alleged. In the Fort of Batavia, 1621. Oct. $\frac{1}{11}$. Signed as above. Batchian. allows the soldiers and not the married men to be paid monthly. At Roll's coming from Malayo he was told by the married men that they should be paid but half in money and they must take half wares. Would be well content to leave his wine and great cheer to save the Company from these large chancery bills. Could buy a sufficient house for 150 ryals, so that for two years' rent the Company shall have a house of their own. Wishes instructions for himself or Giles Cole as to prices of goods. Account of goods landed on 24 August. [Three pages. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 993.]

Sept. 27. 1110. Capt. Robert Adames to the East India Company. His Firando. last was by Martin Pring, of the James Royal. Left Firando for the Manillas 3 February with nine ships; of the English, the Moon, Admiral, the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, and the Bull and the Swan, equally taxed betwixt both Companies as to men's wages, victualing, and all other necessities. Account of their voyage, capturing junks, &c. Abuses of the Dutch, who were like so many devils or "ravening" wolves seeking after their prey; has fully certified the president at Jacatra. On 5th June was forced by foul weather from the coast of Manilla, five ships in one company and four in another, and having met in the Straits of Piscadores arrived safely in Japan 29th June. The Peppercorn and Dutch ship Moyen came from Jacatra. All the fleet appointed to go to the Manillas again. Must be content, though it much grieveth him, "seeing that 'nolence volence' I must take it upon me." Forced to make a poor shift to fit their ships. Ten ships appointed to go the second voyage for Manilla; of the English, the Moon, Vice-Admiral, the Palsgrave, Elizabeth, Bull, and Peppercorn. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 994.]

Sept. 28. 1111. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Gratuities to John Atkinson and Wm. Sare. Freeman's debt. Opinion of Stone, "one of the cities' council," that the Company cannot take assurance of the Cawsey, at Blackwall, in fee simple, as a freehold, without incurring the danger of the Statute of Mortmain; agreed that first a lease of it should be taken for 500 years, and after, if the Company please, they may take it in fee simple if Council so advise. Purchase by Roger Brettridge of 12 barrels of the Company's flat indigo. Desire of Fras. Olyver to supply the Company with cider. Disorderly going away of men from the James Royal in the Downs; above 100 men to be hired to bring up the ship; resolution thereon. Arrival of the Royal James at Erith this day. Committee to go down and discharge Capt. Pring, and bring away such of the Company's servants as are come home prisoners, especially George Ball, with whom the Company purpose to deal roundly, and to charge him home to an account. Firando.

1112. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. Refers to his last letters (see ante, Nos. 930, 963). Arrival of the whole fleet of nine ships, English and Dutch, from the Manillas, 29th June last; very few of the men died; they took and pillaged five junks, the Dutch using much cruelty in killing many Chinas after they had rendered themselves. Abuses of the Dutch in the Manillas; had it not been prevented by some, they had gone together by the ears to the endangering or loss of the whole fleet. The same fleet proceeds again this year, by order of the Council of Defence, from Jacatra, on the like voyage; the Hollanders admiral this year as the English were the last. The Peppercorn arrived from Jacatra 20th November with five chests of money and cloth, &c. The money came in good time to take them out of debt, for the lead is not yet sold. The captain of the Holland house made a voyage with Cocks to Nangasaki. Conrok Dono, governor, their enemy, who takes the Spaniards' and Portugals' parts, is the Emperor's factor for buying all matters. Two great Holland ships arrived this year from the Moluccas laden with provisions for their fleet, and some few cloves, and are to lade rice and other provision from hence for the Moluccas. The Swan, going to Jacatra, will convey this letter. The Emperor given to understand that both the English and Hollanders are pirates and thieves, and live upon nothing but the spoil of the Chinas and others; this is the utter overthrow of their trade in Japan, no one daring to come hither for fear of us, as the King of Firando tells us; he is newly returned from the Emperor's court, where he has married the Emperor's kinswoman, which has brought him into great credit; and he is the only stay now we have in Japan, and by his order the Holland Capt. Leonard Campes and Cocks are appointed to go to Yedo with presents for the Emperor and his Council to procure redress if they may, and prevent their enemy's proceedings, for the Emperor has sent orders that they shall carry out no Japons to man their shipping, or any ordnance, gunpowder, shot, or other warlike munition, and it was reported neither rice, bread, wine, nor flesh; but that is not yet done. If no redress can be got for these matters, "it is no abiding for us in Japan." Are staying till the coming of Conrok Dono to make an end of the prize which was taken last year; and if they prove these two friars to be padres (as they call them), then all is on our side; if not, all is lost. They have confessed in his hearing to the Hollanders, and yet deny it before the Japons; and the justice will not take our witness in our own behalf, although all the fleet would take their corporal oaths for it, and we have the friars own letters to witness against them. Six Portugal galliots have arrived this year at Nangasaki from Amacon (Macao?), and have brought store of silk and silk stuff, which has made the price fall ; the prices. The Hollanders much abused the English at the Manillas, Wm. Johnson, vice-admiral, the chief occasion, so that they had like to have gone together by the ears in the Manillas, to the total destruction of both fleets, the enemy being so near. Capt. Robt. Adames now appointed vice-admiral, much against his will, fearing, now the Hollander is admiral, they will do worse than last year. Sends copy of a letter from Wm. Nicolls from the Moluccas, relating the proceedings of the Hollanders there ; "truly their proceedings everywhere are almost intolerable, and they are generally hated throughout all the Indies, and we much the worse thought of now we are joined with them." The fleet of defence might, with little danger, take and sack Amacon, in China, which is inhabited by Portugals, for the King of China has not allowed them to fortify the town, and three quarters of the inhabitants are Chinas. If that town were taken, all the Portugals' trade in these parts of the world would be quite spoiled, both for Manillas, Malacca, Goa, and elsewhere, and the King of China would gladly be rid of their neighbourhood. This year three Kings of China have died, the father and two sons, the wives of the two brethren procuring the poisoning of them both, so that now a young man of 14 or 15, son of one of the deceased brothers, is King, which is a stay to their (the English) proceedings to get trade into China, as new petition must now be made ; and their joining with the Dutch to take China junks is ill thought of ; but the barbarousness of the Hollanders at Manillas last year as much. Commodities which the Hollanders have in Japan, but, as yet, little sales made. Fall in the price of pepper. All merchandise in Japan begins to rise ; prices of iron and copper. The change of our good usage is so altered of late that it maketh us amazed. Notwithstanding the privileges which they and the Hollanders have from the Emperors of Japan, that the Japons shall not execute any justice upon our people, yet this year, in the absence of the King, the justice cut off the heads of two Hollanders for being drunk and brabbling with the Japons, and their bodies were left in the fields to be eaten by crows and dogs, if some Englishmen had not buried them. The Japons call in the English (sailors) as they walk through the streets, give them wine and w*s, and then strip them of all they have ; many are kept prisoners for forged debts, which have to be paid out of their wages, "so that the trouble I have with them here is much, nor can their commanders curb them." Mutinies on board the Bull and Moon ; the sailors will have a sixteenth part of all prize goods, or else the ships may lie still in Japan. These generals say that the president at Jacatra promised them it should be so, and that each should have two or three months' pay delivered them here, though Joseph Cockram, cape merchant of the fleet, has no commission to do so. "God grant that in the end, when they have all they desire, if they do not fall off and overthrow the voyage, for I have heard some say that the worshipful Company, our employers, could give out no commission to war against either Spaniard or Portugal, nor no others, and that our ships came out of England upon merchant voyages, and not to be set out for men-of-war and kept against their will as slaves." Casting away of the

Unicorn on the coast of China, but all men saved, with a chest of money, wherewith they bought two barks to take them to Jacatra, one of which went to Amacon of their own accord. Christopher Bogan, the purser from the Unicorn, now come hither, merchant in the Peppercorn. Furbusher, the carpenter, with his wife and family in one bark, sent for Malacca, and so for Goa, to build shipping [for the Portugals is written in the margin]; some others sent that way, and some for the Manillas, and the rest kept prisoners at Amacon. The English Hope is either cast away, or else the company have revolted and run away with the ship and killed the master, or else carried him away perforce; Thornton and the surgeon suspected. Thornton's brother a pirate, and entertained by the Duke of Florence, so it is thought they will direct their course thither with the ship; "this is the opinion of the chief in our fleet." Osterwick going with Cocks to Yedo, for one is not to go alone to the Emperor; only Eaton left to stay in the factory during their absence, and Rich. Hudson, a "young youth;" the rest sent with the fleet, according to the President's desire at Bantam, as we must put an English merchant into each Dutch ship to look to the prize goods taken, as the Hollanders do the like in the English ships. Would make known the pride of some or most of the sea commanders, especially in these ships of defence, who take too much upon themselves, and domineer over all the merchants, who are thrust back, and sometimes in danger of their lives, for telling the truth and looking out for the Company's benefit. Joseph Cockram himself not free, although ordained Cape merchant of the English fleet. The English and Dutch mariners fall out ashore; one of each nation executed for murder. Repairs to the ships. Sends account of prize goods taken. Richard Short, the witness against the two Jesuits touching the prize frigate, run away to Nangasaki to the Spaniards and Portugals. [*Nine pages. Accounts brought in by Mountney, the Company's husband; he is admitted to the execution of his place from which he had been suspended, and admonished not to insist upon his innocency. Petition of Thos. Roswell, who was 28 months a prisoner of the Hollanders, touching his wages; also of Wm. Thomas, imprisoned by the Hollanders, on the same subject. Letter read from Robert Turberville, from Jacatra, of 4 Dec. 1620, complaining among other things of the evil condition of Edmund Lenmyes, master of the Elizabeth, partly for his bad life, and partly for his excessive waste, "together with his backwardness in the service of God." 1116. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. Here are three East India ships newly put to sea, with convoy of the General States, they being here informed his Majesty's ships in the Narrow Seas inquire after these East India ships both going and coming, which they conceive to be without his Majesty's order, he being so well informed of their intention to send about accommodating that difference, and therefore do their best to secure the passage of those ships. It were a great unhappiness any ill encounter should fall out upon this occasion, which may carry with it many desperate consequences. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

They have here upon Carleton's proposition called the East India Company, those of the whale fishing, the cloth merchants, and generaux des monnoyes, to consultation, whereupon to frame an answer which shall serve in like sort for the ground of their deputies' instruction, whose despatch is still delayed, and as yet they hear not who is chosen for Zealand. 1118. Richard Cocks to the East India Company. His last, dated 30th ult., goes with this by way of Jacatra in the Swan by Capt. Jacob Specx, a Hollander. Since Richard Short ran away to their enemies at Nangasaki six others have followed, but were overtaken; their names. The King of Firando has imprisoned the bark master and another Japon who carried them away, and it is said they shall both be put to death; if it be so, then the ringleaders of our runaways must also be executed. Conrok Dono not yet come to Firando from Nangasaki, where it is said he stayeth to put to death many Japon Christians for harbouring Papist priests secretly, and till he come the King of Firando will not suffer us to go to the Emperor with our presents. In doubt whether the King secretly takes part with Conrok Dono and the Papists against the English and stays them until the Spaniards and Portugals have prevailed against them at the Emperor's court, for the King's mother is a Papist Christian and the King himself and all his brethren are christened. Cannot remedy this, for Cocks (and Osterwick) cannot depart from hence without the King's leave and one of his men to go with them, neither dare any bark take them without the King's commission. What makes Cocks more afraid than all the rest, is the unreasonableness and unruliness of their own people, which seems every day like to be worse. Has sent after Short to have him apprehended, but as yet knows not whether he be taken. [One page and a half. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 997.]

1119. Robert Jefferies to the East India Company. The Council of Surat had notice lately of an unfortunate accident in the surprising of a caphila with Lahore and Agra goods, under the charge of Robt. Hutchinson, by Meleck Ambar, who with his army had invaded the territories of the Mogul, and through whose conquest our goods of necessity were forced to importune a passage. Is now suddenly, by consultation, called to a further and important employment in the Company's affairs which requires despatch. In their intended course for the Red Sea in May last they took two Portugal prizes with goods of value, which Keridge will describe more particularly. Could not reach Socotra, so made for the coast of Arabia Felix 25th May, the Hart and Roebuck making for the island of Massera to water and victual. The London, Andrew, Mayflower, and Primrose went within Cape Rosalgate, and on 7th June anchored at Tewee, where they had all sorts of refreshments; interference of the Portugals; "for their dishonesty we burned the town and spoiled many of their date trees." Bartholomew Symonds, our master surgeon, and Minister's boy were treacherously surprised, and John Hawtrye accidentally slain. Sailed on 22nd June towards the Cape at a road called Soar, whence they departed 8th August, met with the Hart and Roebuck, and came to an anchor four miles within the Cape, where is an excellent harbour, with several islands, where above two thousand sail may safely ride all weathers free from stormy furies, which place they called London's Hope; oysters, mussels, and crackers, which are far better than oysters, with fresh fish of many kinds in great abundance. All the fleet in company arrived in the road of Dabul 1st. Sept. Courteous treatment of the Governor. Commodities sold there and the prices. Was told by the people there that the English would do well to establish a factory there, where cloths, coral, lead, elephants' teeth, &c. would sell, the proceeds of which they might invest in goods proper for the Red Sea, Persia, and England. That country abundant in pepper; a ship of 500 tons might have her yearly lading. Keridge partly determined to further a factory's establishment this year at that place, which if omitted, the Flemings will doubtless enjoy the opportunity. Arrived in Chaul 18th Sept., where Keridge certified that Meleck Ambar had offered composition for their loss; is commanded to solicit in that behalf, hostage being given for his security. Arguments as to whether the new stock must answer the losses of the old, and how the proceedings of Sir Thos. Dale and Capt. Pring affected the same. The Governor's remarks. Committees to examine accounts of both stocks.

1121. Richard Fursland (President) and Thos. Brockedon to Capt. Fitzherbert. Having in their general instructions set down what is needful for the performance of his voyage, further recommend these particulars. They cannot send merchants upon the ships to take note of goods surprised, so pursers must be appointed in each ship to do so, and pursers' mates put aboard the Dutch ships to look after the division of the goods. To be frugal in taking in provisions, the men to have but four fresh meals in the week. Two thousand five hundred ryals of eight provided for the fleet; so long as the ships remain together but one purser to be employed to buy provisions. To sell or barter away the sword-blades and truck them for provisions. The Samorin owes the Company 3,083½ ryals of eight; if you get any satisfaction it is more than we can expect, but we cannot pay ourselves out of his vessels, in regard of the hope of settling a trade there. Oct. 9.—Examination of the six mariners belonging to the Pepper-corn and Bull, runaways to the Portugals at Nangasaki, but who were captured and brought back; sentence of death pronounced upon them all; and four of the principal offenders, Edward Harris, Thos. Guilbart, Wm. Harris, and Alex. Hix, hanged this day at the main yard arm of the ship they belonged to; the other two, Christopher Badbe and Luke Underwick, reprieved; it is hoped this punishment will breed a terror in the hearts of all others not to commit the like offence. Oct. 10. 1125. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Nicholas Leate to have 30 bags of pepper. Examination of Copland, minister, who served six years in the Indies and came home in the Royal James, as to a sermon of his before a fight with the Hollanders, "as if the action were unlawful, thereby disanimating the mariners, whereas it had been his part, the occasion being such as it was, by all good persuasions to have added to their courage;" explained that he was much wronged by the report; has written a journal of his voyage and is ready to deliver what he knows concerning the good of the Company. Goods belonging to Ball in the Royal James fathered by Jones; all goods brought home in that ship to be viewed. Information that Forrest and Stavelinge have removed themselves and put in common bail to the action brought against them by the Company, and that they have procured a seizure of some of the Company's goods for their wages. Hall to prosecute them as the Company's solicitor. Renewed motion of Downing claiming the adventure of Gresham Hoogan according to a deed of gift in trust for Hoogan's children. To know what ships the Company will send to the Indies in the spring; left to further consideration. Report of the committee and Treasurer Bateman touching the old and new stocks. Information of Hackwell, Churchman, Shapley, Mason, Silver, and Daniel, come home in the Royal James, touching the "miscovering" of the factories in the Indies; if Spaldinge stay long he will be a great rich man only by private trade; the Dutch carry themselves in all respects as in a settled kingdom of their own and with great contempt and tyranny towards the English; they warn the English president to their consultations by a hangman, they publicly whipped an Englishman for a small offence, they intrude into the company of the English, and provoke them with causeless quarrels, that so they may be drawn within compass of a fine which they leave without any remission; accuse the Company's factors of riotous and licentious lives and wasting the Company's stock, &c. Charges of maintaining affairs in Pulicat and other difficulties there through the Dutch, as the entertainment of unnecessary soldiers, &c. The Dutch hold them to the strict sense of all agreements which themselves violate or infringe. How they proceeded in the late conquest of Banda, which having depopulated and by that means terrified the inhabitants of Pooloroon, they took oaths from them as vassals and forced them to abandon the English and relinquish the former surrender of their island, which of their free will they so solemnly passed, and for certain years since so resolutely continued. 1127. Thomas Johnson to William Nicolls in Malayo. They are all in pieces and look to him to mend them. The respect of all articles with the Dutch is not thought of; can see no accounts nor how money is laid out for expenses till at the end of the month he sees their bills. There is not a black dares speak to him in their (the Dutch) presence. The King promises to get them cloves, but Johnson has neither wares nor money to pay for them. Dispute with Mr. Roll about the purchase of some lime; his usage of G. Cole. These and other abuses of the Dutch must be prevented; the English are curbed like slaves, so that flesh and blood cannot endure it; "either release us or send ropes to end us." Committees to unlade the James. Resolution to propound to the general court their unanimous agreement with reference to the old and new stocks. A dividend of half a capital to be declared to (holders of) the new joint stock out of the pepper in the James, to be delivered at 20*d.* per lb., any one preferring, to have his dividend in calicoes or carpets; also the expectation of returns from Surat and Persia, and not to be dismayed if the ships expected hence do not arrive before Christmas, as they may winter at the Cape and come away in the spring. Touching the election of three new committees; the scandalous reports of some brothers of this Company to be stopped; the committees to be cherished.

Minutes of a General Court. The Governor's relation of the return of the Royal James; the safe arrival of the four ships in Persia, and discharge of the moneys and goods designed for that place and Surat; relading at Jask of silk to the value of 9,000*l.*, notwithstanding the great opposition of the Portugal armada; that letters had been received overland from Surat, that two ships might be expected from thence and Persia to the value of 120,000*l.*, but not till late in the year, "by reason of their encumbrances with the Portugals," and that they had resolved to winter by the way rather than venture upon our coast unseasonably. The resolution of the Court of Committees touching the old or first joint stock, to which the second joint stock should allow seven capitals and a half; opposed by Cranfield, answered by the Governor, and confirmed by the whole court, and that all remains whatsoever in the Indies and elsewhere, both posse and esse, should be converted and turned over to the account of the second joint stock. Half a capital dividend ordered to the adventurers of the second joint stock either in pepper, two-thirds of Jambi and one-third of Tecoe, or in calicoes or carpets, provided always 700 bags of pepper be reserved for the use of the land; the price of Jambi pepper fixed at 20*d.*, of Acheen at 21*d.* per lb. to ship away. Masulipatam.

1129. Mathew Duke to the East India Company. The Globe arrived here about the beginning of June last, and departed 26 August with such lading as the two factories of Masulipatam and Pettapoli could conveniently provide; quality of the goods. The Schiedam, of Delft, from Jacatra, came to this port 15th September. Some 1,500 men, women, and children, including 45 Orankays or chiefs of those people, brought by the Dutch from the islands of Banda to Jacatra to death for a conspiracy against the Dutch General, and have taken oath of the inhabitants of Pooloway and Pooloroon to remain as their vassals, notwithstanding that they of Pooloroon have formerly subjected themselves to the King of England's protection, the English yet holding a fort there. Bantam still stands out, not affording any trade to English or Dutch. A French ship got her lading of pepper there, but the English and Dutch each demanding a third part, she set fire to the ship, gave out that the Bandanese did it, saved themselves by a frigate they had, and went away to Acheen to seek their Admiral. No news yet of the Manilla action, or of the return of ships from the Moluccas. Two days' fight between three Dutch ships and a Spanish plate ship with a million and a half ryals in her; she was driven ashore and saved all her cargo; two of the Dutch ships have returned, but the third has not been heard of since. The Dutch have also sent six ships to the coast of Malabar to meet with the Portugal galleons. Nothing remains to be sold in Pettapoli but porcelain, which must be sent to some other factory. Lead vendible; Pettapoli the best market for that commodity. Bargain for cloth between Wm. Methwold and the Dutch Governor, Andres Sere, to be delivered at Masulipatam.

Great experience of the Dutch of all commodities on this coast. All things here carried by "a single double voice" and not ordered by consultation. Has hitherto found good quarter on the Dutch part, but has not had to do with them in matter of moment till now. In commendation of the Dutch Governor. After the Globe's departure Methwold appointed Duke accountant and cashier in Masulipatam. Their merchandising at Pulicat, according to Millward's letters, goes roundly forward; charges of the fort there. A junk returned from the Red Sea from Mocha; met thirty-five junks from sundry parts, but found very bad market for the commodities they carried; two Holland ships from Surat at Mocha, but no English ships there. The Portugals sent to the relief of their galleons at Ormuz two other galleons; they purpose some exploit against the English. [Five pages. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1004.]

Oct. 15-18. 1130. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of Sir Richard Smith on behalf of Marmaduke Steventon, six years employed in the Company's service, for an increase of his wages from 30s. to 50s. a month. Richard Atkinson's accounts to be audited weekly. Committee appointed to audit and report upon the several accounts of Robinson and Lanman. Pruson to reform Fotherby's errors. Request of Hatch, come home in the James, to have his silks, &c. from the Custom House; held an injury that any man by private trade should forestall the Company's market. Petition of George Ball to accept such bail as he can give to answer the Company's action of 70,000*l.* together with the ne exeat regno; answered that he must have patience until now his account be reviewed by Lanman. Resolved to petition the Privy Council, setting forth his offences both against the Company and the State, and the Company's jealousy of his combining with the Dutch, and that their Lordships will hear the cause; the Governor to attend the Lord Keeper and present same at the Council table; Ellam to extract from the Company's letters the objections against him and his subtle and cunning proceedings.

Oct. 17.—At the suit of Sir Richard Smith, the wages of Marmaduke Steventon, sometime steward in the Company's house at Bantam, and now serving there as second merchant, to be increased from 30s. to 50s. per month, to begin three years before this date. Consideration touching the ships to be set forth this year; question whether the three ships now building at Woodbridge, Deptford, and Blackwall will suffice for the Bantam and Surat trade, considering that it is to be expected the Portugal will not thus give over, but will attempt our Persian fleet the next year as they have done this. Whether to pursue the trade of Persia; general opinion not fit to be continued except upon better terms; the charge of factors and carriage of goods, &c. leave little or no profit, unless they may have the whole trade of silk; arguments thereon and terms of letters of instructions proposed to be sent to the factors there, with letters from his Majesty to the King, "for the better countenance of the business;" the factors to be checked for their improvidence, with commandment to bring down all their goods to the water-side. Powder to be provided for three ships. Suit of Holloway to take out his remaining half capital in the old stock, in indigo. Request of Susan Viney, sister and executrix of Capt. Jourdain, deceased, concerning his wages and the performance of a contract between the Company and the deceased at his going forth to give three for one on his return, for 800*l.* left in the Company's hands; also of her son, Jonas Viney, for a box or cabinet containing jewelry, &c. which had belonged to Capt. Jourdain; Cary of the Custom House to view the same. Bail offered by Forrest and Staveley objected to; "to desire such favour [from Sir Henry Marten herein] as he may lawfully show the Company." The Court Book containing the contract made with Freeman about the Muscovy business to be shown to the Lords of the Privy Council.

Oct. 18.—Packet of letters which had been opened, received from Sir Thos. Smythe from a Dutchman to whom they had been given by a woman in Flushing. Examination of Jeremy Suker, purser of the factory of Masulipatam, who came home in the Royal James. He had been one year under Denton, two years under Methwold, and upwards of a year at Jacatra; his knowledge of rioting and private trade; as to the goods taken in the junks and what became of them; knew of one that either Capt. Pring or George Ball had converted to their own use; Spaldinge sold silks on his own account, but knew of nothing that Ball sold; they might have left Masulipatam two months sooner than they did; there were diamonds sold at Masulipatam of 4 and 500 ryals, but knows not who bought them. Knows not what ryals Capt. Pring had; never said Capt. Pring had received 3,000 ryals, but heard the purser had 1,000 ryals of his in sand gold which was sold to the Chinese at Jacatra; Spaldinge and Ball both held to be very rich, the former making the greater show, but the latter was thought to equal him in estate and the common voice was he was rich in diamonds. It was known that Ball should be called home in disgrace; the report came first from the Dutch at Bantam. As to Ball's inward familiarity with the Dutch at Bantam. Examination of Wyles; had lived a month or six weeks at Bantam before the house was given over, Capt. Jourdain then President; went surgeon in the Moon, and was in her when the junks were taken, which were committed to the charge of Ball, Spaldinge, Evans, and Pike; that Beaumont was put into one and Ufflete into another; that the chief riches were put into the Moon, including some store of silks; the junks were fully laden and estimated to be of 300, 200, and 150 tons; much of their lading was China ware and China roots. Sir Thos. Dale took upon him no charge of merchandise, only he took care that all should be kept safe, but Spaldinge, Ball, and the rest received all. Knows not what quantity of ryals Capt. Pring had; was ashore at Masulipatam, saw no quantity of silks sold there, but thinks the goods of the junks were left wholly with Methwold; a ship might have been laden with them from Bantam; thinks the only reason was the waiting for the return of a messenger sent overland to Surat to understand upon what terms they stood with the Dutch; they had 11 ships well furnished with victuals. Knew not why the Dragon and other ships at Teecoe came not to them, nor whether Capt. Pring had written to the Dragon to take heed to 1131. Thomas Johnson to Wm. Nicolls in Malayo. Has bought a convenient house for the English for 140 ryals, and could have gained 60 ryals by it three hours after. Roll granted him more ground for a yard, where are six of the Company's cocoa-nut trees; wishes to have some more. Goods he stands in need of, also some cloth for a flag, and word whether he may put it on the castle or no. Hopes they (the English and Dutch) will both live to better content, being parted houses. Payment of the married men. If he could persuade five or six Chinese to come hither they might find work enough. [Three pages. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1005.]

1132. The Privy Council to the sheriffs of London. Not to release George Ball, detained by a writ ne exeat regno, upon complaint of the East India Company, until further directions. [Domestic Corresp., Jac. I., Vol. CXXIII., No. 42, Cal., p. 300.]

Oct. 19.

1133. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Application of Lady Dale for payment of 100*l.* out of wages due to her late husband "to serve her present occasions;" it was answered there was much to be charged upon Sir Thos. Dale, viz., certain ryals of eight taken out of the fort at Jacatra by him, whereof the Dutch require restitution, and his arrears to the new stock, besides other demands; the accounts shall be made up within fourteen days, when she shall receive what shall be due to her. Payments to be made by Mountney; his and Rich. Atkinson's accounts. Information of the Governor, that he had been to the Lord Keeper, but found him retired into his chamber and had no access to him, but had acquainted the Lord President of the Council with the Company's purpose to exhibit a petition to the Lords against Ball, showing the petition itself; committee appointed to deliver the petition this afternoon. Motion to send two ships from hence and two from Bantam to Surat; debate thereon; no need to send any stock to Persia, "for if God bless us with the two ships upon their way, there will be so many calicoes and so much indigo as will make a glut except the Turkey merchants ship them away, and therefore the Company may well refrain one year's trading there, and in that time either they shall procure conditions such as may encourage them, or else resolve to fall off." Reasons against relying upon ships from Bantam. Number of ships to be sent to Surat; the three ships now to be sent "will do to the full," being between fourteen and fifteen hundred tons in all; better to lade cotton, wool, and such like on the coast of Coromandel, where it is to be had, than to expect it at Surat, where it is uncertain; Capt. Pring's opinion of sending ships from Bantam to Surat; he says Bantam cannot long hold out, and "when it shall open" there will be lading for 15 or 16 ships of the Dutch and English; also that if the Chinese trade could be drawn to Japan it would prove the best factory in the world ; the three ships now building will be a sufficient force to secure their stock by sea, the rather that it was observed from the letters received that an island has been gained from the Portugals where they had been accustomed to water, the want of which would much disable them to stay there. Capper to take the Court Books to the Lords as they had ordered about the Muscovy business. Examination of Capt. Pring as to the reasons why Ball laded not pepper at Bantam as well as the Dutch ; the man ashore who used to provide them was imprisoned, Ball was out of favour, and the Pengran cross. It was answered that Ball had confessed he might have had pepper to lade one ship ; but Ball, when importuned by Capt. Pring, answered him with the rising of the price of pepper, and the crossing of the Pengran. Examined also as to the three junks he had taken, which were said to be very rich, but fall out poor enough to the Company ; they were divided into the several charges of Sir Thos. Dale, himself and Ball ; knew not what became of the goods in those junks ; he was under President Spaldinge, who with Ball and the rest sent men aboard to take charge and dispose of those goods ; to which it was answered it was his part to have seen what was trusted ; an account is required at his hands ; every master had given a particular invoice when a prize was taken ; the Dutch also have invoices of all our ships taken by them, and he knows that the commanders at sea have the whole authority by sea. Pring answered that the President undertook the charge and he gave way to it, and therefore could give no account of that which he never took charge of, only he had endeavoured to stay the pillage of mariners what he could ; to this it was replied that complaint had been made to the commanders by sea of the mariners' disorders in immoderate pillaging, and the answer was, "Alas ! poor men, they have lost all, they had need get somewhat ;" that he should do well to show any warrant from the President to deliver the goods that he must have well known the worth of those junks, for he gave a month's pay to the mariners, which came to 3,000*l.* at least, and that a man of his judgment would not pay out so much of the Company's money without being assured of the worth of the service, neither can he be ignorant that silks were as commonly sold as oysters are here. "He still pretended ignorance of any such sales ashore. and laid all upon the factors, with which answers the court was utterly unsatisfied." Examined as to the reason of his staying so long upon the coast of Coromandel, and not lading a ship with the goods taken in the junk ; answered the question was improper to him, the President had the whole power. To his answers to why he came not to the rendezvous at Tecoe according to promise, it was replied that Masulipatam is a plentiful place, and provisions to be had in a short time, but the true reason of their stay was to sell the goods purloined out of the junks, and to confirm this a Dutchman that sailed that way reported that he saw the English ships (the Dragon, &c.) ride there with their top masts upon the hatches more like wrecks than ships. "The court declared themselves to be utterly unsatisfied with these answers, and where they expected that he would have been ready to inform unto the

Company the abuses of their factors he takes knowledge of nothing, but covers all." When asked to deliver his journal he said he had none and referred to his letters' but upon being pressed promised to deliver a journal. He was told the Company was advertised that in the junks was taken as much China ware and counterfeit gold thread as would have laden two ships. He had brought home a little musk, china ware, and roots, and some ryals, and desired the Company to require an account from their factors of the goods in the junks, and that Ball might meet him in their presence.

Oct. 19.—Minutes of a General Court. Sale of commodities with names of the purchasers and the prices. [Nine pages and a half. Court Bk. V. 139–148.]

Oct. 21–24. 1134. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Consideration of the factors' abuses in the Indies; among the rest, Ball and Spaldinge, "whose estates are swelled beyond the compass of servants." Offer of Thos. Jones, come home in the Royal James, to be examined, and "to discover much matter whereof the Company may make good use." The factors returned to be called to an account before they be paid wages. Application of Wm. Palmer touching an adventure of 400*l.* paid in his son's name, challenged by Francis Wadlow. Robt. Salmon to have 10*l.* for his brother Nathaniel Salmon, after the rate that others had upon taking the Portugal at Mozambique. Thos. Jones desires aid of the Company against Lady Dale, who had arrested him upon an account of 3,000*l.*; answered that the matter of arrest in no way concerned the Company. Contract read with Jones; to have 25*l.* yearly wages for five years, and at the end of that time, if alive, 500*l.* more, to forbear all private trade himself, and discover those that do trade privately. When asked which of their factors were private traders, he answered, "there is not a man free." Jones sworn and examined; his employments at Surat, Ahmedabad, Dabul, and on the coast of Coromandel. Denton is a proper merchant, and had done the Company good service, and himself good; his principal getting was by good husbandry, in fitting shirts for mariners, which yielded him good profit; believes Denton had a stock of 2,000 ryals; he was not at the taking of the junks, but at Patani, and in the fight with the Dutch. Sir Thos. Dale was present when the junks were taken, and had some pieces of silk given him by Capt. Jourdain; the junks were left in charge of Spaldinge, Ball, and young Jourdain. To the question of what became of the stock Denton carried to Bantam, "for it was conceived that this snowball grew bigger with rolling," Jones answered that Denton went on still trading and fitting commodities for Sumatra, but cannot guess the proceeds. Touching Spaldinge's private trade; had heard Spaldinge say he had more money than he knew what to do with, and by the common voice he is worth 20,000*l.* His reproofs of Spaldinge for private trade and what took place on those occasions. Knows of no private trade of Ball but a quantity of porcelain which he sold at Masulipatam. Further replies concerning the private trade of Ball and Spaldinge; the moneys Capt. Jourdain had, which belonged to the Company;

Jourdain's loan to Sir Thos. Dale of 2,000 ryals of the Company's money, after he had lost all in the Sun; and that the silk and other things sent home to Lady Dale were bought with the Company's money. The court informed Jones that Ball confessed that Sir Thos. Dale had 4,000 ryals of Capt. Jourdain, to which Jones made answer that it might well be, for they found near 2,000 ryals at his death, which Sir Thos. Dale said he had taken up of his wages.

Oct. 22.—Thos. Jones, one of the factors now returned, to be paid fifty pounds in part of his wages.

Oct. 23.—Examination of Henry Smith, purser of the Great James. She arrived at Bantam about end of May, and Sir Thos. Dale with his fleet in November. Reasons why Ball did not lade the ship in the interim, he was in danger both of the Pengran and of the Dutch, and willed this ship to stay in the road, both for the countenance and security of the Englishmen and goods there. No goods either for the Company's account or for private men were received on board, neither went any merchant in the James along with them. The goods taken in the junks and received aboard the James. No pursers suffered to go aboard the junks but merchants only once. The junks, when pillaged, let go; the goods landed and disposed of by Spaldinge and Ball; some delivered to Brockedon at Jacatra; certain China money kept aboard the Globe and sent to Japara. What goods the James took in at the coast either for the Company or particular men. Knows not what the Claw and Bee did at Catotanga; the fleet stayed two months to the leeward of Tecoe to take in provisions; the Claw, within twenty miles of Tecoe; and when the mariners came there they lived ashore and kept houses two and two together. Goods carried to Japan in the James, including five chests of silver and 5,000 peculs of pepper. Knows not why the goods taken from the junks were not laden aboard a ship for England, seeing there were enough for one of 500 tons, unless it was because they would not weaken their force by sending a ship away; thinks the fault was with Spaldinge, and not with Capt. Pring, who often desired to be gone. Jones and Ball came from the coast in a Dutch ship, and as soon as they arrived at Jacatra, Spaldinge seized on all Ball's goods and writings, but meddled not with Jones' goods at all. Never heard that any goods belonging to Ball were transported for England in any Dutch ship. It was the common opinion that Ball was worth 5,000*l.*, but knows not what diamonds or other rich goods he had. On his passage to Jacatra, Ball was dangerously sick, and made his will, and Jones, being with him then, must know what his whole estate came to; Ball was also sick homeward, but made no mention of his estate. Knows not what children Spaldinge hath in the Indies; has not heard of any. Capt. Pring brought home some musk, and is likely to have other rich goods. The master, the preacher, and another brought home six peculs of cloves. Had heard Ball would not buy pepper at Bantam because it was dear; when they stayed so long there they were forced to careen their ship through the springing of a leak.

Oct. 24.—Petition of Thos. Read, who went out in the Merchant Hope and came home in the Royal James, for recompense for building a junk, for a hurt he had by a cut in his foot in the Company's service, and for a cloak like those given to others that had been in the fight with the Dutch. It was not thought reasonable he should expect recompense for work done when he received the Company's wages, neither for his hurt, because, though his hurt hindered his service, yet his wages went on; to have a cloak if any cloth be left, otherwise fifty shillings to buy him one. Letter read from the Lords to the Governor, recommending the kind and loving usage of the King of Denmark's subjects by the Company's people in the Indies, "so far forth as they hurt not the trade and privileges of the Company." Skinner moved some further matter touching a joining with the Danes in the trade there, but the court answered they would recommend them to their people according to said letter. Capt. Pring's opinion that there was no possibility of now sending a pinnace to Bantam to order ships from thence this year to Surat; resolution confirmed to send three ships from hence, and not to trust to any further force from Bantam. Capt. Pring expostulated with on the unnecessary charges of trimming the Royal James; had he sunk her instead he had done the Company a service; to write to the Indies to sink or burn unserviceable ships; the men to be placed in the other ships that are now supplied with blacks, to the Company's great charge. Stores in the Indies worth 20,000*l.*, and enough to rig sixteen of the best ships; to repair an unserviceable ship costs five times as much as the ship will be valued at on her return. The Royal James to be brought into dock at Blackwall; some persuaded that the King would be content to give a lesser ship newly built in exchange for the James. Capt. Pring's answers to the charges brought against him of private trade; one of the committees testified that if Capt. Pring did do himself good by a little private trade in goods not of the ship's bulk, the Company would wink at it, but others remembered that the Company consented to give him 40 marks salary per month that he should forbear private trade. The Company would keep nothing back of his wages, but he had no reason to expect favour from them, which neither his service nor other carriage had deserved. Was much blamed for staying so long at Bantam and not protesting against Ball. He desired that Ball's errors might not be laid upon him, but that Ball himself might answer them. It was further pressed that his not coming to the rendezvous according to promise was the cause of all the disasters in the Indies, to the extreme prejudice of the Company and dishonour of the State. The deputy affirmed that some of the Lords had said that the whole misfortune that fell upon the Company in the Indies proceeded more out of the insufficiency of their servants and commanders than from the Hollanders. Ordered that George Ball and Capt. Pring meet at the court the next day. The wardens of the "potticaries" [apothecaries] to be requested to attend to give their judgment of lemon water reserved for that purpose. Rich, executor to Abraham Bond, deceased, to receive after the rate of 5*s.* per ryal for ryals belonging to said Bond. Petition of John Fary, come home in the Royal James, who had served the Company nine years as a sailor and assistant to the factories in Siam and Camboja, for his wages; is charged by Gourney to have received the Company's goods to the value of 1,000*l.*, and told that there is said to have been much abuse between Fary, Gourney, Longe, and Pitt; the books to be examined. Complaint of Wm. Burdick against Bowry's executors receiving his wages. Suit on behalf of Isaack Van Paine, a Dutchman, to be made a freeman of this Company, for which he was contented to give 50*l.* Request of Hatch, late master of the New Year's Gift, to have those silks shipped home in the Royal James; it was answered, he deserved no favour from the Company, that he was insufficient, had carried himself very weakly in the fight with the Flemings, having denied to fight with them because they were our friends, and was held in the Indies no way fit for employment, therefore favour he must expect none. If he have his wages it is as much as he can demand; as for the silks, they are goods gotten by private trade, and therefore belong to the Company. It was afterwards resolved to put him to prove where he bought those silks, and that they were not purloined out of the junks, yet to give him some reasonable price for them, and the Company to have them. Examination of Bartholomew Churchman. The Hope arrived at Bantam 15th August 1621 (should be 1618, see ante, No. 245) under the charge of Capt. Newport; Bartlett (Barkeley) was dead, and Ball had succeeded as President. At his first coming, Ball hugged him in his arms; the first question he asked was, whether they had brought any money; told him 25 chests of ryals, but wished him to be very secret, lest the Dutch should prevent their market; to which Ball answered, "Tush, fear not, they have not money to buy them victuals." Saw great store of pepper, which Ball said belonged to the Dutch. Complains of his pride; that he fell out with Churchman because he gave him not the title of President; that he kept state, and went with a guard of 40 blacks, which he maintained at five or six ryals per month each man; that he sent for the money ashore and wished Capt. Newport to go to the Moluccas, who refused both unless he might lade, Shortly after Newport died, and then all the money came to Ball's hands, who from August to January neither provided any pepper nor laded one ship, while the Dutch had laded 11 ships. He afterwards laded the Unicorn only. Was not present at any of the fights with the Dutch; but there was nothing done on the English part worthy of the name of a fight. Touching Coomes' (Coen's) journey with the united force of the English and Dutch, says his design was upon Lantar, but fears there is a plot upon Pooloroon to get away the ordnance of that fort from the English. Ball might have laden all the Company's ships that were serviceable; if there were any impediment it was only the Pengran's demand of custom for the three junks taken by our people, reckoned at 40,000 ryals; also for another junk taken by Ball, "which though it were shortly delivered again, yet there was as much missing as the custom amounted unto 11,000 ryals." 1136. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Evelin to be paid 500*l.* for 150 barrels of powder, but as "for delivering any moneys beforehand [for the next parcel] the Company is not in plight to do it." A course to be thought upon that the ships now making ready for the Narrow Seas against pirates may be employed so as this Company may receive some benefit thereby. Capt. Pring called in; he could neither condemn Ball nor clear him, he must answer for himself; reasons why the Company conceive Capt. Pring willing to excuse Ball, whose abuses are so gross that he could not but see them, "which was ill taken at his hands." His neglect of duty in not taking an inventory of the goods of the prize junks, and not doing his best to procure lading; the fault cast upon Ball, who was sent for and questioned. Towerson explained it was Ball's brother who informed the Company George Ball was ill thought of, because he had accused some of the committees. He had bought pepper, but the Dutch forestalled the market with ryals and diamonds. Kewee, his agent, who dealt for him for pepper, was clapped in prison; he could have laden one ship, but found the price too dear and his agent was then 6,000 ryals in his debt. The country yields yearly 70,000 bags of pepper, of which the Dutch bought 2,400; the residue of two years was in the country. Was pressed why he had not laden for pepper at Acheen, Priaman, and Jambi, &c., but would answer nothing; if they would frame interrogatories he would answer them upon oath. He was forced to secure himself with a strong guard, the Dutch being there 200 strong and every day ready to go to blows. Received intelligence of his disgrace through the Dutch. The Company surprised how he, who became so careful of the factories, was so careless of his commission, "but wished him to consider that so strong a commission neglected, and by occasion thereof so many of his Majesty's subjects lost, such a part of the stock of the whole kingdom wasted, and such ships perished, would be required at his hands in a higher place than where he then stood." His further answers "understood to manifest his wilful error;" impossible that he could have come home not worth 100*l.* He confessed he might have laden home the Unicorn, "which if he had done he had saved the ship and so many men's lives as perished in her, which was also to the State." Sir Thos. Dale, upon Ball's knowledge, lost all his estate when the Sun was lost, and yet he had by him when he died near 2,000 ryals, besides silks sent home to Lady Dale. Capt. Pring again examined; he was told "that both in the matter of lading, in that of the junks, and in his other behaviour there he had not carried himself like a man that understood his command ;" the reasons. The opinion held of him before his going true, that he is a good navigator, but not capable of any great command, neither would any man of virtue have broken his word in not coming to the rendezvous at Tecoe according to promise, the failing whereof produced all their loss of shipping in the Indies. On the arrival of the Bull, when the peace was published, he did so far undervalue the honour of his commission and of the English nation that he went three times aboard that base fellow Coone (Coen), when Coen never vouchsafed to come aboard him, but sent a substitute, and last of all he embraced the accord with the Dutch without first insisting upon such restitution as was warranted by the articles. Samuel Moore, servant to Lord Zouch, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, to receive two-thirds of the wages of his brother Benjamin Moore, gone factor in the Lesser James, according to a letter of attorney. 1137. Sir Walter Aston to Sir Dudley Carleton. Two caracs lately come home richly laden by the Portugals at Goa ; they encountered seventeen sail of Turkish pirates, who set upon one of the caracs, the other got into Lisbon, and after two days' fight, she having sunk two of the pirates and spoiled some others, they saw small hopes of taking her, and fired her within three leagues of the shore, and all perished, she being valued at near three millions of ducats ; the other carac was nothing near so wealthy, this being a new one, and so they strived in the Indies to lade most in her. 1138. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The Royal James arrived at Woolwich. Petition of Elizabeth Wickham for the estate of her son, who died in the Indies ; the Company knew of nothing due to him, and must clear with Sir Thos. Smythe and Capt. Pring, her son's executors. Demand of Jonas Viney for allowance for 100 ryals taken by Denton from a box belonging to Viney's uncle, Capt. Jourdain ; "it appears there rested in Capt. Jourdain's hand two chests of ryals belonging to the Company, which (if they perished in the ship with him) perished as his goods, not as the Company's goods, for that he never meant to bring them to the Company's account." Out of 1,500 ryals which the Flemings suffered Welden to carry ashore, he played away 1,000 at dice. Jonas Viney, but a youth, is desired to bring some friend better experienced to receive satisfaction from the court. Particular care to be taken of the goods of Denton, come home in the Royal James, "and to alter the property of them, lest he put a trick upon the Company." Denton can claim nothing in them ; besides they are the proceeds of private trade from which he is bound. Moreover Denton and Welden are charged with 1,100 ryals taken out of the fort at Jacatra, which the Dutch challenge from the Company. Lady Dale's charges against one Owen for ryals. Petition of Robt. Gayton, who went out in the Charles and came home in the Royal James, for 60 ryals, which he said he had delivered to Courthope for the Company's use upon his bill to receive three for one at his return to Pooloroon, that having suffered shipwreck in a junk and thereby lost that note, he went to Jacatra, where for want of that note he could not receive the money. Desires to have them here. It is answered that Gayton hath no reason to expect payment here until it may authentically appear that they are due. Information of the Governor that the last day after Capt. Pring had been in court he followed the Governor home and desired his wages, said it was to no purpose for him to come any more to the court, he had said as much as he could say. It was answered that Capt. Pring hath made them no fair answer; he hath not performed his commission and instructions in the account of the junk; he hath broke bond and covenant in private trade; he suffered the mariners to pillage, he came not to the rendezvous, and thereby occasioned the loss of all their hopes; he did, in a sort, submit to the Dutch ("it was answered that for Ball they had gone so far") and joined with them before any word spoken of restitution; and therefore it was held fit that he give a reason of these his doings. Consideration of the course to be taken with Ball; it was said there is coherence between him and Pring; some thought the Star Chamber, some the Council table, but others that it should be left to the direction of the Lords. Whether to use rigour to these men or no before they have had use of their testimony against the Dutch. As for Ball they had gone so far they must now go on; opinion that he and Pring should be proceeded against jointly; the inconvenience less in provoking than in sparing them. Jones has shown himself one of the same tribe by fathering aboard the James what belonged to Ball. [Three pages and a half. Court Bk. V. 178-181.]

1139. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. The designed deputies from the States to his Majesty are at this present at the camp with the Prince of Orange, accompanied with Mons. Gogh and two others of the States, to communicate to his Excellency the project of their instructions, and therein to take his advice, of which having knowledge before their departure, he thought fit to send his Excellency a copy of his last proposition to the States General concerning the differences now in question betwixt his Majesty and the States. Petition of Thos. Hews for the dressing of cloths. Demand of Jonas Viney, nephew of Capt. of Patani in goods, part of a far greater quantity exacted from the Company by that Queen for protection of the English against the Flemings, "who at that time being proud of their victory at sea, and having the odds of number ashore, did draw their swords upon our people in the street, and threaten to burn their houses; whereas the Queen of Patani had undertaken the protection of our people before without any such second consideration;" the court having formerly ordered that all returns of gifts for presents to any heathen prince shall be to the use of the Company, approved the seizure of these goods by Denton, their factor in Patani, and saw no reason to break their order by making any allowance to the petitioners for the same. 1142. Thos. Johnson to Wm. Nicolls. Accounts between Roll and the English; a baser fellow never breathed than I have to do with; cannot now send the accounts. Begg he will be mindful of him and not judge amiss of him wanting money, for he has bought a house. Whether he must allow one third of the Portugals wages who are assistant to the Dutch. The Dutch are so full of malice that they have forewarned all that they can that they will sell the English nothing, or do ought for them. Has no cook, forced to dress their meat themselves. 1143. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Prusson appointed overseer of the Company's sails, cordage, and masts for one year from Michaelmas last, with a salary of 50*l*. Instructions given to Mountney, clerks of the warehouses, store receivers, and accountants general.

Nov. 2.—Petition of Wm., brother and administrator of the last will of Robt. Larkin, deceased, for his wages, as had been agreed on at a court held 15 January 1609-10 (see 1st Vol. of Calendar, p. 204), also for certain goods and moneys. Request of Edwards to have the bond wherein he stands bound for his brother. Brettridge, "a great adventurer," to have 12 barrels of indigo. Personal application of Lady Dale that the account may be summed up between her husband and the Company; discussion thereon; Sir Thos. Dale supposed to have lost all when the Sun was cast away. Order for payment of 70*l*., given by some of the Company's servants in the Indies towards erecting a school in Virginia. Four culverins borrowed by the Virginia Company to be applied for. Petition of John Farie, returned in the Royal James, for his wages; he is charged with moneys belonging to the Company in Gourney's hands at the time of his death, but said he was not with Gourney when he died, that the goods were left with Johnson and Pitt, who consumed much of the stock; Farie requested to set down what he observed of the factories, and of the well or ill government of their people, "and if they find that he deals faithfully and freely with them he shall find they will deal well with him for his wages." Concerning the wages of George Cokayne, late the Company's factor at Succadana, deceased, whereof his mother hath received 100*l.* here. Lanman to make a collection of the factors in the Indies to the southward. All the cloves, including those sequestered from Denton's account, to be sold at 7*s.* 4*d.* the lb. Motion of the Governor that his Majesty's letter sent to Sir Thos. Smythe about a year past, touching the Persian trade, be read at the next court. The Governor put the Company in remembrance that they suffer much in the Indies through the insufficiency and ill condition of their factors, and that some wholesome remedy should be sought for this growing mischief; Henry Robinson, one of their own body and a committeeman, content to undergo a voyage to the East Indies for the setting right the factories there, but it will be necessary to strengthen him with power sufficient over all there, including the President; the motion accepted, and thought fit that he go in the quality of Supervisor General; "this kind of authorizing is not without precedent, for the Syndichi of Venice do examine all their factors in Candie and elsewhere." Thanks to be given to Robinson for his kind offer, and afterwards a committee to fall upon what terms he will undertake the voyage.

1144. A brief answer to the most material points of the Netherlanders protest given in the $\frac{5}{15}$ November 1621. Concerning the restitution of ships and goods taken presently after the publication of the accord, according to the sincere meaning of the contract; how falsely the Dutch accuse the English in not furnishing their part of ships for defence; how far the English have derogated in the least degree from the sovereignty, either in Jacatra, the Moluccas, Amboyna, and Banda; the besieging of Bantam, the natives absolutely refusing any conference of peace with the Dutch, unless they will raze their fort and leave their kingdom of Jacatra; and the delay of their fleet's departure for Goa. In conclusion that seeing the Netherlanders are so contentious, false, and impudent in all their proceedings, not shaming to affirm or write anything that makes for their purposes, the undersigned have thought fit not to answer this their protest so fraught with untruths, but refer themselves and their proceedings to the censure of any competent judge, before whom they are ready to justify all their proceedings. Mrs. Greenwell's dividend "made stay of because she is behind her payments in the new joint stock." Touching the contract with Burrell to build a ship. Proposition to exchange the James Royal with the King Hall. The Company's solicitor about a suit against one of the sailmakers. Arbitrators between the Company and Forrest and Stavely, come home in the Royal James. Suit of Thos. Hackwell, Emanuel Butta, Bartholomew Churchman, and Richard Newall, employed as masters and masters' mates, for their wages; they were told the court expected their journals, but they excused themselves by their captivity under the Dutch, the loss of their instruments, &c., but said they were ready to make a true answer to any question that should be demanded of them; their wages to be paid, but for the time they were prisoners to have a third as others in like cases, but first to be examined; to attend to-morrow (see ante, No. 948). Committee appointed to attend the Lords about George Ball. Demand of Capt. Pring for his wages; is pressed for his journal, which he promises to bring in. Application of the creditors of John Holloway, insolvent, touching his adventure. Suit of Mrs. Viney, sister of Capt. Jourdain, and her son Jonas touching money found in Jourdain's comptoir at the time of his death; accounts to be first cast up between the Company and Jourdain. Sir Thos. 1146. Petition of George Ball, merchant, to the Privy Council. Has been employed by the East India merchants beyond the seas about ten years, during all which time he received strange usage. Upon his arrival in England they charged him with an action of 70,000*l.*; his person, estate, and books of account have been attached, and he is oppressed by a multiplicity of suits and unjust calumniation. 1149. The President and Factors of Surat to the East India Company. Were constrained to give the Governor of Surat 1,000 ryals to procure the freeing of their business. Discouragements for elephants' teeth. Prices for which lead has sold and indigo has been bought. The prizes taken (besides the mariners' shares) yield about 9,000*l.* sterling. Trade in coral; good hope of sales now that the wars between the Mogul and Deccans are compounding. Fear polished coral will find no vent either in the Red Sea or in Persia. The Company may send 500*l.* worth yearly of amber beads, both white and yellow. Bulgaria hides all sold. Have countermanded the buying of Bengal silk upon the prohibition received. Quicksilver all sold. Cloth of gold will doubtless sell to good profit; it has all been sent with all their other fine wares up to the Prince by his appointment and upon his adventure. Recommend the purchase in Florence of satins brocaded with gold and silver, but none with a black ground, for the Prince desires them, on whose satisfaction in such services depends his favour to them. Have also secretly sent the jewels to court. The double looking-glass which cost 100*l.* sold for 1,250 rupees, and the three rubies rated at 90*l.* are sold for 1,400 rupees. The agate pictures will not make the profit expected by reason of great quantities brought hither by the Venetians; they now yield but 50 per cent. profit, whereas in times past they would yield three for one. The great pearls invoiced for 340*l.* sold for 5,000 rupees. Advise a constant yearly supply. Four of the ancient factors will return in the next ships, Wm. Biddulph, Jas. Bickford, Edward Haynes, and Robt. Hutchinson. To appoint a successor to Thos. Raison when he surrenders his place, if Giles James is not entreated to remain. One third of his salary paid to Thos. Keridge from the time of relinquishing his place until his coming away. Allowance to Thos. Thornbury for the expense of the Hart and Roebuck. Mean to send to the Red Sea this year. [*Two pages. Suit of Ann Berden for relief against John Berden, who, executor to her husband, deceased in the Indies, "doth seek all extremities against her and her children." Carpets to be sold at 5*s.* instead of 6*s.* 8*d.* the rupee, more being expected home by their ships. A general court for sales to be held. 1151. John Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton. 1152. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Report of the Governor of the proceedings with George Ball at the Council table; he desired that the charges against him might be set down in writing and he would answer them; it was left to the election of the Company whether they would proceed against Ball by way of a bill in the Star Chamber or otherwise by a committee from that table. Complaint of the clerk of the Council table that he is neglected; fees to be paid. To advise with counsel whether their proofs against Ball will hold plea in the Star Chamber. Sir Randall Crew, the Attorney and Solicitor General, Sir John Walter, and Mr. Cox, a Solicitor General and an Attorney of the Star Chamber, to be retained in this cause; committee appointed “to follow the business.” The charges for the crowner’s quest and the burial of Henry Kirwarton, slain casually with a piece of the Company’s timber, coming to 28*s.* 10*d.*, to be paid. Touching the disposal of 79,500 lbs. of pepper come home in the Royal James, and of other goods. Discussion on the offer “which had proceeded lovingly from Mr. Robinson of his going into the Indies.” Mr. Munnes entreated not to take it in ill part if he were named as the fittest man to accompany Robinson. The Governor glad to hear a concurrence in the nomination of Munnes, and said “that their affairs in the Indies lye a bleeding, and that partly by the dishonesty of some factors, partly by the weakness of others that are overmatched with those that govern there for the Dutch, the Company’s stock hath been strangely consumed and lost to the general hurt of the adventurers and the utter undoing of some of them; that Mr. Munnes might discern the hand of God beckoning him to undertake this great work of certifying the factories and restoring the trade,” &c. This motion seconded by the deputy and divers of the committees, but Munnes excused himself “by his own weakness of body and the want of those other endowments requisite to so weighty a work.” He is “pressed with an unanimous consent of the whole court,” is promised unlimited powers, “that he might ex re nata begin and reform as he pleased,” and that he shall go in the Royal James

"and in such equipage as himself shall hold fitting," that if he should return with an account of half their stock lost, they will account he hath saved the other half. "This and much more was spoken to spur him on, but he persisted in excusing himself." He is entreated to think further of it against the next court. Robinson called in and told other matters had directed their discourse concerning his employment, and desired him to respite their answer. [Four pages. Court Book, V. 200-204.]

Nov. 12. 1153. Richard Fursland and Thos. Brockedon to Wm. Nicolls, agent in the Moluccas in Malayo. Acknowledge receipt of his several letters. Notice his passage to Macassar with the dangers he escaped, and what passed with the King there, and the hindrances sustained through the non-delivery of the piece of ordnance, his departure hence, coming aground, chasing a junk, his ill success and hurt of his men, his arrival at Amboyna, departure for Banda and what passed between him and the Dutch General, his proceedings on Lantar and Pooloroon, and return to Amboyna. All this needs no reply, only concerning the inhuman dealing of the Dutch, there is no way to help themselves but by advising our masters of their unjust proceedings, which they have done to the full, and must now with hope and patience expect remedy from them for all wrongs, which are so extreme as nature can hardly endure them. Perceive the time of his departure from Hitto and arrival at Batchian and landing two factors, Wm. Johnson and Giles Cole, with a cargo for defraying their third part of the charge there. Commodiousness of the place; fit for careening of ships. As the Dutch have a factory there, he did well to settle one for the English also. Touching the Dutchmen's excuse in not permitting him to sell any goods because they had no order from the Governor. Further take notice of his arrival at Malayo and entertainment from the Governor. Have done their best to remedy the unruliness of the seamen; to let Mr. Alexander know of their discontent at his proceedings. Also take notice how he has disposed of Anthony Wallis, Crofte, Harrison, and Dent, and what he writes concerning the finishing of Gnoffiquia. Concerning the monthly accounts and the excessive charges of the Company in that place; cannot remedy this; they must be paid if the English will have trade there: the articles are so plain in the point of paying their part of the charges that he need not have made any difference herein. Are not ignorant of the great gain the Dutch make by paying with commodities. If Houtman take any advantage against them, protest against him and send the same to the writers. The charge of the Governor's table excessively great, but both there and at Amboyna, where it is greater, the Dutch will make them pay their part of it. Send the Dutchmen's answers to all complaints received from thence, according to which the English are to rule themselves, "for although many things are against our wills and reasons also, yet thus they mean to proceed with us, and their wills are laws where they command and have authority." Any dispute or differences which may arise concerning the charges or other matters to be referred to the writers. Instructions touching accounts. For the rating of commodities, if they be too high priced, then to agree with the Dutch to set them at a lower rate, such as they may be vented at, which is but reason, and the Dutch ought not to deny them herein. A poor quantity of cloves appointed to their share. Too well know how common it is with the Dutch to maintain any untruth, though never so gross. The dissolution of forts in those parts will cause prejudice to their affairs; they know that the Dutch seek the utter ruin of their masters' affairs. Have received copy of Eman's will and inventory and his relation of Capt. Fitzherbert's detaining of the goods. Take no pleasure in hearing of his uncivil wrangling with Capt. Fitzherbert. For avoiding of controversies with the Dutch, wish Nicolls would temper his passions with reason; reason is better than rage to prevail with them. The Dutchmen's motion for the Exchange going to Japan was a mere trick to disappoint them of the employment of the ship to better purpose here, but their subtilty was well discovered and as fitly answered by Capt. Fitzherbert and himself (Nicolls). Sent a copy of all the debt the Dutch had standing out, which they hope Muschamp delivered to him, and by that he may perceive whether there be any juggling or not, by comparing the particulars with their books. Touching the goods sold to the Chinese. The Governor's slighting must with patience be overcome, and the Company's affairs preferred before their own reputation. Arrival of two ships from England, the Anne and Lesser James, with a rotten hulk for a victualler; two ships to follow, the Whale and Tryal; those now come have brought a very small capital of money, and if the others bring no better supply they will be forced to sit still in all those factories for want of means. Their ships from the coast and Surat are neither arrived, so cannot send anything by this passage. Have sent the Supply for Amboyna ten days past, and furnished her to supply the wants of that place and Banda, and she also is to lade rice at Macassar. Intend sending another ship that way. The Ruby may take in all the cloves. If they cannot furnish him with means for trade next year they shall not need to keep a ship there as they did last year. Have sent the Exchange, Anne, Diamond, and Claw in company with five Holland ships for Goa against the Portugals, to remain on that coast till April, and then sail for Mozambique, but to be back again on the coast of Malabar to meet the caracs which shall come out of Portugal next year. Next year a Hollander will go Admiral and Capt. Fitzherbert Vice-Admiral, though much against his will. The Charles stays only the coming of the Clove from Jambi, and then will quickly be despatched for England, with, they hope, another between this and March. The Hollanders have given orders to remove their factors from Acheen, and they have done the like; the dear price of pepper the reason they may not continue. The Dutch intend to take all the King's junks they can meet with; the Dabul junk they now intend to surprise. The King lies sick of a lingering disease, yet still he hath a mind to Malacca. He took Perak with much wealth last year. If Nicolls sends the Ruby for Amboyna upon the arrival of this ship, it must be with the consent of the Governor there, else he may not do it until their other ships arrive. [Seven pages. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1010.]

Nov. 14–16. 1154. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Report of the Governor of his private speech with Munnes; his excuses; “he shall find their affairs so embroiled as he can conceive no comfort in the enterprise; * * * * that where it had been put to him as his duty to God, he had examined his conscience, and finds that he hath matter for his charity to work upon at home, and doth cast his eye upon his family with as much and perhaps more tenderness than another, and to conclude, he was persuaded he should not live to get thither.” He desired to be excused being present in court, but the Governor took not this for a final answer, but respited that to another time. It was thought good to give Munnes some time to recollect himself, because perhaps the suddenness and earnestness of the motion had wrought upon his spirits; also that the mayors should first come, and the fittings of the Royal James will take some time, therefore to forbear to press him at present, “but it was resolved that they would hold constant to their first proposition.” Motion of Mrs. Viney, sister of Captain Jourdain, touching her brother’s estate; discussion thereon; also on a similar motion of Jonas Viney. Dispute about the adventure of Sir Thos. Dale; no more money to be paid to Lady Dale. Request of Humphrey Holloway to pass over his whole adventure to Blackmore refused, the stock standing bound for bills of his brother John Holloway. Payment to be made on account of Nathaniel Martin, deceased, to Shreeve and Thos. Moorton. Warrant for payment of 20*l.* to Capper on account for prosecuting the suit in the Star Chamber against George Ball. Francis Taylor and his creditors. Suit of William administrator to the estate of his brother Robert Larkin, touching his brother’s wages and goods.

Nov. 16.—Motion to withdraw the suit in Chancery against the sailmakers. Owen’s goods discharged by Lady Dale. Petition of John Coaker for recompense for extraordinary services in the Indies, and for a hurt received from the Hollanders in their factory at Japan. Concerning Jackson’s account and his losses sustained by the Dutch; the court wondered much how their factors durst give recompense in that kind, having received no commission from hence so to do, “and therefore ordered that stay should be made of those 150 ryals.” Receipt presented under the seal of the Virginia Company, dated 15 November inst., for 70*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* freely given by the Company of the Royal James for erecting a school in Virginia. Sale of bloodstones at 11*s.* per lb. 100*l.* lent to Mrs. Viney on her solicitation; further request of Jonas Viney touching the moneys given him by his uncle Capt. Jourdain, and also by the Queen of Patani. Request of Sir Henry Power, now Viscount of Valentia in Ireland, concerning payment of his adventure. Refusal of Munnes, through Browne, to undertake a voyage to the Indies; the court desirous notwithstanding to receive the answer from himself, and that on Monday next they will both expect an answer from Munnes and enter into consideration of Robinson for that employment.

1159. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Discussion on the request of John Loss, on behalf of George Ball, that he may have his papers and books in the place where he is prisoner, the better to instruct himself to answer the Company's complaints against him; also with Munnes, touching his going to the Indies; arguments persuading him thereto; he gave "many thanks for their great love and good opinion expressed, but would in nowise refer to further consideration." Robinson would be a very fit colleague for Munnes; but if the latter wholly refuse, Robinson will not be found incapable of the whole employment. Resolved by erection of hands to proceed with Robinson; he is called in and told "that the Company first and last takes thankfully and doth lovingly embrace his offer to go into the Indies." Jourdain and the Company; Jonas Viney wholly submits all matters between him and the Company to the court. Personal application of George Ball to have access to his books and papers, according to an order from the Council table; to be delivered to him. Henry Forrest and John Stavely desire the Company's favour; to procure the arbitrators' award, and then confess their wrongs. Answers of Adam Denton and Robt. Owen to Fursland's charge of taking ryals from the Dutch fort at Jacatra.

Nov. 23.—Answers to three several requests of George Ball touching his books of accounts and his letters. Whether to proceed against Capt. Pring with Ball in the Star Chamber; resolved for the present to proceed against Ball only. Petition of Wm. Wyly touching his arrest by Lady Dale for money alleged to be due to Sir Thos. Dale. The ship building at Deptford ready to be launched. Mrs. Wickham to have her son's will delivered to her. Request of Adam Denton for two chests of silk brought home in the Royal James upon his account; he said they were bought of Johnson, factor at Jambi, where they were sent from Jacatra, and that they were sold to make money to pay what was owing to the King of that place for customs unpaid, by commission from Brockedon; the court "took a great distaste at this manner of dealing by Brockedon, who, having store of money by him, would send silks to be sold, as if the Company had not otherwise been able than in this shifting manner to pay their debt. It was said that "a drunken man would not have erred so grossly, and that Brockedon had been better to have played away so much money at dice than to have exposed the credit of the Company to the censure of the natives of that place." Further examination of Denton; answer to his request for his goods sequestered to the Company's use deferred. Award of the arbitrators between the Company and Forrest and Stavelin, who had been arrested for abusing the Company in the Indies, Forrest, by his own confession, having played away the Company's money at dice. Demand of Richard Edwardes for his bond given for his brother ; the unquietness of his brother the cause of their keeping the bond, and to bridle his humour of questioning the Company in the parliament for a business wherein he had received satisfaction. On being pressed, and the court considering all he could do was to call them to Chancery for the delivery thereof, their resolute answer was they would keep the bond.

Minutes of "a Court of Sales." Those of the generality who are absent to be fined 12*d.* apiece, to be defalcated out of their several stocks. Sale of commodities, with names of purchasers and the prices. [Twelve pages. Court Bk. V. 217-229.]

1162. Thos. Johnson to W. Nicolls at Malayo. Complains that Rowle will not let him have rice. The bearer of this is the King's father-in-law ; begs Nicolls will speak with him and let him see the certificate sent as to the Dutch, and he will tell the truth. Has had many words with the Dutch ; now they suffer a soldier to dress their meat, and profess great kindness, but perform not much. Wishes a black to be sent to him. Begs he will write home, that he shall make use of the Chinese. Kind commendations to John Perrey. [One page and a half. The following lines are on the back of this letter :—

1163. Capt. Wedell to the East India Company. Advises a supply of munition to be sent to Surat. Provisions for "the fleet of the whale," which had to borrow two pieces of ordnance from the Dutch. Oakum and old canvas to be sent in greater quantities. Not to trust any masts that have been already used in the Indies. [Half a page. Abstract. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1009.]

1164. Sir Dudley Carleton to Sec. Calvert. The States ambassadors upon their departure for England ; has thought fit to despatch his nephew with information of what hath passed concerning their employment. Account of their interview with him ; Sommerdyke's request to recommend their negotiation to his Majesty ; let them plainly know that if they went as slenderly instructed and authorized as two extraordinary ambassages sent from hence to his Majesty before, he could neither offer them his service nor undertake for their welcome ; their assurances that they went fully instructed and amply authorized, both to treat and conclude concerning those four points—differences in the East Indies, in Greenland, the cloth, and matter of moneys. If they should fail herein they are now without excuse. In the business of the East Indies, which is of greatest difficulty, they here profess as well the States deputies as those of the Company, who have been likewise with him, that they will submit themselves to all reasonable terms of satisfaction and agreement. Much disagreement in this Company touching the renewal of their Octroi. Finds by these men, besides their general professions, that in one point in particular, which is of consideration, they will give ours good contentment, which is in the revocation of the Dutch General Coen; if it be stood upon with them, and withal if in the court of justice which these men have erected at Jacatra, of the injustice whereof ours do so much complain, some moderate course, as a chambre impartiel, or the like, may content them, it will be obtained. 1165. Consultation at the invitation of the Lord Frederick Houtman, First Councillor of India; Governor and Director over the Moluccas, to which Wm. Nicolls, agent of the English East India Company, and the rest of the assisting council on either part, were called. The proposed peace between the Ternatans, friends of the English and Dutch, and the Tidoreeses, their enemies, disapproved of by both Companies as hurtful and prejudicial. Resolved, the chief heads and principals of the island of Machian and Motir having arrived yesterday, and the Tidoreeses themselves shortly expected to treat about the said peace, to hinder or anyways to circumvent the Ternatans in this their determination; but if they make peace or conclude a cessation of arms, then the Ternatans to be informed the next day such peace was to the prejudice of both Companies, and the same to be discussed before their King and some of his principals, and all possible means used to hinder their further treaty. As to hostilities against the Tidoreeses, the Ternatans to be consulted; whether three Java junks of Gressic should be allowed to trade. [Two pages and a half. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1012.]

1166. Sir Dudley Carleton to the Lord Chamberlain. The ambassadors now sent to reconcile the differences betwixt us, go with full commission and instructions to treat of such things as the last, for want of both, left imperfect, and because they desire it, he cannot but accompany them with his best recommendation. [Extract from Holland Corresp.]

Nov. 26.

1167. Capt. Blythe to the East India Company. Complains of lack of powder and shot for the whales' fleet. The Dutch secretly seek by all cunning practices to damnify them. Ships sailed from Surat towards Persia, 25 November. [Half a page. Abstract. O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1009.]

Nov. 26-29.

1168. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Request of John Millward for certain raw silk. George Ball and his books of accounts and letters, and in particular his book concerning the eighth voyage. Proposition for contribution to poor ministers. The spices given towards Christide "unto any great men, honourable benefactors to this Company, or unto any others, as in former times," not to be given this year by reason of the great damages the Company have sustained, "not doubting but all that know the same will take none offence thereat." To deal kindly with Levingstone and Maxwell, "for many good offices already performed and more expected;" about their brokes. Gratuity to Maxwell. Sir Thos. Smythe to be requested to give a note of the names of the officers about the King's Majesty, and noblemen whose friendship this Company shall continually stand in need of, "for that there are divers petty things to be given them." Sir Clement Edmondes "showed himself somewhat discontent as not respected of this Company answerable to his merits, and in particular for not paying him the fees of his office and place;" to be paid his fees, and to be "persuaded of the Company's great respect of him, as one whom they have ever found their worthy friend, and to desire the continuance thereof." Committees appointed for the several ships for Surat, now at Deptford, Woodbridge, and Blackwall. John Woodall and the surgeon's chests; all samples to be bought of one apothecary to be named by the Company. The Discovery built at Woodbridge and brought up to Blackwall to be viewed.

Nov. 27.—Drugs and samples to be bought of the apothecary appointed by the Company. Forrest and Stavely to be discharged. Thos. Smitheck willing to go to Bantam; to be treated with. Information that the States and mayors are come over; committee appointed to attend the consultation and follow the business of the treaty. Debt of Barrett, deceased, to be paid by his son. Allowance to Thos. Marshe and Peter Bowers for ryals.

Nov. 29.—Sir Wm. Russell to be called to account for his debt. Request of the Custom House officers about the purchase of pepper; "they have six pounds upon every ship gratis." Debts of West, Henshaw, and Chamberlain. Suit of Larkin concerning his deceased brother's wages and goods; to have 100*l.* in full of all demands. Edward, son of Sir Richard Hopton, entertained a purser's mate. Suit of Elmer Phillips for a purser's place, "but found to be a married man, was not capable of the place." Lawrence Henly entertained a purser's mate. Petition of John Tucker for recompense to himself and others for service against the Portugals, where there was taken, as he says, to the value of 6,000*l.*, of which they were promised a sixth part; no account of any such goods taken or of any such promise made, therefore rejected with a flat denial. Request of Benjamin Stone for allowance for bloodstones. Letter read from Richard Carmarthen, demanding wages due to his kinsman Capt. Pepwell, deceased. [Twelve pages. Court Bk. V. 229-240.]

1620, Nov., 1169. Names of English and Dutch shipping employed in the to siege of Bantam from November 1620 to the following November;
1621, Nov. also names and tonnage of the English shipping at Manilla, Amboyna, and Goa; with mem. of a proposition concerning the besieging of Bantam afresh, but that to the 5 January 1621(-2) there was no mention of any ships sent by the Dutch, nor any protest against our people there. 1170. Chamberlain to Carleton. The States Commissioners arrived on Wednesday (28th November); they are like to do little till the King's coming hither, for the ways are such that Chamberlain thinks they will neither desire nor shall be desired to go to the court. Dec. 3-7.

1171. Court Minutes of the East India Company. The same amount of 114*l.* 10*s.* distributed last year to be left to the discretion of the Governor for distribution, as benevolence to preachers this year. Commodities for Surat; no elephants' teeth, vermilion, tin, or Bulgaria hides to be sent by these ships, but 10,000 cwt. of quicksilver and 150 tons of lead to be provided, also amber beads, silks, cloth of gold, gold and silver, jewels, and other fine commodities which the factors gave good encouragement to send, with some rarities which would sell well to the princes and great persons; resolved, to defer sending these last until the arrival of the Surat ships now expected with Keridge; 300 knives with amber hafts to be sent, which will save the Company much in presents. So much coral in the country no need to send any more. 20,000*l.* capital the most that need be sent to Surat and Persia; the two ships now on their way homeward, bring the best return that ever came thence, and the cargo does not come to above 25,000*l.* A great stock at present there. Lanman to produce a true state of the stock both in Surat and Persia. Proposition of Treasurer Stone as to the capital to be sent out and paid in; 100,000*l.* of the Company's debts should be paid this year; those men behind with their payments, the Lords excepted, of whose favours the Company may have present use, to be called upon. Auditing of accounts; "the commandment of the court neglected, that the bribe of a cupboard of plate said to have been given, should be mentioned in every court until Robinson had named the party who received it. Discussion on the request of Adam Denton, come home in the Royal James, for his goods and remainder of wages, and to receive the Company's discharge; to the charge that he got his goods by private trade, he answered "he was not so very a fool as to serve so many years up and down from port to port and get nothing for himself. The court noted much his insolency in that maintaining the wrong done them, and told him that if all their factors were of his mind the whole trade of the Indies would but suffice them, there would be nothing for the Company." He was ordered to set down how he came by these goods.

Dec. 5.—Robinson's books of accounts delivered by Eyers to Lanman. "Bitter dispute" about Robinson's explanations touching the cupboard of plate. Request of Mrs. Wickham for the goods of her deceased son; also of the sister of Cokayne, deceased, who went out in the sixth voyage, served the Company ten years, and was slain in their service, to have 50*l.* upon account. Suit of Allen, a poor minister, for some part of the Company's benevolence bestowed upon men of his coat against Christmas; was told the list was more than full, but gave him ten shillings, to be deducted out of some others that are to have a greater sum. Arthur Suffeild entertained a purser, and John Fary, who had assisted in the factory at Camboja and came home in the Royal James, a purser's mate. Savage Henworth, recommended by Sir Richard Bingley, to be entertained, and Thos. Read made a purser.

Dec. 7.—The three ships newly built and to go to Surat to be named the Blessing, Discovery, and Reformation. Arthur Suffeild appointed purser of the Blessing, Elias Wood purser of the Discovery, and Thos. Read purser of the Reformation. Burrell hastened to finish the Blessing at Deptford; questions thereon. Browning about the Discovery at Woodbridge; he requests payment of the remainder of the contract. Request of Capt. Pring for his wages; he is questioned touching the gross abuses of the Company; committee appointed at his desire to question him privately, and "he doubted not but he should give them good satisfaction." Thos. Smitheck entertained at 300*l.* per annum, and 100*l.* to set him forth, to serve the Company at Bantam; he is to sit with them in their courts between this and the time of his going, the better to inform himself of the state of their business. Request of George Porter for ryals which belonged to his brother David Porter, deceased, and were paid to Christopher Bogan, purser of the Unicorn, and Rich. Harris, cashier at Bantam, for the use of the Company. Charge against Stephen Goad, entertained boatswain, touching the sale of some guns; they came out of the Earl of Warwick's ship, the Lion, were unserviceable, and given to him by Capt. Pring. Order for payment to Anthony Permafoy on account of the Discovery. Isaac Van de Paine and Lucas Corselles to be admitted free brethren, though born of strange parents, yet they were born in England, on payment of 100 marks apiece, provided they take their oaths before Christmas. Edward Tyne entertained a factor at 50*l.* per annum, and 10*l.* to set him out. John Forrest recommended by the Earl of Pembroke as a steward; he was not thought fit for the place, yet out of a desire "to satisfy the request of so noble a person" was referred for a steward's mate.

1172. President Richard Fursland and his Council, Thos. Brockedon, Aug. Spaldinge, and Gabriell Towerson to the East India Company. The James, intended for the Moluccas, sent to Jambi; the reasons. Arrival of the English Swan from Japan on 23 November with news that the Manilla fleet had arrived there with not such profitable booty as they expected. Comment on the disorderly carriage of the Manilla business, every man serving his own turn; some of the shipmasters the chief encouragers of this unruly and mutinous company; the weak carriage of some in command and the dishonesty of others hath brought our people in general to such a height of disorder that they have cause to fear no good can come of their proceedings. The Dutch ready to offer all injuries; contention with them. The Manilla fleet to proceed this year again upon the same voyage. Much fear that the Dutch and our people will not agree in the unlawful course of pillage. The inhuman course of the Dutch with all who fall into their hands makes the English also odious like them; it were good they were separated and their ships employed apart, for it is impossible they should agree in the sharing of the pillage, which at last may turn to some great mischief. The whole booty taken by the English ships delivered over to the factories not sufficient to set their ships again to sea; had they not received the money by the Peppercorn they must have run at interest greatly to the Company's prejudice. This voyage once cleared, they shall not send that way again. The excessive charge of Japan not only consumes the Company's stock, but utterly ruins the most part of their men by their most beastly living there. Can get no accounts from Cocks. The factors there fear their privileges will be taken from them, but mean themselves to break up that factory next year. The Clove and Bee arrived fully laden with pepper. Have laden the Charles; her cargo, pepper, cloves, mace, nutmegs, gumlac, diamonds, pearls, bezoar stones, ambergris, and long coast cloth. The Dutch the cause of their being obliged to give such high prices for pepper, and holding no contract with the English think to weary them out. Price of pepper at Acheen. If the Dutch would perform faithfully with them, might easily bring down the price, but they will rather venture bringing themselves to nothing than that the English should prosper. Except their masters in Holland order their people here to join with the English in sincerity, neither will be able to continue the trade. News from Chinese in Bantam that the Pengran is inclined to make peace with the English, so are persuaded before the arrival of next year's fleet from Europe they shall make some accord with him. Urge the sending of a ship or two with good store of money, so they may buy pepper at Bantam, where is enough to lade ten great ships of 800 tons each. Needfull to agree with the Hollanders about the charge they demand for maintaining war with Bantam, otherwise they will lay what tax they please upon the English and hinder them buying pepper. Send general books with balance of Jacatra accounts, and other public papers. Notwithstanding their great need of factors are forced to send some home, who have the name of merchants, but are not fit for any employment. Briefly declare how they have found both them and some others, viz., Robert Haies, obstinate in his resolution to go home; Thos. Doughtie and Robt. Randall, honest but not fit for any great employment; Richard Bishop can neither read nor write, and in seven years has spent 800 ryals in wg and drinking; Peter Waddon sent from Japan for lewd behaviour; Howard and Gillman sent home prisoners, in charge of Capt. Bickell; John Bardon through negligence spoiled the Star and most of the porcelain dishes shipped for Amboyna, which were broken through his carelessness; find him fitter to be sent home than detained; Anthony Finch, formerly purser in the Gift, a notorious drunkard and debase fellow, not fit for any employment of importance, sent home purser in the Charles. Many old impotent men from other ships now sent home. Capt. John Bickell has discharged his place with sufficiency and care; recommend him to their favour. Most of the men unwilling to stay, are returned home, the rest shall follow in the next ship. The accounts of all men from the shore sent with them. The pursers must be called to account for what is found wanting in the ships. Robt. Johnson's account from Jambi at last received, but imperfect. Their manner of trading at Jambi very desperate; fear that the Dutch likewise, in trusting such great sums, will come off with a loss. Good supplies of pepper expected from Jambi and Achéen; hope to lade two more ships for England between this and March. The Globe arrived from the coast. The factors have sent from Surat all sorts of clothing for Achéen and Bantam. The report of a conflict between English and Portugal ships proves true. [Silk received from Persia; glad to hear something is returned, for now there is hope that more will follow yearly. The London, Hart, and Roebuck winter in the Red Sea, where they intend to take restitution for the caphila spoiled by the Deccans. Not sufficient experience of trade yet at Pulicat; the Hollanders outwardly kind, but doubt their performance; the profits of that place will not answer the charges there. All goods made at Pulicat may be had at Pettapoli. The Hollanders maintain their charge of Pulicat by setting frigates out to sea. Complain of the small quantity of goods received from Masulipatam from Methwold; commodities from thence shipped for England. Calicoes fit for Europe; contract of the Dutch for same. The Unity arrived at Achéen; the King there exacts what he pleases; he compelled the Globe to give him a present of 400 ryals, before he would grant his choppe for her departure. The Globe and Eagle sailed in company through the Straits of Malacca and have furnished Jambi factory with a good cargo of cloth, so that now we are provided as well as the Hollanders. The Eagle lost thirty men at Achéen by distemper; the Hollanders suffer not their men to go ashore, so lose few or no men in that place. The Lesser James got ashore through the master refusing to follow his pilot John Davis' directions; Wood, the master, a common drunkard, not fit for such a charge; the pilot given to the same vice. The Star will be despatched for the Moluccas; know not how the Hollanders will deal with them there. The Hollanders exact 2 per cent. freight for carrying money to Jambi. The ships remaining here are the Globe, Clove, Star, Bee, and Fortune; think of sending the Bee again for Jambi. Commodities required, including surgeons' stores. John Hiching, clerk of the stores, and his accounts; commendations of him; experienced men will not stay without increase of wages. [Nine pages and a half. Endorsed, "Received by the Charles the 9th of July 1622." O.C., Vol. VIII., No. 1018.]

Dec. 10-20. 1173. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Gratuity to Cornelius Cannedge to set him forth. Information of Ball's complaints touching the Company's proceedings against him in the Star Chamber; he had applied for a habeas corpus to remove him to the fleet as he cannot go abroad but with a guard which will stand in 20*l.* a day; committee appointed to acquaint the Lord Keeper with the Company's reasons for desiring Ball to be under safe keeping, &c. Ball very cautious, and it is believed he spares no cost, though he makes pretence of poverty, for he gives double fees. When asked in prison when he would examine the copies of books and papers made for him, he said he knew not now wherein they could be useful to him, for that the Company do not now charge him with matter of account, but with matter of state. Hawley proposed as a factor. Balance paid to Browning for building the Discovery at Woodbridge. Letter from the Marquis of Buckingham, brought by a brother, and in favour of Adam Denton; he was assured that the business shall be very justly carried between the Company and his brother, and that a course shall be taken to satisfy the Lord Marquis. Suit of James Slade to go as principal master in the next voyage. John Richardson, formerly entertained, declines going to Surat, and is dismissed. Supply of Canary wine. Motion of Keightley on behalf of the wife of Booth, a surgeon in the Indies, for one year's wages of her husband. Petition of Bartholomew Churchman, that he was taken with the Dutch in the Solomon, where he lost all his goods and apparel, and took up monies for relief of divers English prisoners, lest they should serve the Dutch, praying for consideration for his losses, &c. Committee to report thereon.

Dec. 12.—Treasurers Stone and Bateman secured by the Court for monies taken up for the use of the Company. Lanman to balance the Company's stock by end of January next. Sale of diamonds. Applications of preachers, over and above Sir Thos. Smythe's list, for the Company's benevolence. Suit of John Holloway concerning his stock, attached by an officer of the Lord Mayor for debts to Morris Abbott, deputy, and Westrowe. Letter from Sir Albert Moreton touching the estate of the orphan children of the sister of Philip Crewe, deceased. Concerning Robinson's offer to go the voyage, the best use of his employment will be to seize upon Spaldinge's estate, which will require expedition. He promised to go to Holland, and take his passage in the next Dutch ship; committee to arrange the terms with him. Petition of Mountney, that the bribe of a cupboard of plate mentioned in so many courts, and privately laid to his charge by name, may be searched to the bottom, and his innocence cleared; Robinson to produce the authors of that information to a committee. Weld, the town clerk of London, about the attachment of Holloway's goods.

Dec. 13.—Adam Denton submits to the Company for a final conclusion, and offers any reasonable security to satisfy any just demand. He complains of Spaldinge and Brockedon selling the Company's silk at Jacatra; that Ball bought no pepper while President, having fallen out with the Pengran of Bantam. Petition of Katherine Hudson for part of her son's wages; he is now at Japan, and went out eight years since; no wages made with him; was told she could have nothing. Gratuity to Alice Taylor, whose husband was slain by the Dutch. Petition of Richard Dove on behalf of Wm. Colwell, John Furs, and John Noble, taken by pirates; can have nothing, the Company having only undertaken to redeem two prisoners, and have accordingly paid 20*l.* to Mr. Frisell and other monies by the King's order. Petition of Ann, wife of William Hambletoun, for satisfaction for pepper; "formerly answered in Parliament, and the Company can give no other answer." Petition of Parnell Watty for a month's wages of Fraunce de la Mond, Indian, in the Charles, whose child she has kept.

Dec. 14 (?)—Robinson's salary; 500*l.* per annum proposed, "wherewith he seeming not well satisfied, desired time to consider thereof." Complaint of Ball to the Lord Keeper that his books are detained. The Lord Keeper to be informed that they have been offered to Ball, who said he knew not what use to make of them, as the charge against him was a matter of State, and not of accounts. Burdick's wages attached. John Hurlebutt's wages claimed by widow Bowers, and Evans, a minister who married Hurlebutt's mother. Suit of Mrs. Wickham concerning her son's estate. Alderman Barkham, now Lord Mayor, to take out two bags of pepper for the expense of his house upon his adventure in the second joint stock. Offer of Denton not only to clear himself to the Dutch Commissioners, but to give security to the Company's content for their indemnity for certain ryals demanded of him by the Dutch. Request of Hollowaye for a copy of the order of Court concerning his creditors.

Dec. 14.—Minutes of "a Court of Sales." Sale of commodities, with names of purchasers, and the prices; to each lot there is a set price, to some lots "nothing [is] bidden."

Dec. 17.—George Ball to have copies of his books and other writings. Suit of Philip Thomas for his wages. His behaviour complained of; is discharged the Company's service. No carpenters yet engaged; they demand 3*l.* per month. Andrew Stone entertained steward's mate. The old remains of beef and biscuit and 5*l.* to be given to the poor against Christmas. John Forrest, recommended by the Lord Chamberlain for a steward's place, married, and brother to Henry Forrest, who had played away the Company's money at dice, dismissed. Nicholas Towerson offers his services. Ellam to report what factors they have in the Indies, and where.

Dec. 20.—Pruson and the sailmakers. Letter read from Geo. Muschamp of Dec. 1620 from Jacatra, to Valentine Morelofte, one of the Lord Keeper's gentlemen, signifying his losses sustained by the Dutch, as also the loss of his leg in fight with them at Patani, when the Sampson and Hound were taken, and desiring restitution from the Dutch. The Company did not hold fit to present their losses at the treaty, but that restitution should be demanded of the Dutch Commissioners, wherein the Company would assist by recommending it to the English Commissioners. Request of Isaac Crowther, steward of the Moon, for the return of 200 ryals seized, with other goods belonging to him, by Spaldinge, who had also imprisoned him, put him in irons, and out of his place, and had broken open his cabin door, desks, and locks. Explains how he became possessed of them; 10*l.* lent to him. Discussion with Slade and Emanuel Butta, who offered themselves as masters, concerning their sufficiency and wages. Capt. Nicholls had been proposed for a chief. Withers to be conferred with, touching his intimation that Smitheck "was not the man the Company took him for;" the committee clear him in point of religion. [Twenty-six pages. Court Bk. V., 256-281.]

Dec. 24.

1174. Richard Fursland, Thomas Brockedon, and Aug. Spaldinge, to Thos. Johnson at Jambi. Refer to their previous letter of 14 Nov. by the Lesser James, though they doubt her safe arrival, by reason of reports of the beastly carriage of the master and the great disorders of the whole company. Have received his letter of 29 October by Capt. Spaldinge, who arrived 23 ult., with the Clove and the Bee, also his letters by the Globe, which arrived 7th present, and a Dutch prize. Perceive he has received the money sent by the Bear. Long to see a good end of the large debts made by him. Staverton overtroubled with his small employment; his books received are imperfect and full of errors; shall expect good reasons from him why the Hollanders paying but ten per cent. custom the English are charged in his account 11 per cent. Are heartily glad of the opportune arrival of the Globe and Eagle, to furnish his market. Approve of his taking ashore the two young men as assistants. Edmund Sutton may return with Thompson after the pepper harvest. Cannot conceive why he sends anything to Indraghiri so long as he wants means at Jambi to buy pepper. Hope by the arrival of the James he has been fully satisfied with money. The Charles sailed for England the 11th present. A piece (of ordnance) shall be sent (for the King), the Bitch also shall go, and for the Dog "we wish he had the biggest in Parish Garden in his belly to satisfy his dogged appetite." Would have him defer sending to Palembang. "We have too many profitable factories already, and therefore desire no more, but rather to have them dissolved." Will give orders in their next for reforming the misrule in the James, and appoint a man to take the charge of her. The light pepper is well sold; Longe writes 500 tons may be vented yearly. [Four pages. O. C., Vol. VIII., No. 1020.]

Dec. 24-28.

1175. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Suit of Samuel Bass for his wages; he is complained of as "a very ill-governed man, and if he got but 12*d.* it was enough to keep him drunk two days in a bawdy house." He was told "how much he wronged the family he came of and the whole English nation." Agreement to be made with Slade at 7*l.* per month. Proposal for Capt. Argoll to go chief, "some exception taken to him, but his reputation was left untouched, only the Court conceived a mere marine man would be of best use to the Company, and would be best obeyed." Simon Nicholls named, "and well liked as a man very sufficient, valiant, and honest;" to be spoken with. Report of Withers, who "held Smitheck to be insufficient;" to be entreated to speak with the Governor thereon. Concerning the surgeon's chests provided by Woodall. Auditing of the Company's books.

Dec 27.—Provisions for the ships. Combination among the sail-makers, against whom the Company hath commenced a suit in chancery. They deal underhand with the Company's workmen, and have persuaded some of them to give over work. "Upon Christmas eve divers clothworkers that had wrought to the Company did show themselves much discontented, and fell into very mutinous and railing terms, not in the house only, but in the open street, against the Company in general, and in particular against the committees for the providing of cloths; their behaviour being so rude as it was much noted by the neighbours and such as passed by;" some of them to be sent for to give a reason for their so doing. It will prove better husbandry to buy their cloths ready dressed and dyed than to dye and dress them themselves. Concerning sails and sail-makers: Salmon and Pruson. Explanation with three of the clothworkers about the tumult; they refuse 20s., and demand 22s., for dressing, &c. a cloth.

Dec. 28.—Offer to plate the breadrooms cheap. Cause of the aspersion laid on Smitheck; the Court affirmed he had an honest cause and ran honest courses. Slade to be offered 7*l.* per month to go a master of one of the ships. Report concerning the audit of the Company's accounts. Rich. Atkinson's accounts to be audited. Answer of Withers to accusations against him touching his accounts and giving away the Company's goods. [Fourteen pages. Court Bk. V. 281–295.]

Dec. 29. 1176. Consultation by Rich. Fursland, Thos. Brockedon, Aug. Spaldinge, and Gab. Towerson. John Wood, master of the Lesser James, being judged by a council of chief officers, insufficient to govern her, on his promise that he would follow the directions of the pilot Davis from Jacatra, was allowed to remain. Seeing his beastly carriage since, that he is seldom sober, that the ship has been in extreme danger of being cast away, and considering the danger she may fall into returning laden with pepper under conduct of such a notorious drunkard and disorderly commander, it was thought good to displace him, and send John Roberts, master of the Bee for Jambí, there to take charge and command of the Lesser James; John Wood to be sent hither with the first. The Globe to be sent to Amboyna and the Moluccas, as unfit for any other employment; and the Star, newly trimmed, and sufficient to perform any voyage, retained. [One page and a quarter. O.C. Vol. VIII., No. 1021.]

Dec. 31. 1177. Court Minutes of the East India Company. Slade entertained master at 20 nobles a month. The Reformation to be launched. Concerning the employment of Henry Hawley; he thought he might deserve 500*l.* per annum; committee appointed to agree with him, "a man very perfect in accounts, and of a very staid and sober condition, and such an one as, by the example of his life, joined with good admonition, may draw the young factors, now riotously disposed, to be of other minds." On the other side, "admitting him to be all that had been said of him, yet he is of a spirit over soft and mild to encounter with Coen ;" by no means to be drawn higher than to Mr. Smitheck who is to have 300*l.* per annum. Request of George Ball to know in what sum he stands bound to the Company. Desire of the Lord President to see the commission for the last treaty between the English and Dutch Companies ; Capper ordered to take it. Letter read from the Lord Admiral to the Governor, "signifying that albeit his Majesty knows the Dutch have great matters to propound unto him, yet he is resolved to hear nothing until they have given satisfaction to his subjects according to justice." Bell made the like relation from the Lord Admiral's own mouth. Report that there is a letter unread from Johnson at Jambi, containing more matter against Denton than all the rest ; to be read at the next Court. Robinson to explain himself touching the auditing of Atkinson's accounts. [Three pages. Court Bk. V. 295-298.]

Dec. ?

1178. "Proofs that the English Company have no ways been defective in procuring the trade of Bantam, both by fair means and also by the besieging of Bantam, so far as they were enjoined by the Councils of Defence in India." [Three pages. East Indies. Vol 1. No. 94.]

1621 ?

1179. Petition of Thos. Anderson of Kingston-upon-Hull, mariner, to the Privy Council. Was questioned about four years since by Sir Thos. Smythe for going into the north-east passage, and thereupon bound by bond, taken in the King's name, not to go thither any more. Others have since given bond to Sir Thos. Smythe not to go there, and have had their bonds delivered up, but the petitioner's bond is still with the Clerk of the Council. Prays that Sir Clement Edmondson may have orders to give it up to him. [Domestic, Jas. I., Vol. 124. No. 93. Cal. p. 328.]

1621 ?

1180. "The state of the question between the English and Dutch Companies trading into the East Indies," in reference to the demand for restitution of English goods brought out of the Indies into Holland, in August 1620, and for which Sir Dudley Diggs and Morris Abbott were sent over commissioners to negotiate with the Dutch. The English East India Company complain that by an unjust balance of account the Dutch endeavour to wipe away all the Company's demands with 9,000*l.* sterling, or else leave all undone for some longer time ; and they implore the Privy Council to observe how the Dutch have broken the treaty, by failing to make restitution on the arrival in India of the first ship of advice, the Bull, and by other actions which are particularly described. [Four pages. East Indies, Vol. 1. No. 95.]
